Laura H. Earle says that "of course" the position of the prostitute is economically the worst a woman can occupy; and lays the unæsthetic habits of (a portion) of this class to poverty. Now, I am a seeker after truth, and a disseminator of truth, so far as I can find it. I consider Ignorance, if not the only cause of human ills, at least their king; and I hate the Movement in Favor of Ignorance under all its forms, accordingly, as much as the devil is said to hate holy water. (This is not meant to insinuate that Laura feels any differently. But she may be mistaken.) When Voltairine de Cleyre laid all the sorrows of prostitutes to depravity, I gave it as my experience that she was. In my reporting days, when I had more opportunities to observe the actual life of prostitutes than recently, it did not seem to me that their wages here were so bad—excluding a comparatively small and very degraded class in the great cities. I once asked one how often she was obliged to exercise her calling, and she told me "about once or twice a day." I figured up how much this would come to, and found the nett average at least $3.25 a day—in greenbacks, then nearly as good as gold—besides board. This was in Eau Claire; at that time a manufacturing town of six or seven thousand inhabitants, with a considerable "floating population," which contributed largely to the support of the trade. Notwithstanding what is usually said about prostitutes' love of dress, ours did not seem inordinately given that way. They put on finery when they went out; but that was not often; for they dwelt a mile or two from town and Mrs. Grundy's view; and, at home, their attire was plain. I saw no reason why they should not save money; and, in fact, a considerable proportion of them do so. The trouble with the others was not unavoidable poverty, but bad habits, the result, no doubt, of an inferior nature. Liquor and worthless lovers were the explanation of their impecuniousness, so far as that was real. Since then, I have myself observed that drinking has very largely gone out of fashion among them. But to offset the improvement, I am informed that there are lower depths of sexual evil than at that time were common. I once offered to Lucifer some particulars, in the manner of Editor Stead, which were not printed,—I suppose on grounds of Comstockian prudence; for I hardly think Lucifer would suppress such information upon any other. I will try to be guarded this time. I need not say that the Madams, themselves representing the most intelligent thrifty element among "fallen women," set the rule for their boarders, nor that they are governed in their practise by the demands of their male patrons. The horrible truth is that the vices of ancient Greece, and those modern countries which we call degenerate, are well-known and cultivated in the United States, as they were not twenty years ago. About that time a man was shot, (in this same town) for proposing something of the sort at a brothel. Now, as I am told, a girl is not wanted there unless she is up to it all, particularly in the palaces of sin:—as one who I think was probably a connoisseur told me, "the more swell the more of it there is." If I believed in such judgments, I should expect something in the Martinique or Sodom and Gomorrah way to come upon so depraved a population. As it is, let us hope for a revolution which will burn up "with unquenchable fire," the subjection of women, which is the root of all!

I think Lillian Harman about hits the nail of that copper and single tax business in a brief paragraph. "Let the wide world wag as it will," some individuals will accumulate more wealth than others, I suspect. Even among monkish societies, some grew rich faster than others; and it is mere quibbling to say the individual monks composing them did not. I have therefore very little faith in State Socialistic schemes for equalizing fortunes. The bosses "would pick the pockets of the naked savages, if they were set ashore on an uninhabited island." And why should not some individuals accumulate more wealth than others? If it is mere muck-rake business, it will not (it never did) impress mankind as a very high talent. But it is the only one some men have; and its uses are explained (with a little exaggeration, I grant) in all the books on political economy. Very commonly the man who makes a better thing of his business than another, does so by rendering the community service for which it will pay. In a state of free competition, I do not see how else he could outrun competitors. But one of the ways by which it is certainly possible to render the community service for which the community shows itself willing to pay (in the form of economic rent) is to find a new source of value on land,—as by planting watermelons where they come to more than wheat. Four miles from Eau Claire stands another incorporated city called Altoona. Thirty years ago, the land on which it stands was considered utterly worthless, being a sandy prairie, almost destitute, it its pristine state, of weeds. Now it sells for four dollars and so upwards, a foot front. How did it become valuable? The railroad company, to which it had been granted by the state, knowing it was fit for nothing else, concluded to build workshops there; which at once necessitated the building of houses and stores. I am no great friend to the railroad company; and have no doubt it does all the skinning which can be done. But it seems clear to me that on finding an use to which that prairie could be put, the company created value. The trouble, then, is not that somebody finds sooner than some one else how rent can be obtained by the improvement of a particular piece of land. That is a beneficial operation, which the public interest is to encourage. The trouble is that the law enables individuals to appropriate both land and other things of which they propose to make no use themselves, but only to tax others for using; as in the case of the Chicago man Snell, murdered some time since, as is supposed by one who expected a share in his fortune. Snell got his millions by finding out how the value of a right of way was likely to increase, solely through what others might do, and then buying it. Of course, buying more land than one can use, is an example of the way in which individuals are enabled by law to tax others for using land.

C. L. James.

God Save the King!

"Lord, a meek and lowly band
Here before Thy throne we stand;
Loyal servants, tried and staunch,
Red of face and big of paunch,
Loud in croaking tones we sing:
'God of Mercy, save the King!'

"On this little whirling ball
Myriad human creatures crawl;
God of endless time and space,
Not for all the human race
Do we plead; beneath Thy wing
Shelter one 'God save the King!'

"Children herd in droves in slums;
Some day, Lord, Thy Kingdom comes.
Women fall and strong men die;
Not for them our pleadings fly.
War's fierce thunders upward ring;
We but pray: 'God Save the King!'

"Virtue's sighs and vice's mirth
Chase each other round the earth;
Fools and scoundrels rule on thrones,
Labor sweats and starves for drones;
Yet the same old prayer we sing:
'God of Mercy, Save the King?'"

John Smith in the "Brisbane Worker."

There is more joy in a kiss on the lips, freely and willingly exchanged for love alone, than in the entire mastery one may possess over the body of a slave.

Tak Kak.

Diogenes was a wise man for despising little worldly customs, but a fool for showing it. Be wiser than other people if you can, but do not tell them so.—Lord Chesterfield.

Single Tax Sophistry.

Mr. J. C. Barnes, who amiably takes up the challenge thrown down in "Parry and Thrust," is like most of his fellow reformers, staggering under the weight of error involved in the fiction of "Natural Rights." Needs we have, as have all living organisms; but to translate our natural needs into "natural rights" is to sterilize our sociology at the start by basing it upon mere humanitarianism and emotion. When we consider that all life lives upon other life, and that it can only so live, where is the natural right to land? Man eats a sheep; a tiger in his turn eats a man: if nature gave each a right to live neither would have as a gift of nature the desire to relieve something of life.

The above may stand as pertinent to the question, who has a right to take the economic rent of land? I said "if" the presence of population gave value to land, that it did not follow that the population had a right to tax that value. The population has no "natural" right to tax it; it has no labor right; nature has neither given the land to all nor to one, and population did not work at giving the land that value which exists merely as a result of the presence of population. So much for the moral basis of the Single Tax.

Mr. Barnes will mark the fact that I said "if." For myself I do not believe that land values can be separated from labor values to any considerable extent, nor do I believe that it is desirable so to separate them. Population consists of units; if the land were fairly divided among those units, economic rent would tend to be eliminated; as lands of different kinds and qualities would be used in the industries which they were best suited to, and bring a return equal to all and each with an equal amount of labor devoted. Economic rent is an important factor only under abnormal economic conditions; monopoly largely creates and fosters it. Economic rent should not be taxed away for the benefit of the people, it should be eliminated. Pending this elimination, humanity's interests, mutual and individual, (its interests mark, not its rights,) would devise not a single tax, nor any other tax, but the destruction of land monopoly and a fair division of the land.

To Mr. Barnes' final question I answer emphatically, No. The Single Tax would not eliminate land monopoly; the man who could pay the most money would monopolize the land, and the wage slaves would still pay the tax. Rent, interest, and profit would still sandbag labor; the money monopoly, the tariff monopoly, and the patent monopoly, being the means thereto. No seeming shifting of taxes will lift the burden of paying them off the shoulders of the worker. Let us not work to shift taxes; they are unnecessary loads: let us drop them:, let us abandon them. A reasonably organized society will not need, nor will it ask, to be taxed.

Ironicus.

Ruminations.

This has been a very active summer at Home. At least twenty acres of land have been "slashed" and burned over, thus being brought into shape for thorough cleaning and cultivation. It takes time and energy to clear the land here; but the task is not so hopeless as it appears to some at first sight; and the land well repays the labor expended upon it. I have great faith in the future of the Puget Sound country, and in that of Home in particular. Our population is slowly, but steadily growing; and new buildings are constantly being erected. The recent improvement, in which the people here are taking great comfort, is the construction of a floating walk to the steamer floats from the shore, obviating the necessity of depending on rowboats in order to reach the steamer.

Two successive Sundays of volunteer labor have greatly improved the condition of our very pleasant park. On August 10, a delightful picnic was held, a number of our friends in Tacoma having chartered the steamer Typhoon, in order to visit us in a body. Two launches brought a pleasant party from Anderson Island to join the throng. An abundant lunch, including coffee, lemonade and ice cream, was received with enthusiasm, as were the clams which followed later in the afternoon. Appropriate remarks were made by Lois Waisbrooker, A. Klemencic, O. A. Verity and the writer, and were enthusiastically received. Vocal and instrumental music was furnished by talent from Home and from Tacoma. Lovers of dancing were gratified to their heart's content, others disported themselves in the park or on the water, or inspected the various interesting features of the community. It was a gala day, marred by no untoward incident, and helped strongly to cement good feeling between the Home colonists and the progressive element of Tacoma.

The idiocy of a theatrical censorship was strongly emphasized the other day in England, by the refusal of the idiot in charge to allow one of Maeterlinck's plays to be produced. The best names in England's literary world were signed to a protest against the outrage, but all in vain. The morals of the British nation were held to be in peril from the words of one of the greatest and most highminded literary artists of the present day. Such morals are unquestionably very shaky, in fact, hardly worth preserving. A censor is the sign post of an unrighteous system, which dare not look itself in the face.

The "Weekly People," the organ of the Socialist Labor Party, in its issue of July 26, admits and boasts that this party pries into the private affairs of its members, going on to say. "It (the S. L. P.) does not hanker, for instance, after grafters, scalawags, 'free' lovers, and such-like riff-raff. When it finds them out, it is apt to kick them overboard. This is rough on the kickees, but is well for the kickers."

Sex reformers will be likely to govern themselves accordingly, and to recognize an enemy to freedom in any party which thus vulgarly and brutally insults men and women who are striving to redeem the race from the degradation of sex slavery. Comstock and the other enemies of womanhood will doubtless be glad to welcome so doughty an ally. The De Leon crowd is manifestly hopeless; but Socialists of other schools will do well to think twice before over-loading their craft with such foul cargo as the decaying marriage system.

Home, Wash. James P. Morton, Jr.

Recognized the Charm.

When Lord Chief Justice Holt presided in the Court of the King's Bench a poor, decrepit old creature was brought before him, charged as a criminal, on whom the full severity of the law ought to be visited with exemplary effect.

"What is her crime?" asked his lordship.

"Witchcraft."

"How is it proved?"

"She has a powerful spell."

"Let me see it."

The spell was handed to the bench. It appeared a small ball of variously colored rags of silk, bound with threads of as many different hues. These were unwound and unfolded, until there appeared a scrap of parchment, on which were written certain characters now nearly illegible from much use.

The judge, after looking at this paper charm a few minutes, addressed himself to the terrified prisoner. "Prisoner how came you by this?"

"A young gentleman, my lord, gave it to me, to cure my child's ague."

"How long since?"

"Thirty years, my lord."

"And did it cure her?"

"Oh, yes, and many others."

"The judge paused a few moments, and then addressed himself to the jury. "Gentlemen of the jury, thirty years ago I and some companions, as thoughtless as myself, went to this woman's dwelling, then a public house, and, after enjoying ourselves, found we had no means to discharge the reckoning. Observing a child ill of an ague, I pretended I had a spell to cure her. I wrote the classic line you see on a scrap of parchment, and was discharged of the demand on me by the gratitude of the poor woman before us, for the supposed benefit."—Selected.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 344 W. 143d street, New York.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Dowieism, Eddyism, Teedism, Mormonism, etc.

While writing a few cards at the postoffice desk in Benton Harbor the other day a stranger asked,

"Is that your crutch standing near you?"

"Yes," said I.

"I see you are busy," said he, "and I do not wish to take your time, but want very briefly to call your attention to some facts that may be of service to you; facts that may convince you that there is no need that any one should be lame, or sick, or afflicted in any way."

He then showed me a copy of "Leaves of Healing," a large, well printed weekly magazine edited by John Alexander Dowie, of whose fame most of our readers have doubtless heard. The first four pages of this magazine, dated August 2, are taken up with an elaborated description of the case of John Easton, of Toronto, Canada, who, according to the account, was instantly healed and made strong, active and well, after having lain with a broken back encased in a jacket made of plaster of Paris, for six years and six months—healed by the "Power of the Holy Spirit," after prayers and laying on of hands by the "Zion Seventies" in Toronto, and after being instructed in the "Faith" by the magazine "Leaves of Healing."

The story is a truly remarkable one, and is corroborated by a long quotation purporting to be taken from the Toronto "Evening Telegram," of Feb. 15, 1902.

After glancing over the article I told Mr. Easton (if I understood him aright he claimed to be the identical man so miraculously healed) that I had no reason to doubt the substantial truth of the story, but that I had a different explanation for the wonderful result; that such cures were by no means new, and by no means peculiar to any one religious cult—that such occurrences, quite as well attested, were told by Spiritualists, by Mental Scientists, by Christian Scientists, etc. I might have added Mormons, Boodhists, Roman Catholics, Shakers, and some Protestant sects. This assertion of mine Mr. Easton most vigorously denied; also denied that these cures were probably done by self-psycholization, by hypnotic power, by mental suggestion, declaring that such cures could not be done by any other power than that of God himself through his chosen instruments—his servants ordained to do this work.

At the urgent request of Mr. Easton I brought the magazine home with me and have given it a somewhat careful perusal, trying to find, if possible, the secret of the wonderful power the man Dowie exerts over his followers, a power that seems, judging from results, far greater than that of Mrs. Eddy, Cyrus Teed, Madame Blavatsky, or even Brigham Young and Joseph Smith, over their respective adherents. None of these have succeeded, in so short a time, in building up a church, or sect that so closely resembles in devotion and enthusiasm the early Christian church as related by the semi-mythical Christian records—resembles the early Christian cult in everything except one, and that is the accumulation of money and other substantial property, in the hands of one man, and the very evident disregard of the injunctions of Jesus and of his immediate followers, to shun riches, to "take no thought of the morrow"—to "sell all that thou hast and give to the poor," etc., etc.

The chief difference between Dowie's teaching and that of Jesus would seem to be that instead of selling all and giving to the poor, "The General Overseer of the Christian Catholic Church" would have his followers to sell all they possess and give to "Zion"—which means, Give to Dowie.

* * *

Am I wrong in this conclusion? If so I wish to be set right. I wish not to misrepresent any man, but want to treat others as I would myself be treated. The fairest way, in a case like this, is to let the man speak for himself, and though our space is small I here introduce several paragraphs from a discourse delivered by Dowie at "Shiloh Tabernacle, Zion City, Illinois," July 17, 1902, and reported in "Leaves of Healing," August 2:

"I have no hatred against men. When a man, however, becomes the incarnation and embodiment of apostasy, hypocrisy and deviltry, then that man has to stand aside, or else I have to put him aside.

"Zion must march on, and no man, and no church, and no king, and no nation, and no people, shall be allowed to obstruct the onward march of Zion; for it is the onward march of God. (Amen. Applause.)

"There is to be one head, and not a dozen. The day for diversity has gone by. The day has come for unity, and I say to my God reverently, as Ulysses Grant said to President Lincoln: 'I will not take the command; I will not lead the army of the United States, unless you give me all the money and all the men I need, and back me up every step of the way.'

"I have the promise from God that I shall get all the men, and all the money, and I am going on, but I will have no interference. God made me the leader just as He made Ulysses Grant Lieutenant General of the United States Army. Grant would take no nonsense from the President himself, from Sheridan, or from Sherman, from Buell, or from Mead, or any one else. God had given to him the command, and the rebellion could only be crushed by a united body carrying out a united policy.

"This work cannot be done unless there be one leader under God. If I am not that leader, go away and find him. If I am that leader, follow me. (Amen. Applause.) Hunger, thirst after the Righteousness, which is of God by faith; which is of God by practice, which is of God by realization, and has the power of God in every step that you take.

"The strength of a man is not the strength of his individuality, mentality, or the power that he wields socially, or financially. The strength of a man is, that although he stands alone, he knows that God is with him, and that one man with God on his side is forever an absolute majority upon any question.

"But one man with thousands, tens, hundreds of thousands and millions of men who have God, on his side, becomes a million times stronger. Give me that, O God, and if You do not give it me, take me to heaven, because I do not want to stay here and fool around like any miserable Methodist parson." (Laughter. Applause.)

Having heard Dowie preach I can testify that the above paragraphs fairly represent the style of the man. Very evidently the "General Overseer" believes in Dowie, and this self-confidence, as I take it, is the main secret of his phenomenal success in making converts and in building a city of several thousand people a few miles northward from Chicago, also a large sanitarium, publishing house and bank, in the great "Windy City" itself.

And this same self-confidence, I feel sure, accounts for most of the success of such theocrats as Mrs. Eddy, Cyrus Teed, Brigham Young and others I might name, of ancient as well as o modern times. The great masses of mankind have no confidence in themselves; no feeling of self-reliance and no desire, even, to be self-owning, self controlling. All their lives they have been told that they are "miserable worms of the dust;" sinners with no power to redeem or save themselves. Hence they fall easy victims to the ambitious self-seeker, the man of strong, positive will; one with the electric temperament of body; one who by his egoistic, self-assertive, self-reliant, self-sufficient manner of speaking and acting and by his electric emanations, readily becomes a good healer of bodily infirmities.

It does not need that a large number of patients should be healed, or even benefited. A very few exceptional cases, like that of John Easton, are sufficient to establish the fame of the prophet and to induce the credulous masses to accept him as their Moses, their Elijah, their "John the Precursor," or even as the re-incarnation of the Nazarene himself.

* * *

Most men and nearly all women are born worshipers—God-worshipers, authority-worshipers, hero-worshipers. They all, or nearly all, worship ideals of some sort, and if these ideals are clothed in mortal flesh and made visible and tangible to the senses, so much the better.

Most men and nearly all women are also born worshipers of wealth, of money and of the power, the splendor, the pageantry, that money enables its possessors to wield, to exhibit, to indulge themselves in. This is one of the chief means relied on by the Roman Catholic Church, to attract and to hold the ignorant and superstitious masses. Hence the concentration of wealth in the hands of the bishops, the archbishops and the pope, and hence the use, the skillful use that is made of wealth to dazzle the eyes and fire the imaginations of the masses aforesaid.

John Alexander Dowie evidently understands all this, and hence the "pomp and circumstance" that attend his public ministrations—the long and costly robes worn by himself, the uniforms in which his choristers are clothed, the decorations of his tabernacles—the precursors doubtless of more splendid temples of worship later on.

* * *

The Mormon hierarchy, the Protestant Christian hierarchies, in fact all the leading hierarchies of ancient and modern times have well understood the power of concentrated wealth, as a help to control the masses, and therefore it is not at all strange that the paying of "tithes" is one of the first and chief conditions of membership in all or nearly all religious organizations.

Immediately after the report of the discourse from which I have made selections appears the following paragraph in large type and double-leaded.

"Has God blessed you in tithing? Have you realized a fulfilment of God's promise to those who 'bring the whole tithe into the storehouse'? If so, let others know how true the promise is. Write your testimony and send it to Rev. William Hamner Piper, Overseer-at-Large of the Christian Catholic church in Zion, 1201 Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Illinois. Let your testimonies be brief and straight to the point."

* * *

The intention of Dowie to found a hierarchy similar to that of the Roman Catholic church seems clearly indicated by the title he has chosen for his organization: "The Christian Catholic church in Zion."

Verily this man Dowie—the product of ages of conflict with poverty and want, upon the bleak and sterile hills of Scotland—is making his mark in this our land of vast resources and boundless opportunities, not the least of which opportunities is that referred to by Phineas T. Barnum when he said, "The Americans like to be humbugged."

Not that I think Dowie an impostor, a fraud, or even consciously deceiving people in order to benefit them—as the wise physician is sometimes obliged to do. I think it most probable that he is a combination of religious enthusiast, benevolent humanitarian and shrewd business man with a keen eye for the interests of "No. 1."

And this estimate of John Alexander Dowie will apply, as I think, with slight variations to Cyrus Teed,—"Koresh"—to Mrs. Eddy, to Mrs. Wilmans-Post, to "Prof." Weltmer, to "Rev." Shelton, editor of "The Christian," and to hundreds of others more or less known to fame as "healers" and teachers of the "New Thought," etc.

As I have often said before, I blame no one; I judge no one; I impugn no man's motives, no woman's motives. I do not say, and do not believe that Dowie and the others named are doing no good, nor that they are doing more harm than good. I honestly think they are doing much good by showing people that when sick they can get well without the use of drugs, and there is no need of surgery in most cases where the surgeon's knife is now used. If, in fine, with all the charlatanism, the lack of anatomical and hygienic knowledge that confessedly attaches to the theory and practice of most if not all of the persons named—if with all these drawbacks they succeed in breaking the monopoly of the healing art now claimed and directed for their own benefit, by the "drug doctors," and especially if these "reformers" succeed in abolishing compulsory vaccination in the schools, prisons and public reformatories, and if they help to bring into disrepute the horrible practice known as vivisection—which practice is mostly the work of the medical monopolists just referred to, then we may truly say, as I think, that Dowieism, Eddyism, Teedism, Weltmerism, Sheltonism, etc., etc., are not unmixed evils.

M. HARMAN.

Notes From "Harmony Home."

There is still room for a few more "roomers" in the Phalansstery at No. 4 Dewey Ave. R. F. D., Benton Harbor, Michigan. The exceptionally cool weather has probably prevented some of our friends from coming, who have announced their intention of coming to spend a few days or weeks with us, to enjoy the breezes that sweep over Lake Michigan, regaining the coolness and freshness they had lost in their long journey from the Rocky Mountains over the parched plains of New Mexico, Eastern Colorado and Western Kansas.

Since the first description was printed the place has been pretty thoroughly renovated, and a number of useful articles added to the "outfit" therein mentioned. Among these useful things are a good gasoline cook stove with a fine supply of necessary fuel; also several articles of household and kitchen furniture; two good hammocks and other addtions to the sleeping department.

Among those who have come and gone, and who have expressed appreciation of the place and its management, are Mrs. Myra Pepper, 777 Walnut St., Chicago; Mrs. Fannie M. Taylor and children, 5517 Cottage Grove Ave. Chicago, and J. Herbert Rowell, author and publisher, Austin, Ills. This gentleman closed his letter of recent date in these words:

"I shall endeavor to have all of our friends, myself included, take a trip in a body to Harmony Home, a sort of convention, as it were. I hope you and the other gude people at the Home are well and as happy as I was when there."

I would also refer any who may be interested in the matter to Geo. B. Wheeler, 1443 East George St., Chicago. Bro. Wheeler did not stay even one night—came over Sunday and went back same day, so as to take up his routine work, in the postal department, next morning. When his "vacation" comes in September he expects to come again for a much longer stay. Nearly all who have been here have signified their intention of returning later on. I would also refer inquirers to Lillian Harman,—Lucifer office,—who spent two days and nights in the Home, soon after it was opened up for visitors.

* * *

Recapitulating a little the information given in previous numbers, would say that I do not offer to feed our visitors, except to supply fruit—apples and pears—nor to furnish beds,—except mattresses and bedsteads for a few. Also straw or hay to fill bedticks. No designs on the pocket-books of our friends—except a small contribution to the expense of the rent of the premises; the intention being to supply an opportunity at small cost for those who care to board themselves in a partly furnished house. The house is modern and well furnished—is now clean and odorless; a large dry cellar, a well of most excellent water—also good cistern filled with clear and cold rain water. Altogether the house and its environments are quite superior to the average of farm houses, even of the wealthier class of farmers. It is a suburban home of the better quality.

The cost of getting here from Chicago is small. Only fifty cents each way, by day boat to St. Joe or Benton Harbor. From Benton Harbor it is less than three miles from the street car barn, on Pipe Stone street. Thence south-east to Pearle Road; thence east to Dewey Ave., turning south at Kelley's Corner, one fourth mile.

As to work: those who want to work can get it almost any time,—so I am told by reliable authority. Bro. W. V. Hardy came to the Home a week ago today and has been busy almost every day since, picking plums, at $1.25 per day.

While I urge no one to come to the Home it would be more pleasant to see a little more company, especially if of the "Household of Faith"—faith in the Natural, the Rational, the Fraternal or Humanitarian—that is, faith in man whom we know, rather than faith in God, whom we do not know.

M. HARMAN.

A Brief Visit at "Harmony Home."

As one leaves the road and enters the gateway of "Harmony Home" one is reminded of "Slab Sides," the retreat of John Burroughs. Everything so quiet, so plain, so homelike, that one from the noisy city feels as if he had entered a new world. As a retreat for those tired in mind and body "Harmony Home" has few equals. Plenty of shade, plenty of fruit, fresh air and water in abundance. Real milk and butter and no cold storage eggs. I was reluctant to leave; shall likely go there again to remain longer.

G. B. WHEELER.

VARIOUS VOICES.

O. Liebovitz, Monroe, La.:—For the enclosed please send Lucifer three months to each of accompanying addresses, and renew my subscription. I received Walker's "Vice: Its Friends and Its Foes." It seems to me this book ought to be read by every one, young and old, scholar and laborer.

Myra Peffer, Chicago:—In answer to several inquiries about "Harmony Home" I want to say first that those who contemplate a summer outing and want regular hotel accommodations, must go somewhere else. The editor made that plain in his first article describing the place. But those who wish to rusticate for awhile at small cost to themselves will find plenty of room, good water, and the quiet of a country place. Mail is delivered every day, grocery wagons make regular rounds, and supplies may be ordered daily. Fruit gathering affords occupation for those who care to work, and those who like woodland walks have not far to go. For amusement, there are old-fashioned country dances twice a week at the home of one of the farmers nearby. The main idea however in inviting radicals to group for a time with Lucifer's editor, is to have opportunity for full and free discussion of subjects in which all are interested. Thus combining a period of rest with the work of planning along lines of future endeavor, by means of which inquiring minds may be taught the inspiring truths of individual freedom. The writer spent several days at "Harmony Home" along with friends and acquaintances and if possible will repeat the visit in a few weeks.

A. A. Cowles, Cincinnati:—The books and 40 back numbers of Lucifer came to hand all right and I have enjoyed the reading of them very much. I must say, however, that I found no philosophy—that is, no good philosophy—in the book entitled "Anarchism: Its Philosophy and Ideal." Have you a better book on the subject?

archy ever prevails it must come gradually. Man is not naturally bad, as is proven by his rise from savagery; but at present there is a class that murders, robs, and outrages from mere love of crime. To be sure, this class will be eliminated when we learn the science of parenthood and excel in pre-natal and post-natal education. But that time is not yet; and so long as the masses are in their present pitiable condition we can scarcely prevent criminal instincts in the children. I believe that socialism must come first and that it is the duty of all to work in that direction. It would be a step upward and might pave the way to still higher planes of existence. Anything which ameliorates the condition of humanity tends to raise the mental, moral and physical standard of succeeding generations.

I liked "Motherhood in Freedom," but it caused an occasional smile. Of course few mothers could be on intimate terms with great artists, musicians, and scientists; but many are able to practice music or attend musical entertainments, interest themselves in art, and read upon such subjects as they think will produce fine traits or abilities in their babes. The prospective mother should preserve a pleasant frame of mind, by all means avoiding anger and fear. If trials come let her, by force of will, ignore them and be happy. Her every victory is a victory for her child, and thus turns to blessings those things which would otherwise be detrimental. She should indulge herself, prudently, in all good things, but at the same time take especial care of her physical and mental states, avoiding any undue exertion. Should take especial care of eyes, teeth, hair, etc. But how can the average woman follow all these suggestions? The time is not yet.

J. C. Barnes, Hindsboro, Ills.:—Please permit me to reply to Ironicus in his "Parry and Thrust" in which he says "To Single Taxers:" "If the presence of population is that which gives value to land, you deceive yourselves when you think that the population has a right to tax that value. The poulation did not work to give the land that value; and where no work has been done no remuneration should be forthcoming."

Strictly speaking, the so-called "Single Tax" is not a tax at all as defined by the dictionaries, but it is a term used to more concisely express the modus operandi of collecting the economic rent or annual value of land which results from social growth or the presence of population. We do not propose to tax the value, but take it for all the people. Ironicus will not dispute the fact that the value exists and that it exists solely by reason of social growth and that the man who owns the land did not produce its value any more than any other good citizen did. I ask Ironicus; since the value of land exists in populous places, and the owner did not produce its value, who should have the value? Is there any other party but the public to which the value can justly go?

I do not claim that every man, the criminal and pauper for instance, adds equally to the value of land, but such distinctions cannot be socially adjusted. I admit that if criminals and paupers were entirely eliminated from a city, that land values would be higher proportional to population. But I also believe that by taking annually the economic rent for public uses, there would be very few criminals and paupers and land values would still augment. I will put Ironicus a question and close. "Would not the socalled 'Single Tax' be much more just than the preseat system or lack of system of taxation by which every man who by industry and economy accumulates some wealth, is required to divide up every year? Our present system of fining industry is a species of Socialism we Anarchists are opposed to. I write as an Anarchist who thinks the Single Tax, being individualistic, is the longest stride that can be taken towards ultimate freedom."

It is not work that kills men; it is worry. Work is healthy; you can hardly put more upon a man than he can bear. Worry is rust upon the blade. It is not the revolution that destroys the machinery but the friction.—H. W. Beecher.

TOLSTOI'S NEW WORK.

The Slavery of Our Times.

With Portrait of the Gifted Author, and Introduction by the Translator, Aylmer Maude.

CHAPTER TITLES.

I., Goods Porters Who Work Thirty-seven Hours; II., Society's Indifference While Men Perish; III., Justification of the Existing Position of Sciences; IV., The Assertion of Economic Science that Rural Laborers Must Enter the Factory System; V., Why Learned Economists Assert what is False; VI., Bankruptcy of th Socialist Ideal; VII., Culture or Freedom? VIII., Slavery Exists Among Us; IX., What is Slavery? X., Laws Concerning Taxes, Land and Property; XI., Laws the Cause of Slavery; XII., The Essence of Legislation Is Organized Violence; XIII., What Are Governments? Is it Possible to Exist Without Governments? XIV., How Can Governments Be bolished? XV., What Should Each Man Do? An Afterword.

Well printed on heavy paper. Substantially bound. 186 pages. Price, $1.50.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

CAPTAIN JINKS, HERO

BY ERNEST CROSBY.

It is a merciless satire on war and militarism in which the parallel between savagery and soldiery is unerringly drawn. It is a biting burlesque on the various forms of cheap hero-worship. It holds up to withering scorn every important feature of militarism.

Among the accompaniments and results of war exploited and satirized, are hazing at "East Point," the war whoops of the yellow journals, the savagery of war, the Schley-Sampson controversy, civilizing the heathen savage, looting in China, pension abuses, the capture of Aguinaldo, the Peace Conference, army mismanagement, osculatory attacks by gooney girls, etc.

With 25 Irresistible Drawings by Dan Beard. Illus. Cloth, Handsome Covers, 100 pages. Price $1.50

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only." Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spolling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem, Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization. The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 10c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer the Light Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

VACCINATION A CRIME.

With Comments on Other Sanitary Superstitions.

BY FELIX L. OSWALD, M. D.

"Vaccination spreads diseases; vaccination impairs the organic functions; vaccination encourages reliance on worthless remedies; vaccination spreads small-pox; compulsory vaccination furnishes dangerous legal precedents."

With illustrations of diseases frequently resulting from vaccination. 198 pages. Price 10 cents. For sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St. Chicago.

Wanted: Correspondence from Lucifer readers who desire to locate in Iowa or Dakota near other radical families. Also from any who wish to break away from marriage slavery and want a temporary home and help to help themselves. Address K., care of M. Harman 500 Fulton Street Chicago.

931.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

To NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author.

The Sex Passion.
Man, the Engrown.
Woman, the Serf.
Woman in Freedom
Marriage: a Retrospect.
Marriage: a Forecast.
The Free Society.
Some remarks on the early star and sex worships.
Notes—On the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population.

The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. Price, $1.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

WHITMAN'S IDEAL DEMOCRACY. AND OTHER WRITINGS.

BY HELENA BORN.

Comprising besides the title essay, Thoreau's Joy in Nature; Poets of Revolt: Shelley, Whitman, Carpenter; Whitman's Altruism; Individualism versus Organization: Impossibles of Economic Argument; The Last Stand Against Democracy in Sex; Inequality in Divorce; Marriage Safeguards. With portrait of author and biographical introduction by Helen Tufts. 125 pages. Edition limited to 500 copies; each copy numbered. Fine paper, uncut pages, bound in boards, paper label. Price $1.

Agents Wanted To sell the Toltec Dandruff Cure and the Toltec Hair Dressing (restores natural color) Are clean and perfect. Liberal commission. Write for circulars. Address: The Toltec Remedies Co., Box 130, Denver Colo.

"Pages of Socialist History" By W. Tcherkesoff. This book is recommended to Socialists of all schools, as it deals with the history of the "Internationa!" and the attitude of Marx and Engels towards Bakounin. Paper cover, 25 cents. By mail, 30 cents

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.

ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $1.75.

A FLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strasburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.

BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth, $1.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 31 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 256 pages. 50c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

DARWIN, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 178 pages. 25c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and His Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James H. Alexander. Over 400 Illustrations, 37 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum 10c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and combating the claims made by churchmen that the Christian religion has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 260 pages. 60c. Postage, 5c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 25c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 519 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Alfenman. 32 pages. Paper, 10c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Scotsland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 97 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Volney, and Voltaire. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREEZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. 2c.

KORADINE. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III. (1889). Cloth, $1.25. Postage, 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 418 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 25c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Variolists; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love; Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Philistines; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 10c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, R. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation: with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsels, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $4. Five volumes, plainer binding, $3.25; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 25c.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 10c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Mariette), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 307 pages. 25c.

THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Witches and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 312 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and nourishing thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 32 large pages; 10 cents. Twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 10c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTERS; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Gree. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1723, quoted by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuit craft, and is a plain index to the underhand working of that order against the welfare of humanity and society. 25c.

THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 10c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Social Evil, Telegt Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Winne). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $1.25.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Darling. 10c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Thomas Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 10c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us man, of circling arms of babes." Paper covers; 48 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor: a slave of the slave. This is woman in the past and is so still. She is now. 25c. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 378 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VI., No. 33. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, AUG. 28, E. M. 302. [C. E. 1902.] WHOLE No. 932

THE LAST STEP.

Ah hopeless heart that once wast like a flower!
Ah helpless hands that once to help were strong!
Ah silent lips that once were glad with song!—
What dost thou, Woman, in this fatal hour!
Poor broken soul, from whom hath gone the power
To think or wish or act, what monstrous wrong
Engirds the world, that thou art driven along,
Man's lewdness and man's loathing for thy dower!
If that first step to thee was honey-sweet,
Ah bitterer than gall shall be this last!
Now that all joys are done, and wishes past,
Down his dark way Death guides thy doomed feet
To where thy poisoned heart shall cease to beat,
And Lust fromhis own work must shrink aghast.

WILLIAM FRANCIS BARNARD.

Captain Robert C. Adams.

In the death of Robert Chamblet Adams, Lucifer and Lucifer's editors lose one of their most faithful, earnest and helpful friends. The news of his death came as a shock though it was not unexpected. For at least six or seven years he had known that his hold on life was slight, and had so informed us. Whenever he passed through Chicago he made our home his headquarters, and the memory of his genial presence will never be blotted out. To many of Lucifer's readers Captain Adams was a personal friend, and they also will mourn his untimely death. The following sketch of his life is taken from S. P. Putnam's "Four Hundred Years of Freethought." L. H.

Captain Robert C. Adams—a name honored in the annals of Freethought. No one has had a more significant experience. It is a lesson in evolution. Captain Adams was born in the very heart of orthodoxy. It was imposed upon him in every possible way. Through the teachings of beloved parents it seems as if every fibre of his being was committed to the Puritan faith. He followed it with a passionate sense of duty, and there appeared to be no escape from its deep and subtle influences. So far as environments were concerned, he was evidently destined to be a Calvinistic clergyman.

He was the son of Rev. Nehemiah Adams, D. D., of Boston, Mass., and was born in that city in 1839. His father was an eminent expounder of the old faith, eloquent, learned, refined, and, we might say, absolutely consecrated to his religious dogmas. He had no doubt. His faith was perfect. It was a household of faith. There was no glimmer of scepticism in that orthodox fold.

Ill health forbade the boy to follow his scholarly tastes and religious training, and adopt the profession of his father. By the advice of the family physician he entered a ship's forecastle at the age of fifteen, and worked his way up from before the mast to the command of some of the finest ships in the American merchant service. His last voyage was in the ship Golden Fleece, when his father and two sisters accompanied him on a voyage around the world. Captain Adams became noted for his humane treatment of sailors. His book, "On Board the Rocket," gives realistic pictures of sea-life, and his efforts for the elevation of seamen.

On his voyages he was first startled by a discovery of the virtues of the heathen and the injustice of their damnation; and then he was perplexed by the differences among Christians in their interpretations of what was claimed to be a divine revelation, which, therefore, ought to be intelligible to all. This led him, without reading a sceptical book, to see the truth of the natural origin of religion. The force of early training, however, influenced him for some years to stifle his doubts, and he plunged deeply into religious work. He became a Sunday-school superintendent and lay preacher, and was an active supporter of a sailor's institute.

At last the Evolution philosophy gained his attention and confirmed his doubts; and the force of his convictions compelled him to withdraw from the church. He startled the good people of Boston by the publication of "A Radical Avowal" in 1881. Since then Captain Adams has been one of the foremost Freethought speakers and writers in America.

His "Travels in Faith," published about twelve years ago by the Putnams of New York, is a vivid account of his religious experiences James Parton says of his book: "It is what millions of the English-speaking races need." It is certainly a story of mental evolution which is characteristic of the age. There never was a more conscientious mind than that of Captain Adams; and, at the same time, a more healthful mind. Every step was carefully taken. The logic of it is clearly seen. He felt he must take it. At the same time no one was ever more reverent toward the teachings of his youth. His progress therefore was slow but sure. It is a progress which every honest mind must take if born into the old faith and born also to think.

There was a rare combination, however, in the case of Captain Adams, which makes his experience especially valuable. He was a tender, delicate, scholarly, sensitive child, susceptible to the soft and sweet influences of home life, and also to inherited tendencies. It was not easy for him to break away. He had but little of the real iconoclastic spirit. He was a home boy, lovable, kind, and gentle. I almost doubt, had he received a college education, if he had ever left the ancestral faith, for he might have eased his conscience with subtle dialectics, as many scholars do. Fortunately he did not become a scholar, but a sailor. This frail, emotional, religious child left home and battled with the storms of life. He came in contact with nature, human nature and physical nature. He had a natural desire to be best in whatever he undertook, and hence he determined to be a first-class sailor. The inherited Puritan determination took this way, and he excelled in his chosen work. He thus acquired an experience of the world which could not have come by any other process. His university was the broad ocean itself. His teachers were the winds and tides. He saw man exactly as he is. He saw the heathen, the missionary, the merchant, the sailor. He knew them. He was not misled by books. He circumnavigated the globe, and this is a bad thing for theologies. He became a citizen of the world. He sounded the very depths of religion, as he sounded the depths of the sea, and he found nothing upon which to rely. That very determination which made him a good sailor made him at last a Freethinker, and gave him energy to overcome the almost irresistible influences of childhood. Captain Adams was not a born Infidel. He was made an Infidel by the power of thought and the force of human experience. For this reason he represents the great trend of modern practical life, the out-door and working life of humanity. His scepticism is that scepticism which must come to every man who frankly considers life, and yet in the end it must be a constructive scepticism, since it is not at heart intellectual, but practical; that is, a scepticism which is the result of strenuous combat with life; a healthful, sturdy, cheerful scepticism which takes things as they are, but believes in the power of man to make them better. The writings of Captain Adams are a good tonic. They brace a man up. They are breezy, lightsome, vigorous, and radiant with humanity.

After fifteen years of sea-life, Captain Adams was married to an English lady in Liverpool, and after that engaged in the shipping and commission business in Montreal. This he conducted successfully until 1882, when he relinquished the business to partners whom he had introduced to it, and has since devoted himself to phosphate and other mining enterprises, in which he is largely interested. All the time, however, he has been identified by voice and pen with Freethought.—S. P. Putnam, in "Four Hundred Years of Freethought."

During the last few years Captain Adams has suffered from heart troubles, and on several occasions it was doubtful whether he would survive the sudden attacks of his ailment. He made several trips to the coast of Maine, also to the Bermudas, where he spent many pleasant weeks during last winter, and in a letter addressed to his son written two days before his death he mentioned Bermuda as a place to which he would probably go next winter again. Unfortunately this dream of happiness was not to be realized, for he died on Saturday evening at eleven o'clock in a small place called Sedgwick, on the coast of Maine. —Secular Thought.

Liberty in Socialism?

In Lucifer, No. 930, Charles H. Kerr touches the most important question of all modern socialists—that of individual liberty. But I am sorry to say that Mr. Kerr, like all the State Socialists whom I know, leaves the question just where he found it, without any satisfactory explanation of the State Socialist position. Yet he speaks complainingly of the editor because he seems to fear that State Socialists are in favor of suppressing individual liberty.

Why should not the Anarchist Socialists or Free Socialists (they are the same) fear the State Socialists when the latter persistently refrain from the few simple assurances which would set the doubt at rest?

Now I have the kindest feelings in the world toward the Social-Democrats, many of their leaders are my dear friends, and I would be happy to aid their success by every means in my power, rejoicing as I do in their enthusiasm and earnest, unselfish work, but I am always stopped by this very question.

Mr. Kerr's closing sentence reveals a great misunderstanding of the attitude of the Anarchist Socialists. They do not "preach the desirability of transforming society and leave each hearer to guess how." On the contrary the Anarchist program is that society is to be transformed by the secession of would-be free individuals from government support and the formation of these seceders into free groups. In Free or Anarchist Society, then each individual is an Individual Sovereign, regulating his own finite affairs in equal liberty with his fellows, and each group acts also as a free Collective Individual regulating its own affairs autonomously. In other words Anarchist Society will be simply a congeries of free individuals and free groups (these groups being of any size from two individuals to any number of millions) and individual liberty will be maintained by always maintaining the right of individual secession from any and all collectivities and co-operations, whatever, and the right of occupancy and use of enough soil by each individual to make his own living—for without free land secession is a barren right, or only permission to freely starve.

When a man comes to a Free Socialist, then, with the question, "How will individual liberty be conserved?" the answer is always ready, "By free secession and free land," but I have searched in vain the books and platforms of State Socialism for any such guarantees, any such simple and definite guarantees.

The answer I have always received is the one Mr. Kerr gives, that State Socialist government will not be an instrument for governing persons but an instrument for administering things. Now, I think reasonably, this answer can satisfy no Anarchist. With all desire to assume the honesty of the speaker it sounds to him like an evasion.

Will Mr. Kerr please answer for me two simple questions.

1. Does not individual liberty mean the right of the individual to co operate or not to co-operate, as he pleases, with his fellows and to obtain his living, if he pleases, in his own way, directly from pure Nature, provided always he does not infringe the equal liberty of his fellows?

(At any rate this is what Free Socialists understand by liberty.)

2. How can such individual liberty be maintained under an "Administration" which "controls the land and means of production?"

Is it not reasonable to suppose that an administration that controls things controls absolutely those who depend for their life and happiness upon the use of those things?

There is nothing I am more eager to bring about than a union of all socialists but I do not see how it can be done till the State Socialists give some pledge that they will always permit the free secession of the dissenting individual, from their "administration" "back to the land," to arrange his own "means of production" to suit himself.

But with such a pledge the rest is easy, for State Socialism, then, no matter how large or "international," becomes merely an autonomous group in Free Society administering the affairs of those only who voluntarily adhere to it.

That is simple justice and nothing less than this guarantees individual liberty. J. Wm. Lloyd.

Law and Lawyers.

Friend Harman:—I note what you say about employing lawyers; it is quite true, and yet we all have our lessons to learn. I, myself would have employed no lawyer, but would have plead my own case, had I not been connected in the matter with Mrs. Penhallow, who is very much beloved by the friends here, and they feared that I might fail and thus endanger her, and I could not hold out against that feeling. I can stand public opposition better than I can that of friends who are as kind to me as the friends here are.

I have no fault to find with our attorneys. They did the best they could, but they do not understand the question at issue from our standpoint. They do not see its moral side—that it is not license that we are seeking, but the best good of the race—that our ideal understood and lived, would do away with all abnormal desire, all forms of prostitution, all sex disease. One who really did understand could have presented the subject to the jury in a way that would have brought a different result.

It is education that the people need. I give below the names and addresses of the jury, not for the purpose of annoying them, for they acted according to their light, but that liberal thinkers may mail them from time to time such matter as tends to educate in the line of thought on which we are working.

D. V. Dunham, Cathlamet; C. S. Brunbaugh, Shelton; Frank Binns, Shelton; Louis Tassriman, Stella; Robert Marshall Merton; A. B. McDonald, Mabetta; J. Cook Baisfort; John Lineberger, Oysterville; Lee Wallace, Kelso; James H. Marner Rainier; John Bashford, and A. A. French, Tacoma, all of Washington.

By the way, a Los Angeles paper has published the condemned articles, and if other papers would do the same on the ground that the public has the right to know so as to judge for itself. I believe it would put a stop to such persections quicker than anything thing else could. In this case I do not think there would be any danger as the judge did not consider the article obscene. Yours, Lois Waisbrooker.

P. S. One reason that the friends here employed lawyers was, that some of the friends blamed them for acquiesing so quietly in Govan's case, so thought if those on the outside would furnish funds we would fight it out. I think both sides have learned a lesson. L. W.

I wish to say a few words in Mrs. Waisbrooker's behalf. It seems that she paid $50 of her fine out of the money she had collected for her paper, "Clothed With the Sun," and also for a little outing for herself. I think, moreover, that she expects to pay back the $50 that was raised by the friends at Home, Wash., to help her pay the $100 fine. As these people are poor in purse and had already been put to much expease and trouble on account of the various prosecutions to which the colonists have been subjected, it seems only fair and right that other sympathetic friends should help them to bear the burden. Mrs. Waisbrooker, in a private note, asks me to say that she still has some copies of her book, "Perfect Motherhood," price one dollar; also of her "Century Plant" in paper covers, fifty cents; also of "A Sex Revolution," twenty five cents; a few of "The Temperance Folly," ten cents, and also of "Life Issues," ten cents.

These books need no recommendation from me. For more than thirty years Mrs Waisbrooker has been on the picket line of the army of progressive thinkers, and of workers for human freedom—especially for freedom of Womanhood and Motherhood. If any of our readers can send for copies of one or more of these books and pamphlets for their own use or to help on the work of agitation and education, they will confer a double benefit. They will help a very deserving and oft-persecuted veteran to pay off a most unjust fine, and also help others to broader and nobler views of truth, of liberty, of helpful and fraternal obligation, or duty.

If in any other way our friends can help Mrs. Waisbrooker I shall consider it a favor to myself also—as I feel a deep interest in the case, having known Mrs. Waisbrooker personally for many years, and having been assisted by her in many ways while fighting the same battle against the oppressors of freedom of speech and of press. M. Harman.

Ruminations.

The comments of Moses Harman on the Waisbrooker-Penhallow trial will commend themselves to many who view the matter from a distance; and I am far from denying that there is much reason in the point of view taken. At the same time, the action to be taken in all such cases must be largely determined by the special conditions, which can be fully appreciated only by those right on the spot.

For the fine imposed on Lois Waisbrooker, I blame the law, rather than the judge. His whole bearing during the trial was that of a man who wished to be as fair as the law allowed him to be. His rulings and instructions were distinctly in favor of the defence, although the fact that he was presiding in the district assigned to another judge doubtless had its effect in making him wish not to be arbitrary with the jury. His own district is in California; and he came to Washington only to assist Judge Hanford in clearing an overcrowded docket. He means to be just, but is, above all, a martinet, to whom every syllable of the law is sacred. So, although he expressed his regret, and took little pains to conceal his disgust at the verdict of the jury, he felt that the law did not allow him to overrule it. Hence he imposed the smallest penalty the law allowed, without adding a cent of costs, and without alternative imprisonment. If the money had not been forthcoming on the spot, Lois Waisbrooker could have returned home none the less, and satisfied the judgment at her leisure, as in the case of a civil debt. Judge De Haven does not realize the infamy of the Comstock law, nor take as broad a view as we could wish; but he is far fairer than the average judge. If all on the bench were like him, Comstockism could not boast so many shameful triumphs.

As to the employment of lawyers, I think that each individual case must be decided according to all the conditions present. In the present instance, I believe that the money was well spent. If it had not been for the skill and energetic work of our attorneys, I have little doubt that Mattie Penhallow, against whom the prosecution had a special animosity, would also have been convicted. We can never tell in advance how a case is coming out; and it does not seem right to throw away any chance of success. I would not vote to send a woman like Mattie Penhallow to prison, in order to save a lawyer's fee. I would rather fee a lawyer for being, for once, on the right side, than pay an unjust fine to the enemies of liberty, for lack of that vigorous defence which might have brought about an acquittal. We are in the hands of the law; and it is not improper for us to make use of such means of self-protection, including the assistance of experts, as the law itself allows. While striving to educate men in the direction of a better state of affairs, we have a right to hold firmly to the few guarantees given us by the system which forces us to bear many burdens.

I agree, however, that the less we have to do with lawyers, as a class, the better. As I have repeatedly pointed out, the surer way to victory over the foes of free speech lies in a tireless educational campaign. For this purpose, the Free Speech League has been organized. It is ready to saturate the country with literature and speakers, just as fast as the means are provided for active work. This is a time to be doing, not quibbling. If there is any reader of Lucifer who has not yet joined the League, the time to do so is at once. Send a dollar for membership to Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr., 120 Lexington Ave., New York, F. Y. If possible, add a donation for the work of the League. Let us have a thousand members and a full treasury in time for a vigorous fall and winter campaign. If you really care for free speech, prove it.

Rev. C. W. Heisler, D. D., in the "Lutheran Quarterly," brags of the great "Christian resources" of the country, dwelling especially on the wealth and politically power of the churches. He does not appear to realize that he is simply boasting of successful parasitism and theft. If the church really represented any high principle, it would not be so loved by the wealthy classes, and by all the enemies of progress. Its boast is its condemnation. James F. Morton Jr.

Home, Washington.

Knowledge.

I have known sorrow—therefore I
May laugh with you, O friend, more merrily
Than those who never sorrowed upon earth
And know what laughter's worth.
I have known laughter—therefore I
May sorrow with you far more tenderly
Than those who never knew how sad a thing
Seems merriment to one heart's suffering.
—Theodosia Garrison, in "The Century."

Forty copies of Lucifer, no two alike, of 1900 or 1901 will be sent to any address for 15 cents. Nine bundles for $1. We are anxious to place these papers where they will do good. Please let us have your orders soon. State which year you want.

In proportion as we love truth more and victory less, we shall become more anxious to know what it is which leads our opponents to think as they do. We shall begin to suspect that the pertinacity of belief exhibited by them must result from perception of something we have not perceived.—Herbert Spencer.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 344 W. 143d street, New York.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for ustice against Privilege.

"Heart to Heart Talks."

Lucifer's editor is not the "Pastor of His Flock," as "Fra Elbertus" Hubbard tells us he is—in his very interesting monthly journal, "The Philistine." I am not a pastor, not a shepherd, or goatherd, nor do my readers sustain the relation to me of sheep, of goats, of kine, of geese, or any other kind of gregarious quadruped or feathered biped to their master or owner.

And yet I very much like the idea of holding "heart-to-heart" and mind-to-mind talks with the readers of Lucifer, but much prefer that these talks should be on the plan, or plane, of equality. The pulpit and pew arrangement, which is identical with the pastor and his flock idea, is repulsive to me. Since cutting the leading strings of the church I have belonged to no organization or association in which all were not equal. My idea of the proper relation of editor and readers is that of a school, in which all are teachers and all learners, or pupils; no pedagogues, no disciples; no leaders nor followers; no bosses, no servants.

To follow the quoted and popular metaphor we must suppose that the pastor's chief interest in his flock to be that of personal gain. The pastor or shepherd periodically shears his flock, and takes their wool, which has a commercial value. He also kills some of them for mutton which he and his friends devour, or perhaps, as in the olden time, he offers the "first-lings of his flock"—not sparing the tender and innocent "ewe lambs"—as sacrifice to his blood and flesh-loving god.

No, no! Not any "pastor and flock" arrangement for me. And yet I want to be in close touch, sympathetic accord, with my readers or hearers. I want to feel that they are all friends and that they are not located miles and miles away, but right here with me, in speaking and hearing distance. I want to feel that they come into this cosy parlor-sanctum; that they help themselves to chairs, or that they plump down on the lounge without asking leave, else swing themselves upon the hammocks in the large vine-covered porch near by; but whatever the bodily position preferred they come prepared to take part in the discussion of any and all questions that may seem of greatest mutual interest.

* * *

CITY AND COUNTRY LIFE COMPARED.

For illustration I shall suppose that a half dozen or more of my readers are now and here present in bodily form, and that all the rest are present also in spirit, to take part in discussing the subject dwelt upon in my "Notes from the Wolverine State," printed in No. 928. I will suppose, too, that among those present in the material body is an old friend of my youth, R. M. Brown, of Crawford Co. Missouri, familiarly called "Dick" Brown, whom I have neither seen nor heard from for more than twenty-five years. As a starter to the discussion of the evening I might, could, would or should say something like this:

"Glad to meet you once more, Friend Brown," (meantime rising and giving him the "glad hand" of welcome). When I last saw you you were a prosperous Missouri farmer and pig-raiser; also a contributor to the columns of the "Crawford Mirror" and other local papers. Was it the practice you got as contributor to these local papers that enables you to write so well as correspondent of a metropolitan and cosmopolitan paper such as Lucifer? Allow me to compliment you on your very clever treatment—criticism perhaps I should call it, of my brief remarks on 'Back to the Farm,' in a recent issue of Lucifer, a journal I certainly never expected to see your name in, knowing so well the conservative cast of your mind. However, as this is a world of change we should be astonished at nothing. You knew me as a heretic in religion but perhaps never supposed that my heresy was so rank, so dangerous as the columns of Lucifer now show it to be.

"But this is somewhat aside from the subject to which I wish to direct your attention and that of the good friends present in body, also those who can reach our symposium only telepathically. In your friendly criticism,—pages 240-41 of this volume of Lucifer, you give utterance to many important truths—perhaps I should say to many phases, or fractional views of truth, for no statement of truth in practical life, no truth in the concrete, can be more than partial or comparative.

"You may remember that in the article criticised by you I distinctly said, 'The subject is too large for exhaustive treatment in one article.' If it were possible to exhaust this or any other subject in one issue, from the standpoint of one man's experience and observation, there would still be room for supplementary notes and comments by others equally competent, whose experience and observation will have led them to conclusions different from those of the first writer. I also said, 'I see a vast combination of causes that make it impossible that things should be different from what we now find them,' that is, impossible that the mass of farm workers should be content to live their whole lives on the farm.

"Thus it is seen that I anticipated the main point of your criticism, namely, 'there are many reasons besides the desire to absorb the unearned increment which fill the cities at the expense of the country.'

"I said comparatively little about 'unearned increment,' emphasizing rather, such advantages of the country over the city as better air, more sunshine, more freedom from task masters, more equality between employer and employe—in the country as compared to life in the great city. You take issue with much that I said, making it somewhat necessary that I re-state and elaborate some of my points as when I spoke of the of the country as compared to the impure air of the great city. Let us see:

SWEET, PURE WHOLESOME AIR

No statement can be absolute, as already intimated. The air of the farm and farmhouse may be worse than that of the city, but having lived in the country for more than fifty years of my life and in cities perhaps ten or twelve, I can testify that the balance is tremendously in favor of the country. You speak of the 'stenches' coming from the 'styes and cattle-pens,' that sweep over the farm house. I am fully aware that these are sources of disease, also the badly kept cellars, privies, etc., mentioned by you, and yet as compared to the stenches that come from the Chicago stock-yards infecting the air for miles around, also the odors that arise from the Chicago river—that huge open sewer until the drainage canal modified the evil somewhat, also the fetid air that stealthily creeps into our houses from blind alleys, alleys into which sunshine seldom or never comes—as compared to all these I much prefer to take my chances with the country nuisances aforesaid. All these country nuisances are much more easily abated, or entirely removed, than are the disease-producing environments to be found wherever the high price of land tempts the monopolistic speculator to crowd the dwellings of human beings, also factories, stores, etc., into small compass.

Surely, Friend Brown, you have never visited the slum districts of the great cities, such as Chicago, St. Louis, Cleveland, Cincinnati or Louisville, nor have you seen the green scum on the open sewers of New Orleans, nor walked through the narrow streets and alleys of that pestilence-inviting city. How the case may be in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, and other great cities of the east I do not know from actual observation, but have good reason to believe that large areas of those cities are far worse as malaria-breeders than even the swamp-lands of southern Missouri and Arkansas, or of the lower Mississippi basin. Consider a moment, please, what it is that purifies the bad air arising from cattle pens, etc. Is it not the air itself,—the air in motion, commonly called wind? Wind and Sunshine are nature's great disinfectants. Stagnant air, like stagnant water, becomes impure—unfit for breathing. It is a well known fact that water purifies itself by motion, but not so well known that air does the same. Then when we remember that the greed of man makes it impossible that air in the closely built slums and manufacturing districts can purify itself by motion we cease to wonder at seeing the sallow complexions, the withered features and emaciated forms of those who must breathe such stagnant and polluted air twenty-four hours of every day, with never a vacation from year's end to year's end.

Another great purifier of foul air is growing vegetation. Andrew Jackson Davis in his "Herald of Health," advised his readers to live in cornfields as much as possible—to surround their dwellings with growing corn. His reason doubtless was the long established fact that the leaves of growing plants give off oxygen at night and absorb carbonic acid gas. Scarcely any other plant makes such rapid growth as does Maize, or Indian corn, hence its great value as a purifier of the air we breathe. In the slum districts of cities there can be no cornfields, and but very little growing vegetation of any kind.

* * *

"A BETTER WATER SUPPLY."

While this remark may be true of some cities compared to some farm houses, it is certainly not true of all, nor even of the majority of cases with which I am acquainted. Take Chicago as an example. Its water is drawn from the bottom of Lake Michigan—stagnant water, insipid to the taste and befouled by sewerage, so much so that nearly half the time we are warned by the Board of Health that the water is "bad," "suspicious," etc., and that it is safer to boil it before using. While it is true that farmers, as a class, are not as careful as they should be in this regard, yet in most cases that have come under my observation the water of which they drink is obtained either from springs, running streams or from wells that tap subterranean brooks or rivers—veins they are called, and they would not be veins if the water did not flow.

Try, for instance, the well out in the yard, about two rods from where we now sit. This well taps a deep vein, or underground stream, of slightly sulphuretted but otherwise very pure water, and if, on trial, you do not pronounce it vastly better, for drinking purposes at least, than the Chicago hydrant water, then your taste is very different from mine, and from that of many others who have tried both.

* * *

THE REGISTRAR-GENERAL.

Much as I should like to pay attention to several other points in the article entitled "City and Country"—such as the comparative purity of the milk supply, number of hours of labor, convenience of paved streets and side-walks, gossip of neighbors, invasive meddling of "Societies for the Prevention," theaters, schools, etc., etc., in all of which particulars my old-time but long-lost and now recovered friend thinks the city has decided advantages over the country, I must ask for a postponement of further discussion of these very interesting phases of the comparison to a future occasion, for the reason that I want to give a fraternal greeting and exchange a few ideas with another old-time friend, C. L. James, whose article entitled "Fallen Women Again," follows immediately that signed R. M. Brown—I prefer to call him by the affectionately familiar name, the short and simple cognomen "Dick!"

Voltairine de Cleyre addressed the sage of Eau Claire—who I will assume is now present in bodily form—as "Comrad James." The word comrade signifies a companion—one who is in close daily association with the speaker,—as a "comrade in arms," comrade in exile or in captivity, or who has been such in the past. Now it so happens that Friend James and myself have never been comrades in arms, comrades in exile or even comrades in prison, and therefore I do not consider that I have any right to address him familiarly as Comrade, though I should certainly esteem it an honor and a privilege to be, or to have been, thus closely associated with one whose learning and whose long and efficient service in the cause of human brotherhood, human progress, human liberty I much admire.

Metaphorically speaking, I admit, we might possibly use this word with propriety when speaking of, or addressing, one who is thoroughly in sympathy with our own objects in life, or our own leading thoughts and feelings. But this kind of comradeship can hardly be said to exist between Friend James and myself. While in most matters of opinion and lines of propaganda work for the betterment of our common humanity we differ but little there are two or three subjects of very great importance, as I view them, on which C. L. James and myself disagree most radically, most hopelessly, as it would seem. To avoid repetition I quote from the article just referred to:

"If I want to learn the effects of vaccination I much prefer the Registrar-General's reports to a woman's story at a winter's fire, authorized by her grandam."

In these "heart to heart talks" the conversational method seems the more appropriate, so I will ask Friend James a few questions:

First. If you wanted to learn the effects of the "Steel Trust" on the welfare of the people who use steel, would you prefer the reports of Michael Schwab, Andrew Carnegie and J. Pierpont Morgan, to the experiences of the victims of that Trust?

Second. Or if you wanted to learn the effects of any Trust—the Sugar Trust, the Meat Trust, the Standard Oil Trust, etc., upon the industrial and economic systems of the country, would you prefer the reports of the managers of these trusts to the cold, the hard, the untwisted facts that everywhere stand out so plain that he who runs may read?

Do you ask for the nexus between these illustrations and the reports of the Registrar-General? If so I reply:

As an Anarchist you will agree that governments exists for the use and benefit of the Trusts, that is, of the privileged classes and orders. The Medical Trust, I think you will agree, is one of these privileged classes. The Registrar-General is a governmental officer whose business it is to keep a record of births and deaths, and the causes of deaths. Vaccination—as you know, is a source of much power and revenue to the Medical Trust. Statistics of deaths and their causes are reported to the Registrar-General by the members of the Medical Trust.

Do you see no connection of cause and effect here? No temptation herein to falsify reports of causes of death so as to make people believe that vaccination prevents small-pox, and does not introduce into the system poisons that undermine health and cause death from diseases that are not called small-pox?

Here is the confession of a Registrar-General of the city of London in 1863, as quoted in a little book, page 13, by Dr. F. L. Oswald, entitled "Vaccination a Crime:"

"From forty to fifty cases of death within the corporation limits are yearly attributed to the after-effects of vaccination and often to its direct results."

This admission was said to have been "compelled by a discussion in the British newspapers which papers could not be entirely muzzled by the Medical Trust.

On page seventeen of the same book Prof. R. Wellstein of New Dietendorf is quoted as saying in 1872:

"The prevalence of measles seems to have considerably increased since the adoption of infant vaccination," adding that "children vaccinated in their cradles appear to have always something the matter with them; they catch cold under all possible pretexts and claim their share of any skin-disease going."

On page fifteen a case is mentioned in which the "garrison of Dortrecht was decimated by an outbreak of frightful skin-diseases. The medical functionary in that case, was a man of honor and frankly admitted that the affliction had undoubtedly been caused by a 'virulent degeneration of vaccine pustules,' and yet, according to the statement of Dr. Oswald, these deaths were attributed to 'erysipelas!'"

On page twelve and fourteen are mentioned cases of "syphilis epidemics resulting from vaccine blood poisoning," in one of which cases "a revolt bordering on a municipal insurrection was provoked in Algiers, where in 1880 an entire battalion of Zouaves was syphilized by the lancet of the regimental surgeon."

Of course in reporting these cases to the Registrar-General the disease of which the patient dies is not called small-pox nor varioloid, nor is the fact stated that the disease was caused by blood-poisoning from enforced vaccination.

* * *

I have taken considerable space Friend James, with these quotations, in order to show how little reliance is to be placed on Registrar-General's reports. Just one more brief quotation from "Vaccination a Crime," page 24, to show that vaccination spreads rather than limits or confines the contagion called small-pox:

"A comparison of impartial statistics revealed the astounding fact that in France during the years 1875 to 1900 small-pox epidemics have occurred more frequently in the vaccinated than in the anti-cowpox departments, the average of all diseases being 3½ mil. higher in the former than in the latter. And, as it happened, the anti-districts were pretty evenly distributed between lowlands and highlands. In the case of Rochelle and St. Jean de Luz seaport towns with a considerable patronage of visitors of various nations, had enjoyed a remarkable immunity, while vaccinated and re-vaccinated Cherbourg had to admit six outbreaks of indisputable small-pox in a quarter of a century."

* * *

And now my good and wise friend—I mean what I say when using the terms "good and wise." Irony, raillery, sarcasm, are quite out of place when talking to one I recognize as a friend good and true—you, my good and wise friend will probably be ready to ask:

"Do you really believe it possible that the learned and honorable medical profession could or would consciously join in a conspiracy to inaugurate and to keep going from age to age a DELUSION so gigantic and so criminal as vaccination must be if the writer of the book 'Vaccination a Crime' is a reliable witness?"

To this very natural question I answer, with all the candor and honesty of which I am capable, I answer:

"YES! It is only what we might expect, in the nature of things. The Medical Trust is a class-conscious organization, association, or cult, quite as much so as is the Banker's Trust, the Board of Trade Trust, the Lawyers' Trust or any other organization of parasites, of human vampyres. The first law of nature is said to be self-preservation. The Medical Trust knows that its interests are diametrically opposed to the interests of its patrons, its victims. What more natural, then, than that the members of this trust should foster and even inaugurate a delusion that magnifies and perpetuates their own power and emoluments?

Let me give you, my dear valiant and skillful attorney for the Medical Trust, a fact or two illustrative of this question (you yourself are a great stickler for facts, if I mistake not). In the town of Potosi, Missouri, lived a leading physician named Bryant. In the same town lived a leading merchant named Heffner. Heffner came home from St. Louis sick; sent for Bryant; the doctor called; not once but often, and when asked how his patient was getting on would shake his head—while shaking hands with his questioner and say, "Heffner is a very sick man; you ought to go and see him and try to cheer him up a little." His friends called; many called; the result being that a large part of the town was soon in the same condition as the merchant—sick with small-pox!"

The question then arose: "Did Bryant knowingly deceive his patient and his friends or is he an ignoramus as a physician?" The preponderance of public opinion was that, having very few patients at the time, the doctor deliberately managed to increase his gains and those of his brethren, by spreading an epidemic of small-pox in the neighborhood, and scaring people into a willingness to be vaccinated by the doctors.

Result number two: Dr. Bryant soon found it good for his health to permanently locate in St, Louis.

Said an old Missouri acquaintance—a man who knew men and their institutions, including the medical profession, said this old friend of mine to his nephew just graduated from medical college, and just beginning business as a physician:

"Tell me, Rob—for of course you can be honest with your old uncle—tell me straight and candid, would you prefer that all your friends and acquaintances should be well this summer, or would you prefer what is called a 'sickly season'"?

"Well, Uncle B—, tell me, 'straight and candid,' are we not taught to pray, 'Give us this day our daily bread?"

As much as to say, "Health for the laity means starvation for the physician."

Facts and confessions like these could be multiplied indefinitely but I have no space for them. Moreover, as an attorney for the vaccine trust you would probably discount my facts and say they are on a par with "a woman's story at a winter's fire, authorized by her grandam"!

Unfortunately, or fortunately, as the case may be, I have the habit of looking for causes of things as I find them. Not being able to read the inmost thoughts and motives of men I cannot help doing the next best thing, namely, sitting in judgment on myself, and asking what I myself would probably do were I a member of the Medical Trust. Looking for causes I think I would reason thus:

"The relation of physician to patient is an abnormal one, an unwholesome, an anti-natural relation, founded upon an abnormal condition of the patient. It is absolutely necessary, as human society is now constituted, that there be sick people in order that the physician may live—just as the soul saver is dependent upon sin and sinners for his bread and his honorable position in society, and just as the law-maker and law-vendor is dependent upon the law-breaker, the criminal, for his honors and his emoluments. Why then should I, as a physician and member of the medical profession, try to instruct people in the art of right-living? and in the correct theory of disease? My interest lies in the other direction. My success depends primarily on the ignorance and the gullibility of the laity. With the lawyer and the priest my welfare demands that the common people should believe in superstitions, in delusions, such as, 'what will the dog will cure the bite,' etc. This is the basis of the vaccine delusion, and so long as this delusion brings money to my pocket and honor to the medical profession why should I help to enlighten the people as to the true theory of disease, its cure and will! As at present constituted human society is composed of two classes, humbuggers and humbugged; riders and ridden; vampyres and victims. It is in the system, in the nature of things as they now are. I cannot change the system. The sensible thing for me, then, is to use it, not wear my life out in a futile attempt to change it. As the Ohio banker put it, so say I: 'When a donkey offers his back ready saddled I am a fool to go afoot, am I not "

Have I made myself clear, Brother James? I have spoken plainly but tried to treat you courteously and fraternally. I have used herein substantially the same line of argument that for many years I have used when speaking of the popular marriage delusion—the delusion that compels men and women, especially women, to live together in the relation that creates new human beings till death parts them, no matter how completely and finally the attraction that brought them together may have ceased to exist. This superstition is kept alive and enforced by heavy penalties mainly because it is to the interest of the vampyre classes aforesaid that it should be kept alive and full of vigor. So long as this basic superstition is kept alive the vampyre classes know there will be no real, no radical change in other now popular superstitions, such as the god-delusion, the government-delusion, the medical-poison-cure delusion—including, of course, the vaccine virus delusion, etc., etc. and this simply because the poor quality of the product of marriage—the imbeciles, the idiots and the born criminals, will continue to be so numerous that all movements in favor of individual self-government, individual self-saving of souls, individual self-healing of bodies, will be discounted and scouted as impracticable, Utopian, chimerical.

* * *

And thus, as you see, I constantly revert to first principles. As Cato with his ever repeated Delenda est Carthago—"Carthage must be destroyed," and Voltaire with his equally persistent Ecrasez l'infame!—"Crush the monster"—meaning the Roman Catholics inquisition—so also I return continually to the basic reform, Freedom of Motherhood, as the only salvation for the race of humankind. If other reforms help to secure freedom for mothers they should be welcomed and assisted in all rational ways, but to expect any one or all of the now popular reforms to bring the millennium of brotherhood, of justice, of peace and plenty for all, while ignoring this basic demand, is like turning an apple-tree upside down—its roots in the air and its branches in the earth—and expecting it to grow, to blossom and bear a satisfactory crop of apples.

* * *

As much as possible I wish always to avoid discussion that savors of desire for victory in argument. I am no attorney, no advocate of any particular theory, and especially I am advocate of no party, no creed, no organization because of any advantage that may accrue to me personally on account of such advocacy. I have refrained from anything like direct answer to Friend James on the vaccination question, chiefly because I wished to avoid personal controversy, and because I felt that I had more urgent work to do. With this explanation I leave the subject for the present and shall probably not give it so much attention again soon.

M. HARMAN.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer the Light Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of 'For Men Only." Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem. Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization. The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 10c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

932.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author.

The Sex Passion.
Man, the Ungrown.
Woman, the Serf.
Woman in Freedom
Marriage: a Retrospect.
Marriage: a Forecast.
The Free Society.
Some remarks on the early star and sex worships.
Notes—On the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population.

The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. Price, $1.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

WHITMAN'S IDEAL DEMOCRACY, AND OTHER WRITINGS.

BY HELENA BORN.

Comprising besides the title essay, Thoreau's Joy in Nature; Poets of Revolt; Shelley, Whitman, Carpenter; Whitman's Altruism; Individualism versus Organization: Ingenuities of Economic Argument; The Last Stand Against Democracy in Sex; Inequality in Divorce; Marriage Safeguards. With portrait of author and biographical introduction by Helen Tufts. 125 pages. Edition limited to 500 copies; each copy numbered. Fine paper, uncut pages, bound in boards, paper label. Price $1.

Agents Wanted To sell the Toltec Dandruff Cure and the Toltec Hair Dressing (restores natural color). Are clean and perfect. Liberal commission. Write for circulars. Address: The Toltec Remedies Co., Box 130, Denver Colo.

"Pages of Socialist History." By W. Toberkesoff. This book is recommended to Socialists of all schools, as it deals with the history of the "International" and the attitude of Marx and Engels towards Bakounin. Paper cover, 25 cents. By mail, 30 cents

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.

ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $1.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. H. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. H. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.

BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth, 35.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Condemned, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 10c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 81 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 424 pages, 50c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

DARWIN, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 60c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. G. Spence. 178 pages. 30c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DIGGING FOR RED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 47 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 50c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum 10c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian religion has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 100.

FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 260 pages, etc. Postage, 5c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law, G. C. Siemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GIORDANO BRUNO, His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 25c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John H. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 349 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HILDA'S HOME. Rose Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 424 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Addeman. 320 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 37 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Voltey, and Voltaire. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KARNEZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

KORADINE. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1888, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III. (1899). Cloth, $1.25. Postage, 15c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper, Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 412 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love; Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 50c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, E. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsia, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $3.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. $1.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 128 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Marietta), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 207 pages. 50c.

THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Witches and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old asceticism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and asceticism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 32 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 10c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A considerations of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (R. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Gruer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1723, quoted by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuit craft and is a plain index to the underhand working of that order against the welfare of individuals and society. 15c.

THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 10c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Velvet Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Wilms). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 15c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $1.25.

TRAVELS OF FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Darling. 15c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet of 32 pages; 25c. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW; a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of circling arms of lovers and the kisses of lovers and the embrace of babes." Paper covers; 41 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 15c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. Over 175 pages. 50c.

Address M. HARMAN, 800 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VI., NO. 34. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, SEPT. 4. E. M. 302 [C. E. 1902.] WHOLE NO. 933.

UNDER.

"Down all the stretch of Hell to its last gulf,
There is no shape more terrible than this."
—"The Man With the Hoe."—Markham.

Look into that last gulf, O poet, I pray thee,
Down, down where its nether cape leans,
And find there, God help us! a shape to gainsay thee,
A shape that affrighted the fiends—
And listen! O listen! for through all the thunder,
A voice crieth heavy with woe;
"I! I! am the woman, the woman that's under
The heel of the 'Man with the Hoe!'"

She is the begotten of derelict ages,
Of systems puiscent the flaw;
She is the forgotten of singers and sages;
The creature of lust and of law.
The tale of the terror, the ox's brute brother,
Can never be told overmuch;
But she is the vassal and she is the mother,
The thrice-accursed mother of such.

Look down from that last gulf, thou newest evangel!
Look up to the pleading pale face of the angel
That wooeth a Prince of the Pen.
And sometimes, a little, though all the world wonder
And critics cry high and cry low—
Sing out for the woman, the woman that's under
The heel of "The Man with the Hoe."

—Hester A. Benedict.

Some Causes of Prostitution.

Reform in the realm of the sexual relations will not come all at once, any more than reform in other fields. Evolution is very, very slow in its processes; exasperatingly slow in the estimation of the man who is on the picket line, five hundred years ahead of his time. We see far at a glance, but it takes many steps to walk to the distant goal, and when we reach it there is another goal which seems to be even farther away than did the first, for we are growing old and are tired. The few must pioneer the way for the many; it ever has been so and I do not see how it could have been otherwise, how it can be otherwise in the future, for human brains differ greatly one from another and at last it is all a matter of brains. Some decades ago a small number of women and men, a mere handful, raised the banner of woman's enlightenment and freedom. Much has been done in these decades; much more remains to be done. We shall do a little and pass the task on to time.

Really, it is not woman's battle that is to be fought, but the battle of the whole race. Small but fast augmenting bands of men and women are in the lead; many women are self-sustaining and know that they must not prostitute themselves in marriage any more than outside the institution, nor encourage their sisters in prostituting themselves in a loveless legal arrangement. But there are other women who are self-sustaining who do not know this, who shudder at the mention of the outlawed prostitute but give their hands gladly to the woman who sells her body for a title, for a mansion, leadership in society, or board and lodging. So it is seen that with industrial liberty and independence must come mental light, else the wealth that gives bodily freedom in some directions may be used to forge chains for millions of men and women. Only the other day a woman who had saved a small fortune from her earnings as a toiler gave it all to build a church for one of the small and desperately superstitious denominations. Think of it! Of what use to the world is her economic independence? Another woman, who inherited millions, has poured her money out without stint to limit or destroy the liberties of men and women who have conducted themselves at least as worthily as has any member of the family to which the wealthy meddler belongs, not excepting herself.

The institutional root of sexual superstition and the mental root strike down side by side into the soil of our undeveloped and undisciplined natures, the sub-roots of each crossing and intertwining with those of the other, so that in digging for causes we can not separate the two. To drop the figure—the institution of indissoluble marriage strengthens the superstitions and the supersuitions buttress the marriage institution. The false belief that the falsely called "false step" of a young woman "ruins" her has forced a multitude that no man can number into the downward way of prostitution. And who dares to say that the great majority of these offerings on the bloody altar of groveling superstition were not among the most gentle, the most loving of women, most richly dowered with the forces of race-life? Yet all the potential humanity in the mother-bodies of these maidens has been sacrificed to ignorance and institutions, the kernel to the shell, the fruit to last year's dead leaf. This farce is the most terrible tragedy.

Closely connected with this besotted notion of the destructive character of spontaneous affection—a part of it, in truth—is the popular belief that while the girl who loves outside marriage is morally bad, the girl who without love marries for position or a home is a wise and virtuous person. According to this miserable conception of ethical values, love is disgraceful but selling one's body for life is a highly commendable action. Prostitution is all right if you prostitute yourself long enough. So, also, a girl's "honor" is saved at the last moment by forcing the man to marry her, as if such a marriage could be anything but a hell for both and productive of anything but evil. Her "honor" is saved by marrying any marriageable man before the birth of her child of love. There is no salvation for her through her love, through her trustfulness, through her good intentions, through her tender womanhood, through her transforming motherhood—only the name of wife can preserve her from social damnation. Who and what is her husband? Does she love him? Does he respect her and is he kind to her child? Sir, your questions are trifling; is it not enough that the holy marriage rite has saved her "honor?"

Nearly all "seductions" that are seductions in fact are accomplished under promise of legal marriage, and as men are educated to imagine that a woman is "ruined," morally corrupted, by doing precisely what the man wants her to do, what he gives her no rest until she does, the chances always are that he will look upon her as not good enough to be his wife and the mother of his children, and so she becomes one more candidate for prostitution. Nothing of this kind could happen in a rational and free society. The young man and the young woman would be taught wisely, instead of being brought up in physiological and moral ignorance, indoctrinated with vile and antinatural social dogmas, as is the custom in the existing society. If at some time the man no longer should care for the girl, even should he cease to be her comrade and helper, and even should she become a mother under these circumstances, her parents and friends would not feel differently toward her, unless more kindly, they would not act differently toward her, unless more generously, and all would be well; while in the old infernal society the girl so situated is almost sure to be shunned by her former friends, cast off by her family, and nothing is well. This is not a dream of an impossible future; the Social Radicals have demonstrated its reality in the Now, its practicability, its humanity, its beneficence, its beauty, its glorious promise for all the world.—From "Vice: Its Friends and Its Foes," by E. C. Walker.

The Reward of the Toiler.

But what I object to is this economic chance-world in which we live and which we men seem to have created. It ought to be law as inflexible in human affairs as the order of day and night in the physical world, that if a man will work he shall both rest and eat, and shall not be harassed by any question as to how his repose and his provision shall come. Nothing less ideal than this satisfies the reason. But in our state of things no one is secure of this. No one is sure of finding work; no one is sure of not losing it. I may have my work taken away from me at any moment by the caprice, the mood, the indigestion of a man who has not the qualification for knowing whether I do it well or ill. At any time of life—at every time of life—a man ought to feel that if he will keep on doing his duty he shall not suffer in himself nor in those who are dear to him, except through natural causes. But, as things are now, no man can feel this. And so we go on pushing and pulling, climbing and crawling, thrusting aside and trampling under foot; lying, cheating, stealing; and when we get to the end, covered with blood and dirt and sin and shame, and look back over the way we've come to a palace of our own, or to the poorhouse (which is about the only possession we can claim in common with our brother men) I don't think the retrospect can be pleasing. . . . . We can't put it all on conditions; we must put some of the blame on character. But conditions make character; and people are greedy and foolish, and wish to have and to shine, because having and shining are held up to them as the chief good of life. We all know they are not the chief good; perhaps not good at all; but if some one ventures to say so, all the rest of us call him a fraud and a crank, and go on moiling and toiling to the palace or the poorhouse. . . . We don't moil and toil for ourselves alone. The palace or the poorhouse is not merely for ourselves, but for our children whom we've brought up in the superstition that having and shining is the chief good. We dare not teach them otherwise for fear they may falter in the fight. . . . and the children of others will crowd them out of the palace into the poorhouse. If we felt sure that honest work shared by all would bring them honest food shared by all, some few of us, who did not wish our children to rise above their fellows—though we could not bear to have them fall below—might trust them with the truth.—W. D. Howells.

The Philosophical Society will resume its course of lectures on Sunday, Sept. 7, 2:30 p. m., Handel Hall, 40 Randolph St. William Francis Barnard will deliver an address on "The Social Parasite." Free admission and discussion.

Why We Employed Lawyers.

The editorial comment, in No. 929, on Lois Waisbrooker's and Mattie D. Penhallow's trial requires a brief explanation of the circumstances in connection with the Home persecutions. When Comrade Govan was arrested, without hesitation, we decided to dispense with every superfluity. Knowing the prejudice fostered by the press we deemed it folly to employ an attorney to betray us, so Govan went before the courts, was adjudged guilty, and fined. Before passing sentence the judge asked whether the fine would be paid; if not, he would determine the length of imprisonment. That it was not only sound policy to dispense with law-jugglers, but pay the fine is evidenced by the fact that at the subsequent trial Judge Hanford in commenting on "A Healthy Comparison" compared the offending paragraph with the one upon which Govan was tried, re-affirmed his position, thus proving that he would have instructed the jury to bring in a verdict of guilty.

The summary disposal of the case raised a storm of protest from outside comrades, many asserting that he should have been represented by competent counsel. Others approved dispensing with counsel but protested against paying the fine, insisting that in doing so he had stultified one of the cardinal principles of Anarchism,—but it was not so. Govan was the only member that could set type and get out the paper. Hence we were forced to suspend the paper or pay the fine.

When Larkin, Govan and myself were arrested we were so exasperated that feeing lawyers and paying fines did not enter into our calculations till letters poured in upon us urging an active campaign of education, and the employment of counsel to make a vigorous defense, assuring us that we would have both moral and material support. To have ignored their wishes, to have rejected their services would have been an attempted exhibition of cold-blooded churlishness foreign to our natures.

The fruits of that defence; of the moral and pecuniary aid extended us reaches much farther than appears upon a superficial investigation. Although the judge instructed the jury to bring in a verdict of "not guilty" the victory was but half won. Not only were Lois and Mattie in the clutches of the Hydra-headed monster, Law, but its pretended conservators, smarting under the stinging rebuke administered by Judge Hanford, were using every means at their command to carry out their nefarious purpose. The opposition had lost none of its rancor. As matters stood our acquittal was equivalent to a drawn battle. Notwithstanding the judge's verdict (guilty) we gained a signal victory in defending Lois. The judge could have said no more in our favor in giving instructions to the jury without doing as Judge Hanford—(order a verdict of not guilty). Our attorneys unmasked the malevolence of Wayland, proved him a liar by his own admission; and proved by his flunkey, Frank Pells, (postmaster at Ballard) that they entered into a conspiracy to entrap Mattie Penhallow, and used a government envelope to cloak their infamy. The Deputy District Attorney during his closing speech performed a feat of mental gymnastics, or, wilfully lied by saying: the judge might impose a fine of one dollar—or, one day's imprisonment.

More than this was done by acceding to the wishes of our outside comrades. Both at Home, and abroad there has been a change in the attitude of the press, and the people, at Home the tone of the "News" and "Ledger" towards us is wonderfully improved, so much so that a boat load of (Tacoma) excursionists visited us last Sunday. Abroad the most conspicuous effect of this resistance is the attitude of the "Blue Grass Blade" whose editor no longer regards all Anarchists as beetle-browed villains and free lovers as the essence of putrescence.

All of this (and more) has been achieved by the united efforts of men and women who recognize no law—but truth and justice, whose names are registered in the archives of the "Home Mutual Association." It is needless to say that we, the victims of this assault upon human rights, are duly grateful.

Home, Washington. J. W. Adams.

Do You Love Her?

Young man, are you sure you love that sweet girl you are seeking to make your wife? Yes, O, yes! You would lay down your life for her! We understand all that. If she fell in the water you would risk your life to rescue her. You would save or perish with her. Certainly. Very noble, very devoted, no doubt. But thousands of such heroic acts are performed under the excitement of a sudden emergency.

But do you love her well enough to live for her? To live to make her happy? If so, throw away that cigar, or cigarette, which pollutes your lips and renders your breath so offensive that she is sickened with disgust whenever you seek a caress.

O that is a different thing!

"I'll not give up my liberty. No, sir! I like my tobacco and it is only a silly whim on the part of women to make such a fuss about it."

Now, see here, my boy! There is no whim about it but simply a pure, refined nature. The very purity and delicacy of the girl render her senses acute to such vile odors. No normal person likes such odors. It is an acquired taste, and the only way one can acquire a liking for it is to use it. Now, honest, would you like to see her pretty lips pursed around a cigar? Would you like to see her teeth stained with smoke? Or, perhaps it is "chewing!" Well—she has as good a right to chew as you. Would you really prefer to have her do so? It is the only way she can overcome her dislike to the smell of your breath. Many people like the perfume of a good cigar if smoked at a little distance but I have yet to see the person who likes the odor of a smoker's breath. Now, suppose that dear girl contracts the habit of chewing assafoetida! She may learn to like it, but would you? Would you seek to press kisses on her lips with her breath forever smelling of the stuff? I guess not. And yet you hope to win her love, and to hold it through life with your breath reeking with tobacco! Well let me tell you that it is an impossible task. You may, in the first glamour of "love's young dream" win her, but as time goes on and the novelty of the situation wears off and you settle down to everyday life these little irritations make themselves felt and as surely kill love as violence and abuse. It is inevitable. No one can feel the same affection for a person who habitually makes himself disagreeable as for one who is always clean and sweet.

Now, which is dearer to you—the love of the sweet girl, the bride, the life-long companion, or the vile cigar that makes you a nuisance to all clean people with whom you come in contact? But, you may say, my doctor advises me to smoke to cure dyspepsia. Then consult another doctor, and keep on changing till you find one who knows enough to cure you without making the remedy worse than the disease.

But some use tobacco for toothache and thus form the disgusting habit. Better have every tooth removed and wear "store teeth" all your life. They at least can be kept clean.

In these days of painless dentistry there is no excuse for toothache. It is just a question of love versus selfishness.

Elsie Cole Wilcox.

What, (speaking in quite unofficial language) is the net purport and upshot of war? To my own knowledge, for example, there dwell and toil in the British village of Dumdrudge, usually some five hundred souls. From those—by certain "natural enemies" of the French—there are successively selected, during the French war, say thirty able-bodied men. Dumdrudge has, at her own expense, suckled and nursed them. She has, not without difficulty and sorrow, fed them up to manhood, and even trained them to crafts, so that one can weave, another build, another hammer; and the weakest can stand under thirty stone avoirdupois.

Nevertheless, amid such weeping and swearing, they are selected; all dressed in red, and shipped away, at the public charges, some two thousand miles, or say only to the South of Spain; and there fed 'til wanted.

And now to that same spot in the south of Spain are thirty similar French artizans, from a French Dumdrudge, in like manner wending; 'til at length after infinite effort the two parties come into actual juxtaposition; and thirty stand fronting thirty, each with a gun in his hand.

Straightway the word "Fire!" is given, and they blow the souls out of one another; and in place of sixty brisk, useful craftsmen, the world has sixty dead carcasses which it must bury, and anon shed tears for. Had these men any quarrel? Busy as the Devil is, not the smallest! They lived far enough apart; were the entirest strangers. Nay, in so wide a universe, there was even unconsciously, by commerce, some mutual helpfulness between them. How then? Simpleton! Their Governors had fallen out; and instead of shooting each other, they had the cunning to make these poor blockheads shoot.—Thomas Carlyle.

Socialism.

Herbert Spencer designated State Socialism as a species o slavery. His condemnation gave many people a misconception of what Socialism is, hence we see paragraphs like the following from "Ironicus:"

"State Socialism, which justifies authority in conducting some of the affairs of a people, logically justifies authority in conducting all the affairs of a people. Then where would liberty be."

Liberty would be with the people who confer the authority, and who can withhold it. Under any conceivable social system some form of authority is necessary for the proper direction of affairs. Under socialism the power to designate those who shall temporarily exercise such authority would always remain with the people.

Jas. F. Morton, Jr., one of the best, as he is also one of the most honest and conscientious of radical writers, persistently holds to a misconception of Socialism, and—with the best intentions, no doubt—pictures Socialism in colors quite as untrue as some Socialist writers depict Anarchy. He is so rebellious against all possible invasion of others, that he imagines evil where none exists. In my opinion mankind can never attain to the practical realization of the high conception of personal freedom held by philosophical Anarchists except through the preliminary experience of Socialism—the only school that will make it possible for the lover of liberty to live the life of freedom in which a person of high ideals may truly be "a law unto himself."

W. N Slocum.

Los Angeles, Calif.

Training a Child.

Parents make a great mistake, according to the Outlook, when they tell the child his fault in order to cure him of it. He ought to be cured of it without knowing that he has it. In continually chiding your child for his faults, you develop one of the most serious of faults, that of self-consciousness. He has a slouching gait? Do not tell him so; do not bid him stand up straight. Give him a military drill, or start him in athletics. Is he slovenly and does he come to dinner with uncombed hair? Dress for dinner yourself and buy him a handsome necktie—one that appeals to his fancy, not to yours. Is he selfish? Do not let him guess that he is so. Contrive a Christmas celebration for the happiness of others, and take him into your confidence in preparation for it. Then, when he does what he knows to be wrong, your rebuke will be more significant, and your punishment, if punishment is needed, as it sometimes is, will be more effectual. Punishments always, rebukes generally, should be reserved for the sins of which the sinner is conscious. Faults of which he is not conscious should be concealed if possible, without his being conscious of either the fault or the correction. Overcome evil with good. That requires skill. Any fool can point out a fault; only a wise man can correct it.—Selected.

Bachelor—I've great news for you. I'm engaged.

Benedict—Well, you needn't come to me for sympathy. I'm married.—American.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Current Comment.

In last week's issue a correspondent was reminded that governments exist for the use and benefit of the privileged classes, that is, for the benefit of the Trusts, and those who share in the steals, the robberies, the boodle of the Trusts.

It seems of little use to add proofs that such is the sole raison d'etre of governments. All observers who care to examine the matter for themselves must know this without being told, but lest there be some reader of Lucifer whose attention has not been specially called to the basic, the underlying facts of the case, a few quotations are here made from the columns of the "Detroit Tribune," a large daily paper whose editors and managers are doubtless bonded in many ways to uphold the present order—or disorder—of things. A reporter for the "Tribune" had interviewed "F. F. Ingram, a member of the lighting commission," and this, in part, is Mr. Ingram's talk upon the late utterances of President Roosevelt:

"He [Roosevelt] proposes in his Hartford speech that all shall be given a fair and an even chance in the struggle for life, as we can best give it. . . . To give to each man his rights, to safeguard each man in his rights, and so far as in me lies, while I hold my present position, I will be true to that conception of my duty."

Mr. Ingram very naturally wants to know whether the acts of President Roosevelt correspond to his words, for, as we all know, words are a mockery if actions do not confirm and verify them.

Roosevelt's plan, as he tells us in his Providence speech, "is to place the trusts under the real, not nominal, control of some sovereign. . . . In my judgment this sovereign must be the national government."

Ingram replies:

"This plan is not new. We have heard of it before. It is the plan advocated by the trust attorneys. Their reason for this plan is plain to see. The trusts are the sovereign will at Washington, where none but the members of the now impotent house of representatives are directly elected by the people, and such a law would give them (the trusts) the inquisitorial powers the president recommends over their competitors. It would make all enterprises that did not come under their personal favor look like 30 cents, while the trusts themselves would be as immune from interference as ever."

Again Roosevelt is quoted:

"I think the national government has shown its firm intention to enforce the laws as they now stand on the statute books." (Providence speech.)

Mr. Ingram rejoins:

"Nearly a year ago a committe submitted a sworn brief of evidence of the violation of the Sherman anti-trust law by numerous trusts, including the Standard Oil and coal trusts, and the attorney general said in one of his numerous replies that he had formerly been the legal adviser of the steel trust, but declined to proceed against that or any other. The evidence was then submitted to the president direct, with no better result.

"On Dec. 21, 1901, documentary evidence absolutely conclusive as to facts according to the opinion of Wm. E. Chandler and Senator Turner, clearly within the anti-trust law, were submitted in person to President Roosevelt himself against what is known as 'the Eastern Railroad association.' It was ignored by him for three months, but responding to a reminder then said he had referred it on March 27 to the attorney general and asked the committee to communicate with him. The attorney general told the committee he will not be able to take it up at all. This fact was then laid before the president, but nothing further has been heard from him."

Mr. Ingram, together with all men who expect the public servants to do what they promise to do; to do what the laws they have sworn to enforce require them to do, are certainly justified in the opinion that

"Should the president desire to enforce the present law, which forbids 'every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy in restraint of trade among the several states, or to monopolize any part of the trade etc.,' the Eastern Railroad association would be a convicted criminal, and an expressed intention from him to enforce the present law against those acknowledged law-breakers, the anthracite coal railroads, would have an immediate and profound effect on the miners' strike."

The acts of this man Roosevelt show what his words and his oath of office are worth!

* * *

The papers tell us that anthracite coal "jumped" the other day to $10 and $11 per ton in New York City, caused by the prolonged strike of the coal miners, which strike as shown by all the evidence in the case, was and is the result of an unlawful combination of mine operators and railway managers—that is, was directly caused by the acts of the trusts, whose acts are placed under the supervision of the President of the United States and his legal advisers, by the Sherman anti-trust law.

* * *

One of the railways spoken of by Mr. Ingram is called the Reading Railroad, whose President is reported to have lately said in answer to an inquirer who was presumably a coal miner or one who feels a lively interest in the fate of the miner and his family:

"I beg of you not to be discouraged. The rights and interests of the laboring man will be protected and cared for—not by the labor agitators, but by the Christian men to whom God in his infinite wisdom has given the control of the property interests of the country, and upon the successful management of which so much depends."

President Baer is to be thanked for his candid and doubtless very honest utterance concerning the right relation of capital and labor. His view of this relation is by no means new. It is the old, old doctrine that the earth belongs to God and to those whom God sees fit to employ as his representatives. It is the doctrine of the church—of nearly all the churches—in all the past and also at the present time. "Fear God; honor the King." "Be content with the condition in life to which God has called you."

To obey God is to obey the priest and the parson, God's authorized spokesmen. Honor the King means to give honor and obedience to whomsoever God has selected to be the head of the civil government, whether called king or president.

This was also the doctrine of Alexander Hamilton, the patron saint of the party now in power in the United States. Let the government take care of the rich; the rich can take care of the poor. "The interests of the laboring man"—the man in the mines, the factories and the fields, also the interests of the poor consumer in city and country—the employe class—must be the care of the rich monopolist—the employer class.

* * *

The Chicago "American" cartoon in a late issue shows very forcibly the "true inwardness" of this paternalistic theory of government. The cartoon is entitled "The Poor Woman's Prospects This Winter," and the explanation underneath says, "Cold, Coal Trust and Food Trust." In the foreground stands a scantily clad woman with clasped hands and haggard features. Beside her stands the giant form of the "Food Trust," with a monster basket on his arm, labeled "Bread," "Meat," "Sugar," In the background is seen a huge placard, "Coal $10 per Ton."

But this cartoon, fearfully expressive as it is, tells only a small part of the poor woman's "prospect." Ten dollars per ton in the market means probably fifteen or twenty dollars per ton to the woman who can buy only a pailful at a time. This cartoon does not show the scantily furnished room in the garret or cellar, into whose narrow confines are crowded a whole family—a half dozen or more hungry and ragged children and their parents, working, eating, sleeping, breathing over and over again the devitalized air and the poison-laden exhalations from their own bodies. The cartoon does not show this poor woman's family when sickness and death make the customary hard conditions still harder. The cartoon does not show—no picture drawn by pencil or pen, not even by the imagination of poet or novelist, can ever show the degradation of mind, of soul, as well as of body, that such abject poverty brings—poverty that is the inevitable concomitant, the logical result of monopoly of earth's wealth, such monopoly as that championed and practicalized by President Baer and his fellow members of the Coal and Transportation Trust, the trust that is responsible for the strike of the miners, and for the advance of coal to ten and eleven dollars per ton in New York City.

* * *

In the Detroit "To-Day" I read that "The largest single producer of anthracite coal in the world is the Reading Railroad and Coal Co. It was in September, 1896, reorganized by Mr. Morgan's firm. All the shares of stock in the new company are now deposited with Mr. Morgan as one of three trustees. These trustees control the company. The stockholders have no voice in the management. They cannot even vote for directors. Mr. Morgan names the directors and through them elects the officers."

This brief paragraph furnishes the key, as it would seem, to the situation in the great strike. Mr. Baer speaks for the "Reading R. R. and Coal Co." Mr. Morgan controls Mr. Baer, and also the officers of nearly all the railroads that mine anthracite coal. As head of the Railroad and Coal Trust Morgan is probably the most powerful man in the United States, if not in the world. The Railroad and Coal Trust practically controls the output of all the iron and steel of the country, and the output of all, or nearly all, the multiplied industries that use iron and steel, which means really nearly all the industries of the country and of the world. For, as some one has truthfully expressed it, this is the "Iron Age" of the world. Without iron there would be no steel; without steel and iron no machinery, no transportation, no commerce, and, in fine, nothing of what is now called civilization, culture or human progress.

* * *

As head of the Railroad and Coal Trust—with it, affiliated and subordinated trusts—Mr. Morgan has been asked to end the strike. One word from Morgan would be all that is needed. This one word His High Mightiness refuses to speak.

But why should Morgan speak the word that would bring joy, peace and comfort to thousands if not millions of people? Financially it is better for him and the "stocks" held by him, that there should be a coal famine.

A coal famine gives to Morgan and the stockholders of the Railroad and Coal Trust an opportunity to unload their accumulations of coal at a price that more than compensates them for the difference in quantity of output for the summer, and gives them also the much desired opportunity to crush the growing tendency among the miners to join labor unions. Nothing like starvation in the home to make a workingman listen to reason and avoid those pestilent labor agitators, say the Railroad and Coal magnates. "The operators expect the endurance of the men to be gradually worn down as their necessity increases with the advent of winter," says the report from which the above paragraph was taken.

Judging the future by the past, this will be the outcome of the present strike in the anthracite region of Pennsylvania, unless, indeed, as was done in the political campaign of 1900, Senator Hanna and other political bosses should fear the result of a prolonged strike upon the prospects of their party candidates, and should use their influence with Mr. Morgan to call a halt, and patch up a temporary peace between the operators and their employes—a treaty of peace that will hold good only till the political prospects of the party now in power are again considered safe.

Do we need more convincing arguments to show that governments exist for the benefit of the privileged few, than are given by the history of labor strikes in this and other countries?

M. HARMAN.

VARIOUS VOICES.

I. W. Griggs, St. Paul.:—I wish for the enclosed ten cents to receive the latest five issues of your paper—and to have my name on your list for one year for the enclosed $1. I have read a few copies—samples perhaps. Possibly some friend subscribed for me.

Fannie M. Taylor, 5519 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago:—My children and myself thoroughly enjoyed our visit at the summer home of the editor near Benton Harbor. The air and water were sweet, clear and pure, we were awakened every morning by the birds singing in the trees, we had plenty of fresh fruit, and returned home refreshed and invigorated.

C. B. Hoffman, Enterprise, Kans.:—Enclosed find $1 for subscription to Lucifer. Lucifer grows stronger and clearer every year. Voltairine's "Are They Fallen?" in No. 929 is particularly strong. The acquittal of Mattie Penhallow and the conviction by the jury of Sister Waisbrooker demonstrates how callous juries are. Ignorant brutality is to be feared more than enlightened selfishness.

"Truth," Thermopolis, Wyo.:—I read a few copies of Lucifer when in Ruskin, Tenn., and recently some copies have been sent me by a friend. I have been a thinker on the sex question for many years,—years before I found any literature on the subject, I learned the truth of "Karezza" for married people. And most children if given plenty to do with, will not know of those desires; their creative energy expends itself in useful, healthful, and ornamental work. I have had much experience with children.

Laura H. Earle, Atlantic City, N. J.:—I have plenty to say to Voltairine de Cleyre (although Morton and James have taken care of her pretty well) but the kind of work I am at this summer deprives me of mental and spiritual energy. In fact, I suppose I am, intellectually, one of the "fallen women" Voltairine condemns. I am "prostituting" my spirit by playing the piano to the rich and idle crowd at a fashionable hotel. But I imagine that my sister who prostitutes her body gets better paid for it.

I. H. Strong, Eagle Bend, Minn.:—I have been a reader of your valuable little sheet for more than five years, and I want to say that it has been a great educator in my family and today my wife and I are opponents to the present marriage system and advocate abolition of the same. For while a radical, sudden change would not be practical, we feel that there is a great good being done by agitating for a change in the present system, and we extend you our sympathies in the great and good work you are doing for humanity.

Mrs. H., Calif.:—I've read Lucifer and I'm sure it's doing much good and is uplifting humanity. A friend gave me some copies. Would you please send some to my brother, but don't let him know I gave you his address, for his disposition is such that he would find fault and chastise me; but I know he'll read them. I am in for all reform that will make this beautiful world better to live in. I have Dr. Foote's "Plain Home Talk" and am studying other books that are uplifting. I'm a divorced woman and young and would like a congenial companion—one who is in this new thought. Could you send me some names of divorced or unmarried men with whom I could correspond, as I will make a good wife to a refined, studious man; a helpmate. I wish you God speed in your noble endeavor to help humanity.

J. Allen Evans, Cripple Creek, Colo.:—I thought with my much reading of the daily papers and practically all the current magazines and literature of the day as well as our radical sheets that such a thing as never having heard of Miss Mary MacLane, Butte, Montana, would have been an impossibility. She is certainly one of the most remarkable characters I ever heard of; have just read a criticism of her in "Reeds Isonomy," written by either Reed or Armstrong both of whom are as erratic in their genius as Mary MacLane dare be. And I wonder why Lucifer or "Free Society," or any other of our publications have never mentioned this volcanic genius of nineteen years of age. I am anxious to see some notice of her from some other than a goody goody or I am holier than thou source. What do you make of her?

C. F. Hunt, Chicago:—The logic of Ironicus is appalling; even worse than his statements of facts. He denies natural rights, and says "all life lives upon other life, and can only so live." Does a sheep eat flesh? Many men do not eat flesh. The right to utilize whatever we find in our environment that we need, without violating other similar rights, ought to be deemed a natural right. Ironicus has no inkling of the theory of rent or single tax. The idea that "the man with most money" would pay rent (as a tax) on land from which he gained no income, is contrary to every business man's experience; and just as absurd the proposition that collective ownership of common wealth leads to similar ownership of private wealth, or that if a boy grows three inches in one year he will at forty years of age be ten feet high. When Ironicus comes to comprehend the single tax I would like to discuss it with him, only I have learned that I am the only one forbidden to use Lucifer's space for this subject.

J. Veiby, Elgin, Ill.:—I have just read your "Notes from Harmony Home." I wish to spend a week with you if I can get free from my work. Please tell me if I can get a place to sleep and something to eat in or near Harmony Home, for a reasonable price. I am a single man, care not much for comforts, and hate to buy and drag along any camping outfit of my own. I was a subscriber of Lucifer and other radical papers once, and should like to meet some radical people.

[Yes. We can furnish bed and board for a limited number of friends, but unless by special arrangement we shall expect our visitors to bring sheets, pillow-slips and blankets, also empty bedticks. We have plenty of straw and hay, also a few bedsteads with spring mattresses. We have plenty of fruit—pears and apples mainly—also peaches and grapes in the neighborhood. Excellent water—both cistern water and a well that taps a deep vein of clear cold and slightly sulphuretted water. The situation is high and apparently very healthy. Benton Harbor and vicinity have advantages for summer outings seldom found elsewhere—in my opinion, and I have traveled much and far. M. H.]

S. R. Shepherd, Leav'th, Kan.:—Years ago while keeping a music store a lady in better days' apparel timidly asked permission to play on a piano, which favor, granted, seemed to afford her much pleasure. Later, a boy brought me a letter from her saying her children, for whom she would make any sacrifice, were starving and could I interest some one to give help. Months later she called with a happy face to express thanks for sending friends and to "countermand the order," explaining that her husband had got salvation army religion and the $9 he formerly spent for drink he now brought home every Saturday night to her. Tally one for the mother who did not appeal to church ladies and lose her children in some eleemosynary, and another for the poor despised salvationers, the only simon-pure followers of the "meek and lowly."

Some entertain sexually, some sing, play, paint or wash for money, some preach, pray and exhort for money, while some commercialize still other functions of mind and body. And all presumably for the glory of God. In the wicked book that got Mrs. Craddock into prison she advises that God be always taken into partnership in the celebration of the sexual act. Grace before meat is good scientific doctrine.

Charles Turner Brown, Chicago:—Ironicus says "nature has neither given the land to all nor to one," ergo, those who have reduced land to possession should not be forced to pay rent or to be taxed thereon. "Population consists of units; if the land were fairly divided among those units, economic rent would tend to be eliminated," ergo, during the time land is unfairly divided the possession of those who have seized it must not be disturbed by rent or tax. "Economic rent is an important factor only under abnormal economic conditions," ergo, do away with economic rent (tax) on land as a movement in favor of suppressing the monopoly of the land by those in possession. Of course with this style of reasoning the fact that there is not land enough in a desired locality to permit all to share alike in its possession is positive proof that those who are in possession should not be made to pay rent or tax therefor.

"Humanity's interests would devise a fair division of the land," ergo, let those who have possession of land pending the "fair divison" not to be troubled with taxes, but rather let them keep it without cost.

The proposition to drop all taxes meets with Ironicus' hearty approval but the proposition to drop all taxes except those on land meets with his severe condemnation, because those who have the land have no "natural right" to it but simply need it in their business.

FROM LUCIFER, JULY 31, 1902.

When first I loved, I gave my very soul
Utterly unreserved to Love's control,
But Love deceived me, wrenched my youth away
And made the gold of life for ever grey.
Long I lived lonely, yet I tried in vain
With any other joy to stifle pain;
There is no other joy, I learned to know,
And so returned to Love, as long ago.
Yet I, this little while ere I go hence,
Love very lightly now, in self-defense.

REVISED TO SUIT A READER'S VIEWS.

When first I loved, I gave my very soul
Without reserve to one Love's sweet control,
But Love deceived me, wrenched my youth away
And turned the gold of life to grey.
Long I lived lonely, yet I tried in vain
With any other joy to stifle pain;
There is no other joy, I learned to know,
And so returned to Love, as long ago.
Yet I, these later years ere I go hence,
Would guard my love in self-defense
By widening of Love's goal;
No limit now restricts my heart
Save this: it shall not love the narrow soul
That dare claim more than part.

A. L. R.

Of all injustice that is the greatest which goes under the name of law, and of all sorts of tyranny the forcing of the letter of the law against the equity is the most insupportable.—L'Estrange.

TOLSTOI'S NEW WORK.

The Slavery of Our Times.

With Portrait of the Gifted Author, and Introduction by the Translator, Aylmer Maude.

CHAPTER TITLES.

I., Goods Porters Who Work Thirty-Seven Hours; II., Society's Indifference While Men Perish; III., Justification of the Existing Position of Sciences; IV., The Assertion of Economic Science that Rural Laborers Must Enter the Factory System; V. Why Learned Economists Assert what is False; VI., Bankruptcy or the Socialist Ideal; VII., Culture or Freedom? VIII., Slavery Exists Among Us; IX., What is Slavery? X., Laws Concerning Taxes, Land and Property; XI., Laws the Cause of Slavery; XII., The Essence of Legislation Is Organized Violence; XIII., What Are Governments? Is It Possible to Exist Without Governments? XIV., How Can Governments Be Bolished? XV., What Should Each Man Do? An Afterword.

Well printed on heavy paper. Substantially bound. 186 pages. Price, 65 cents.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

CAPTAIN JINKS, HERO

BY ERNEST CROSBY.

It is a merciless satire on war and militarism in which the parallel between savagery and soldiery is unerringly drawn. It is a biting burlesque on the various forms of cheap hero-worship. It holds up to withering scorn every important feature of militarism.

Among the accompaniments and results of war exploited and satirized, are hazing at "East Point," the war whoops of the yellow journals, the savagery of war, the Schley-Sampson controversy, civilizing the heathen savage, looting in China, peculiar abuses, the capture of Aguinaldo, the Peace-Conference, army mismanagement, osculatory attacks by goosey girls, etc.

With 25 Irresistible Drawings by Dan Beard. 12mo. Cloth, Handsome Covers, 600 pages. Price $1.50

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

VACCINATION A CRIME.

With Comments on Other Sanitary Superstitions.

BY FELIX L. OSWALD, M. D.

"Vaccination spreads diseases; vaccination impairs the organic functions; vaccination encourages reliance on worthless remedies; vaccination spreads small-pox; compulsory vaccination furnishes dangerous legal precedents."

With illustrations of diseases frequently resulting from vaccination. 195 pages. Price 10 cents. For sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St. Chicago.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer the Light Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only," Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem. Party Politics in Vice Crusading; in What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization. The Folly and Cruelty of it All. Price 15c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Wanted Names of Liberal women who wish to correspond with Liberal men on Sexual Reforms. Address (with stamp.)
Snowville, Va. ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER.

933.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

To NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author.

The Sex Passion.
Man, the Ungrown.
Woman, the Serf.
Woman in Freedom
Marriage: a Retrospect.
Marriage: a Forecast.
The Free Society.
Some remarks on the early rite and sex worships.
Notes—On the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population.

The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. Price, $1.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

WHITMAN'S IDEAL DEMOCRACY, AND OTHER WRITINGS.

BY HELENA BORN.

Comprising besides the title essay, Thoreau's Joy in Nature; Poets of Revolt: Shelley, Whitman, Carpenter; Whitman's Altruism; Individualism versus Organization: Ingenuities of Economic Argument; The Last Stand Against Monopoly in Sex; Inequality in Divorce; Marriage Safeguards. With portrait of author and biographical introduction by Helen Tufts. 125 pages. Edition limited to 500 copies; each copy numbered. Fine paper, uncut pages, bound in boards, paper label. Price $1.

Agents Wanted To sell the Toltec Dandruff Cure and the Toltec Hair Dressing (restores natural color). Are clean and perfect. Liberal commission. Write for circulars. Address;
The Toltec Remedies Co., Box 1307 Denver Colo.

"Pages of Socialist History." By W. Toberkseoff. This book is recommended to Socialists of all schools, as it deals with the history of the "International" and the attitude of Marx and Engels towards Bakounin. Paper covers, 25 cents. By mail, 30 cents.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.
ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.
AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 75c; paper 15c.
ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.
A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $1.75.
A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.
A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.
AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.
BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth, $1.
BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commanded, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving clear references to the chapters and verses. 10c.
BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.
CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.
CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 21 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 256 pages. 50c.
CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.
DARWIN, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.
DAWN OF CIVILISATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. G. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James H. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 47 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $3.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 10c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian religion has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 280 pages. 40c. Postage, 5c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Remens and David Overmyer. 25c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 25c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 119 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HILDA'S HOME. Rose Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 320 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Scotland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 37 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Voltney, and Voltaire. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Ma'ehan. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREEZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

KORADINE. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindell. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III. (1889). Cloth, $1.25. Postage, 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Phillip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, R. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward Fitzgerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest revision. Paper, 15c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Oxford Northcote. 15c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Spotsie, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line" presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $3.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle-edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 50c.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Mariette), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 327 pages. 50c.

THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Witches and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 381 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and asceticism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 88 large pages; twelve copies, 25c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 10c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 10c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lizzie B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralising management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1761, quoted by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuit craft, and is a plain index to the underhand working of that order against the welfare of individuals and society. 15c.

THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 10c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Vulgo Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Wilmot). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $2.25.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Dreyfoos. 15c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 10c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 1, 1893. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. "This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done women by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 379 pages. 50c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VI., No. 35. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, SEPT. 11, E. M. 302. [C. E. 1902.] WHOLE No. 934

THE LAST CAMP-FIRE.

Scar not earth's breast that I may have Somewhere above her heart a grave;
  Mine was a life whose swift desire
  Bent ever less to dust than fire;
Then through the swift, white path of flame
Send back my soul to whence it came;
  From some great peak, storm challenging,
  My death-fire to the heavens fling;
The rocks my altar, and above
The still eyes of the stars I love;
  No hymn, save as the midnight wind
  Comes whispering to seek his kind.

Heap high the logs of spruce and pine,
Balsam for spices and for wine;
  Brown cones and knots, a golden blur
  Of hoarded pitch, more sweet than myrrh;
Cedar to stream across the dark
Its scented embers spark on spark;
  Long, shaggy boughs of juniper
  And silvery, odorous sheaves of fir;
Spicewood to die in incense smoke
Against the stubborn roots of oak,
  Red to the last, for hate or love,
  As that red, stubborn heart above.

Watch till the last pale ember dies,
Till wan and low the dead pyre lies,
  Then let the thin, white ashes blow
  To all earth's winds, a finer snow;
There is no wind of hers but I
Have loved it as it whistled by;
  No leaf whose life I would not share,
  No weed that is not someway fair;
Hedge not my dust in one close urn,
It is to these I would return—
  The wild, free winds, the things that know
  No master's rule, no ordered row.

To be, if nature will, at length
Part of some great tree's noble strength;
  Growth of the grass; to live anew
  In many a wild flower's richer hue;
Find immortality indeed
In ripened heart of fruit and seed.
  Time grants not any man redress
  Of his broad law, forgetfulness—
I parley not with shaft and stone,
Content that in the perfume blown
  From next year's hillsides something sweet,
  And mine, shall make earth more complete.

—Sharlot M. Hall, in "Out West."

The "Sweat-Box" in Chicago.

So indifferent to the law and so reckless of the rights of possibly innocent persons accused of crime have the Chicago police become, they have at last aroused public sentiment against their "sweat-box" methods. The case in which they have done this is a murder mystery. With an impudent and criminal disregard of the safeguards with which the law deigns to prevent arbitrary arrest, they arrested a man upon suspicion and held him in close custody at a police station six days, without a warrant, without bringing him before a magistrate, without even "booking" him as a prisoner; and while they thus held him a prisoner in defiance of the law, they subjected him to the "sweat-box" process to force a confession from him, or failing in that to entangle him in statements that might serve to weave a network of inculpatory evidence about him.

* * *

These police inquisitors became so bold that they allowed their "sweat-box" questions and the friendless and helpless and nervous prisoner's answers to get into the newspapers. It was in consequence of that that the prisoner was taken from their custody. Two well-known lawyers, Mr. Meagher and Mr. Darrow, prompted thereby to bring the lawless proceeding to an end, sued out a writ of habeas corpus, and as soon as the prisoner came into court he was transferred from the "sweat-box" to the county jail, where he should have been taken immediately upon his arrest.

* * *

A remarkable thing about these lawless inquisitorial methods, is the notion that seems to prevail, even among lawyers, that when not cruel they are proper. They are not proper under any circumstances—cruel or kind. The first right of a prisoner is to be advised of the accusation against him and warned that he need not incriminate himself. If, after that, he makes a confession, it is his own affair. But until he has been so warned and has expressed a willingness to answer questions, his custodian has no more legal right to cross-examine him than he has to shoot him. Experience has proved that only by giving this immunity to all prisoners, guilty and innocent alike, can the innocent be protected from injury. Even in open court, no judge would dare question a prisoner without the prisoner's full consent, given after he had been advised of his rights. Every lawyer knows this. Then how can any intelligent lawyer defend the police practice of cross-examining prisoners in secret in a police station, provided physical cruelty be not introduced?

* * *

If a prisoner must not be questioned in open court, by a responsible judge with lawyers present to guard his rights and the whole community looking on and listening, then by what labyrinthine reasoning is it concluded that irresponsible police detectives may question him in the seclusion of a cell, where the prisoner has no lawyer and the public can neither see nor hear? If it is true, as some insist, that prisoners ought to be subjected to the inquisition in order that the mysteries of crime may be disclosed, if our lawmakers and judges have been mistaken in their tenderness for the rights of prisoners and the law in that respect ought to be changed, then let it be changed in the regular way—by the people and not by police detectives. If the continental practice of bringing prisoners before a court of first instance and probing them with questions is indeed better than the English and American doctrine that no one shall be compelled to give evidence against himself, then let us surround the inquisition at least with continental safeguards. Secret though they are, the proceedings of the continental courts of first instance are conducted by a responsible public prosecutor, before a responsible judge, and under legal rules and limitations. They are not conducted, as is the "sweat-box" inquisition, in defiance of rules, beyond the reach of judges, and by irresponsible detectives bent on making a case. It is to be hoped that the indignation at the police "sweat-box" now aroused in Chicago will not subside until it is voluntarily abandoned or some of the police who practice this species of crime are indicted and punished.—The Public.

On the Family.

A change somewhat similar to that in the position of Jealousy has taken place in the role of the Family during the progress of society into and through the period of civilization. In the primitive human association the Family was large in extent, and the outline vague; the boundaries of kinship, in cases where the woman might have several husbands, or the husband several wives, were hard to trace; paternal feeling was little or not at all developed; and the whole institution rested on the maternal instinct of care for the young. In the middle societies of civilization, and with monogamic arrangements, the Family grew exceedingly definite in form and circumscribed in extent. The growth of property and competition, and the cellular system of society, developed a kind of warfare between the units of which society was composed. These units were families. The essential communism and fraternity of society at large was dwarfed now and contracted into the limits of the family; and this institution acquired an extraordinary importance from the fact that it alone kept alive and showed in miniature (intensified by the darkness and chaos and warfare outside) the sacred fire of human fraternity. So great was this importance in fact that the Holy Family became one of the central religious conceptions of the civilized period, and it was commonly thought that society owed its existence to the Family—instead of, as was the case, the truth being reverse, namely that the Family was the condensation of the principle which had previously existed, though diffused and unconscious, throughout society.

The third and future stage is of course easy to see—that is, the expansion again of the conception of the family consciously into the fraternity and communism of all society. It is obvious that as this takes takes place the family will once more lose its definition of outline and merge more and more again with the larger social groups in which it is embedded—but not into the old barbaric society in which the conception of human fellowship lay diffused and only dimly auroral, but into the newer society in which it shall be clear and all-illuminating as the sun.

Thus the Family institution in its present form, and as far as that form may be said to be artificial, will doubtless pass away. Nevertheless there remains of course, and must remain, its natural or physiological basis—namely the actual physical relation of the parents to each other and to the child. One perhaps of the most valuable results of the Monogamic family institution under civilization has been the development of the paternal feeling for the child, which in primitive society was so weak. To-day the love of man and wife for each other is riveted, as it never was in ancient days, by the tender beauty of the child-face, in which each parent sees with strange emotion his own features blended with the features of his loved one—the actual realization of that union which the lovers so desired, and which yet so often seemed to them after all not consummated. The little prolongation of oneself, carrying in its eyes the star-look of another's love, and descending a stranger into the world to face a destiny all its own, touches the most personal and mortal-close feelings (as well as perha s the most impersonal) of the heart. And while to-day this sight often reconciles husband and wife to the legal chains which perforce hold them together, in a Free Society, we may hope, it will more often be the sign and seal of a love which neither requires nor allows any kind of mechanical bond.—From "Love's Coming of Age," by Edward Carpenter.

Socialism and Liberty.

In No. 932 of Lucifer, J. William Lloyd replying to a letter of mine in No. 930 asks me to answer "two simple questions" as follows:

1. Does not individual liberty mean the right of the individual to co-operate or not to co-operate, as he pleases, with his fellows, and to obtain his living, if he pleases in his own way, directly from pure Nature, provided always he does not infringe the equal liberty of his fellows?

2. How can such individual liberty be maintained under an "Administration" which "controls the land and means of production?"

My answer to Mr. Lloyd's first question is: Individual liberty certainly involves the rights which he specifies, but it also involves the equally important right of access to the most perfect means of production which society has devised, without the payment of tribute to a privileged class.

Before answering his second question I desire to call attention to his unfair use of quotation marks, which would lead the reader to suppose that I had spoken of an administration with a big "A", or had said that socialists favored a central authority which "controls the land and means of production." If the reader will refer to my original letter he will see that I said nothing of the kind.

The answer to the question, however, is that supposing the Socialist party to gain control of the public powers of the present capitalist state, what it would undoubtedly do would be to assume the control of the large corporations popularly known as trusts, which are already carrying on the most important branches of production. At the same time it would doubtless take control of su ch large tracts of land as might at that time be operated wholly by w a ge labor for the benefit of non-resident capitalists. It is also to be expected that a socialist administration would push the work of reclaiming the arid lands belonging to the government. The outcome of this would be that the laborers on the collectively owned land, having the advantage of the best modern machinery to assist them, would be able to earn a more comfortable living with less effort than those remaining on their individual farms. The tendency would therefore undoubtedly be for farm owners to give up voluntarily their individual holdings and take part in the collective agricultural production. There would, however, be nothing to force this action upon any who may be so peculiarly constituted as to prefer solitude and comparative hardship to the comforts of life under collectivism.

Mr. Lloyd does not say how it is possible to bring about a union of Socialists until the "State Socialists" give some pledge that they will always permit the free secession of the dissenting individual. Now if the words "State Socialists" mean anything they mean not the members of the International Socialist Party, but such men as Emperor William and his advisers.

The attitude of International Socialists toward the state is made sufficiently clear by the following quotation from a newly translated work by Frederick Engels entitled "The Origin of the Family, Private Property and the State." At the conclusion of this book the author says:

"The state, then, did not exist from from all eternity. There have been societies without it, that had no idea of any state or public power. At a certain stage of economic development, which was of necessity accompanied by a division of society into classes, the state became the inevitable result of this division. We are now rapidly approaching a stage of evolution in production, in which the existence of classes has not only ceased to be a necessity, but becomes a positive fetter on production. Hence these classes must fall as inevitably as they once arose. The state must irrevocably fall with them. The society that is to re-organize production on the basis of a free and equal association of the producers, will transfer the machinery of state where it will then belong: into the Museum of Antiquities by the side of the spinning wheel and the bronze ax."

In my previous letter to Lucifer I referred its readers to the writings of Vandervelde and Deville for proof that political Socialists do not stand for State tyranny. I am glad to be able now to supplement their testimony by this passage from Engels, whom Socialists and non-Socialists alike cannot but recognize as thoroughly competent to speak on the question.

But to return to the pledge which Mr. Lloyd thinks the "State Socialists" should give before they are entitled to receive his vote. As I have shown, this name is entirely inappropriate when applied to any party which is seeking for the votes of the working class. If, on the other hand, Mr. Lloyd means to ask this pledge of the International Socialists, it can only be said that they are composed of "autonomous groups" and that no one among them is authorized to speak for the whole. Personally I can only speak for myself and for comrades whose opinions I happen to know, and speaking so, I have no hesitation in saying that none of us would have the least objection to the "free secession" which Mr. Lloyd considers so important, since it certainly is no part of our programme to apply coercion to any individual.

It should further be said that the working plan of a collectivist administration involves decentralization to the fullest extent possible. The employment of labor would be controlled primarily by small groups of laborers and, secondarily, by municipalities rather than states or nations, except, of course, in the case of Interstate railroads and such enterprises. The obvious relief, therefore, for an individual who found himself unpleasantly situated in one environment would be to change to another without being obliged thereby to cut himself off from civilization.

I am obliged to Mr. Lloyd for his clear statement of the Anarchist programme for transforming society. I wish that he and others who share his view might read "The Last Days of the Ruskin Commonwealth" by Isaac Broome. This is an entertaining story, all the more interesting for being true, of a group of people who called themselves Socialists but knew nothing whatever of International Socialism, and who tried the Anarchist method of regenerating society, with the result which Socialists predictod for them long before the fact.

CHARLES H. KERR.

The Single Tax.

I hope you will allow me space in Lucifer to reply to Ironicus and C. L. James on "Single Tax."

I too am an Anarchist, but we have not attained Anarchy yet, and as Anarchists we should do and advocate that which is best for us in our progress toward the goal of a free society, provided we do not violate the principle of Anarchy. The so-called single tax will do more to eliminate man made laws and officers, and be a longer stride toward freedom than any other movement ever proposed to the race of man.

It may seem presumptuous in me to criticise so profound and erudite a man as C. L. James; but no one man has all knowledge. I know a few thing that even James and Ironicus do not know about the land question. James makes an argument for the single tax in his allusion to the sandy prairie that had no value til Altoona was built on it—then rents went up by reason of population of people. The railroad laid off the town and the prospective value of lots immediately appeared, and the price of lots increased pari paru with the increase of population. No land however fertile for vegetation has any value away from a population. And as you approach the center of population the value of land increases proportional to the population, at the rate of four dollars a head for every man, woman and child in the town or city per acre of vacant land. Land has sold in Chicago for more than eight million dollars per acre, and in New York City for sixteen million dollars per acre or more than four dollars per acre for every soul in the city; showing that the man who claimed to own the land did not make its value.

Ironicus harps on "Natural Rights" which does not occur in my letter. It matters not whether you call right natural or not so far as this question of equal rights to the earth is concerned. He says "I do not believe that land values can be separated from labor values to any considerable extent." Let him price a vacant lot in any town and see that as he approaches the center of the town that values of land exclusive of any labor expended on it augments. Of course there goes along with population an increase of wealth—of improvements on land, which we term social growth. Our point is, that the individual possessor of land did not produce its value, but that all the value land has was made by society as a whole, and for that reason it should belong to all the people. Such economic value can be taken in no other way than by taking the annual value of the land exclusive of improvements by a process which resembles a tax, but is not a tax as defined by the dictionaries.

Ironicus thinks, (which shows, he has not thought much on the subject,) that "the man who could pay the most money would monopolize the land and the wage slave would still pay the tax. Rent, interest and profit would still sandbag labor." Did he never think that as he raised the rent on his land it would raise his taxes? Ricardo, J. S. Mill and all political economists agree that taxes on land cannot be shifted onto the tenant like taxes on wealth can be shifted onto the consumer. In an adjoining county to where I live, the people some years ago voted a tax on themselves, which if paid all at once would be four dollars an acre on the land, and the result is that land is not so high priced and rents are no higher than in our county with a low tax.

The fact is, and Ironicus will find it so by an unprejudiced study of the subject, that a single tax on land values would lower rent and the price of land so that all who so desire can have homes by paying the economic rent into a common treasury, which would be paying it to himself largely, for he would get it back in public benefits.

I hope James and Ironicus will give their unprejudiced attention for a short time to the great moral subject with a fiscal name, The "Single Tax."

J. C. BARNES.

Hindsboro, Ill.

The War of Secession.

As I look back at the indelible bloody splash upon our history,
—the four years' revel of hatred,—the crowded shambles of foiled secession,—
I see that it was all a pitiable error,
That which we fought for,—the Union of haters by force,—was a wrong, misleading cause,—the worship of bigness,—the measure of greatness by size.
A single town true enough to abhor slaughter as well as slavery would have been better worth dying for than all that tempestuous domain.
From the seed then sown behold imperialism and militarism arise and a whole forest of stout, deep-rooted ills in whose shade we lead an unhealthy, stunted life to-day.
The incidental, unintended good,—the freedom of the slaves,— illusive, unsubstantial freedom at best,—freedom by law but not from the heart,—surely even this is but a doubtful balance in the scales.
Is the good that springs from evil ever a real good?

—Ernest Crosby.

The editors of "Freedom," the Manilla newspaper which dared to criticise a native member of the Civil Commission, have been found guilty of libel and each of them has been fined $1,000 and sentenced to Bilibid prison for six months. They were denied a jury trial, were forbidden to attempt to prove the truth of their charges, and their attorney was disbarred. The Old Flag is having many remarkable experiences these days.—San Francisco 'Star,"

When one can say, I am the author of my own destiny, it seems to mean something wonderful; some personal achievement. I do not value anything except as it is related to the individual. If fate or luck makes the man, then an adverse fate or luck can unmake him, which proves that there is no man in the transaction; simply a combination of circumstances that had set up an effigy and destroyed it later.—Freedom.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for ustice against Privilege.

The Motherhood Trust.

The chief editorial in a recent "Chicago American" is headed, "What Can a Nurse Girl Do?" and opens thus:

"An intelligent young woman writes to complain of her lot. She says she is twenty-five years old, and has a fair education. She feels that her life is wasted because she spends it in the care of a young child, a boy four years old. 'The boy is bright and intelligent'—writes this young woman, 'but he is not my own son. Will you tell me what interest I have to live for?'"

In reply to this disconsolate young woman, this type of thousands of women and girls in cities and country alike, the Chicago "American" says—incidentally as it were:

"Of course, a healthy, intelligent young woman ought to be married and adding to the world's children, rather than caring for some other woman's children."

This brief quotation from the letter of the Nurse Girl, and the comment thereon by the editor of the "American," suggest volumes. They bring us face to face with the PRIMAL TRUST! the basic trust upon which all other trusts feed; or perhaps I should say, without which trust no other trust, or combination to rob the masses of their equal right to the earth and its opportunities, could ever have been formed.

Careful study of man and his institutions show that in no other way could ambitious and power-loving individuals obtain and hold, from age to age, control over other human beings of their own tribe or race. Under natural selection of fatherhood, untrammeled by the artificial or conventional rules—law—men would be born so nearly equal in mental and physical endowment that privileged classes and orders would be an impossibility. Without privileged classes and orders monopoly of the earth would be an impossibility.

Hence the denial to women—the nurse girl for instance—of the right to have a child of her own, including the right to choose the father of that child without first promising eternal fidelity to some man—without waiting till some thing in the shape of man prop ses marriage, THIS is the worst, the deadliest, the most DAMNABLE of all the denials of natural right of which human beings have yet been guilty.

Because of this denial all other denials of natural right become possible and practicable.

* * *

The true physician seeks for causes for the malady before prescribing a remedy. He is not satisfied with the discovery of secondary or surface causes. He seeks for the hidden, the deep-seated, the primary, the fundamental causes, well knowing that the removal of secondary or surface causes alone will not cure the disease.

If this is true of the diseases that afflict the individual it is true also of social or societary diseases—the economic ills, the industrial, the governmental or political evils under which human beings now struggle and suffer, and against which so much valiant and tireless work is being done by our reformers, our various Socialistic Organizations, our Single-Taxers our Moral Education Societies, Temperance and Peace Societies, etc., etc.

Is it any wonder they fail of satisfactory results while ignoring the basic causes of the ills they are trying to remove?

* * *

Illustrative of the incidental results of the Motherhood Trust, bear what Dr. E. B. Foote says in regard to societary regulation of the sex appetite, the gratification of which appetite leads to and precedes motherhood:

"Men and women go up and down the earth famishing for something they cannot or will not tell you what—and finally in their blind search for what their systems crave, take to liquor, tobacco or opium."

It may be safely assumed that nine-tenths of the crimes and vices for the prevention and punishment of which laws and governments are supposed to be instituted and supported, are the direct or indirect result of interference with the sexual promptings of nature, by the thing called organized society.

M. HARMAN.

Echoes from Harmony Home.

Two months of the Phalanstery are now gone; two yet remain. The first month, July, was too wet and often too cool for comfort. Fires in the heating stoves of evenings were frequently in order, and heavy blankets at night. August was warmer and dryer, but up to this date, September 2, there have been very few hot days in the Michigan fruit belt, and absolutely no hot nights.

Owing, it is believed, very largely to this phenomenal weather, but few of the friends have as yet put in an appearance, who promised to help by their presence to make our summer experiment a success. Most if not all of Lucifer's friends are busy people, and while the weather is cool enough for work they prefer to stick to business and defer their vacation till later in the season.

Notwithstanding the phenomenal weather, however, the phalanstery has not been a failure. Altogether we have had about twenty persons with us, who remained from one to fifteen days. All, or nearly all these have expressed their gratification and appreciation with and of the place and the treatment they received while here, and nearly all have signified their intention to return later in the season. Uniform good health, or rather, uniform improvement in health, has, I think, been the experience of all who came, and especially of those who remained long enough to test, or realize, the effect of pure air, pure water, plenty of sunshine and plenty of fresh, ripe fruit, upon the mental and physical organism.

* * *

So much for the past. What of the future? I expect to remain here till the close of the fruit harvest, which will take till the last of October or first of November. Berries are about gone—a few blackberries still on the bushes—but in their stead we have the more substantial grape, peach, pear and apple. Such bountiful profusion of these I never saw before. On Saturday last, in company with Mrs. Lydia L. Lamb of Dryden, Michigan—who has now been with us for some ten days, also in company with Mrs. Harriet Garner and James Poppers of Chicago, I enjoyed a most delightful ride through Pipestone township, lying immediately south of Harmony Home, taking our dinner with us and picnicing on the shady banks of the St. Joe River, a beautiful stream of clear water, large enough to allow daily trips of a small steamer from St. Joe and Benton Harbor to a point some twenty miles up-stream through the Fruit Belt, at the nominal cost of 25 cents for the round trip. Occasionally the boat ascends the stream to Berrien Springs.

During this buggy ride of ten or twelve miles our eyes were constantly feasted with the sight of orchards and vineyards heavily laden with apples, pears, peaches and grapes. Never before have I seen in one day, so much fruit, most of which is the result of careful selection and thorough cultivation, consequently of superior quality. The peach orchards of Pipestone township were noticeable for their uniform loads of fruit as contrasted with the small crop of the peach trees in the immediate neighborhood of Benton Harbor.

* * *

And now again—not to prolong these "echoes" to the point of weariness for the hearer or reader—if I have not already said it I want to say that I regard the autumn months as by far the best of the whole year, as vacation months, especially for those in search of health and strength.

Autumn—all glorious autumn! Where is the poet worthy of the name, that has not sung the praises of this the crowning season of the whole year. Winter is the death of the year; Spring is the season of buds and flowers; the season of promise but not of fruition or fulfillment; the season of fickle, changeful, coquettish weather, the season in which Winter ofttimes dallies in the "lap of Spring." Summer is the season of partial fulfillment, but also the season of intense torridity; the season when old Sol becomes our enemy instead of friend, and makes us to welcome gladly any screen that covers us from the direct gaze of his fiery eye.

But Autumn—especially September and October—what tongue or what pen has ever fully done justice to the beauties and the glories of early autumn! Season of garnered sheaves of golden grains. Season of ripe and ripening fruits—all the most substantial and luscious of the fruits, also of the nuts, to supply the necessary oil for the animal economy without calling in the aid of the hunter or the butcher. Season when the landscape dons its most gorgeous robes. (Who that has ever seen a forest of rock-maple trees in September and October, does not long for a renewal of the glorious privilege?) Season of calm, mild, sweet and balmy days, and of cool but not unpleasantly cold nights. Season when the sun no longer casts withering, blighting glances alike upon flower and fruits; upon bird and beast and man, but sheds over all a soft, mellow, tempered light inviting all to bask in his unclouded, unscreened rays, and to enjoy the health-giving open air, without fear of blister, sun-scald or sun-stroke.

Who that has ever gone a-nutting in the brown autumn woods, and listened to the sounds that greet the ear from the throats of the various feathered tribes—the quail, the thrush, the bob-o-link and of some others that are now holding their autumnal conventions preparatory to taking flight for a more southern clime—who, I repeat, that has been near enough to hear and feel the pulsations of Nature's great heart in this the crowning season of the year, does not wish to repeat the experience, and while so doing drink in large draughts of health, strength and love of nature, which means love of life, also means desire to make the most of life for the larger ego, the whole human race! To which love and desire may be added the hope that if there be a continuation of conscious life for us, after the heart has ceased its beating and the lungs no longer inhale and exhale the vital air, the new life will be as full of joy, of gladness, of strength and of altruistic aspirations as this life has been and now is.

* * *

Lest there should be any disappointment on the part of our visitors I wish to repeat what has in substance been said frequently before, that those who want all the conveniences of a hotel or first class boarding house had better not come here, but to all who can make allowance for lack of luxurious surroundings, and who can content themselves with plain and simple yet healthful and nutritious food and fairly comfortable surroundings, our latch-string always hangs outside the door.

We have really fewer annoyances than many of our friends have to contend with in cities. We are troubled with very few insect pests; no smoke; very little dust; no steam whistles; no rattle of street cars or milk-wagons to drive sleep away. No warnings, and no occasion for warnings, from the Health Department that the "water is bad," "suspicious," or that school children should carry water from home to drink lest they get typhoid fever from drinking the hydrant water drawn from the bottom of Lake Michigan.

To all who care to come for an outing at Harmony Home, we again say; do not expect too much in the way of physical comforts, and let us know when to expect you so that we may meet you at the landing, or at the depot.

M. H.

The Origin of the Family.

[The above is the title of a work by Frederick Engels, which is in press and will be for sale about Sept. 15. We have received advance sheets, from which the following paragraphs are taken. The work is of great value, and will be reviewed in these columns in a later issue. L. H.]

By Euripides woman is designated as "cikurema," a neuter signifying an object for housekeeping, and beside the business of breeding children she served to the Athenian for nothing but his chief house maid. The man had his gymnastic exercises, his public meetings, from which the women were excluded. Besides, the man very often had female slaves at his disposal, and during the most flourishing time of Athens an extensive prostitution which was at least patronized by the state. It was precisely on the basis of this prostitution that the unique type of Ionic women developed; the hetaerae. They rose by esprit and artistic taste as far above the general level of antique womanhood as the Spartan women by their character. But that it was necessary to become a hetaerae before one could be a woman, constitutes the severest denunciation of the Athenian family.

The Athenian family became in the course of time the model after which not only the rest of the Ionians, but gradually all the Greeks at home and abroad molded their domestic relations. Nevertheless, in spite of all seclusion and watching, the Grecian ladies found sufficient opportunity for deceiving their husbands. The latter who would have been ashamed of betraying any love for their wives, found recreation in all kinds of love affairs with hetaerae. But the degradation of the women was avenged in the men and degraded them also, until they sank into the abomination of boy-love. They degraded their gods and themselves by the myth of Ganymedes.

Such was the origin of monogamy, as far as we may trace it in the most civilized and most highly developed nation of antiquity. It was by no means a fruit of individual sex-love and had nothing to do with the latter, for the marriages remained as conventional as ever. Monogamy was the first form of the family not founded on natural, but on economic conditions, viz.: the victory of private property over primitive and natural collectivism. Supremacy of the man in the family and generation of children that could be his offspring alone and were destined to be the heirs of his wealth—these were openly avowed by the Greeks to be the sole objects of monogamy. For the rest it was a burden to them, a duty to the gods, the state and their own ancestors, a duty to be fulfilled and no more. In Athens the law enforced not only the marriage, but also the fulfillment of a minimum of the so called matrimonial duties on the man's part.

Monogamy, then, does by no means enter history as a reconciliation of man and wife and still less as the highest form of marriage. On the contrary, it enters as the subjugation of one sex by the other, as the proclamation of an antagonism between the sexes unknown in all preceding history. In an old unpublished manuscript written by Marx and myself in 1846, I find the following passage: "The first division of labor is that of man and wife in breeding children." And to-day I may add: The first class antagonism appearing in history coincides with the development of the antagonism of man and wife in monogamy, and the first class oppression with that of the female by the male sex. Monogamy was a great historical progress. But by the side of slavery and private property it marks at the same time that epoch which, reaching down to our days, takes with all progress also a step backwards, relatively speaking, and develops the welfare and advancement of one by the woe and submission of the other. It is the cellular form of civilized society which enables us to study the nature of its now fully developed contrasts and contradictions.

The old relative freedom of sexual intercourse by no means disappeared with the victory of the pairing or even of the monogamous family. "The old conjugal system, now reduced to narrower limits by the gradual disappearance of the punaluan groups, still environed the advancing family, which it was to follow to the verge of civilization. . . . It finally disappeared in the new form of hetaerism, which still follows mankind in civilization as a dark shadow upon the family."

By hetaerism Morgan designates sexual intercourse of men with unmarried women outside of the monogamous family, flourishing, as is well known, during the whole period of civilization in many different forms and tending more and more to open prostitution. This hetaerism is directly derived from group marriage, from the sacrificial surrender of women for the purpose of obtaining the right to chastity. The surrender for money was at first a religious act; it took place in the temple of the goddess of love and the money flowed originally into the treasury of the temple. The hierodulae of Anaitis in Armenia, of Aphrodite in Corinth and the religious dancing girls of India attached to the temples, the so-called bajaderes (derived from the Portuguese "bailadera," dancing girl), were the first prostitutes. The surrender, originally the duty of every woman, was later on practiced by these priestesses alone in representation of all others. Among other nations, hetaerism is derived from the sexual freedom permitted to girls before marriage—also a survival of the group marriage, only transmitted by another route. With the rise of different property relations, in the higher stage of barbarism, wage labor appears sporadically by the side of slavery, and at the same time its unavoidable companion, professional prostitution of free women by the side of the forced surrender of female slaves.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Miss Anna Lopez, New Orleans, La.:—I have just had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Alfred B. Westrup, who advised me to write to you for a copy of your paper. As I am very much interested in such literature, please send it to me.

J. Bloomingdale, New York City:—Please send me 40 copies of your issues for 1900—different dates, of course. Your "Heart to Heart Talks" in No. 932 was an exceedingly pleasing feature, which, no doubt, all your readers would be glad to see regularly continued.

J. H. Lohmeyer, Chino, Cal.:—I enclose $1 for subscription to your Lucifer. I have often read of you in connection with free thought and speech, and equal right for both sexes. I am in favor of the woman being a woman and man's equal in all, and not a slave. Wishing you success in your endeavor for right for all.

E. H. Bliven, Minneapolis, Minn.:—In looking over some papers today I came across a copy of Lucifer, dated Feb. 1900. There are some eye-openers there, and I wish to subscribe for the paper, but as it has been some time since then and a letter may not reach you, for various reasons, I would like to ask you to please send me a copy of Lucifer and then I will know that a remittance reaches you, or at least ought to.

H. Clausen, Calif.:—I read with interest your article on Dowieism etc. It is true and just to the point. A friend of mine who believes in Dr. Teed's theory is sending the "Flaming Sword" to me right along, and I must say that I cannot understand how people can believe in such absurd theories. I enclose a clipping from the "San Francisco Examiner," which may interest you; it is the Home, Washington, Colony looked at from the point of view of a newspaper reporter, and for such to be it must be called quite fair.

Elsie Cole Wilcox, 1705 H. St., Whatcom, Wn.:—Will you print the enclosed letter soon? I have a young friend that I trust to reach in that way and perhaps benefit, more than I could in a personal appeal. You may think I ride my tobacco hobby too much, but it is the bug-bear of my existence, and it seems to me that we women do not emphasize the fact of its distastefulness as we ought before marriage, although we generally express our disgust in plain terms afterward. An ounce of prevention is worth a ton of cure in such cases and the woman makes a great mistake who takes such things quietly before marriage and then attempts a reform afterward. I never knew a success in that line. I trust your dear father is much improved in health and that you are all well and happy.

Anna Van Vredenburgh, Colorado Springs, Colo.:—I send in this mail for review—if you will be so kind—several copies of my journal containing the story entitled, "The Greatest Thing On Earth" written on occult and economic lines dealing with the present conditions and the future by prophecy. The story has been rushed into print each month as I have written it, about three chapters at a time,—I am ashamed to confess without taking time to look over what I had written the month preceding, (owing to over work). I intend to revise the story for publication in book form and any favorable mention you are generous enough to accord me I will greatly appreciate and will justify in the coming issue of the work. My subscribers seem to like the story.

[We have not found time to do as requested above, but our readers can obtain specimens of the work by requesting a sample copy of the "Altior Victor." L. H.]

Wm. Fretz, Trenton, N. J.:—I enclose "legal tender" to help get oil for the Light-Bearer, another Great Sun; it should be "Light of Love" for it points the way to affection, love, health, and happiness, the quartet that brings repose and peace, and blessed is the one that heeds its teachings. I wonder if its really true that Lillian Levison is irresponsible for what she said about Home and its people? Is her malady such that she is prompted to tell an untruth? I know that Lois and others challenge her statement, but is it not natural for self interest and self protection to discredit Lillian's story, even though some of it is or was true? No doubt the enemy's papers have made it much worse than she said. The Home people deserve great credit for their spirit of self sacrifice in rearing a Temple to Liberty, and nothing but good should come to them, and I sincerely hope that all is as it should be there.

[We have received a number of communications in regard to the subject referred to above. A woman corresponding to the description of Lillian Levison came to Chicago some weeks after Mrs. Levison left Home. She went to the house where we formerly lived, and rang the bell. To the woman who came to the door, she said: "I want to see Miss Harman. I am an Anarchist, I hate Catholics." The woman (who by the way is a Catholic) brought her here. She told this woman and myself that she was very tired, as she had just arrived from Boston. She did not give her name, but said she was entitled to a great deal of money, through her boy, and that people were trying to get him from her. She wanted to work for her room, but I told her the best I could do would be to let her remain for a few days until she found something to do; as I could not discharge anyone to make a place for her. I consider her mentally unbalanced, and was very sorry for her. And such a life is the worst possible for a child, and I was also sorry for him. When she went away I told her to come back if she did not find a place, but I have neither seen nor heard from her since. L. H.]

We sleep, but the loom of life never stops, and the pattern which was weaving when the sun went down is weaving when it comes up to-morrow.—H. W. Beecher.

TOLSTOI'S NEW WORK.

The Slavery of Our Times.

With Portrait of the Gifted Author, and Introduction by the Translator, Aylmer Maude.

CHAPTER TITLES.

I., Goods Porters Who Work Thirty-seven Hours; II., Society's Indifference While Men Perish; III., Justification of the Existing Position of Sciences; IV., The Assertion of Economic Science that Rural Laborers Must Enter the Factory System; V., Why Learned Economists Assert what is False; VI., Bankruptcy of the Socialist Ideal; VII., Culture or Freedom? VIII., Slavery Exists Among Us. IX., What is Slavery? X., Laws Concerning Taxes, Land and Property; XI., Laws the Cause of Slavery; XII., The Essence of Legislation Is Organized Violence; XIII., What Are Governments? Is it Possible to Exist Without Governments? XIV., How Can Governments Be Abolished? XV., What Should Each Man Do? An Afterword.

Well printed on heavy paper. Substantially bound. 186 pages. Price, 65 cents.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

CAPTAIN JINKS, HERO

BY ERNEST CROSBY.

It is a merciless satire on war and militarism in which the parallel between savagery and soldiery is unerringly drawn. It is a biting burlesque on the various forms of cheap hero-worship. It holds up to withering scorn every important feature of militarism.

Among the accompaniments and results of war exploited and satirized, are hazing at "East Point," the war whoops of the yellow journals, the savagery of war, the Sobley-Sampson controversy, civilizing the heathen savage, looting in China, pension abuses, the capture of Aguinaldo, the Peace-Conference, army mismanagement, osculatory attacks by goosey girls, etc.

With 25 Irresistible Drawings by Dan Beard. 12mo, Cloth, Handsome Covers, 400 pages. Price $1.50

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

VACCINATION A CRIME.

With Comments on Other Sanitary Superstitions.

BY FELIX L. OSWALD, M. D.

"Vaccination spreads diseases; vaccination impairs the organic functions; vaccination encourages reliance on worthless remedies; vaccination spreads small-pox; compulsory vaccination furnishes dangerous legal precedents."

With illustrations of diseases frequently resulting from vaccination. 196 pages. Price 10 cents. For sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St. Chicago.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer the Light Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only," Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem, Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization. The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 15c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Wanted Names of Liberal women who wish to correspond with Liberal men on Sexual Reforms. Address (with stamp.) ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER. Snowville, Va.

934.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

To NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author.

The Sex Passion.
Man, the Ungrown.
Woman, the Serf.
Woman in Freedom
Marriage: a Retrospect.
Marriage: a Forecast.
The Free Society.
Some remarks on the early rise and sex worships.
Notes—On the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population.

The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. Price, $1.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

WHITMAN'S IDEAL DEMOCRACY, AND OTHER WRITINGS.

BY HELENA BORN.

Comprising besides the title essay, Thoreau's Joy in Nature; Poets of Revolt: Shelley, Whitman, Carpenter; Whitman's Altruism; Individualism versus Organization: Ingenuities of Economic Argument; The Last Stand Against Democracy in Sex; Inequality in Divorce; Marriage Safeguards. With portrait of author and biographical introduction by Helen Tufts. 125 pages. Edition limited to 500 copies; each copy numbered. Fine paper, uncut pages, bound in boards, paper label. Price $1.

Agents Wanted To sell the Toltec Dandruff Cure and the Toltec Hair Dressing (restores natural color). Are clean and perfect. Liberal commission. Write for circulars. Address: The Toltec Remedies Co., Box 1367 Denver Colo.

"Pages of Socialist History."

By W. Tcherkesoff. This book of all schools, as it deals with the history of the "internationals" and the attitude of Marx and Engels towards Bakounin. Paper covers, 25 cents. By mail, 30 cents

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.

ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $2.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.

BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth, $1.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commanded, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 81 portraits of delegates, including Ben. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 426 pages. $2.00.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

DARWIN'S, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. G. Spence. 178 pages. 50c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the everlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 21 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 10c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian religion has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 360 pages. 60c. Postage, 5c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Hartman, under the Comstock law, G. C. Remsen and David Overmyer. 20c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 25c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 219 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HILDA'S HOME. Ross Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 120 pages. Paper, 60c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Scotland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 27 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Volney, and Voltaire. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mussian. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREEZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

KORADINE. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1886, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III. (1899). Cloth, $1.25. Postage, 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Phillip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherents of Tradition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, R. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction, special cover, latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Spunnie, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $3.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of ceruleau tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 50c.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Marietta), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 207 pages. 25c.

THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Witches and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 261 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and asceticism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 36 large pages; twelve copies, 25c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 10c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 40c.

THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (R. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1723, quoted by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuitical craft and is a plain index to the underhand working of that order against the welfare of individuals and society. 15c.

THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 10c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Trilapi Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action. (Ernest Winne). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $2.25.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Darling. 15c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Thomas Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 10c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 5, 1896. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 378 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VI., No. 36. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, SEPT. 18, E. M. 302. [C. E. 1902.] WHOLE No. 935

COLUMBIA'S DREAM.

She stood above the river when the moon
Was rising, and the weather was more mild
Than had been. She was beautiful. Her eyes,
Howbeit stream did frost the Night with jewels,
Shone, while she watched the scene developing
In majesty, until the cloudless moon
Beheld with her pure face of loveliest light
Lake-mirrored woods, valley and misty hill
In verdure, steeple-speckt; while villages,
Broad rivers winding to the distant sea,
With sails upon their placid bosoms dreaming,
Still swans, and castles of dead kings, were lanes
Curved over marble bridges like sweet music,
Enchanted, pale, slept in the silver flood,
Man's peaceful conquest waiting. O, my country!
Why are thou occupied with low pursuits,
And chasing the poor savage, while the world
Passes, and thou hast nothing but the dream?

—By Paul Shrvell.

Matrimony Merely a Matter of Money.

Civil matrimony in our day is of two kinds. In Catholic countries, the parents provide a fitting spouse for their son as of old, and the natural consequence is the full development of the contradictions inherent to monogamy: voluptuous betaerism on the man's part, voluptuous adultery of the woman. Probably the Catholic church has abolished divorce for the simple reason that it had come to the conclusion, there was as little help for adultery as for death. In Protestant countries, again, it is the custom to give the bourgeois son more or less liberty in choosing his mate. Hence a certain degree of love may be at the bottom of such a marriage and for the sake of property this is always assumed, quite in keeping with Protestant hypocrisy. In this case betaerism is carried on less strenuously and adultery on the part of the woman is not so frequent. But as human beings remain under any form of marriage what they were before marrying, and as the citizens of Protestant countries are mostly philistines, this Protestant monogamy on the average of the best cases confines itself to the community of a leaden ennui, labeled wedded bliss. The best mirror of these two species of marriage is the novel, the French novel for the Catholic, the German novel for the Protestant brand. In both of these novels they "get one another;" in the German novel the man gets the girl, in the French novel the husband gets the horns. It does not always go without saying which of the two deserves the most pity. For this reason the tediousness of the German novels is abhorred as much by the French bourgeois as the "immorality" of the French novels by the German philistine. Of late, since Berlin became cosmopolitan, the German novel begins to treat somewhat timidly of the betaerism and adultery that a long time ago became familiar features of that city.

In both cases the marriage is influenced by the class environment of the participants, and in this respect it always remains conventional. This conventionalism often enough results in the most pronounced prostitution—sometimes of both parties, more commonly of the women. She is distinguished from a courtisane only in that she does not offer her body for money by the hour like a commodity, but sells it into slavery for once and all. Fourier's words hold good with respect to all conventional marriages: "As in grammar two negatives make one affirmative, so in matrimonial ethics, two prostitutions are considered as one virtue." Sexual love in man's relation to woman becomes and can become the rule among the oppressed classes alone, among the proletarians of our day—no matter whether this relation is officially sanctioned or not.

Here all the fundamental conditions of classic monogamy have been abolished. Here all property is missing and it was precisely for the protection and inheritance of this that monogamy and man rule were established. Hence all incentive to make this rule felt is wanting here. More still, the funds are missing. Civil law protecting male rule applies only to the possessing classes and their intercourse with proletarians. Law is expensive and therefore the poverty of the laborer makes it meaningless for his relation to his wife. Entirely different personal and social conditions decide in this case. And finally, since the great industries have removed women from the home to the labor market and to the factory, the last remnant of man rule in the proletarian home has lost its ground—except, perhaps, a part of the brutality against women that has become general since the advent of monogamy. Thus the family of the proletarian is no longer strictly monogamous, even with all the most passionate love and the most unalterable loyalty of both parties, and in spite of any possible clerical or secular sanction. Consequently the eternal companions of monogamy, betaerism and adultery, play an almost insignificant role here. The woman has practically regained the right of separation, and if a couple cannot agree, they rather separate. In short, the proletarian marriage is monogamous in the etymological sense of the word, but by no means in a historical sense.

True, our jurists hold that the progress of legislation continually lessens all cause of complaint for women. The modern systems of civil law recognize, first that marriage, in order to be legal, must be a contract based on voluntary consent of both parties, and secondly that during marriage the relations of both parties shall be founded on equal rights and duties. These two demands logically enforced will, so they claim, give to women everything they could possibly ask.

This genuinely juridical argumentation is exactly the same as that used by the radical republican bourgeois to cut short and dismiss the proletarian. The labor contract is said to be voluntarily made by both parties. But it is considered as voluntary when the law places both parties on equal terms on paper. The power conferred on one party by the division of classes, the pressure thereby exerted on the other party, the actual economic relation of the two—all this does not concern the law. Again, during the term of the contract both parties are held to have equal rights, unless one has expressly renounced his right. That the economic situation forces the laborer to give up even the last semblance of equality, that is not the fault of the law.

In regard to marriage, even the most advanced law is completely satisfied after both parties have formally declared their willingness. What passes behind the judicial scenes where the actual process of living is going on, and how this willingness is brought about, that cannot be the business of the law and the jurist. Yet the simplest legal comparison should show to the jurist what this willingness really means. In those countries where a legitimate portion of the parental wealth is assured to children and where these cannot be disinherited—in Germany, in countries with French law, etc.—the children are bound to secure the consent of their parents for marrying. In countries with English law, where the consent of the parents is by no means a legal qualification of marriage, the parents have full liberty to bequeath their wealth to anyone and may disinherit their children at will. Hence it is clear that among classes having any property to bequeath the freedom to marry is not a particle greater in England and America than in France and Germany. —From "The Origin of the Family," by Frederick Engels.

Woman's Legal Status.

The Massachusetts legislature has recently made a long deferred concession. It has given the mother the same legal control over the child as the father. When we reflect that this is only the twelfth state which has taken this just step up to date, it is plain that those who long to change the world's sorrow into joy have plenty yet to do. Some men are better than our statutes. That is the only thing which renders the situation of some women even tolerable.

MOTHER, FATHER AND CHILD.

But there are men, here and there, who look upon the women who consent to become their wives and the mothers of their children as mere conveniences. They have no more idea of what love is—still less of what true comradeship consists—than the Patagonian has of the price of stock. Such men are usually proud of their wives just as they are proud of their fine horses. They keep their wives well fed and well clothed as a matter of course. But they do not know that the woman, the mother, cannot live by bread alone. They do not know that the woman of whom they have taken charge was a soul long before she became a wife or mother. And the wife of such a man who, for the sake of her children, dares to think and act as a soul has a sad, sad time of it.

The idea that a woman who has gone through the valley of the shadow of death for the sake of her child, whose life is pure and true, whose mind is clear, whose one passion is to lead her little one into that insight and peace and joy that has been shut out of her own smothered life—the idea that such a mother should have less legal control than the man to whom that child may stand merely as the sign of an appetite gratified, is a monstrous idea. Such cases as this are not the rule. Yet they exist and in the majority of our states the mother in such cases is rendered helpless by the statutes.

ONE OF MANY THOUSANDS.

Take the following case in New York State which was commented upon by the newspapers a few years ago. A bright young woman of some education became interested in a native of China whom she taught in one of the missions. She finally consented to become his wife. The man died shortly before the birth of their child and upon examining his will, it was discovered that he had willed this child to his relatives in China! The young mother nearly died from the shock of learning what her husband had done, but her agony was of no avail. Her baby was taken from her when but a few weeks old and sent to China. What became of the heart-broken mother? Who cared? Nothing had been done that was not perfectly legal, and if the mother were foolish enough to object to this sort of thing, she had her protestations for her pains—that was all.

This is a record of an actual occurrence. Yet, because similar injustice is not inflicted upon some member of your immediate family you shut your eyes to its significance, and turn away, and continue to talk of America as a "land of freedom."

There are in every state statutes which, in cases where the men are not better than the laws, make the existence of the wife an enslaved and a miserable one. You may not know this, but your ignorance of it makes it none the less a fact.

THE GREATER FREEDOM.

There is a freedom of the body and of the mind; there is a freedom of the soul, which is worth infinitely more. And that freedom, once won, ought to give the mother who is pure and wise and faithful as much right to do her simple duty by the child as the father, particularly when, as in some cases, the father cannot be described by these terms!

The larger freedom has not yet been won for the women of America, nor of any country in the world. To verify this statement you have but to examine the statutory enactments in the various states and read the records of our divorce courts.

O, for women strong enough to break down the barriers which bem in all that is noblest in the lives of the mothers of little children! The future waits for those warrior-souls who dare to win for all women the freedom they absolutely must have if the race is to improve and not degenerate.—Katherine Tingley, in "The New Century."

Alfred B. Westrup in Cuba.

We have received the following letter from Mr. Westrup:

"I arrived here on the 18th and am stopping with my co-worker and friend Rafael S. de Calzadilla at the above address. Shall be glad if you will announce the fact and state that I shall rejoice at the receipt of letters from any friends and co-workers in the States. My friend Calzadilla is a well known character and stands high with the press and influential people, that accounts for the very extraordinary notices of my arrival and work of which I have made translations and send you a bunch of the papers and translations of most of them. There are several others of which I have not yet obtained copies to send out. We called on the president and were cordially received, he even promised to be present at my first lecture, which is to be given under the auspices of the Havana Athenæum, one of the elite societies that always meet in full evening dress (a fact I am sorry for), but they are the people that can make things go if they will. I find prospects here for the inaugurating of the Mutual Credit System are even better than I had expected."

All the papers to which Mr. Westrup refers gave complimentary notices of his work. It seems that Cuba would be a good field for the introduction of a new and better system of exchange, and we are glad to know that Mr. Westrup's ideas are obtaining a fair and favorable hearing. The following from the "Diario de la Marina" is a specimen of the newspaper comment:

"Dr. Alfred B. Westrup, who recently arrived from St. Louis, Missouri has favored us with a visit. He is the author of 'The New Philosophy of Money,' 'The Financial Problem,' 'Citizens' Money' and was a delegate from New York to the Anti-Trust Conference that met in Chicago Feb. 1900.

"Mr. Westrup proposes to give a series of public lectures on the concept of money, on which he has devoted many years of study. His purpose is to unite the progressive and intelligent element of our society to form a Cuba Mutual Credit Association.

"We are informed that the Cuba Athenæum, through the enthusiastic efforts of Dr. H. Lincoln de Tayas has offered his valuable services, and the first lecture will be given under the auspices of that cultured society, from which we may predict a brilliant success of the distinguished professor.

"Mr. Westrup wishes us to announce that he would be very glad to furnish information in regard to the Mutual Credit Association which he proposes to establish. His residence is Penn Pobre 23."

Fra Elbustus' Preachments.

The virtuous fathers used to say to daughters who had lapsed, "Never you darken that door again." These parents occasionally disowned their sons because they did things they ought not. But fond parents do not express themselves that way quite so much as they did in the good old days agone,—and how fortunate that they have gone! The world is getting better.

The little man is still a bit afraid his family may be disgraced, or he himself lose caste, through the fault of another.

So in turn if his acquaintances happen to have the applause of the world, he gets up close and rubs off all the glory he can make stick to himself.

Should these friends drop into disgrace—or seeming disgrace—he makes hot haste to get out from under.

Oh, it is a fine thing to be loyal: who cares whether the reports are true or false! If our friend stumbles we will help him to rise, and in helping him to rise we will rise ourselves. It is a great privilege to pardon; it is better still to look through the fault and see so much to admire that you perceive nothing to forgive.

If your friend reveals his humanity and the rabble forsake him, it is your opportunity—stand by him. If death, disgrace, or poverty comes to your friends—then is the time they need you.

Do not court the rich, the influential, the learned—let them go. They can do without you. "A man is known by the company he keeps"—that is so, and depend upon it, that the man or woman who is intent on associating only with the best, has a very small bank balance of worth and virtue, and the fear is, that some social cyclone will wipe it out.

Be big, and associate with any one with whom fate casts your lot. The question of "who is my neighbor?" is just as paramount now as it was two thousand years ago.

Your neighbor is the man who has fallen among thieves, been beaten sore, robbed, and left for dead.

Your neighbor is the man who needs you.

It is foolish to say sharp, hasty things, but 'tis a deal more foolish to write 'em. When a man sends you an impudent letter, sit right down and give it back to him with interest ten times compounded—and then throw both letters in the waste basket.

Dickie of the Eternal Quest asks this question: Why is it that men of genius so often prefer some little Mathilde, when the presidents of so many women's clubs are theirs for the asking?

The answer is, I think, that a passion for the Chairperson is hardly possible when any moment you may be ruled out of order, and ordered to take your seat.

Common Sense is the ability to detect values—to know a big thing from a little one. I'd rather possess Common Sense than to have six degrees from Trinity College, Oxford.

I will not pray that each day be a perfect day, but I will pray to lapse not into indifference. I will not pray that each time I shall build both strong and true; but imperfect, I will pray for impulse that I may build anew.

When sympathy finds vent in vengeance and love takes the form of strife, who can say where it will end!

No man should dogmatize excepting on the subject of theology. Here he can take his stand, and by throwing the burden of proof on the opposition he is invincible.

The receipe for perpetual ignorance is: Be satisfied with your opinions and content with your knowledge.

Responsibilities gravitate to the person who can shoulder them, and power flows to the man who knows how.

When two men of equal intelligence and sincerity quarrel, both are probably right.—The Philistine.

Please remember that we are always glad to receive lists of names of people to whom to send sample copies.

Public Opinion.

Not long since I received a marked copy of "The Ledger," published at New Denver, B. C., which gave an account of the sentence of a young man to nine months imprisonment, for publishing in his paper, "The Paystreak," a scathing criticism of the Canadian Judiciary, and a further sentence of twelve months if he could not put up sureties in the amount of $4,000 for good conduct. I now learn by a note from Comrade Lowry editor of "Lowry's Claim," that the press of that region made such an outcry about the matter that young McAdams was soon released. Public opinion was stronger than those judges. When one can get public opinion sufficiently aroused, the Comstock law will become powerless when directed against those who are seeking the best good of the race.

I have been thinking that if a few of our papers would republish such articles as the comrades here were indicted for sending through the mails, and the one for which I was fined—would do this every time a comrade was indicted, and would give the Comstockites to understand that this would continue to be done as long as they continued to prosecute, it would squelch the whole thing quicker than any other method.

I have a friend in another state who, at my request, published before I was indicted the article for which I was fined. After that piece of grand jury stupidity, I wrote and told him, as he had already published it twice, and I knew he was in the habit of using my articles for standing matter, letting them appear several times. It disappeared from his columns till since my conviction, and now it has appeared twice, and recently a number of a two-paged sheet entitled "That $100 article, and other matter of importance," was sold upon a campground at 10 cents a copy to the amount of nearly $5, and more copies called for, such is the desire of people to know what it is that good men and women are being punished for sending through the mails.

They have a right to know, but so far as the great public is concerned, the Comstock law is enforced by a secret tribunal. If my friend in Maine or Massachussetts wishes to know what t is for which I have been fined, he or she can learn by coming to Washington, and getting access to the court records, but if I send the information through the people's channel of communication I am liable to another arrest. Oh, when will people wake up to the enormity of this law? When will the public become so educated that the press will scorch it out of existence?

LOIS WAISBROOKER.

Land Values.

One of your correspondents in an able article on the taxation of land values, makes a slight but fruitful error.

He implies that the railroad builder or the organizer of a factory "creates" land value, where before there was none; as, for instance on the alkali plain. In fact, the railroad builder or the planter of the factory town creates only so much value as is due to his labor, which will be returned to him in his share of the common benefit from the tax on land values.

By gathering population about his site, he draws population away from other sites, and the land value fails in those sites; so he really transfers and appropriates, not creates, land values.

33 East 61st. St. New York. BOLTON HALL.

"Whatever form it takes—Monarchic, Oligarchic or Democratic—the government of man by man is illegitimate and absurd. . . . As man seeks justice in equity, so society seeks order in Anarchy."—Proudhon.

For there is a perennial nobleness and even sacredness in work. Were he never so benighted, forgetful of his high calling, there is always hope in a man that actually and earnestly works.—Cariyle.

"That government is best which governs not at all, and when men are prepared for it, that is the kind of government they will have."—Henry Thoreau.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 344 W. 143d street, New York.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Echoes and Observations.

Time is a beast of burden. Upon his broad and patient back all burdens are laid.

* * *

If we take Time by the forelock we make him our friend and servant. If we take him by the fetlock—foot-lock—he kicks,—kicks you sprawling, then leaves you to be trampled under foot by the rear-guard of the army of Progress.

* * *

Anger is a sure indication of mental immaturity, of puerility or of imbecility. The mature mind, the philosophic mind, sees sufficient cause for everything that occurs, hence is neither surprised nor angry at anything.

* * *

When friends "fall out," invariably the one who first gets angry is most at fault, and especially does this apply to him or her whose anger outlasts that of the other. "Let not the sun go down on your wrath," and "anger rests in the bosom of fools," are proverbs based upon the facts of human life.

* * *

The immature mind expects too much of friendship and love. It expects these to last forever unobscured by misunderstandings; hence when estrangements and coldness occur, such mind immediately jumps to the conclusion that the fault lies with the other party, since he feels absolutely sure that nothing could ever come between friends or lovers whose friendship and love equalled his own.

* * *

REGRETS.

Emerson says: "Another sort of false prayers are our regrets." "Regrets are vain," saith an old-time proverb. To which may be added, regrets are TRAITORS! They are an element of weakness and not of strength. They are clogs to our feet that will not allow us to keep step with the van-guard of the army of progress.

But while these sayings and comments are true and very useful to remember, they do not voice the whole of truth. Regrets are not vain when they teach us to avoid our mistakes. In this case they are not traitors but the best of friends. It is impossible not to feel mental pain on discovering that our sin of omission or of commission has caused pain or loss to others. This is because of the element in our mental make-up called sympathy, and so long as that element is part of us we cannot avoid the mental state known as regret, and hence Emerson's admonition seems wise:

"Regret calamities, if you can thereby help the sufferer; if not, attend to your own work, and already the evil begins to be repaired."

ORGANIZED CHARITIES AND PENAL INSTITUTIONS.

The recent revelations in regard to the management of the Presbyterian Hospital, Chicago, reminds me once more of a long cherished purpose to say something in these columns concerning hospitals, reformatories, penitentiaries, etc. My opportunities for observing the inside workings of some of these, both of the religious and secular kinds, have been better than those enjoyed by most readers of Lucifer, and while not having sought information in regard to them such knowledge has been thrust upon me in ways that no one with heart and soul and intelligence above the level of brute beasts could possibly soon forget.

To begin: I once had the care of a dear friend afflicted with cancer. I had no faith in surgery as a remedy, but her other friends insisted upon a surgical operation. Accordingly a surgeon from a well known medical college, with first-class recommendations, was employed and paid a big price. As usual in such cases the patient was taken to a city hospital, a religio-municipal institution, supported by public money and by private donations but owned and controlled by the Roman Catholic Church. We paid seven dollars per week for hospital fee alone, and yet there was the scantiest attendance, and the poorest accommodations generally. For instance there was no netting around the bed to prevent the patient being eaten up by mosquitoes, of which pest there was great abundance, owing to nearness to the Missouri River. At a private house the patient would have fared much better, but the surgeon must have her at the hospital. Though not a Catholic himself the patronage of this religious institution was probably worth many thousands of dollars annually to him in surgeon's fees, while to the church the hospital was a source of much revenue and of social and political power and influence.

It is perhaps needless to add that while the patient did not die under the surgeon's hands, nor because of lack of care from the hospital nurse,—a nun whose wages were presumably nothing—and while her life may have been prolonged by the operation, she never recovered her health and died of the cancer a few years afterward.

* * *

From the evidence gained by this bit of personal experience, and from testimony derived from the personal experience of many reliable witnesses I am constrained to believe that church hospitals for the care of the sick and unfortunate, are not founded nor conducted out of sympathy for human suffering nor with a sincere desire to lessen the sum of human misery, but simply and solely as business enterprises, to bring money to the coffers of the religious sect or order, and to gain power and prestige by the reputation of being important factors in what is called modern civilization, as distinguished from the barbarism or savagery that founds and supports no hospitals.

The same remarks hold true in regard to city and county and state institutions for the care of the sick, the blind, the deaf, the insane, etc., with the added feature that political considerations enter more largely into the selection of officers and employes of the state and county institutions than into the management of the religious hospitals. In either case, however, it may be safely assumed that officers and attendants are chosen not so much because of real fitness for the position as because of church influence, or of party bias and of past services to the then dominant political administration.

* * *

Hence it is that when scandals come to the surface, as in the case of Thomas McGann, of Chicago, who claims to have been horribly abused at the "Detention Hospital," and that afterward when removed to Kankakee—asylum for the insane—he was "severely beaten—his spine injured and two of his ribs broken," because he refused to do the work required of him—when scandals such as this are reported to the Governor and others in authority, many promises are made to "investigate" the case and "bring the guilty parties to punishment," but promises of this kind, like pie crust are notoriously made to be broken, and so besotted are the masses of people of both parties, or of all political parties and sects that they accept these failures to fulfill pledges on the part of high officials, as being the normal or expected. As "God" is not held responsible for sins of omission and commission, so also the high officials of church and state are not held accountable for their delinquencies, as common mortals are held accountable.

When, for illustration, Governor Dick Yates calls for a "conference and consultation" with the trustees of the Kankakee asylum, in regard to the reports of barbarous treatment of the helpless and voiceless insane, the proceedings of that conference are kept secret from the public ear and eye, and then, to quote the news dispatch, the governor "suspended the investigation, packed his grip and went to Harbor Point, Michigan, to spend a month with his family."

An ordinary wage-earner would be compelled to stick to business—especially such important business as that which concerns the health and the lives of helpless people entrusted to his care. The inmates of the Kankakee asylum it must be remembered, being the wards of the state are under the immediate care of the governor of the state, as its chief officer. But Gov. Yates is not to be held to any such arbitrary rules. The ethics that apply to the wage-earner do not apply to his lordship the Governor. He takes his vacations when it suits his royal whim, or convenience, without asking leave of his employers, the voters, stays as long as it pleases him, pays no railroad fares and usually, as I think, no hotel bills, but draws his salary meanwhile all the same as though hard at work at his desk, attending to the duties for the faithful performance of which he is paid, in salary and perquisites, a compensation all out of proportion to the real labor performed.

And here again we are met face to face with the cold, the hard the very disagreeable fact, the oft asserted and more often denied fact, that "a government trust is a private snap," or, as frequently expressed in these columns, the fact that governments are instituted and supported for the use and benefit of the privileged few, and not for the use and benefit of the unprivileged masses.

PENITENTIARIES.

In the Detroit "To-Day," August 30, I read that, "The committee appointed by the last Texas legislature to investigate the state penitentiary and other institutions, filed a report yesterday that has caused a sensation in political circles. Few men in the state institutions get out alive, if the report may be relied upon, and this affects the short as well as the long term men, for those who are not shot down on little or no provocation are worked to death. Those who do not succumb to bullets within the walls or overwork, leave the penitentiary in so weakened condition that they soon die.

"'The convicts are shot down like dogs,' according to the language of the report, 'and are worked till they drop dead in their tracks,' under a system for which the people of Texas must some day be held responsible.

"'Flesh and blood are held so cheaply in the institutions,' according to the committee that the average length of life among the prisoners is only seven years. The system in vogue by which convicts are leased out is denominated a disgrace to the state. The report recommends that the contract system and share farms be abolished."

"A system for which the people of Texas must some day be held responsible," says the writer of this article. But who is it that is now responsible? Presumably the writer thinks the responsibility now rests upon the officials, the Governor and his appointees, but if the government means the people, as we are so often taught, the responsibility would now and always rest upon the people, the voters, rather than upon their servants, their employes, the public officials. The principal is always regarded as responsible for the acts of his agents or employes.

The management of the Texas penitentiary, as well as that of some other Southern states, is probably worse than is the management of a majority of state prisons in the United States because of the fact that a large part of the prisoners, perhaps a majority, are negroes, and therefore considered on account of race prejudice, not to have any rights that a white man and an official is at all bound to respect. But from personal observation in the Kansas State prison, at Lansing, and in the Federal prison at Leavenworth, Kansas, I am convinced that the same spirit or sentiment prevails everywhere among government officials, namely, that a "convict" is no longer a human being in the full sense of the word, and that it matters little whether he survives his imprisonment or is shot down or worked to death, the main thing being to get as much work out of him for the benefit of the capitalistic employer of prison labor as possible—the frequent shooting of prisoners, and other inhuman treatment being intended to terrify and make the rest more obedient and industrious.

The most important lesson, or reflection, to be gained from the contemplation of the management of state and church institutions generally, is the lesson that under so called civilization the tendency is always to exalt the official class, the privileged class, at the expense of the unofficial, the unprivileged masses.

M. HARMAN.

ERRATUM: In "Notes from Harmony Home," page 253, instead of "modern and well furnished," read "well finished."

Economic and Monopoly Rents.

J. C. Barnes passes to one side of the point when he says the value of the lately worthless land on which Altoona was built is due to increase of population. What brought the population there? So too there is obscurity of language, the sure mark of obscurity in thought, about his statement that land has no value away from a population. Far enough away, perhaps it has not. But how far is that? It may be farther than from the guano islands, off South America, to the United States, whose population gives them their value by buying guano. Of two adjacent farms, one may yield rent and the other none. Yet they are equally remote from "population;" nay, the one which yields no rent may be more favorably situated for marketing than the other. I believe I said nothing about natural rights, so I certainly will say nothing now. What I say is that economic rent is an incentive to improvements which it concerns the public to encourage. Monopoly rent, which hinders improvement, and which the public interest is to discourage, would be abolished by Anarchy. But I miss my guess if it would not manage to get in under the Single Tax.

C. L. JAMES.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Mary C. Shav, Tampa, Florida.—A few years ago I took Lucifer. A great many wrote for the paper who I thought extreme, but I am learning they were nearer right than I was. I want to ask your advice about land I have in Florida, 240 acres on which I should be glad to have a co-operative colony formed if that is possible. I am not exacting. I want it used for a Home for the worthy and self-respecting. Please let me hear from you on this matter.

[We give place to the above thinking it may attract the attention of persons interested in Florida.]

Cassius V. Cook, Wadsworth, Nev.:—I am impelled to address you with a list of names that may be prospective subscribers for Lucifer if you can send them a copy. Herewith I hand you ten cents in stamps to be applied to that purpose. There is so much of encouragement I would lend in the humanitarian effort in which you are engaged. I have thought that you were the best informed lady in the land upon the questions of most vital concern to human welfare. You have promulgated so much that appears to me as right thinking that I have learned to respect your logic. I believe there is a wide field of usefulness for the propaganda of the truths of equal freedom.

I would too, like to see something from time to time in Lucifer, of practical suggestions as to how to handle children, "How to cure crybabies! Is kindness the best club? Corporal punishment in relation to improved conduct. Causes of the runaway child. Regulations of a child's social relations. Grown up babies. Cruel conduct of children. The kindergarten problem. Public school conformity as an educator," etc., etc.

The importance of knowing how to rightly instruct from the period of babyhood until early youth has apparently escaped the attention of the great mass of people during the acknowledged 6,000 years of progress.

For the improvement of the race it is as necessary that the world understand the "Baby Business" as that it understand the necessity of right sexual relations. It is impossible for them to act by what they do not know and without knowledge babies are boobies—a ponderous puzzle, easily impaired by each faulty solution. Let us have some conclusions by those who have had a world of experience, suggestions by others of what they need to know. I offer this as an outline of worthy effort for the pages of the only periodical open to the consideration of all problems important to human welfare.

Perle Falkenstein, New York:—Lucifer is coming all right now and is read by quite a few I believe, as I give it to a lady whom I saw one day reading something by Balzac and decided she was broad-minded enough to read Lucifer also. She tells me she gives them to friends, so in a quiet way you see this work goes on. Lucifer has been more interesting of late than usual. I want to write you something in regard to the articles on "Fallen Women" but so far have not had a chance. Laura Earle and Voltairine being both well known to me, I am of course doubly interested—and sorry to see that Laura Earle has misunderstood Voltairine. Having lived together for some time I happen to know that De Cleyre stands uncompromisingly, first, last and altogether for the utmost freedom of the individual to be what he or she pleases, and I feel from what I know of Laura Earle that she would without hesitation take her stand on the same platform. . . . .

You ask permission to use the foregoing letter in "Various Voices." Well, all I can say is, that I do not much like being "put in print" but if you think it worth the room, because of its mention of two friends whom I esteem very highly, why use it or anything else I may write. Laura Earle and her mother are to be congratulated on their emancipation from the extreme conservatism of the class to which they belong—"Philadelphia's oldest aristocracy" and it is a very hopeful outlook for the rest of humanity when we find such folks willing to bear witness to convictions, which must necessarily put them at variance with the privileged classes among whom they move; Laura Earle has an excellent chance to do good work for our emancipation and I am sure that she is thinking and working in the right direction. As to Voltairine—Who among us can say anything that will give added lustre to that mighty intellect? Living together as we did for some time I feel that few know and understand her who have only met her in her writings.

Henry C. Roberts, Bennington, Kans.:—What should be the attitude of free and independent women and men of our country toward arbitrary and invasive laws such as the Comstock law that has been enacted through rascality and fraudulent methods of unprincipled men who gain an advantage over the people by such nefarious legislation? Should not their efforts be constantly to ignore and bring into disrepute such corrupt and vicious laws to the end that they may be repealed? What then should be the after thoughts of the "Home" comrades after calm and mature deliberation on the results of the late trial of Lois Waisbrooker? Cannot the comrades now see that they have slighted the grandest opportunity to trample upon the vile creature of Comstock, the law by which the noblets, the most indefatigable of the workers in the glorious cause of the most vital reform of all the centuries, the reform of sex ethics, that is to say the reform of our antiquated marriage system, are held up and robbed not only of their just meed of praise but of their small savings the result of forced economy and of the strictest frugality in living expenses?

In asking these questions I would in no wise infer that I am more wise, discreet or brave than others, and especially those who have grappled with the enemy and felt the force of his arguments, ostracism, fines and imprisonment. It seems to me that the hour has arrived when reformers should get together and agree upon a course of action under given circumstances that the persecuted ones may quickly avail themselves of any apparent advantage in the situation and thus prevent the lapse of the fruits of the hard earned victory into the hands of the enemy. In fact I cannot avoid the conviction that the question is up to the reformers for immediate settlement, whether a bad a vicious law should be respected and obeyed or whether it should be rejected, discarded, trampled down and brought into contempt of the people that thus it may become a dead letter in the minds of the people.

A grand concert and Russian tea party, given by the Progressive Club, for propaganda purposes, on Saturday September 20, 8 p. m., at Ruehl's Hall, 220 W. 12th St. Tickets 10 cents. Russian songs and other attractions will entertain the guests.

The International Defense Committee is conducting the defense of Grossman and MacQueen. Contributions are solicited, and may be addressed to the treasurer, A. Salzberg, 30 Paterson St., Paterson, N. J. We have on hand some subscription blanks, which will be furnished on request.

The Chicago Philosophical Society meets every Sunday, 2:30 p. m., at Handel Hall, Randolph St. and Wabash Ave. September 21, Clarence S. Darrow "State and Municipal Problems."

Forty copies of Lucifer, no two alike, of 1900 will be sent to any address for 15 cents. Nine bundles for $1. We are anxious to place these papers where they will do good. Please let us have your orders soon.

The Woman Who Dares

BY URSULA N. GESTEFELD.

A novel, whose heroine seeks to find and realize her own individuality and, having found it, dares to maintain it in the marital relation. It is a carefully written story and meant to show the injustice of the marriage relation as usually regarded, and of the dual standard of morality, tacitly accepted however theoretically opposed. The subject is treated forcefully and directly, yet always tactfully and fairly, and possesses all the strength of moderation combined with just and equable criticism. The story reads more like events in real life than those of romance.

It is seldom that the most vital though most delicate of subjects is treated with such delicacy. The large number of letters from women received after its first publication is evidence that there is room for its heroine in many home.

"Here we have a well written story with a noble purpose. It is a woman's novel, and by that I do not mean that it is intended only for women; on the contrary, it ought to be read by every man in America who has the brain, conscience, and refinement of nature to appreciate its masterly presentation of what is the simple right, nay, more, is the sacred duty of every married woman, to demand the absolute right to her own person in wedlock no less than out of wedlock. . . . In the presentation of the vital thought found in these pages, Mrs. Gestefeld has given us a superb piece of work. It is a story of great vitality. The author is a thoughtful and a deeply spiritual woman; with the keen intuitive insight so often met with in profoundly spiritual natures, she has discerned one of the greatest moral crimes of the present."—The Arena.

Size 5 1-4x7 1-2 inches; 356 pages. Beautifully printed on laid paper, bound in green Holliston linen, and stamped in ink with original cover design. Price, $1.25, postpaid. THE GESTEFELD PUBLISHING CO., Pelham, New York. Department L.

COLLEGE OF MEDICINE AND SURGERY,

CHICAGO, ILL.

Session begins September 26 and continues eight months. Four Years' Graded Course. Practical work required in Chemistry Physiology, Bacteriology and Microscopy. Co-Educational, Standard Requirement. For catalogue, address Secretary, 245 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago.

For Rent: Large, light, furnished room. Inquire of Lillian Harman 500 Fulton, St. Chicago.

TOLSTOI'S NEW WORK.

The Slavery of Our Times.

With Portrait of the Gifted Author, and Introduction by the Translator, Aylmer Maude.

CHAPTER TITLES.

I., Goods Porters Who Work Thirty-Seven Hours; II., Society's Indifference While Men Perish; III., Justification of the Existing Position of Sciences; IV., The Assertion of Economic Science that Rural Laborers Must Enter the Factory System; V., Why Learned Economists Assert what is False; VI., Bankruptcy of th Socialist Ideal; VII., Culture or Freedom? VIII., Slavery Exists Among Us. IX., What is Slavery? X., Laws Concerning Taxes, Land and Property; XI., Laws the Cause of Slavery; XII., The Essence of Legislation Is Organized Violence; XIII., What Are Governments? Is it Possible to Exist Without Governments? XIV., How Can Governments Be Bolished? XV., What Should Each Man Do? An Afterword.

Well printed on heavy paper. Substantially bound. 186 pages. Price, 65 cents.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

CAPTAIN JINKS, HERO

BY ERNEST CROSBY.

It is a merciless satire on war and militarism in which the parallel between savagery and soldiery is unerringly drawn. It is a biting burlesque on the various forms of cheap hero-worship. It holds up to withering scorn every important feature of militarism.

Among the accompaniments and results of war exploited and satirized, are hazing at "Hast Point," the war whoops of the yellow journals, the savagery of war, the Schley-Sampson controversy, civilizing the heathen savage, looting in China, pension abuses, the capture of Aguinaldo, the Peace-Conference, army mismanagement, circulatory attacks by goosey girls, etc.

With 25 Irresistible Drawings by Dan Beard. 12mo. Cloth. Handsome Covers. 400 pages. Price $1.50

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

VACCINATION A CRIME.

With Comments on Other Sanitary Superstitions.

BY FELIX L. OSWALD, M. D.

"Vaccination spreads diseases; vaccination impairs the organic functions; vaccination encourages reliance on worthless remedies; vaccination spreads small-pox; compulsory vaccination furnishes dangerous legal precedents."

With illustrations of diseases frequently resulting from vaccination. 196 pages. Price 10 cents. For sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St. Chicago.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer the Light Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of 'For Men Only," Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem. Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization. The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 10c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Wanted Names of Liberal women who wish to correspond with Liberal men on Sexual Reforms. Address (with stamp) ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER, Shoowville, Va.

935.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

To NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing, before the expiration of your trial subscription.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who suites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author.

The Sex Passion.
Man, the Ungrown.
Woman, the Serf.
Woman in Freedom
Marriage: a Retrospect.
Marriage: a Forecast.
The Free Society.
Some remarks on the early star and sex worships.
Notes—On the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population.

The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. Price, $1.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

WHITMAN'S IDEAL DEMOCRACY. AND OTHER WRITINGS.

BY HELENA BORN.

Comprising besides the title essay, Thoreau's Joy in Nature; Poets of Revolt: Shelley, Whitman, Carpenter; Whitman's Altruism; Individualism versus Organization; Ingenuities of Economic Argument; The Last Stand Against Democracy in Sex; Inequality in Divorce; Marriage Safeguards. With portrait of author and biographical introduction by Helen Tufts. 125 pages. Edition limited to 500 copies; each copy numbered. Fine paper, uncut pages, bound in boards, paper label. Price $1.

Agents Wanted To sell the Toltec Dandruff Cure and the Toltec Hair Dressing (restores natural color). Are clean and perfect. Liberal commission. Write for circulars. Address: The Toltec Remedies Co., Box 1307 Denver Colo.

"Pages of Socialist History," By W. Tcherkesoff. This book is recommended to Socialists of all schools, as it deals with the history of the "international" and the attitude of Marx and Engels towards Bakounin. Paper covers, 25 cents. By mail, 30 cents

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 90c; paper 15c.

ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $1.75.

A FLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. B. H. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (H. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.

BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth, $1.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Exploited by the Bible, and giving clear reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 31 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 428 pages. $1.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

DARWIN, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. G. Spence. 178 pages. 25c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DIGGING FOR RED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wallock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all orgasble beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,042 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 10c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum 10c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian religion has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 180 pages. 40c. Postage, 5c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Tarman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Siemens and David Overmyer. 10c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 25c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Ruth Dunbar Kelso. 319 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HILDA'S HOME. Rose Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 320 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Scotoland. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 87 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Voltney, and Voltaire. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREEZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

KORADINE. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1892, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III. (1890). Cloth, $1.25. Postage, 15c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 412 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 30c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 10c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Tradition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, E. H. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of free republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 25c. tation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 25c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 25c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line" presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $3.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and title-page in blue. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 25c.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Marietta), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Reason and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 327 pages. 25c.

THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Witches and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 361 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are (without any exception) those in the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 32 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 15c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. E. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralising management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1761, quoted by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuitism and is a plain index to the underhand working of that order against the welfare of individuals and society. 25c.

THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 10c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Telegu Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Winne). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $1.25.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Dorling. 15c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 10c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us come to an understanding of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the likeness of lovers and the estranging arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 25c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Amos. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slaves. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 378 pages. 50c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VI., No. 37. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, SEPT. 25, E. M. 302. [C. E. 1902.] WHOLE No. 936

RETRIBUTION.

'Tis a truth as old as the soul of things—
  Whatever ye sow ye reap.
'Tis the cosmic law that forever springs
  From the unimagined deep.
'Tis shown in the manifold sorrowings
Of the race; in remorse with its secret stings;
That he who grief to his brother brings
  In his turn some day shall weep.

To the man who hears his victim's cries
  And hardens his heart at the sound,
At last a Nemesis dread shall rise
  From out the void profound.
Who sows in selfishness, greed and hate
Shall gain his deserts in the years that wait,
For the slow and remorseless wheel of Fate
  Forever turns 'round and 'round.

If ye give out of mercy and love and light,
  The same shall return to you;
For the standards of right are infinite
  And the scales of the gods are true.
By its good or evil each life is weighed;
In motives and deeds is its records made;
In the coin ye pay ye shall be repaid,
  When your wages at last fall due.

—J. A. Edgerton, "Denver News."

Shakespeare's Bad Women.

I call the immortal William as witness to my thesis that there is just as much difference in character among improper females as the other kind, because, if Victor Hugo's creations are unreal, that will hardly be said of his.

The "Comedy of Errors" is founded on a Latin play, which itself is founded on a lost Greek one. The scene of Antipholis and the courtesan in the Latin is simply licentious; but Shakespeare has chosen a different method, not certainly because English taste at that time required it, nor yet because the creator of Doll Tearsheet could not be broad if he tried, but because he knew that ladies of pleasure are not all alike. We should not learn the courtesan was a courtesan if we were not told. I am afraid she is mercenary; but she is perfectly well-bred; and there is something almost tragic in the way she bears the taunts of vulgar Dromio.

DRO. Master, is this Mistress Satan?

ANT. It is the devil.

DRO. Nay, she is worse, she is the devil's dam; and here she comes to us in the habit of a light wench, and here of comes it that the wenches say "God damn me;" that's as much as to say "God make me a light wench." . . Light is an effect of fire, and fire will burn; ergo, light wenches will burn. Come not near her.

COURT. Your man and you are marvelous merry. Will you go with me? Sir, we'll mend our dinner here.

The nurse in "Romeo and Juliet" I suppose passes for respectable, and therefore is a capital offset to the bad women in Shakespeare who are not; for she is among his basest characters. She has been described as one who has known love without learning its sanctity, since she never refers to it without being vulgar; and this is not excusable by the fatuity of age; for the old she-satyr is no fool where there is anything to be made. She will go admirably with Martha in Faust.

"That woman's one of nature's picking
"For pandering and gipsy-tricking."

Mrs. Quickly is a loose woman who wants to be respectable, and on the whole succeeds pretty well. She never gets "pulled" but once, during the paroxysm of reformation which follows Henry the Fifth's accession; and she is soon out of that scrape—of course, because nothing can be proved against her. The Boar's Head in Eastcheap has been a very decent tavern many years; it is only we whom the author takes behind the scenes, and allows to know the hostess' private dealings. This skillful steering on the verge between naughtiness and getting found out is of course but one side of Mrs. Quickly's character. It sets off in a charming manner, her delightful stupidities and blunders; but even they do not exhaust the comic genius shown in her creation. Mrs. Quickly has a heart. She is among the best natured and friendliest of women. Once only does she appear malicious. Falstaff has trifled both with her affections and her ambition. It should be understood that Falstaff bears a much higher character than some over-righteous critics have allowed him. Falstaff is a gentleman. Falstaff is a knight, in an age when golden spurs were not given for selling much beer. Falstaff, though his means are slender, as be allows, has independent means. Falstaff is a man of education, a man of intellect; a man of whose friendship Justice Shallow is proud, and Prince Hal is not ashamed. Incongruous as it seems to imagine him in his old age becoming a soldier again, his harshest acquaintances—Prince John, for example—have to admit he makes a better one than they expected. With the laurels of several battles on his disreputable old head, he appears to the Merry Wives of Windsor quite a conquest, if, as Mrs. Ford says, "they could be damned for it." The Merry Wives are wives of substantial citizens, who employ Mrs. Quickly as an inferior, though N. B. they are not afraid of losing caste by knowing her. Necessarily, therefore, he appears a prodigious catch to Mrs. Quickly. It is his sin and shame that he lets himself down to the level of such critters as Ancient Pistol, Doll, and Madam Quickly her self; but to class him with them, as Gervinus does, is to misunderstand the situation. Now, the one thing which makes Mrs. Quickly spiteful, is just what makes the Merry Wives so—the discovery that this lecherous unscrupulous old rascal has, either for lust or liquor—never for any good—been making love to all of them. I do not know that it has ever been observed, but every incident of importance in the play where they appear together, turns on jealousy. Yet Mrs. Quickly had some reason to forgive Falstaff, as she does, for though he drank her sack and paid in flattery, the connection went further than anything else to keep her head above water. When she has buried Fal-staff she goes down fast—to Ancient Pistol, and death in the 'spital. "The way of transgressors is hard."

Mrs. Quickly's friend, Doll, is one of our side lights into Mrs. Quickly's sub rosa dealings. For Doll is an ideal type of the prostitute who was born to be one. Every element of her very feminine disposition, her easy luxuriousness, her caressing manner, her extravagance, her covetousness, her vulgarity, her ill-temper, melt down with exquisite facility into the compound of her trade, producing a purely professional result—a prostitute who is nothing else than a prostitute. This is some people's notion of all "fallen women." Shakespeare has drawn but one character of that kind. Why? Because Shakespeare knew the world. It would have been easy for him to make Bianca just like Doll. But this would not have held "the mirror up to nature."

The Queen in Hamlet is one of those minor characters which illustrate Shakespeare's genius not less strikingly than the more famous. It is well worth remark that she is quite enough like her son to be his mother. Want of resolution has been considered by almost all critics to be Hamlet's foible. Of resolution his mother is altogether destitute. I need scarcely say she is innocent of the murder—if there were ever a doubt on that point it is set at rest by reference to the old tradition. Her impulses are mainly good. Her love for Ophelia; her vine-like clinging to both her husbands; her sensibility to her son's reproach which absolutely makes her pick up force enough to keep his secret; her remorse, which almost amounts to repentance, but does not produce reformation;—all these are simply weighted down by a feeble sensual temperament. Hamlet, we are told, was "fat and short of breath"—surely Gertrude must have been! Yet, though no longer young, she is attractive enough to be a dangerous woman. It was not only from ambition that Claudius took the trouble to seduce her and kill her husband. He gives proof of loving her. The elder Hamlet loved her also. And she, in her weak way, loved him. If, after her adultery, and only a month before her second marriage, she followed his body "like Niobe, all tears," this was not hypocrisy, but a perfectly characteristic mixture of grief, self-reproof and conscious helplessness. She never thinks of resenting Hamlet's charge that she has exchanged Hyperion for a satyr. She knows that's true. She is exactly the sort of woman who in a lower state, might have kept straight—with a judicious guardian. Without, she must have been naughty, and probably would have been mischievous. But she would never have been like Doll.

Madam Overdone, of whom happily we do not hear much, differs from Doll as a shrewd boss from a "jour" with a penchant for the business. C. L. JAMES.

[Conclusion next week.]

Is Mr. Kerr an Anarchist?

I am greatly obliged to Mr. Chas. H. Kerr for his courteous reply to my questions, and I regret to have wounded his sensitiveness by use of capitals, quotation marks and adjectives in a way which seemed to him "unfair." I have no intention of the slightest unfairness, to misrepresent his position or advance my own by any tricks.

Anarchists commonly divide all Socialists into two classes; Free or Anarchist Socialists whose contention is that the individual is the unit of society and that society has no rights which he does not by free consent bestow, and State Socialists who contend that society is greater than the individual and has a right to administer his affairs in the way most necessary to its welfare. And I was simply using the term, State Socialists, as descriptive of Mr. Kerr's position. But Anarchists have nothing to say against any group of consenting individuals, who attend only to their own affairs, no matter what their terms of agreement. Thus a group, or entire nation, of voluntary slaves, headed by an autocrat, is perfectly possible in the Anarchist regime, provided that each individual included may at any moment secede and reassume his entire personal liberty. For liberty in the fullest sense involves the paradoxical right to be a voluntary slave to any desired extent. If our present Government of the United States, without the slightest other change, was supported solely by voluntary contributions, instead of compulsory taxes, and exerted its authority only over those who voluntarily consented it would be an Anarchist group and no Anarchist could object to it except as a critic.

As Mr. Kerr defines his position, and that of his comrades, I confess he surprises me, for it seems to me that all unconsciously he is logically an Anarchist. A congeries of "autonomous groups," "no one among them authorized to speak for the whole," "without the least objection to free secession and with no part of its programme to apply coercion to any individual" (these quotation marks include a slightly different arrangement of Mr. Kerr's words, but grasp their sense, and I hope are not "unfair") is, as I understand it, an Anarchy. Where the individual stands free, to stand alone or associate with others, in any way he pleases, coercing none and coerced by none there is Anarchism, and there is no other.

Mr. Kerr seems to me a Free Socialist pure and simple.

Will he please explain the difference he sees between his Socialism and Anarchism? Is it merely one of method?

Kropotkin outlines, in "Memoirs of a Revolutionalist," just such a society of autonomous individual groups as Mr. Kerr describes. J. WM. LLOYD.

Socialism and Liberty.

In No. 932 J. William Lloyd makes some very sensible remarks on the above subject. He says, with perfect truth, that an administration which controlled all the land and instruments of production would have great power over persons, even if it never laid a hand on them. As a protection he wants a guarantee of "free secession and free land."

In a country like America there is no reason why free land should not be supplied to those who do not want to live under the Socialist system. In Belgium and Holland land is so scarce that this would be hard to arrange, but in the United States it would be easy.

I may add that it would be easier to guarantee free land under Socialism than under Mr. Lloyd's own system. If each person were free to take as much land as he could reasonably use and occupy, the whole of Western Europe would be taken up in half a day by five per cent of the population. Even in the United States there would soon be no room for new-comers. It is so easy to use a vast tract of country for ranching and sheep farming with very little labor, that five million farmers could put every acre of good land in the United States to some reasonable use, and then no new-comer could get land without evicting somebody already in possession. If Mr. Lloyd believes that these evictions could go on without leading to a revival of force and government, he is a more hopeful man than I am.

As for "free secession", it is one of these vague expressions that may mean anything. If Mr. Lloyd wishes to be allowed to secede from society, and then drive automobiles through the country at the rate of one hundred miles an hour without interference, the Socialists cannot accommodate him. Neither will they allow seceders from society to spread cholera and yellow fever with impunity. But I think they will allow people to remain outside the Socialist industrial system, if so inclined.

The London Fabian Society is the only body of reformers in the world that has acquired the art of thinking clearly and weighing all its words. In 1896 it sent a "Report on Fabian Policy" to the International Socialist Congress, which contained the following declaration:

"The Fabian Society does not suggest that the State should monopolize industry as against private enterprise or individual initiative further than may be necessary to make the livelihood of the people and their access to the sources of production completely independent of both. The freedom of individuals to test the social value of new inventions; to initiate improved methods of production; to anticipate and lead public enterprise in catering for new social wants; to practice all arts, crafts, and professions independently; in short, to complete the social organization by adding the resources of private activity and judgment to those of public routine, is, subject to the above conditions, as highly valued by the Fabian Society as Freedom of Speech, Freedom of the Press, or any other article in the charter o popular liberties."

Bellamy's "Equality" is the most important American book on Socialism. I am sorry I have not a copy to quote from, but Mr. Lloyd will remember that Bellamy proposes to allow free land to seceders.

Another good American book is "The Passing of Capitalism", by Isadar Ladoff. On page 30 he says: "Those who may feel the burdens of citizenship in the Socialist State too hard will have the choice of leaving it." R. B. KERR.

In Defense of State Socialism.

Mr. Kerr thinks "State Socialists" means only such men as Emperor William and his advisers. It seems to me that the word "state" in this connection should derive its meaning from the State where it is applied, not to some foreign and entirely different state. Those who wish to use the existiag state to administer collective wealth, through the various subdivisons of county, town, city, etc., hope thus to evolve their ideal Commonwealth, may properly be called State Socialists. Those who would organize all industries, collective and individual, independently of the state, and oppose or ignore the state, may properly be termed Anarchistic Socialists. Between these two there are no gradations possible. Mr. Kerr seems to find a medium; probably he can define it. After repudiating the state, he allows that states may run railroads.

Probably a majority in the present Socialist party repudiate the referendum, and state ownership. They are therefore anarchists, as some of them admit. The Social Democrat wing still hold the views of Socialists of twenty years ago, approximately that expounded in a prominent Chicago daily paper. There will no doubt be a split, as there was in 1880, as it is becoming evident that a Socialist must be either a state Socialist or non-state Socialist, i. e. Anarchist. C. P. H.

"What Shall I Tell My Daughter?"

The perplexity which prompts this question need not be felt by the mother who possesses "The Wholesome Woman." "A Home Book for Maidens, Wives and Mothers" a new volume by Dr. J. H. Greer. Book I. contains Sex and Life—The Mystery of Nature and Glory of Creation. Book II. Tokology—Physiology and Hygiene of the Sexual Organization. The Woman's Book of Health and Beauty. Book III. Child-Culture—Education and Character-Building. The Kindergarten and Manual Training. Book IV. Health and Hygiene—Practical Lessons from a Common Sense School of Medical Science. The Prevention and Cure of Disease by Natural Remedies. There are thirty-seven chapters comprised in these books, and in addition a separate supplement of forty-one plates, printed in colors, illustrating sex in plant life; the human sexual organs and the laws of reproduction; the development of the human embryo and fœtus, showing nourishment and growth from day to day and month to month; the plan of fœtal circulation, etc., etc.

The information is given in clear, simple language; the book contains 510 pages; bound in Extra Cloth, with special emblematic color design, the price is $2; in Half Morocco, marbled edges, stamped with gold, $3. It may be obtained at Lucifer's office.

Dr. Juliet H. Severance would like to make engagements to lecture the coming fall and winter. Will respond to calls to officiate at funerals at any point. Address 6127 Drexel avenue, Chicago.

Forty copies of Lucifer, no two alike, of 1901 will be sent to any address for 15 cents. Nine bundles for $1. We are anxious to place these papers where they will do good. Please let us have your orders soon.

An Open Letter.

Lora Carter, Minneapolis, Minn. Dear Madam:—Kindly permit me to make a remark on your letter in Lucifer of June 12. You say (should your husband love another) "I would win the love of some other man who came near my ideal of manhood, providing he was not loved by and didn't love another," etc. No doubt you will perceive, when your attention is called to it, that this limitation restricts your choice among the men who are so unlovable that they are desired only by one woman, in this case yourself. Those who have qualities of brain and heart sufficient to win the affections of other worthy women you refuse to consider. Do you really think that such men will father the best children? Or that such women possibly can be the best mothers? Leaving out of consideration all arguments for or against the monogamic ideal, is it not a fact that the vast majority of young women who marry secure the young men whom other young women wished to marry, and that the vast majority of young men who marry secure the young women whom other young men wished to marry? Must you not see that the rule you lay down for yourself is utterly impracticable unless it so happens that you can love only the men who do not have the qualities that would call out the love of other women? EDWIN C. WALKER.

Influence of Language.

The Mental Science teachers and healers make this statement: "There is great power in the spoken word."

All persons, who think, know that this statement is an everyday fact.

Let those who doubt, do a little observing and experimenting, without prejudice, and they will soon be convinced.

The spoken, or written, word exerts a powerful influence on every quality of the mind, and thus affects morals, customs, and every condition of life. Thus it is evident that it is a matter of the highest importance that we be very careful in the choice of words used to express our ideas.

It is an error of common occurence, and an error authorized by custom, to use masculine gender pronouns when common gender pronouns should be used. The influence of this error is prejudicial, detrimental and unjust. No matter what the standard grammarians say about "a deficiency in the English language" there really is no such deficiency. All linguists sanction the use of the pronoun you and your both in the singular and plural number.

It is equally as proper to use the pronouns they, their and them, both in the singular and plural number. The word man, is not feminine enough, in its commonly accepted meaning, so that it should not be used when reference is made to both sexes.

The use of such words as person, people, and human, when referring to both sexes is far more proper, just, and favorable to mental elevation.

In searching for all things which will promote moral reform and progress toward the right we must not overlook the great and mighty influence of language. BERTHA MOORE.

Elmina D. Slenker.

The many friends of this energetic and great-hearted woman will regret to learn of her illness. The following letter has been forwarded to us, and as it was written August 23 and we have heard nothing further it is to be hoped Mrs. Slenker is out of danger ere this:

"I have been confined to my bed since August 13 and have been about as near dead as one could be to come back again. I am able now to be up a few minutes twice a day, but am very weak yet. Was very glad to get the books. While I cannot read myself, I have friends who are kind enough to read to me, so they will come in good just now. My daughter-in-law has been with me since the beginning of my illness, and no one could have had kinder friends or better nursing. I have to make this letter do for several as I cannot write myself."

ELMINA D. SLENKER.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for ustice against Privilege.

Observations and Gleanings.

Among recent gleanings from the secular press I regard the following as very important, coming from the source it does:

"In the next generation, if Dr. E. Benjamin Andrews of the University of Nebraska has his way, there will be no 'God-fearing' men. The reason is this:

"Dr. Andrews thinks there should be no 'God-fearing' children.

"Dr. Andrews advanced a few astonishing 'don'ts' in his lecture at the University of Chicago today, which were enough to make an old-fashioned ancestor turn in his grave. Here are some of them:

"'Don't teach your children to fear God.'

"'Don't make your children memorize long passages of scripture.'

"'Don't teach them the doctrine of eternal damnation.'

"'Don't muddle their brains with the theory of original sin.'

"'Don't scare them with the devil.'

"'Don't worry them about baptism.'

"'Don't discuss with them whether they are to be justified by faith alone or by faith and works.'

"'Don't puzzle them with the doctrine of predestination and free will.'

"'Above all, don't teach them that they have any better chance of heaven than the little Baptist children or the little Methodist children or the little Presbyterian children—whichever the case may be—across the way.'

"'Teach them ethics. Instill in them the principles of right and wrong. Let them read the beautiful and poetic parts of the Bible as long as they are interested in them. Tell them the simple facts of the story of Christ. These things,' said Dr. Andrews, 'constitute all that is essential to the training of the child.'

"Dr. Andrews' theory is that the mind of the child should never be wearied by an eternal ding-dong of religious training; that the child's heart should not be terrified by a mental picture of an avenging God; that the child's soul should not be forced and bound by a set of creeds, and that the child's sensibilities should not be set in revolt by the use of religion as a punishment."

* * *

Dr. Andrews was for some years superintendent of public instruction in Chicago, if I mistake not. Was it because of his heterodoxy that he ceased to hold that position?

When I remember now my own mind was tortured by fear—fear of God, fear of the devil, fear of hell, as taught by parents, teachers, preachers, by every one almost who had an opinion on the subject, all through the years of childhood, and youth, I rejoice to know that such teachings, such rational and sensible views, as those of Dr. Andrews can now be heard from the rostrum of popular institutions of learning such as the Chicago University.

* * *

One of the departments of the general government at Washington D. C. is called the Department of Justice. Is there not a lurking satire in this terminology? Is there not a subtle insinuation here that in the general government of the United States there are departments in which justice is ignored, violated or outraged? In other words that there are departments of INJUSTICE in the Washington government?

* * *

A very little examination into the workings of the governmental machine at Washington and elsewhere will convince any careful observer, any logical thinker, that ALL departments of this machine are departments of injustice, and that to none of them all does this charge apply with greater truth than to the division itself that takes the name, the high-sounding name, "Department of Justice."

* * *

Of all the "Departments of Justice" the first and most important is Self Justice, since without justice to the individual ego it will soon be impossible for that individual to do justice to others.

* * *

Justice to others does not mean Charity, Benevolence or Self Sacrifice; it means RECIPROCITY, and reciprocity cannot exist where and when self justice is sacrificed.

* * *

Egoism and Altruism are the north and south poles of the same sphere, the sphere or orb of social relations, social duties and responsibilities, which sphere cannot be divided or have its poles separated without destroying the integrity, the integrality, the symmetry of that sphere.

* * *

The individual—woman or man—who habitually allows others to SPONGE upon her or him is guilty of a violation of reciprocity, and must sooner or later pay the penalty of such violation.

* * *

He or she who allows him or herself to be habitually sponged upon—invaded—does an injury to the sponge, the invader, no less than to him or herself, and thus becomes, in legal parlance, particeps criminis—partaker of the crime.

* * *

The babe, the infant human being, does not invade or sponge upon its parent or guardian since it has as yet no personality of its own; its personality being part of that of the parent or of whomsoever stands in loco parentis—in place of the parent. But when infancy merges into youth or adolescence, then personal responsibility changes, and the erstwhile infant becomes a sponge, an invader, if not required to become self-supporting and compelled, if necessary, to keep within its own sphere of activities.

* * *

The same reasoning holds as to idiots, the insane, the imbecile—in mind or body. If there is no natural parent near to take charge of the idiotic, the insane, the sick (sickness means the same as insanity, which is simply unsoundness) then human sympathy, altruism or the instinct of race preservation usually prompts the sane—the sound or well—to take the place of the parent or the natural guardian.

* * *

The same reasoning applies to the responsibility for, and care of, the aged—those who have reached the period of second childhood, helplessness or imbecility.

* * *

CRIMES AND CRIMINALS.

Our definitions of crime, our conceptions of what constitutes one a criminal, have often been revised and will have to be revised again, in the near future. Once it was lawful and right to buy and sell human beings, no matter what their color or race. Captives taken in war, as well as those bought with money, were deprived of their natural right of self-ownership, and laws were enacted recognizing the justice, the legality of such transactions. Then later—as in this country, while it was not lawful to make war for the capture of men, women and children to make slaves of them in the market it was not held a crime to buy and sell them and hold and work them as slaves, provided they belonged to the African race, or had only a very little Negro blood in their veins. The man who possessed enough money could become the owner of hundreds and thousands of slaves, and our legal authorities, as well as our popular ethics, said no crime had been committed.

Now, with the increase of population and with the aid of labor-saving inventions peculiar to modern civilization, a new slavery has become possible, namely, wage-slavery. While it is no longer lawful to buy and sell the bodies and souls of laborers in the market place, it is considered quite lawful and right to buy and sell THE EARTH and what it contains; also the highways for the transportation of the products of labor; also the labor-saving machinery without the use of which labor in some lines of production is no longer profitable.

In most countries it has always been lawful to enslave the poor, the moneyless man by monopolizing the soil from which he and his family must draw their subsistence, but this monopoly was comparatively unprofitable until labor-saving machinery and monopolistic railway transportation enabled the holder of land to work the soil, the mines and the factories with a very few human hands, enabling this modern slave driver to throw out of employment all who refuse to work at the smallest wage that will support life.

* * *

Examples of the working of this modern slave system are seen in the cotton mills, south and north; also in the coal mines of Pennsylvania and elsewhere; also in the prices now paid by the consumers of coal in the cities—coal being now one of the prime necessities to millions of people.

* * *

This brief sketch is but a very faint and meager showing of the crying necessity for REVISION of our ethical code, and for new definitions of what it takes to constitute what we call crime, or what it takes to put a man, or an association of men into the criminal class.

M. HARMAN.

Mark Twain's Retort Courteous.

The clergy of Denver unsuccessfully tried to banish Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn" from the public library on account of its "immorality." Mark says they were inspired by General Funston, at whom Mark had thrown some mud by calling him a pinchbeck hero, and that they are persons whom God has not dealt kindly with in the matter of wisdom. Mark concludes his letter to the Denver "Post" on the subject with these words: "There's nobody for me to attack in this matter even with soft and gentle ridicule—and I shouldn't ever think of using a grown-up weapon in this kind of a nursery. Above all, I couldn't venture to attack the clergymen whom you mention, for I have their habits and live in the same glass house which they are occupying. I am always reading immoral books on the sly and then selfishly trying to prevent other people from having the same wicked good time. No, if Satan's morals and Funston's are preferable to Huck's let Huck's take a back seat; they can stand any ordinary competition, but not any competion like that. And I'm not going to defend them, anyway."—San Francisco "Star."

The Chicago Philosophical Society meets every Sunday, 2:30 p. m., at Handel Hall, Randolph St. and Wabash Ave. September 28, Daniel L. Cruice, "Referendum in Operation."

The Tolstoy Club meets every Saturday night at 8 p. m. at Dr. Mary R. Cary's residence, 837 W. Adams St. All who are interested in the work of the great teacher are invited to attend.

Please send us addresses for sample copies.

The Unprodigal Son.

It is believed that John Ruskin was one of the first thinkers to note that the story of the Prodigal Son is a "short yarn," because it draws no moral from the exemplary behavior of the unprodigal son who stayed at home and carried on the farm.

The story is told in the fifteenth of Luke, from verse 11 to the end of the chapter. Everybody knows it. A younger son cashes his expectations and travels. His morals are apparently bad, for he adopts a riotous mode of life, keeping company with buxom women, buying wine, and playing the ponies. He had the money, and he blew it. It didn't blow back, and so he woke up broke. He spent some time looking for an opening that promised a subsistence, but found nothing better than partnership with a man who raised hogs. Here he might have made money and spoiled the story if the corn crop had not failed, and reduced him to chewing husks with the swine. As he did not find the husks filling, he abandoned pig-herding and started down the line toward home, where, he remembered, even the servants ate pie. Of course there was a chance that the father would not take him back, but as he followed the two streaks of rust homeward he prepared a moving speech which he hoped would help him through. He was well received by the old gentleman, who bestowed on him the glad embrace, and instead of moralizing on his conduct made a holiday, and ordered the cook to dress the calf that had been kept on the cow for market.

The elder brother was at work that day in the field, but the old man forgot him—didn't even send anybody to blow the horn—so that, on coming in at night and hearing "musick and dancing," he wanted to know what all the fiddling was about. It is no wonder that when the unprodigal one got enlightened he made a little show of hostility to the celebration, and declined to sanction it by his presence. Said to his father: "This is too one-sided for me. Boy and man you have kept me here on the old place to cart compost and holler whoa year in and year out. I have always done the obedient, and have not made any wild breaks I hope. And yet when did you ever say to me, 'Bill, why don't you sacrifice one of those young goats and ask your friends to help you eat it?' On the other hand, this high-whooping younger son of yours chooses city life, spends your money with the Molls, and goes in for a career of pleasure, When he has spent his last red and comes home financially a dead one with nothing in him but repentance, you, instead of filling him with cold victuals and sending him into the field to work, as you know you ought to do, give him a barbecue and treat him as if he had just got back from the Philippines. It ain't right. I'll be cussed if I don't think it ain't right."

The father's defense was exceedingly feeble. "Son," he said, "you are always with me, but your brother, being away, was the same as dead and lost. By his return the dead becomes alive and the lost is found."

The rest of the argument is suppressed by the narrator, who was Jesus Christ. What really happened is something as follows. The elder son made flubdub of the idea that the prodigal was ever dead, except temporarily from going against the hard stuff, or that he was ever lost. The police, he said could have found the young man at any time. He had simply been on an expedition, and so long as his money lasted the people at home were as if they had not existed. He did not even correspond. It was only when stranded that he found time to recall them to his mind. His father's home was his last resort.

There are many like this prodigal in certain respects. Most of us have friends or relatives who never look us up unless they have nowhere else to go; but we are not frantic with joy at seeing them, and don't even kill a hen.

The story of the unprodigal son teaches that a life of sobriety has no fat calf in this world and excites no interest in the next, while that of the erring brother shows that sinning, as long as you have the price and repenting when you strike bed-rock, will entitle you to a complimentary dinner here and create "joy in the presence of the angels of God." Therefore when we see professing Christians of either sex leading riotous lives we are not to hastily conclude that they are selfishly wicked persons. May be they are only throwing a scare into the angels, with the benevolent purpose of repenting later on and giving them a chance to celebrate. It is something to add your mite to the sum total of human happiness. How much more is it to make joy among the angels cooped up in heaven without the facilities that mortals enjoy for having a good time.—G. E. M., in "Truth Seeker."

VARIOUS VOICES.

Mrs. Bertha Moore, Ellenburg, Wash.:—I am pleased with Lucifer. I admire courage and grit. Some say, "That is an Anarchist paper." I reply, "It is a paper which expresses honest convictions and honest convictions have a right to be expressed."

E. D., Arlington, Neb.:—I did not notice the number on the wrapper of my Lucifer; but I know that my subscription is nearly out and I am fortunate in having a little slip of paper to send you for renewal. Will also enclose 15 cents for "Vice: Its Friends and Its Foes," by E. C. W. I like the extract from it in last Lucifer. Glad your father is having a pleasant vacation; hope he will be greatly benefitted.

H. Armitage, Fairbank, Ariz.:—Enclosed find one dollar bill to pay my subscription to Lucifer. I like your paper and thank you for sending it. It is the brightest, liveliest paper I know of, and it teaches people to think.

["It teaches people to think!" That is one of the most valued recommendations we could receive. And such is the object for which we strive.]

Albina L. Washburn, Ft. Collins, Colo.:—Public sentiment has undergone a vast change since Lucifer came into Laramie County—I think largely on account of Lucifer. I never cease to distribute, but cannot handle more than my two copies now. Am much interested in "Harmony Home"—wish I could be there awhile.

[Mrs. Washburn arranged for lectures by the editor on his first visit to Colorado, about ten years ago, and that, I believe, was when she became acquainted with Lucifer as well as with its editor. She was then and has remained an active worker in the Labor Exchange Movement and is one of Lucifer's staunchest friends. L. H.]

J. B., Charleston, Ill.:—I received your notification that my subscription had expired, and asking if you should continue sending the paper. Yes, by all means; I cannot keep house without it. I am pleased to hear that the editor is improving in health. I hope he will get well again, because his pen is mightier than the sword. I cannot see why I didn't subscribe for Lucifer sooner than last December; it is such a good educator. You may give my name to any women of radical views who want to correspond with men. I am a bachelor and expect to remain one as I do not like our marriage laws.

[We are often asked to give addresses of our subscribers, but this we do not like to do without their permission. But we are always willing to properly address and forward letters that are mailed in our care.]

Mattie E. Hursen, (per K. M. N.), Schoolcraft, Mich.:—Your letter was received and the familiar handwriting a pleasure to my eyes. I am glad your outing has been a benefit to you. I hope Lillian and Virna are well. As to myself I cannot say I am any better; for a time I felt better but now am flat on my back in the bed. I do not know whether my legs will ever let me walk again but I hope. Little or no use of my hands makes me doubly helpless as I cannot handle a book; even if I could my lame neck would not let me read. I am sorry you could not come to Schoolcraft; I should gladly have received a call from you. Give my love to the household.

[I print the above personal letter because Mrs. Hursen is known to many of Lucifer's readers. She was a member of our household during the winter of '97-'98, and during that time, as well as before and since was a familiar figure at the radical meetings in Chicago. Undue exposure and overwork during a more than average busy life have overtaxed her physical energies and for a number of years her health has been gradually failing, until now she is helpless. I am sure she will be glad to receive letters from her friends, even though unable to answer. L. H.]

Caroline de Maupassant, Otter Lake, Mich.:—I can at last send you one dollar towards subscription. Many thanks for your kindness in waiting so patiently. I was delighted to hear that the air of the country proves a benefit to your father. How happy I would be to invite him here with little Virna. I was glad to see her name again in Mr. Harman's letter. How old is she? She must be a big girl. As to me, I am getting very old and weak.

[Nearly three years ago James F. Morton remarked to me, "When are you going to say something more in Lucifer about Virna?"—and said, explanatorily, that several of our eastern friends were surprised if a few issues went by without something about her. So I decided to give our readers a rest, and I believe her name has been in the paper just once, since then, and that the time referred to by Mme. de Maupassant. Though I may confess that the child has been in Lucifer, even though her name has not. But as some others are interested in her I answer the question publicly. Virna is now nine years old, large for her years, strong, healthy, and making satisfactory progress in school and music. She spent the vacation of 1901 with her father in New York, and the winter in school in Milford, Mass., with M. Florence Johnson—one of my dearest friends, and the most successful teacher and mother that I know. Virna was greatly benefitted in by her eastern experience, and returned safely home alone from Boston last June. It is natural for all parents to find their children's sayings and doings interesting, and I think I should be credited with remarkable self-restraint, by our eastern friends and others, for giving them as little of "Virna" as I have!

I am sorry our friend feels "old and weak" and hope that with returning strength she will feel young again. Her name is familiar to our readers who have been with us fifteen years or so as she contributed rather frequently to the columns of Lucifer and "Fair Play" from ten to fifteen years ago, and they will join with us in wishing her renewed health and strength. L. H.]

The Woman Who Dares

BY URSULA N. GESTEFELD.

A novel, whose heroine seeks to find and realize her own individuality and, having found it, dares to maintain it in the marital relation. It is a carefully written story and meant to show the injustice of the marriage relation as usually regarded, and of the dual standard of morality, tacitly accepted however theoretically opposed. The subject is treated forcefully and directly, yet always tactfully and fairly, and possesses all the strength of moderation combined with just and equable criticism. The story reads more like events in real life than those of romance.

It is seldom that the most vital though most delicate of subjects is treated with such delicacy. The large number of letters from women received after its first publication is evidence that there is room for its heroine in many home.

"Here we have a well written story with a noble purpose. It is a woman's novel, and by that I do not mean that it is intended only for women; on the contrary, it ought to be read by every man in America who has the brain, conscience, and refinement of nature to appreciate its masterly presentation of what is the simple right, nay, more, is the sacred duty of every married woman, to demand the absolute right to her own person in wedlock no less than out of wedlock. . . . In the presentation of the vital thought found in those pages, Mrs. Gestefeld has given us a superb piece of work. It is a story of great vitality. The author is a thoughtful and a deeply spiritual woman. With the keen intuitive insight so often met with in profoundly spiritual natures, she has discerned one of the greatest moral crimes of the present."—The Arena.

Size 5 1-4x7 1-2 inches; 256 pages. Beautifully printed on laid paper, bound in green Holliston linen, and stamped in ink with original cover design. Price, $1.25, postpaid. The Gestefeld Publishing Co., Pelham, New York. Department L.

TOLSTOI'S NEW WORK.

The Slavery of Our Times.

With Portrait of the Gifted Author, and Introduction by the Translator, Aylmer Maude.

CHAPTER TITLES.

I., Goods Porters Who Work Thirty-seven Hours; II., Society's Indifference While Men Perish; III., Justification of the Existing Position of Sciences; IV., The Assertion of Economic Science that Rural Laborers Must Enter the Factory System; V., Why Learned Economists Assert what is False; VI., Bankrupts or th Socialist Ideal; VII., Culture or Freedom? VIII., Slavery Exists Among Us. IX., What is Slavery? X., Laws Concerning Taxes, Land and Property; XI., Laws the Cause of Slavery; XII., The Essence of Legislation Is Organized Violence; XIII., What Are Governments? Is It Possible to Exist Without Governments? XIV., How Can Governments Be Abolished? XV., What Should Each Man Do? An Afterword.

Well printed on heavy paper. Substantially bound, 186 pages. Price, 65 cents.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer the Light Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only." Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem. Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization. The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 15c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

The Ladies' "PERFECT" Sanitery Protector.

The only Sanitary Protector on the market made of pure rubber and perfectly soft and pliable; will last for years; can be worn with perfect comfort, can be adjusted to any size, no canvas, no cloth, but pure rubber.

This is something that no woman can afford to be without. Perfectly sanitary, comfortable, indispensable and safe.

Price reduced to $1. Order of L. Harman, 500 Fulton St. Chicago.

936.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

To New Subscribers: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author.

The Sex Passion.
Man, the Ungrown.
Woman, the Serf.
Woman in Freedom
Marriage: a Retrospect.
Marriage: a Forecast.
The Free Society.
Some remarks on the early star and sex worships.
Notes—On the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population.

The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. Price, $1.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

WHITMAN'S IDEAL DEMOCRACY, AND OTHER WRITINGS.

BY HELENA BORN.

Comprising besides the title essay, Thoreau's Joy in Nature; Poets of Revolt; Shelley, Whitman, Carpenter; Whitman's Altruism; Individualism versus Organization; Impossibles of Economic Argument; The Last Stand Against Democracy in Sex; Inequality in Divorce; Marriage Safeguards. With portrait of author and biographical introduction by Helen Tufts. 125 pages. Edition limited to 500 copies; each copy numbered. Fine paper, uncut pages, bound in boards, paper label. Price $1.

Agents Wanted To sell the Toltec Dandruff Cure and the Toltec Hair Dressing (restores natural color). Are clean and perfect. Liberal commission. Write for circulars. Address; The Toltec Remedies Co., Box 1367 Denver Colo.

"Pages of Socialist History." By W. Tcherkesoff. This book is recommended to Socialists of all schools, as it deals with the history of the "International" and the attitude of Marx and Engels towards Bakounin. Paper covers, 25 cents. By mail, 30 cents.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 75c; paper 15c.

ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 24 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Bonnables, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $1.75.

A FLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Rights of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.

BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth, $1.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Condemned, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving chose reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BURNING BIBLES BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 21 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 458 pages. $2.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

DARWIN, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. G. Sparks. 178 pages. 50c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 37 chapters, 1,367 pages and a 2-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $3.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 10c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian religion has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 260 pages. 40c. Postage, 5c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Stevens and David Overmyer. 25c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 25c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John H. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. The book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Rita Dunbar Kelso. 429 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HILDA'S HOME. Rose Cleveland. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 250 pages. Paper, 25c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Scotland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Dying Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 97 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Volney, and Voltaire. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mavian. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KARESZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

KORADINE. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III. (1899). Cloth, $1.25. Postage, 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo. heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 30c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies; a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman. What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Painful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Trinitarians in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 10c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Tradition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, R. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c.; paper, 25c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward Fitzgerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Oxford Northcote. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line" illustration edition. $1. Five volumes, plainer binding, $2.50; all in one volume, $3.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle-edged hand-made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. $5c.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intuition (Marietta), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 10c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 207 pages. 25c.

THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Witches and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 291 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer continues: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstitions they have begun to perceive that the useless and impure things are the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 32 large pages; twelve copies, 25c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 10c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is modesty immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a sexual, a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1723, quoted by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuit craft, and is a plain index to the underhand working of that order against the welfare of individuals and society. 15c.

THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 10c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Telepathy (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Wynne). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $2.25.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Dartling. 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 5c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the shrieking arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1898. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WHEN LOVE IS IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is someone's dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 179 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VI., No. 38. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, OCT. 2, E. M. 302. [C. E. 1902.] WHOLE No. 937

LOUDER THAN WORDS.

Dear little thin hands, famine-wasted fingers,
Holding on to dreary life that struggles to be free;
Hands where not a tender curve of baby roundness lingers,
Lift yourselves, that all the world the wan reproach may see.
That all the world's gay, thoughtless heart may break such sight to see.

Dear little pale lips, where no mother's kisses
Leave the print of mother love to sink into the heart,
Lips that could not tell me aught of childhood's tiny blisses,
Cry aloud your loneliness that all the world may start,
That all the world of pleasant ease at grief like yours may start.

Dear little tiny eyes, weighed down with weeping,
Opening every day to ills that harder grow to bear,
Eyes where gladness never shines in waking or in sleeping,
Look reproach that all the world may come to know and care,
That all the world of listless souls may understand and care.

Dear little bent forms, in your narrow alleys
Hidden from the searching sun that longs to make you well,
Forms that never run and leap in grassy groves and valleys,
Stand before a startled world that knows not where you dwell,
That all the world may shudder at the places where you dwell.—Mary W. Plummer, in "The Public."

Shakespeare's Bad Women.

[Concluded.]

The chronology of Shakespeare's dramas, so far as we can ascertain it, is interesting, from its bearing on the development of his genius. Cressida, if an earlier production than Hamlet, has been described correctly as his first bad woman of a higher grade than Mrs. Quickly and her compeers. After this, that is in the best period of his art, there are plenty of them. Cressida has not the budget of qualities conventionally assumed to go together. She is not immodest. She is not inordinately amorous. She is no varietist. She is the sort of woman who in our age would be hunting her affinity, and always thinking she had found him—for the time. That's to say she is—a wanton. Love, to her, never means anything more than a fancy, not very easily excited, very easily extinguished, but absorbing while it lasts; so that she imagines it exclusive and immortal. "The seeds sprang up quickly, because they had no depth of earth." At the same time, she has everything that can render her attractive to the undiscerning. She is beautiful, witty, accomplished, and, being herself cool, she always knows how to kindle heat in others. Bianca, unless Cassio grossly slanders her, which I see no reason to think, is the prostitute in love.

Will some one who conceives prostitutes to be made of different stuff from well-behaved women, explain in what way she appears unlike some other victim of the blind archer?

Regan and Goneril are such very bad women that most readers do them some injustice. They are by no means truly "unnatural" daughters of Lear, whose despotic temper is the fountain-head of all his woes. Inheriting his pride and passion, it was inevitable that, under his training, they should develop either equal pride and obstinacy, like Cordelia, or hypocrisy, biding its time, like themselves. The "most small fault" belongs naturally to the youngest and the pet. Regan and Goneril have married as their father directed; and Goneril hates her husband. Regan who has lit on a congenial spirit does not. She is not "unfaithful" to him, like her sister, but—she does not care a button for him; and the moment he is dead she is after a new lover. It has been described as a crowning touch of repulsiveness that "these monsters are amorous." It is one of the traits which show they are not monsters but normal products of an education adapted to cultivate everything bad in human nature.

Lady Macbeth and the Queen in Cymbeline are not bad (sexually); and Phrvne and Timandra, two courtesans of the harpy type, just like each other, are so doubtfully Shakespeare's that I gladly let them go. There is a like reason for passing by the Bawd in Pericles, and a person of very different character, Queen Margaret, whom the poet (contrary to history) represents as Suffolk's paramour; but whose whole interest is that of a tragic heroine. Long ago, Mrs. Jameson (Heroines of Shakespeare) remarked that Margaret could scarcely be Shakespeare's creation, or he would not have made her so entirely without a soul. Since then, the Baconian theory, absurd in itself, has done criticism the service of bringing out the way these dramas really were written. We may be said to know now that, but for a few scenes retouched by Shakespeare, Richard III. is the work of Marlowe, and Henry VI. of Greene (this is why he calls Shakespeare "an upstart crow, beautified with our feathers."

Cleopatra, whether in Shakespeare or history, is almost too great a subject for the critic. I am prepared to maintain that Shakespeare makes her a bad woman ethically as well as conventionally; but the queen of bad women. The queens reguant can do no wrong!

Venus (Shakespeare's) may serve the useful purpose of correcting those who think Shakespeare a profoundly learned man. If he had known the difference between the Venus of a classical dictionary and the Grecian Aphrodite, or been aware that the goddess who loved Adonis was the Oriental Mylitta, would he have had her make love like an English milkmaid? As for the poet's own mistress, in the Sonnets, though he complains much of her sins, I must leave them, like Elbow, Pompey's, until I know what they were. And the badness of the lady in the Lover's Complaint might be disputed. Requiescat.

But of the undeniably bad Shakespearian women here cited, who will say they are any more like each other than Juliet is like Isabel, or Ophelia like Imogene? On the other hand it is easy to draw parallels between some of them and some of his most amiable heroines. The loosely behaved Cressida, some one has observed, is by no means unlike the devoted Desdemona. Neither of them is very amorous. Both are of an easy sensuous temper. Both are refined and lady-like. Both love passionately, when they love at all. Both have a natural genius for intrigue and fibbing. If there had been no Iago to help things along, it is still very improbable that the marriage of Desdemona and Othello would have turned out a happy one. It illustrates the mutual attraction of extreme opposites. It was the result of violent passion, such as does not last. If Troilus had put a knife in Cressida just after that scene with Diomed, it is very likely she might have died with Desdemona's angelic lie in her mouth.

Preachers and moralists divide mankind into classes. Art teaches us that the classes are separated only for convenience' sake, by artificial lines. Therefore the drama is more moralizing than the sermon. Its influence tends to solidarity and Anarchism.

"Could great men thunder
As Jove himself does, Jove would ne'er be quiet,
For every pelting, petty officer
Would use his heaven for thunder:
Nothing but thunder! Merciful heaven,
Thou rather with thy sharp and sulphurous bolt
Splitt'st the unwedgeable and gnarled oak
Than the soft myrtle: oh, but man, proud man,
Drest in a little brief authority,
Most ignorant of what he's most assured,
His glassy essence, like an angry ape,
Plays such fantastic tricks before high heaven
As make the angels weep; who, with our spleens,
Would all themselves laugh mortal."

C. L. JAMES.

Radical Talk by a Conservative Speaker.

I was invited to address a woman suffrage convention in my own town and after I had talked, a prominent suffragist spoke of the "ruin of girls." I never hear that word in silence so I arose and said: Ladies, so long as you use that word 'ruin' as applied to your sex, you will never secure your rights or stand upon an equal footing with men. No natural act ever ruined anybody, if it did, then the Creator who made that act necessary, is a monster. The seducer knows that as soon as he has once accomplished his purpose the best people will drive his victim out and damn her into his clutches forever, or into the river with that word 'ruined.' Thus he secures our help as partners in his unspeakable crime. Why don't you tell the boys that they are ruined? You cannot fool them. They would laugh at you, but your confiding daughters accept your words though they have the sting of death in them.

ETERNAL SHAME.

I will cite an illustration and thousands might be given. A beautiful young woman, well educated, the pride of her parents whose standing was high, out of the overflow of her loving heart trusted a traitor. She was educated to trust. When her condition could no longer be hidden, on the eve of a new life, she was driven by her inhuman parents into the street on a cold stormy night; hours later her ill-suppressed moans, as she lay upon some rubbish in an alley, were heard by a police officer who sent her to the hospital and strange to say her life was saved and a healthy child added to our population, but she was compelled to tear her trembling heart-strings and give it to anybody who would take it. She fled to my city from the sight of those who knew her and would make life a literal hell to her. She found employment as a domestic and the lady whom she served boasted that at last she had found an ideal servant. After a time a man from out of town took dinner with the family and was served by her. As soon as she was beyond hearing he said. "Where did you get that thing? You don't want her, she's 'ruined.'" She was at once dismissed but secured another place where her services were equally satisfactory, until an agent of the slums called, just to tell the lady of the house that she had better "ship that gal." She was "shipped." This was repeated until the beautiful young mother lost hope and wilted, her tears flowed like a river; she could not walk the streets without hearing the demoniac groans of slum men, creatures whose chief happiness is found in dragging angels down to their level. As pure as the stars, death was a thousand times preferable to a life into which everybody was driving her and her last words as she passed were, "O, God! they are hounding me into my grave."

If I could, I would erect a monument to her memory bearing this legend:

MISS MARY———
Died June 20, 1900.
Aged 26 years.
Educated, refined, beautiful, loved, deserted, then persecuted to death, by so-called Christians
Because like Eve, she was a natural mother, and so pure she could not be driven into the slums.

Is this civilization? If so, let us have barbarism for no savage race ever damned a woman for being a mother, or denied the natural right of maternity. We punish no crime, not even murder, as severely as we punish the natural mother. No tongue or pen can describe the sufferings of our daughters when branded "ruined." Think of the curse that can make a mother hate her own child and her own life. The hanging of witches was less cruel. The Spanish Inquisition could inflict no such exquisite agony. The leper in ancient times was required during life to cry out as others approached: "Unclean! I am unclean!" but this horrible fate bore no comparison because there was no disgrace, no scorn, no hatred, only pity. Man's inhumanity to woman makes countless millions mourn.

A MAN WHO DARED TO THINK.

A gentleman returning home one day found his wife greatly agitated and condemning in harshest terms a worthy young woman who lived in the neighborhood and had often sewed for and otherwise assisted his family. He asked, "What is the matter?" "Why she's been ruined," was the answer, "and I'll never allow her to come into this house again. I'd be ashamed to speak to her on the street and if she ever dares to speak to me I'll tell her what I think of her and her kind," etc. "Don't get excited my dear," he interrupted, "how long have we been wedded?" "Ten years." "Yes. And if Miss———has been ruined once, you have been ruined five hundred times." "What do you mean, are we not married?" "Yes! but do you believe that a preacher by pronouncing half a dozen words in our faces could change the greatest crime into a virtue or grant us an indulgence? Has any man such power; if so where did he get it? Absurd fetish! I advise you to treat Miss———as well as you ever did, if she is willing to treat you respectfully."

Marriage to those who can marry may bring ideal coöperation of the sexes if the life is natural, that is pure—for nature is pure—otherwise it is a mockery. But I am not discussing forms or customs, but those natural rights which are superior to any form or custom, or law, or creed, or prejudice. No form can make an unnatural impure life honorable nor can the lack of any form make maternity dishonorable. Our successors will some day look back upon us as monsters of cruelty for driving our daughters into the slums for fear of the curse of ruin, and they will be as willing as was the Creator to grant to woman her natural rights; they will educate their children in physiology and their sacred duties to the next generation and instead of pensioning the soldier—no longer needed—who destroys life, they will pension the widowed or deserted mother, who goes down into the valley of the shadow of death to bring forth a new life, the greatest possible service that can be rendered to the state, without which there could be no state.

Queen Victoria was allowed to select the father of her children because she was a queen. Some day our daughters will be queens, in that coming day maternity will always be honorable and no more innocent children, made in the image of God, will be called "illegitimate," "bastards," and a maimed, diseased and crippled race will be succeeded by a race of noblemen.

The struggle to secure man's natural rights has been the struggle of the ages. Bigots and despots always have said and still say, "No, it is not safe." "It will never do, we cannot trust men with their rights; we cannot trust women!" The progress of the race from total barbarism has kept even step with the slow attainment by man of his natural rights. The last great right discussed will be the most difficult to secure because man has for ages regarded woman as his slave or his victim. Only about a century ago girls were barred from our schools and ridiculed if educated and men whipped their wives as freely as their children. Women have been kept in ignorance that they might the easier be controlled and are still kept in ignorance as to their natural rights and duties and are so narrow and prejudiced that they are generally the first to condemn any friend bold enough to demand justice for their sex and are still taught the horrible creed of Ruin, but as Whittier said:

"From the death of the old the new proceeds
And the life of truth from the rot of creeds."

Having put our hands to the reform plow, let us not look back until all men and women shall enjoy every natural right; until the vile places of our land, and the Augean Stables in every city are cleaned and true co-operation of the sexes shall usher in a better day, a God-like race.

The Children of Israel often sickened over a reformer's fare as they journeyed through the wilderness and among the snakes toward the promised land of freedom, and at times were ready to go back into slavery to taste again the flesh pots of Egypt, but while the path of the reformer is rocky and serpents hiss at and bite him, let us press on to the end and hear at last the welcome "Well done good and faithful servant!"—E. H. Gillette.

Henry M. Parkhurst.

From the Cleveland "Herald" we take the following interesting statements regarding one of Lucifer's oldest friends, whose name is well known to nearly all of Lucifer's readers:

Sitting in a big easy chair in the home of his friend, Thomas Lees, at No. 1021 First avenue, where he is visiting, Professor Henry M. Parkhurst, "the father of the typewriter girl," yesterday told a "Leader" reporter how he employed the first girl to operate a typewriter.

"My innovation of the last century," he said with a smile, "has given an occupation to many thousands of young women who never heard of me, I suppose, but I think it has proved a good thing all around, for it has given them an opportunity to make a living that is congenial and suitable.

"I was the official court reporter for the Superior Court in the city of New York when the typewriter was invented. I thought from the first that it would be a good thing for my work, writing out the of the trials in which I took the evidence. At that time all such work was done by men, it not being thought that women could bear the strain, which was possibly true when the writing was all done by hand, and often in great haste. I bought four of the first hundred machines made. The numbers of the machines I bought were 6, 8, 17, and, I believe 83. Right at the start I got the idea that young women could run them as well as men, and I employed one for each machine. The experiment was a success, and as the work increased, I increased the number of young women. Others who saw the advantage of my plan followed it. The companies that made the typewriters took it up, and pointed out how much more work a young woman could do with a typewriter than a man with a pen, and from that on, the place of the typewriter girl in the business world was assured.

SHORT-HAND NOTES

"I taught the girls short-hand, which it had been thought only a man could master, so that they could read the notes I took in court. I believe I was the first to teach women that kind of work. Now there are young women writing shorthand and operating typewriters all over the country."

Few more interesting old gentlemen have come to Cleveland than Professor Parkhurst. He lives in Brooklyn, N. Y. He was in America to learn and use the Pitman system of shorthand writing, and make a business of writing it. He began reporting court trials in Boston, and then went to Washington. He is probably the only man alive who reported the speeches of Daniel Webster, Henry Clay, Calhoun, Jeff Davis, Sumner, William Henry Sewell, and the other great men who were in the Senate from 1848 to 1854, during which years he was the official reporter of the proceedings of the United States Senate.

THE FIRST PERSON

He reported the famous debates on the Missouri Compromise, when the seeds of the civil war were sown in the efforts to prevent the spread of slavery, the most famous years, perhaps, in the history of the United States Senate.

"Webster, Clay, Calhoun, and Sumner were all easy to report, for they were all splendid speakers," Professor Parkhurst says. "Davis, afterward President of the Confederacy, was nervous in manner and delivery when he made a speech and much harder to follow. I shall never forget reporting what was called Senator Calhoun's farewell speech in the Senate. He seemed to be practically dying then. He was led into the Senate chamber, and sat in a chair while Senator Mason read the speech he had prepared, which I took down in shorthand as it was read."

From Washington Mr. Parkhurst went to New York, where he enjoyed the distinction of getting an office from Tammany without asking or paying anything for it. He was working under the assistant official stenographer when the latter went to France in consequence of the exposure of the Tweed ring. It being reported that the assistant was never coming back, Professor Parkhurst asked for the place. The presiding judge told him he had better get some backing for the position. He understood perfectly that this meant he should see some of the Tammany leaders, but instead of doing this he of practically every lawyer of prominence in New York, and then the judge did not dare to refuse him. Every year the bill for the Tammany assessment was placed on his desk, and every year he ignored it and remained in his office.

GOT THE INDORSEMENT

All his life Professor Parkhurst had been interested in astronomy. His father had a telescope, and the son had studied the stars with the interest of an enthusiast. He remembered the appearence of Halley's comet in 1835, when he was but about ten years old, and in 1845, when the "Millerites" based their belief that the world was about to come to an end on the theory of some of the astronomers that a comet would strike the earth, he was eighteen years old and worked in a jewelry store in New England. Residents of the neighborhood came to him and asked him if the comet would strike Mother Earth, and after half an hour of figuring and observing with a sextant, all the observatory apparatus he had, he told them it would not. He gave out his figures on the comet's orbit, and they were published in the American Almanac with his initials, along with the figures of the world's famous astronomers, and his were the nearest to absolute accuracy.

All the time he was making his living with shorthand work, he was studying astronomy as an amusement. When he built his home in Brooklyn, his observatory, which he still uses, was the first thing to which he gave his attention. He worked for the New York "Tribune," and was the man who developed the well-remembered "scare" about the comet of 1874. He said in his article that if the tail of the comet did not bend too much, it would sweep across the earth, which he said was to be hoped for.

It would give astronomers a splendid opportunity to study things of great interest to them, he said. Horace Greely took the word "hope" out of the "copy" before the article was printed, thinking that a newspaper ought not to express the hope that the earth would be struck by the tail of a comet, however interesting that would be to astronomers. The tail of the comet did bend, and the earth was not even brushed by it.

Although he is seventy-six years old, Professor Parkhurst is still an enthusiastic astronomer. He gave up all other work eleven years ago, and does no work except that of astronomy, which he loves. Professor Parkhurst is named in some school books as the American discoverer of the comet. He reported in shorthand the proceedings of the second annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in 1848, and joined the association in 1874.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 344 W. 143d street, New York.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Echoes and Reflections.

THE PASSING OF SUMMER.

Summer is now gone, gone "with the years beyond the flood"—the summer of nineteen hundred and two, common calendar, or of three hundred and two of the Brunonian Era—era of scientific investigation as against that of dogmatic theology and of ignorant credulity.

"Swinging round the circle" of her ceaseless changes old Mother Earth has once more reached and passed her September equinox, the milestone in her annual journey round the sun that marks the end of summer and the beginning of autumn, for the inhabitants of her northern hemisphere.

* * *

Welcome to Autumn! Nut-brown Autumn, all-glorious autumn, crown of the year! Welcome the season when woods and fields array themselves in their most brilliant garments—assorted colors—all the tints of the rainbow and many more. Hail to the season of the Goldenrod, the Aster, the Sunflower and all the sisterhood of autumnal beauties! Welcome the season of calm, mild days and of clear frosty nights—"frosty but kindly," as Shakespeare puts it. Welcome the soft, dreamy haze of the Autumnal sky, as contrasted with the fierce radiance of Summer's suns.

And welcome, thrice welcome to October, the crown of the crown of the year. Perhaps we might more correctly say, the central and brightest JEWEL in the crown of the year. Welcome; once more my natal month—month of all the twelve that I most desire to spend near to Nature's Self—near enough to feel and hear the pulsations, the throbbing, of her great heart!

October means the eighth, and in a more rational numbering of the months it would be so reckoned instead of the tenth, as now. March should be the first month of the year—for all who live in the northern hemisphere, and March should begin with the Vernal Equinox, or twenty-one days later than it now begins.

"How about those who live south of the equator?" I shall doubtless be asked—"those whose Spring begins with what is to us the Autumnal Equinox?"

Well, we have to change TIME, as it is now; our watches and clocks have to be regulated according to the LONGITUDE, as we travel east or west of a given meridian, and why not remember also which side of the EQUATOR we happen to be on, when dating letters to our friends at home? Thus we could say, "Eighth month, First day, "S. L."—or "N. L.," as the case might be—S. L. meaning South Latitude and N. L. North Latitude!

* * *

PENITENTIARIES AGAIN.

On pages 283 and 4 of this current volume of Lucifer I had something to say on the subject of "organized charities and penal institutions." Recent investigations into the management of the Texas penitentiary were cited to show that the enslavement of human beings—involuntary servitude—is now practicalized in that public institution in a manner that for brutality and inhumanity far exceeds the records of the "peculiar institution" of the Southern States, in the height of its glory—and shame!

The white slave driver can now no longer crack his whip over gangs of negroes, making the blood spurt from their naked bodies, or shoot them down when they become saucy or disobedient—that is, he cannot do these things outside the walls of a State prison, but if once inside said walls, or rather if once condemned to "hard labor" for the state, the negro, also the white man without influential friends, is soon made aware of the fact that a "convict" has no rights that a man "clothed with a little brief authority" is in anywise bound to respect.

The working of the chattel slave institution, in the south, added to race prejudice everywhere rampant in the United States, naturally brutalizes the dominant race and makes men long for the opportunity to exercise their brutal instincts upon objects of his inherited prejudice. Class distinctions also, and our system of wage-slavery, north as well as south, have much the same brutalizing effect upon all who come within their influence.

What cause of wonder then that all parties should avail themselves of this inherited tendency to cruelty?

What wonder that one of the ways by which political bosses pay their debts is by appointing their retainers—their "henchmen" as these are often called—to the position of "guards" at the penitentiary?

And what wonder that these political bosses should pay other political debts by the modern method of "contract prison labor" and "share farming," by which system unscrupulous employers of labor get their work done for a fraction of the cost they would have to pay the nominally free laborer?

Do not these well attested facts go far to explain the enormous increase in recent years, of the number of men and boys sentenced to hard labor for the state?

Our judiciary system seems in league also with political bosses whose interests are served by getting men sentenced to terms of penal servitude. In Kansas I was told that prosecuting attorneys were paid a special fee—blood money—of thirty dollars for every conviction secured by them whereby the accused was sent to the penitentiary. One of the most shocking and disgusting of all the recitals I ever listened to was a story related by one of these attorneys, of the means used by him and the eagerness and persistence with which he had pursued a man to get him sent to the penitentiary—a man guilty of no real crime, as well as I now remember, but only of a technical or law-made offence.

* * *

One of the ways of welding the links of the chain by which labor is to bound to the chariot wheels of plutocracy and militarism, is thus outlined by "The Appeal to Reason:"

"The war department has ordered that the students in the colleges shall have military training, and 100 army officers have been detailed for the work, and the students in the higher institutions are to receive arms, equipment and ammunition free! As only the sons of the wealthy can afford these courses of instruction, you can readily see what it means. The sons of the rich are to be trained to know how to handle the mobs from whom they get their incomes. Slaves have always had to have coercion. And the sons of the poor will vote for the perpetuation of such a system!"

One more proof that governments exist for the rich and not for the poor.

M. H.

"The Origin of the Family, Private Property and the State," by Frederick Engels, is now issued in a new English edition. It is a valuable contribution to the literature on this important subject. We have already printed several selections from it. Handsomely bound in cloth; 216 pages. Price 50 cents. For sale at this office.

Robert Chamblet Adams.

Dead! Ah, no! thou surely livest
In the hearts of all who knew thee;
In the memory of the faithful,
All who honor truth and justice,
All who reverence love and kindness;
In the thoughts of those who reason,
Who reject dark superstition;
Seeing good in Pagan Hindoo,
Heathen savage, untaught Indian;
Recognizing evolution,
The unchanging law of Nature.
Livest thou in words of wisdom
That shall ring through all the ages,
Bringing comfort to the sad ones,
Giving courage to the fearful;
Teaching charity for weakness,
Human brotherhood extolling.
Living, throbbing heart of kindness!
Surely, Death can never touch thee.
Thou shalt live revered forever
In the glory of the future.
In the onward march of progress
To the goal for which we struggle.
Rest in peace, thy labor ended,
In thy works, thou livest ever.

ELSIE COLE WILCOX.

Practical Socialism.

In No. 934 of Lucifer, Comrade Kerr disclaims for himself (and certain other Socialists whose opinions are known to him) even "the least objection to the 'free secession'" (or abstention) of individuals unwilling to participate in the co-operation which Socialism contemplates. "The laborers," he says, "on the collectively-owned land, having the advantage of the best modern machinery to assist them, would be able to earn a more comfortable living with less effort than those remaining on their 'individual farms.' The tendency would therefore undoubtedly be for farm owners to give up voluntarily their individual holdings and take part in the collective agricultural production. There would, however, be nothing to force this action upon any who may be so peculiarly constituted as to prefer solitude and comparative hardship to the comforts of life under collectivism."

If this is orthodox Socialism—if, that is, even after the Socialists shall have succeeded in "conquering the powers of government and using them (to transform) the present system of private ownership of the means of production and distribution into collective ownership by the entire people," there may still be some "means of production," other than these used by the "collective" entrepreneurs, left to be owned and used by such unsocial eccentrics as may "prefer" to keep out of or secede from, the Co-operative Commonwealth,—if, I say, all this is so, it ought to be more widely known, for the statement is very "important—if true." If all that is to be insisted on, is the establishment and carrying on of a co-operative organization in which all who choose shall participate, leaving it open to "dissenters" (or, to co-operators who at the given time shall desire to supplement the provision yielded them by co-operation), to work for their own "account" with capital of their own, and on land not used by the co-operative enterprise, then (it seems to me) it is true, not only that if this were made known many would become upholders of Socialism who now oppose it, but, furthermore, that the way is open for very great progress in the immediate future in the constructive work of building up and developing, with disciplined personel and actual technical organization, the proposed "Co-operative Commonwealth." On the hypothesis stated, the Socialist Party might well constitute itself the "germ" or nucleus of the co-operative organism in question, and, with such land and capital as it can manage to secure for the purpose, start at once the beginnings of the proposed co-operation, and proceed to develop experimentally the forms and machinery of organization needed for a really "democratic" control of the Commonwealth by the rank and file of its membership. A "Commonwealth" worthy of the name can hardly be expected to be born "grown-up," by sudden crystallization out of some great crisis, but should be growing up and developing its powers and constitution, so as to be ready for business, as the Commonwealth when the political triumph of its members shall have "conquered" for it the "powers of government," thus emancipating it from the tutelage of the present "state."

Again: If even established Socialism would not necessarily mean the preventing or prohibiting of any productive enterprise not a part of that "collectively" carried on, why might not Socialism have something like the following, for its actual, "working" program? To wit:

1. All the land to be treated as absolutely the common property of the entire people. The use (or possession), therefore, of any part of it, by one or more persons not constituting the entire people, to be permitted only on condition of the payment into the treasury of the entire people, of the rental value (if any) of the particular land in question—that is, the greatest quantity of wealth which any of those desiring such land will give for such use or possession of it; the total net rent of land thus received by the community, to be divided in equal shares among its individual members. (Land not presently desired by any one else, to be provisionally open to gratuitous use).

2. Production, both of capital for equipment and of consumption goods, to be undertaken and carried on, on as large and complete a scale as practicable, for joint or common "account," by a co-operative corporation or People's Trust, equal membership in which would be open to every one who chose to participate, on terms with which any one could comply. For the land used by this trust in its enterprises, it would pay into the treasury of the entire people, the current rental value thereof, and to the workers contributing the necessary labor of any kind to its operations, it would pay the rewards agreed upon with them. The resulting stock of capital and consumption goods would belong jointly to the entire membership of the People's Trust. The capital would be retained by the Trust for use in farther production, and the consumption goods it would sell, for the joint or common account, to would-be consumers, who, if members of the Trust, would pay only actual cost—i. e., a sum equal to the rent and the wages laid out for the production—while, if not co-operators, such purchasers would have to pay as much greater a price as the "market-value" might be. The total value thus received by the Trust for consumption goods sold, would be divided in equal shares among the entire body of co-operators (members of the Trust.)

3. Inasmuch as the land not exploited by the People's Trust (nor otherwise actually held for public use) would be leasable to private tenants—if valuable, for its rental value, if having no value, then gratuitously—and inasmuch as the making and using of private capital would not be prohibited, individuals (singly or by groups) might, either instead of participating in the Trust's co-operation, or, by way of supplementing what they did in that, carry on a private enterprise on their own account with private capital on land leased from the community or contribute labor to such private enterprise carried on by others. The possibility of this alternative recourse (self-employment or participation in private enterprises) would save men from too slavish a dependence upon the wages offered by the managers of the People's Trust, and would furnish the best attainable provision for every one whose equal share of the rent of land, plus his equal share of the prices of goods sold by the People's Trust, plus the wages (if any) received by him for work done for the People's Trust, should not at the given time afford him an income large enough to enable him to pay the rent of land needed by him for residential or other private uses, the price of consumption goods required to satisfy his needs, and, the wages of such personal services (like teaching, nursing, medical treatment, &c., &c.) as he should need to have professionally rendered to him at his own expense.

What just objection would there be to such a socio-economic modus operandi? CHARLES FREDERICK ADAMS.

71 Broadway, New York City.

Please send us addresses for sample copies.

Single Tax and Land Values.

I am pained to see so able a man as Comrade C. L. James stoop to quibble in his effort to evade the logic of Single Tax argument. He strains to make a point when he cites us to exceptions to the rule that land values depend on proximity to populous centers, as that the guano islands are remote but their value is made by the population of the United States. Of course in exceptional limited areas of land where a valuable substance like gold, silver, or guano is found, things rare and valued by all people, though remote from populous centers, the value is made by all the people. But the point I make is that the value of land should go to the people who make it. Will Mr. James dispute the justness of the proposition? We may say with fairness that a gold mine in Arizona is made valuable by the people of the United States, and its annual value should be taken as a tax by the United States. But as the people of immediate vicinity would have a greater claim on its value, the state or county might and should collect the annual value and pay over to the United States its just dues. The nation or government under which the guano islands exist should collect the annual value of the lands and if the United States made all the value, the economic rent should go to the United States. Will Mr. James dispute the justness of the proposition?

"Of two adjacent farms, one may yield rent and the other none. Yet they are equally remote from population; nay, the one which yields no rent may be more favorably situated for marketing than the others," says Mr. James. There may be exceptional cases of the kind he mentions, where one farm remote from a city, because of its fertility rents for a small sum and an adjoining farm of unfertile soil falls below the margin of rent and taxation. But the point we make is that whatever rent a farm or city lot or mine has, is made by the people, and the annual value of the land exclusive of improvements should go to the people and not into the pockets of individual possessors or landlords. One fact knocks all his argument. However poor in soil, land adjacent to or in a city, has a rental value proportionate to its proximity to the populous center. He says "monopoly rent, which hinders improvement, would be abolished by anarchy." So I say. Who are the monopolists of rent but the owners? How can the monopoly of rent be abolished but by the Single Tax until we get anarchy? We have not anarchy yet, but the single tax on land values would be more than half way to anarchy. J. C. BARNES.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Mrs. C. J. L. Pierce, Brockton, Mass.:—I have followed, with great interest, the editor's descriptions of the pleasant place in which he has passed the summer, and wished I could visit there, but that could not be. As my subscription is nearly out, I enclose a dollar to set it forward a year.

M. H. Coffin, Longmont, Colo.:—I was very glad the editor took the vacation to the country and am more than pleased to hear of its benefit to him. I have many ways for every dollar I get, but realizing the fact that you and your father are doing my work as well as your own, I euclose $5 to help in the publication of Lucifer.

S. F. Packard, Brockton, Mass.:—Having received a copy of your valuable paper I am so well pleased with it that I wish to become a subscriber. I am open to argument as any true Socialist is and am free to say that I agree with most that you set forth in your paper. Please send me the enclosed list of pamphlets. There are others I shall send for later.

F. J. Affhauser, San Simeon, Cal.:—I see that my subscription has expired so enclose $1 for another year's subscription and to help to enable you to keep pouring hot-shot projectiles of truth and logic into the strongholds of superstition. The time has come when it behooves every lover of freedom to fight the enemies of progress (the priests, politicians, and privileged classes) until the principles of absolute justice and universal freedom are established.

Mrs. R. C. Irwin, Mary Esther, Fla.:—Will you kindly give me the address of Lillie D. White, the author of "Shall We Be Happy by Being Deceived?" And while I am asking favors, I would ask your co-operation in obtaining an assistant for myself as I wish to publish a little paper. If you can give me the address of some woman or women who wish to locate in or investigate this country I will give my plans more fully in future.

[Lillie D. White's address is Lake Charles, La. We do not know of any women who want to go to Florida, but possibly some of our readers may. L. H.]

C. B. H., Kans.:—Enclosed find $2. Wish I could send you check for all you need. Business has not been good. The "middle class" of which I am a respectable member is catching hell from both ends—and is slowly melting away. The process is not a pleasant one for the "material" man, and as he is much in evidence at times it is somewhat interesting and amusing to note his capers. Your work is good and needed. If women were free, i. e., were comrades to men instead of being wives or mistresses man would be stronger and better and would more speedily conquer systems, customs and laws which enslave him and his sisters.

A combination of Christ and Corelli is too much for human sanity. The son of an English clergyman named Gosse hanged himself in his father's cassock at Wincanton, Somersetshire, last week. In a letter which he left he said: "This is not self-murder. If thine eye offend thee, pluck it out. If thy life offend thee, give it back to him who gave it to thee. I ask that this cross be put on my breast in my grave. Bury me in th's holy robe." The young man had been reading Marie Corelli's "Mighty Atom," and his death was an imitation of the principal scene in the book. This case is the second one of imitative suicide caused by reading the "Mighty Atom."—"Truth Seeker."

The Woman Who Dares

BY URSULA N. GESTEFELD.

A novel, whose heroine seeks to find and realize her own individuality and, having found it, dares to maintain it in the marital relation. It is a carefully written story and meant to show the injustice of the marriage relation as usually regarded, and of the dual standard of morality, tacitly accepted however theoretically opposed. The subject is treated forcefully and directly, yet always tactfully and fairly, and possesses all the strength of moderation combined with just and equable criticism. The story reads more like events in real life than those of romance.

It is seldom that the most vital though most delicate of subjects is treated with such delicacy. The large number of letters from women received after its first publication is evidence that there is room for its berome in many home.

"Here we have a well written story with a noble purpose. It is a woman's novel, and by that I do not mean that it is intended only for women; on the contrary, it ought to be read by every man in America who has the brain, conscience, and refinement of nature to appreciate its masterly presentation of what is the simple right, nay, more, is the sacred duty of every married woman, to demand the absolute right to her own person in wedlock no less than out of wedlock. . . . In the presentation of the vital thought found in these pages, Mrs. Gestefeld has given us a superb piece of work. It is a story of great vitality. The author is a thoughtful and a deeply spiritual woman. With the keen intuitive insight so often met with in profoundly spiritual natures, she has discerned one of the greatest moral crimes of the present."—The Arena.

Size 5 1-4x7 1-2 inches; 258 pages. Beautifully printed on laid paper, bound in green Holliston linen, and stamped in ink with original cover design. Price, $1.25, postpaid. THE GESTEFELD PUBLISHING CO., Pelham, New York. Department LF.

A Private Maternity Home

Or Lying-in Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired.

For particulars and terms give description of case, and address.

Suite 61-119 LaSalle St., Chicago Ill. C. S. WOOD, M. D.

TOLSTOI'S NEW WORK.

The Slavery of Our Times.

With Portrait of the Gifted Author, and Introduction by the Translator, Aylmer Maude.

CHAPTER TITLES,

I., Goods Porters Who Work Thirty-Seven Hours; II., Society's Indifference While Men Perish; III., Justification of the Existing Position of Sciences; IV., The Assertion of Economic Science that Rural Laborers Must Enter the Factory System; V, Why Learned Economists Assert what is False; VI., Bankrupts of th Socialist Ideal; VII., Culture or Freedom? VIII., Slavery Exists Among Us; IX., What is Slavery? X., Laws Concerning Taxes, Land and Property; XI., Laws the Cause of Slavery; XII., The Essence of Legislation Is Organized Violence; XIII., What Are Governments? Is it Possible to Exist Without Governments? XIV., How Can Governments Be Bolished? XV., What Should Each Man Do? An Afterword.

Well printed on heavy paper. Substantially bound. 186 pages. Price, 65 cents.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer the Light Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only," Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem. Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization. The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 10c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

The Ladies' "PERFECT" Sanitary Protector.

The only Sanitary Protector on the market made of pure rubber and perfectly soft and pliable; will last for years; can be worn with perfect comfort, can be adjusted to any size, no canvas, no cloth, but pure rubber.

This is something that no woman can afford to be without. Perfectly sanitary, comfortable, indispensable and safe.

Price reduced to $1. Order of L. Harman, 500 Fulton St. Chicago.

937.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author.

The Sex Passion.
Man, the Ungrown.
Woman, the Serf.
Woman in Freedom
Marriage: a Retrospect.
Marriage: a Forecast.
The Free Society.
Some remarks on the early star and sex worships.
Notes—On the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population.

The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. Price, $1.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

WHITMAN'S IDEAL DEMOCRACY, AND OTHER WRITINGS.

BY HELENA BORN.

Comprising besides the title essay, Thoreau's Joy in Nature; Poets of Revolt: Shelley, Whitman, Carpenter; Whitman's Altruism; Individualism versus Organization: Ingenuities of Economic Argument; The Last Stand Against Democracy in Sex; Inequality in Divorce; Marriage Safeguards. With portrait of author and biographical introduction by Helen Tufts. 125 pages. Edition limited to 500 copies; each copy numbered. Fine paper, uncut pages, bound in boards, paper label. Price $1.

Agents Wanted To sell the Toltec Dandruff Cure and the Toltec Hair Dressing (restores natural color) Are clean and perfect. Liberal commission. Write for circulars. Address: The Toltec Remedies Co., Box 1307 Denver Colo.

"Pages of Socialist History," By W. Tcherkesoff. This book is recommended to Socialists of all schools, as it deals with the history of the "internationa:" and the attitude of Marx and Engels towards Bakounin. Paper covers, 25 cents. By mail, 30 cents

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 25c.

ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $2.75.

A FLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

A TALE OF THE STRASBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strasburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.

BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth, $1.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Condemned, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 31 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 626 pages, 50c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

DARWIN, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. G. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and sensition, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James R. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 27 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 2-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 50c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 10c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian religion has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 398 pages. 40c. Postage, 5c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the Indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Jemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 25c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 519 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HILDA'S HOME. Ross Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 428 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Alleman. 250 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Scotoland. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 87 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Hume, Burns, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Volney, and Voltaire. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plea of Social Democracy outlined. Henry M. Alden. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Ma'sian. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREEZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

KORADINE. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III. (1889). Cloth, $1.25. Postage, 15c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 418 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Models of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The Brain Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Elbert Porter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Tradition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, H. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 5c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 25c.

SEALED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 25c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Hyonsta, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $1. Five volumes, plainer binding, $1.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of ourselves tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 25c.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Marlette), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LUCIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 207 pages. 25c.

THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Witches and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 321 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old asceticism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstitions they have begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and asceticism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 32 large pages; twelve copies, 25c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 10c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? Is.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 25c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. H. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1723, quoted by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuit craft and is a plain index to the underhand working of that order against the welfare of individuals and society. 25c.

THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 10c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Social Sexual Action (Ernest Winne). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 25c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $2.25.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Dariing. 15c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the blessed privilege of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 32 large pages. 25c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the Poem, "Declaration of the Free." The last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Amos. 15c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done women by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WOMAN, IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. The basis of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo. 179 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VI., No. 39. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, OCT. 9, E. M. 302. {C. E. 1902.} WHOLE No. 938

FIRST-BORN.

My little child, for fear the light you see
May be the closing of life's light for me,
For fear I may not speak to make you hear,
I tell it now my child—I love you, dear:
Love you so dear, I do not dread the pain,
But count it naught, when counted 'gainst the gain.

My little child, when you are older grown,
I would you read the line and learnt the song;
Perchance your sight may see the seeds now sown.
May see the further, grasp for what I long!

And grieve not that I went, with all undone;
However late the call, or long the day,
Something, if not our best, remains undone
When we are bidden out of life's bright way.

When we are bidden from what life loves best,
To what no eye may see, nor heart may know,
What wonder, leaving, that our lips are pressed
Long in the parting, and we grieve to go.

Sweet! you will love me; if 'tis but a name,
A name you dream of, and a form made clear
By love's long light, but if death stirs to sound,
All that you whisper I must someway hear—

Must someway hear, for love was made immortal
With immortality—whate'er you do,
Know that a mother, bending by Death's portal,
Faces the darkness, praying, Heart for you.

—Marv Austin Low, in Woman's Journal.

Baer.

Baer of Pennsylvania. Baer of high heaven. Baer, head of the celestial ministry. Baer, otherwise known as God. Perhaps you live a long way off and have not heard of Baer. But if you have heard of God then you have heard of Baer. Baer is no local deity. He has assumed a universal providence. Baer is part creature and as creature is president of the Reading Railroad. Baer is part capitalist and as capitalist fulminates the defense put up against the present revolution in the mountains of Pennsylvania. But Baer is also creator and as creator is the conclusive X of a metaphysical theorem. How do we know Baer? Baer has told us of himself. He has described his own genius. Someone was possessed of the notion that Baer was not treating the miners as Christ would have treated them. Baer was therefore asked to be a Christian. But Baer retorted in effect: "Why should I be a Christian, I who am God?" God? Well, "chosen of God," which as an assumption amounts to the same sum total. Then Baer proceeds to take us into his miracled secret. He and his capitalist cogencrs, so says Baer, are directly selected by God to custody the property influence of the nation and so to observe the natural interests of American labor. Money is theirs, power is theirs, by divine right. Kings may be dead but better kings live.

Baer thinks that by getting back of God he can shake his obligations. Or he thinks that he can abolish God by establishing himself. Of what use is God with Baer in good health? Baer would like to give God a vacation. He will give God two months off while he takes this strike into his palm and arbitrates it. God must be grateful to have such a gracious employer.

But I am afraid Baer has somewhat sprained his consciousness. No human brain could pass unharmed across an abyss so threatening. I shudder when I try to realize what Baer must have suffered while Baer was being made God. Baer has done violence to all old influences and new consummations. And here comes Baer direct from celestia with his credentials signed and sealed. Baer, heaven's preferred, with moral credits enough to shame the toy bankruptcies of earth.

Baer gets rid of God. But does he get rid of himself? Baer masks as premier to the infinite and stands baffled before a loaf of bread. Does Baer think that by God's will honestly got or stolen he can free his soul of its primary guarantees? Baer man has but several obligations where Baer God has a thousand. Baer has not cancelled, he has increased, his debt. He supposed that by abolishing God he had simplified his proposition. But with God left out his problem confesses judgment. He has led himself off by his own nose on a false scent. It may not be God at all who has taken him into confidence. It may be only Baer who has taken Baer into confidence. Where would that leave God and leave Baer?

It would not occur to you to deny Baer. That would be blasphemy. You would not suspect his papers. You do not ask for his passport. You say Baer is Baer and God is his soothsayer! You would not blaspheme so rudely on your own account but you take Baer's word for it. Baer's word swears to all your folly and condones all your sin. Yet we are a little puzzled over Baer's claim of special inspiration. Inspiration we can understand. But its special features twist the muscles of our neck. But when Baer reports as the only qualified prophet we entertain no progeny of scoffers. Baer submits his tablets and we submit our souls.

God was afraid that the substance of the earth might be alienated into the hands of the men who dig for it. So he was puzzled and looked down inquiringly upon his disquieted footstool. And then it was that he saw Baer and a few others roaming about as if they had nothing to do. So he said: "These fellows who work would not know what to do with wealth if they got it. You would not know what to do with labor if you got it. I have therefore decided to let them keep the labor and let you have the fun. This will enable them to receive their joys vicariously. You will act as their risible saviors. You will pass your days on crosses of sacrificial ecstasies. You will so example luxury to the herd as to make it unnecessary for them to participate in the pleasures of life." So that gave Baer something to do. And since then Baer has been busy. And God retired incognito to restore his shattered nerves.

But meantime babies thin for food and women pale and men wrinkle. There is coal dust in the world's eye. Burdens are heavier somewhere. Food is scarcer somewhere. Feet, hands souls, are tied up somewhere. And Baer sits on his pile and declares against the truce. Baer who ript untimely from God the bolts of his lightning and stands aghast at the fierce tempests he has loosened. Baer ten times ten times driven unawares from escape refused to escape, refused. Baer who thought that God had seen Baer so large that he could no longer see his hundred thousand victims. The dear victims who had been so intent on their daily tasks that they had not learned to defend themselves against the pirate in the black treachery of his intrusion.

I would not leave Baer to God. That would confuse Baer with his ego. That would be to make light of the prophet. I would leave Baer to Baer. When Baer sees Baer—Baer could not see Baer with Baer's present eyes—Baer will recognize God in the glisten of a coal shovel and will worship in the cabin of the miner.—Horace Traubel in "The Conservator."

What Is Sex-Freedom?

Laura H Earle's article in Lucifer 925 has certainly called out much comment and reply, but I have waited in vain for some one to bring up the one point which to me seemed most important. Speaking of the "free woman" she says: "Her logical position is not with the philistine slinger of stones; rather is it by the side of her companion in captivity and opprobrium (the prostitute) Together they may largely help to save the world from the smug hypocrisy of illegitimacy; separated, they divide the forces that make for honesty and plain dealing."

We are often classed with prostitutes, contemptuously "for our sins," by our conservative critics. It is, to me, a new experience to be so classed as a means of salvation! As a free woman I protest, but not one of us would protest more loudly than the prostitutes themselves. The position of the married woman they can understand. Often it was mere accident prevented them from being respectable married women. Many of them would gladly marry if they could. They look upon married women with envy or with hatred, but for the free woman they have only contempt for they can't comprehend her ideas and her life.

We may class women as bond and free, as superstitious and rational. Whatever of sympathy, of understanding, of helpfulness they may extend to prostitutes individually, free women cannot be classed with them. The free women of today stand for knowledge, reason and individuality. Prostitution is a branch of the marriage institution and its victims, though outcast, must be classed with their sisters in bondage. Nurtured in the same superstition, supporting the same hypocrisy, they are inevitably linked together. The question of legitimacy or illegitimacy is a slight matter, a mere symptom of the disease.

Does Laura Earle seriously mean to count prostitution as one of "the forces that make for honesty and plain dealing"? There is a body of prostitutes who ply their calling frankly and avowedly, but among the higher classes what shams and subterfuges are not resorted to? And what shall we say of their patrons? How do they "make for honesty and plain dealing," this army of women who are denounced publicly in the day time by the very men who privately seek them at night?

There are two classes, the bond and the free, but what is it to be free? An acquaintance once wrote me in this way: "There are so few radical women in this place. I know one free woman. She gets her support from an up-town merchant who is very devoted to her and she fully appreciates it. He visits her once a week only, but she is true as steel."

Is this a free woman? From what is she free? She is not tied for life to one man; she can at any time change her owner or try some other means of livelihood, and that is some measure of freedom, but she is not free from the necessity of living by her sex. She is bound by the monster superstition which enslaves the mothers of the race and brutalizes the fathers; which degrades love and jeopardizes friendship; and which stultifies the natural development of the individual.

This superstition is not merely the sacramental or legal marriage; it is not merely the senseless and arbitrary fetish of "virtue"; it underlies all these. It is the idea that men have sexual needs which women must supply, and in recognition of this service the women must receive support. This is the basis of marriage, the basis of prostitution, and alas! it is also the basis of many a so-called "free union."

Young women grow up in this idea. Few of them could formulate it, but it guides their conduct. "Yield to nothing but with the ring upon thy finger" says the proverb, and that is the girl's idea of virtue. When, as in the nature of things must often occur, a girl's own passion and the solicitations or arts of her lover prove too strong for resistance, she expects him to pay for it; if not to marry (and support) her, at least to make her presents, to spend money on her.

And young men? One of them once said to me—"No man ever spends money on a girl without looking for sexual favors, and a girl who accepts favors from a man and refuses him intimacy cheats him." This is too sweeping a statement, many honest men will repudiate it in their own souls, but it does voice the feeling of a large class.

Are not women of delicate sensibilities loth to accept financial assistance from men, because of the prevalence of this superstition, and their unwillingness to give any man a "claim" on them?

So long as this idea remains no solution of the sex-problem is possible. So long as men and women are placed in the position of owners and slaves, or of beggars and alms-givers, just so long will their desires and activities play at cross-purposes; just so long will there be strife, injustice and misery.

Oh! it is a small matter whether or not a woman's life is legitimate. When she takes in glad embrace the man she loves and who loves her she is free. When she is forced to comply with the demands of her owner, when she sells her body for gain—whether measured in money or other value—nay more, when she yields to a man from kindness or generosity with no real desire of her own nature—in all these cases she is a slave. And while women are slaves all are enslaved and happiness has not yet entered into the world. ADELINE CHAMPNEY.

Should Women Work?

The staid London "Chronicle" is solemnly discussing the question, "Should Women Work?" just as if women had not been doing the world's work since creation.

The first suggestion of labor in all history is in the securing of the apple eaten by Adam and Eve, and it was Eve who picked that.

The example then set has been pretty well followed ever since. The Eves are the apple pickers yet. It is true a few women play the role of idle butterflies—but what of it? These are the exceptions that mark the rule. The great majority of women toil unceasingly and with little direct reward.

Man at the end of his day's work can count up the money he has made and measure the result. Woman's day's work has no end and no tangible profits.

Her only payment as she goes weary-handed and empty-handed to rest, is the heart-satisfaction of having done well, a little more of her unending labor of love.

There is nothing more pathetic, were it not so common, than the sight—so often seen—of the hard-working, conscientious mother who literally wears out her life in unheralded toil, thankless and not expecting thanks.

She has no "eight hour day." Even a twelve-hour day would be a boon to most wives who in the care of her house and children are always "doing overtime" without thought of extra pay.

Among the savages the women do all the work, their lords employing themselves only in the chase and in war. The progress of civilization has consisted largely in getting man to do something for a living, and this progress has come through mothers' training of the sons to share a part of their burdens.

Man has devoted much inventive genius to labor-saving devices that render more easy the various departments of production that have become fixed upon man. But woman's work still remains and must ever remain much the same endless round of labor by hand and brain.

No machine can do her work—no; no; her work requires a heart in it.

Her work is to make the home a haven of rest—for all but herself, who knows no rest this side of heaven.

Her work is to implant and nurture the seeds of manhood and womanhood in the souls of her children, that fruits may be borne long after she is gone.

Should women work?

Well, when she ceases to work civilization will shrivel and disappear like a sheet of tissue in a flame.—"Seattle Star."

A Word from a Free Socialist.

I am glad to accept the title of Free Socialist which Mr. J. Wm. Lloyd accords to me in Lucifer No. 936. But let me point out that it belongs with equal justice to nearly every active worker in the Socialist Party of America, the Social Democratic Party of Germany, the Parti Ouvrier of Belgium, and in fact to the organized socialists of the world. I challenge Mr. Lloyd to point to any passage in the writings of any Socialist of international reputation which advocates state tyranny over persons. (To save time it should be noted that Bellamy knew nothing of Socialism when he wrote "Looking Backward," a very readable story, containing all sorts of vagaries.)

It is a mistake to suppose that either Socialists or Anarchists have any peculiar social ideal of their own by which they can be distinguished from other people. There is nothing particularly original or startling in the thought that everyone ought to be free, that the social institutions which are used to perpetuate slavery in whatever form it may exist ought to be done away with. This social ideal is one which both Socialists and Anarchists share with the human thinkers of ages upon ages. The distinctive thing about Socialism is its philosophy which points out that the history of civilization has been a history of struggles between classes, and its methods, which involves the overthrow of capitalism by the intelligent class-conscious action of the working class, actuated by their material interests rather than by utopian dreams. In countries where universal suffrage prevails, the Socialists urge political action simply because this seems to us by all odds the easiest way of overthrowing the class tyranny under which we are suffering. If Anarchists believe there is a quicker way, let them try it, but meanwhile why should they not vote with us instead of giving passive assistance on election day to the tyrants they wish to overthrow?

The letter of C. F. H. in the number of Lucifer above referred to show a strange misunderstanding of the position of the Socialist party. There is not the slightest tendency toward any such split as he suggests. We all recognize that the present state is nothing but a machine to maintain the power and privileges of the capitalist class. We urge the working class, who are at least nine-tenths of the people, to use their votes in their own interest and take control of the government, doing away with its coercive features, and conducting it thenceforth in their own interest. We do not call ourselves state socialists because we are distinctly opposed to the state as at present organized and the name would therefore be wholly misleading. To apply the name to us in the face of our protest looks like either ignorance or trickery. I have too much respect for the writers in Lucifer to believe they will continue to misrepresent us now that our position has been explained.

CHARLES H. KERR.

Forty copies of Lucifer, no two alike, of 1901 will be sent to any address for 15 cents. Nine bundles for $1. We are anxious to place these papers where they will do good. Please let us have your orders soon.

What Is Sin?

A subject that Hearst recently sought information on was, "What is sin?" All the prominent clergymen in Chicago gave their views; and so wrought up did they become, that at the Monday Club the subject was continued. Many ideas were brought out, dusted, and aired. The meeting finally settled down, and gave assent to Bishop Hurst's proposition that there were four sins that admitted of no palliation:

1. Murder.
2. Theft.
3. Adultery.
4. Blasphemy.

Now the pity is that these learned men did not right there and then define the four mortal sins just named.

One member in a rather heated speech declared that men guilty of any one of these sins were guilty of all, and then he backed it up with this syllogism.: "Men who chew tobacco also drink whisky, and all who drink whisky, use tobacco and swear. So those guilty of one sin are guilty of all."

"We-ell, yes,—that is, constructively so," said Bishop Hurst, and spat violently.

That tobacco proposition, really, hardly goes. And as for the others—well, well, for instance, an American Colonel in the late Cuban war shot a Spaniard who was running away from him, and then told about it in a popular Magazine. Yet this man did not fall under the ban, but is everywhere regarded as a Christian Gentleman.

George Eliot (according to the ideas of this Ministers' Meeting) was guilty of adultery; yet she did not take human life nor did she steal.

Rev. Dr. Ament, Missionary to China, stole, according to his own confession. That is to say, he fulfilled the Webster definition by taking property that belonged to another. Yet the Rev. Dr. Ament surely does not blaspheme

Robert Ingersoll was guilty of "blasphemy," and was so notified by an eminent Delaware Jurist, who dared Ingersoll to come and lecture at Wilmington and get a taste of the cat, as duly provided for in the Statutes. Yet Ingersoll, outside of blasphemy, was pretty nearly a model citizen.

A recent lexicographer has defined adultery as "the relationship of the incompatible." One man who took part in that discussion wears a seventeen inch collar, and is married to a wife who waddles and makes woful ballad of her marital miseries. This couple hate each other in the daytime; yet there is not a shadow of doubt but that they are "true"

Bishop Hurst is a divorced man, married the second time. According to the rules of the Roman Catholic Church and the laws of South Carolina, he is guilty of adultery.

In war the Decalog is waived, and murder and theft are legalized—and most of the clergymen at that meeting believe in the righteousness of war.

Blasphemy seems the only offense that is not legalized.

Blasphemy really, however, does not exist—it is the airy, fairy invention of men who thought there were not enough sins already, so they added one. Nowadays no one, outside of Delaware, knows just what blasphemy is.

So it seems to me that the "Monday Club" should again take up the subject of "What is Sin?" and issue a circular in this sin-stained world telling us just where we may play leap frog with the Ten Commandments, and still go unpunished

When Sara Bernhardt was solicited to add an Eleventh Commandment, she declined on the plea that there were too many, already.

If sin is a matter of geography, or like the Greek verb, has many exceptions, then the supple Sara is right.

As a general proposition, how would this do?—the only sin is to be unkind.—The Philistine.

Civil Service Examiner.—What do you know about Budapest?

Application (for position on police force)—Budapest is the name of a cattle disease. It is naturally fatal!—Chicago Tribune

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for ustice against Privilege.

Heart to Heart Talks.

A suggestion was made by some one that the editorial "Heart to Heart Talks" be made a more permanent feature of Lucifer. Having received several other commendatory notices of my little effort to emulate Fra Elburtus Hubbard in his "Philistine" I will again address myself, especially and particularly, to Lucifer's "Household of Faith," ALL the household, whether present here at "Harmony Home," or at the Chicago Home presided over by Lillian, or scattered all over the United States, or located in British America, Mexico, the Bitish Isles, Continental Europe, Africa, Australia, the isles of the Indian Ocean, or what not—everywhere that Lucifer finds subscribers and sympathetic readers or exchanges, to all of these I wish to be especially "At Home" today, this bright and sunny First of October, and have a little private chat with them, in the somewhat exclusive and autocratic spirit that must have influenced Ralph Waldo Emerson when he wrote,

"Expect me not to show cause why I seek or why I exclude company. . . . I tell thee, thou foolish philanthropist, that I grudge the dollar, the dime, the cent I give to such men as do not belong to me and to whom I do not belong. There is a class of persons to whom by all spiritual affinity I am bought and sold; for them I will go to prison, if need be, etc."

It is to the particular class of persons to whom I belong and who belong to me, and for whom I would go to prison if need be, that I wish to speak today, rather than to hoy polloy, as the old Greeks called them—that is, the miscellaneous, the unappreciative crowd of "philistines," the great mass of humankind.

* * *

One of the cherished objects I had in view when deciding to spend the summer in the Michigan Fruit Belt, in a cosy, rural home, surrounded by fruit trees, vines, evergreens and flowers in bloom, was that there, in company with a few choice spirits, congenial minds, I might throw off the bonds of conventionalism by which we are all more or less hampered, enthralled, enslaved, dwarfed, ossified, petrified, made decrepit and prematurely old. I want to get near, very near to NATURE, near to life at the fountain; near to the "soul of things," and there to absorb so much of health, strength, youth, vitality, spontaneity, as my limitations—natural and educational—would allow.

I hoped to spend a good part of my leisure time in the study of the writings of such lovers of truth and nature as Emerson, Thoreau and Whitman and hoped to have the assistance of a few others interested in the same field of thought. Hitherto my hope in this line has been mainly disappointed; and yet I am not in the least discouraged. All good things come to him who works and waits,—who works first, then waits, or rather, all good things, all hoped for things, come to her or to him who never ceases to both work and wait.

Much of the time during the rainy weather of the past few weeks I have been "monarch of all I surveyed," on the two or three acres of ground that comprise what we call Harmony Home. During these days and nights, however, I have not been alone. One of my most constant and cherished companions has been the world-famous sage of Concord—he from whom I quoted, a few minutes since, and from whose "Essays" I want to borrow a few more sayings, the better to illustrate what I wish to say to my widely-scattered household.

* * *

If I have been rightly informed Emerson's home life in Concord and his public life in Boston were not unlike my own, here in this summer retreat and in Chicago. Though not as much a hermit as were Thoreau and Whitman, Emerson was very fond of solitude, to which fact he makes frequent reference, as when he says,—See "Essay on Friendship."

"I chide society, I embrace solitude and yet I am not so ungrateful as not to see the wise, the lovely and the noble minded, as from time to time they pass my gate. Who hears me, who understands me, becomes mine—a possession for all time. Nor is nature so poor but she gives me this joy several times, and thus we weave social threads of our own, a new web of relations; and, as many thoughts in succession substantiate themselves, we shall by and by stand in a new world of our own creation, and no longer strangers and pilgrims in a traditionary globe. My friends come to me unsought."

This brief selection describes, much better than I could myself have done, my own experiences here in this quiet rural home, and also during my life's pilgrimage. For more than half a century I have alternated, oscillated, as it were, between society and solitude, without being able to tell which of the two I have enjoyed most keenly. While but few of those who have come to me, here and elsewhere, seem fully to understand me, and while but few seem to have reached the plane which Emerson calls "High Friendship,"—a prime qualification for which he tells us is MAGNANIMITY, or true greatness of mind or of soul, I am glad and very thankful to feel and to know that I have met a few, a very few, of these magnanimous ones, these grand and glorious natures whom to know is a joy and blessing forevermore—"a possession for all time."

With Emerson I can say that my best, my truest, my noblest friends have come to me unsought. I did not send for them; I did not specially invite them to come into my personal sphere of activities; but they came, they saw, they felt, they understood, they reciprocated, and thus became mine and I became theirs—theirs so truly, so devoutly, that gladly would I go to prison for them, if need be.

* * *

In the same Essay Emerson says, "There are two elements that go to the composition of friendship, each so sovereign, that I can detect no superiority in either. One is Truth. A friend is a person with whom I may be sincere. Before him I may think aloud."

Most of us use the word "sincere" without understanding or remembering what it means. Suppose now that hereafter, at the close of our letters to friends, instead of writing "yours sincerely" we all write yours without wax!—as the word sincere literally means. Then let us run over the letter again and see whether no "wax" has been used in the composition thereof. Also, after every formal visit, or every accidental or informal one, let us ask ourselves whether all we have said and all we have acted has been so true and so honest that if our friend had been clairvoyant and clairaudient there would have been nothing to shock his or her feelings on account of its failure to agree with our spoken and acted thought.

"Before him I may think aloud." Can there be a better test of friendship than this?

I have often been told—in act and manner if not in so many words, by those who profess great friendship and sympathy for me, that they want none of my criticisms, none of my admonitions. They do not want me to "think aloud" in regard to their short-comings, their mistakes and failures. If I speak of themselves at all it must be in terms of praise, of appreciation if not of adulation or panegyric.

Such people are not real friends if Emerson is right. They are simply egoistic self-seekers, first, last, and all the time. Whatever their motives or intentions may be they are neither intellectually nor morally true nor honest, and will be sure to disappoint us when put to the test of TRIAL. They are usually great promisers—always telling us what they mean to do for us and for our work, in the future, but always something occurs, some unforseen hindrance, that lets them out of the performance with credit to themselves—in their own estimation. They are usually great boasters also of what they have done in the past for others, or for this or that philanthropic movement, reciting with great particularity how much they have been praised and honored, and how often they have been assured, by others, "Why, we never could have got along without you!" "Don't go away! Don't desert us now," etc., etc.

* * *

Further describing the man—or the woman—who has evolved, developed, grown, to this high conception of friendship, Brother Emerson adds:

"I am arrived at last in the presence of a man so real and equal, that I may drop even those undermost garments of dissimulation, courtesy and second thought, which men never put off, and may deal with him with the simplicity and wholeness, with which one chemical atom meets another. Sincerity is the luxury allowed, like diadems and authority, only to the highest rank,—that being permitted to speak truth, as having none above it to court or conform unto."

How many of us that have claimed to be emancipated from the thralldom of FEAR, are ready now to take our places on this highest plane of Friendship? How many are brave enough and true enough to "drop those undermost garments of dissimulation, courtesy and second thought," and deal with each other with the "simplicity and wholeness with which one chemical atom meets another"?

I had fondly hoped that at Harmony Home the select and elect few who would be drawn hitherward by the subtle attraction that brings the right chemical atoms together, could and would approximate this high ideal—this newer truer, nobler, grander, this really normal or unaffectedly natural life upon earth, but hitherto this fond hope has been but very partially realized. Perhaps those who came—some of them at least—are on the road to that high plane, and will reach it in time, but such is the power of habit, so complete the enslavement, so unbreakable the chains with which a false education has bound us all, that it will require for most of us a new embodiment, a second or a third incarnation to enable us to ignore or defy the "conventional lies of civilization."

* * *

WHY LINGER LONGER?

In my Heart to Heart Talks, printed a month ago or more, I enacted the monopolist—occupying space that in equity probably belonged to others, and now to avoid the danger of committing a like offense I would better close for the week and defer what I intended saying about Friendship and some other things till another time, but before doing so I ask leave to answer a few questions lately propounded, and which will, not unlikely, be suggested to others by what I have said in this issue, namely:

"If the rural experiment has proved unsatisfactory in attracting congenial minds, why not wind it up and go back at once to Chicago? Summer is now gone, the autumn promises to be cold and rainy, why longer enact the role of Robinson Crusoe, living alone and paying rent on a large untenanted house, burning coal, gasoline and kerosene, when all this expense might be saved by returning to your warm, light and cheery rooms in the city?"

Having taken the whole of Lucifer's widely scattered family into my secretest council—"a committee of the whole on the state of the Union," as the politicians used to say during the war of the "Great Rebellion," I will briefly reply as follows:

Yes; owing in part perhaps to the extraordinary behavior of Mount Pelee and some other of our neighboring volcanoes, that have disturbed the usual atmospheric conditions over a large section of the globe we inhabit, the season now drawing to a close has broken all records in this vicinity as to precipitation of moisture and consequent coolness, thereby discouraging if not defeating the annual exodus of dwellers in the city to the country—owing doubtless in great measure to this fact in nature the phalanstery inaugrated in June last has not proved the blooming success I hoped it would be, and yet, as previously stated in these columns, it has not been a failure, and in summing up results, so far as results are visible, I have no reason to regret that the experiment was made. Return to the city is deferred for these among other reasons:

First, the fruit harvest, in which I am interested, is not yet over, and will not be until near the close of the present month.

Second. Still more important to me is the fact that from past experience Autumn is the best season of the year, and October by far the best of all the months, in which to lay in or store up a good reserve stock of health and strength upon which to draw during the winter and spring months, which mouths are usually most trying to those whose vital force is apt to fail when most needed.

In my humble opinion this latter consideration should take precedence of all others. Health is the first condition or element in success of any kind. Without health of body there can be no real sanity of mind. Without health of body and sanity of mind longevity is a curse rather than a blessing.

I am not unmindful, just here, of the fact that some people do not consider longevity a blessing under any circumstances, and hence it would not surprise me at all were I to receive silent telepathic messages something like this:

"Why try to live on, and on, beyond the natural limit of threescore years and ten? 'Youth is the time to have your fling,' as the author of 'Auld Licht Idyls' has so forcibly shown. You have had your fling—your share of life—now go home; finish writing your autobiography, and DIE! allowing others, the younger generation, a fair chance to have THEIR fling."

To such possible message I would like to say,

Yes; old age, with its unusual accompaniments—senility, decrepitude, helplessness, is not a condition to be desired, and yet who is wise enough to set the limit dividing youth and manhood from old age? Elizabeth Cady Stanton is my senior by thirteen years, and yet her writings show undiminished vigor in battling for the abolition of woman's disabilities "before the law," and for her emancipation from man-made creeds and old-time superstitions.

Lois Waisbrooker is four or five years my senior, if I mistake not. Only yesterday I received a bundle of the September number of her brave little monthly, "Clothed with the Sun," published at Home, Washington, showing that this eteran worker is still in the harness, fighting heroically for the greatest and most needful of all freedoms, the freedom of speech and of press in regard to Woman's Right to Self-Ownership in her creative powers, duties and responsibilities.

Count Leo Tolstoi is my senior in years, and though feeble in body he is still sufficiently strong mentally to make himself feared and hated by every crowned and uncrowned despot in Europe or in the old world.

While it may be presumptuous to compare myself with these distinguished persons I am vain enough to think the letters of appreciation and commendation in regard to my poor efforts, received within the past few months, are sincere and, in the main, just and impartial, and hence am led to believe that there is still a place for me in the journalistic field, and especially in the columns of the journal I have edited for more than twenty-two years. Life is still as sweet to me as ever it was. Work, of hand and brain, is quite as welcome, quite as enjoyable, as ever it was, and of these two—love of life and love of work, I am in the habit of congratulating myself as being dowered by nature with an usually good share. This morning I rose at four o'clock—a little earlier than my wont—and expect to put in not less than twelve or thirteen hours of effective work of some sort, before early bedtime. This is not said boastingly, but simply to prove to those who care to know, that my desire and my ability to work have not yet deserted me.

* * *

Our friends will please pardon these personal references. This talk, as before said is for Lucifer's Household only, and household talks are usually of a personal and confidential nature. And now to close this already too long article I ask the unanimous consent of the whole symposium, to a little matter of business. It is this:

Brother Wayland, editor of the "Appeal to Reason," asks the workers of his household to increase his subscription list to the number of one million before the close of the current year. His list now numbers two hundred thousand, and it is believed by many that the million goal will be reached, if not this year then in the near future. I rejoice to know that there is such a paper as the "Appeal" in existence and that it is meeting such phenomenal success. I am not envious, but simply want to be emulous, and here ask another question:

Is not Lucifer, in the very best and widest sense an Appeal Reason?

And is it not probably true that Lucifer has done much, very much to make Brother Wayland's "Appeal" the success that it now is?

Brother Wayland and his compeers are working for industrial emancipation through collective ownership of public utilities—that is, they are working for the Co-operative Commonwealth, to take the place of the monopolistic and paternalistic despotism we now have. We do nothing without a MOTIVE, as all will admit. Can there be a better, a more effective, a more COMPELLING motive urged for industrial emancipation than the knowledge, the settled conviction, that under present conditions woman must continue to be a BREEDER OF SLAVES? of imbeciles, incapables and criminals?—that men make and perpetuate institutions and that if we would have better institutions we must first have better MEN?

* * *

To rouse men and women, and especially women, to a sense of these underlying, these bed-rock truths, is Lucifer's chosen field, as our helpers all know. The question then is, shall we deal with superficial and second-rate causes, or shall we go to the bottom of the trouble and remove THAT, in the belief and knowledge that then the second-rate causes can be removed more easily, and that when once removed they will STAY removed?

* * *

If our helpers see the matter in this light, is it asking too much to ask each and all of them to do something, if only a little, and do it NOW, to increase the circulation and influence of THEIR paper? What can YOU do, to put Lucifer into the hands of every thoughtful person living in countries that speak the English language? Yours for progress, M. HARMAN.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Geo. W. Howe, Tenn.:—I am much interested in all you and your dear father do, and may he be blessed with many happy days yet, and have the good work go on!

Georgie Lauriston, Canton, Ohio:—I missed one copy of Lucifer so my subscription must have expired. I enclose $1 on subscription for I cannot afford to be without Lucifer, as I learn a great deal from its precepts.

D. Burgess, 1919 S. E. St. Tacoma, Wash.:—I am out in the field agitating for better conditions, and have engagements until Jan. 1903. I find many, very many liberal minded people; people who begin in a sort of dazed way, to realize that most of us are slaves to prejudice and superstition. I find many who are seeking light.

J. G. Hunter, Wyo.:—As I see by my wrapper that my subscription expires with No. 938 I enclosed $1 for another year's subscription. I would rather the paper would confine itself more to the relation of the sexes and pay less attention to the Anarchistic and Socialistic arguments, as there are other papers devoted to those questions.

L. M. Bryan, New Florence, Mo.:—I see by the number on my wrapper that my time is out; would have sent you something sooner but have been sick and "let things go." I am glad you kept on sending it as I do not want to miss a number. I send you $1 to help keep things moving. The inscription "In God We Trust" shows that Uncle Sam is either something of a wag or has lost all respect for "truth and veracity." Hoping you may live in full possession of all your powers, for many, many years, I remain your friend.

Mrs. B., Texas:—I am seeking the truth, and must have it if it is to be had under any circumstances. I have three babies; would have four but oldest died last January. Another will soon arrive. The eldest would have been four years old last March. You can realize that I am in the most nervous state any one can imagine. And talk of injustice, it is no name for what I have endured; but I had no idea what to do or how to change my environments. As a consequence I was sick for four months and my precious son died for want of a mother's care.

[Perhaps some of our readers may feel impelled to write to this troubled mother. Any letters sent in care of this office will be forwarded. L. H.]

F. Siman, Omaha, Neb.:—The following clipping from the Omaha "Bee" ought to be interesting to Lucifer's readers. Although it deals satirically with the widow it sees no wrong in the institution of holy matrimony itself, which makes respectable a relation which outside marriage would be prostitution. Of course it may not be correct in its supposition that the man was bought:

MARRIAGE AND MONEY.

Some people have very little charity in their souls. A few days ago a Boston widow, Mrs. H. E. Hawkes, 54 years of age, paid G. H. Moxey, a San Francisco professor of fencing, $250,000 for becoming her husband. Prof Moxey is 26 years of age, and it is to be supposed that he needed the money.

Now the bride's brothers and her son-in-law are trying to have the money and the woman torn ruthlessly away from the young bridegroom. They claim that her mental condition is not what it should be, and efforts are being made to have the courts declare her incompetent.

Why will meddlesome relatives continue to interfere in cases of this kind, comments the Chicago "Record-Herald." If an old woman wants to pay out good money for a young husband, and both she and he are satisfied with the terms, why should brothers and son-in-law be permitted to destroy their happiness? Surely $250,000 is not too much for a woman who is 54 years of age and has the price to pay for a 26 year-old husband if the latter is all that a sound American in his 26th year should be, so there can be no proof of incompetency in the figures alone.

Furthermore, the woman declares that she is perfectly happy. Is it just, then, that she should be made miserable by her relatives, whether she is competent or not? What is money for if it is not to bring happiness to the competent and the incompetent alike? Out upon the meddlers who are always trying to keep old people from paying their money for young husbands or young wives. Doesn't our constitution guarantee to everyone the right to pursue happiness in any way that suits him as long as he doesn't interfere with the legitimate pleasures and the rights of others?

On the face of the returns it looks as if the Boston woman and her professor should be let alone.—Omaha "Bee."

TOLSTOI'S NEW WORK.

The Slavery of Our Times.

With Portrait of the Gifted Author, and Introduction by the Translator, Aylmer Maude.

CHAPTER TITLES,

I., Goods Porters Who Work Thirty-seven Hours: II., Society's Indifference While Men Perish; III., Justification of the Existing Position of Sciences; IV., The Assertion of Economic Science that Rural Laborers Must Enter the Factory System; V, Why Learned Economists Assert what is False; VI., Bankrupts of th Socialist Ideal; VII., Culture or Freedom? VIII., Slavery Exists Among Us' IX., What is Slavery? X., Laws Concerning Taxes, Land and Property; XI., Laws the Cause of Slavery; XII., The Essence of Legislation Is Organized Violence; XIII., What Are Governments? Is it Possible to Exist Without Governments? XIV., How Can Governments Be Bolished? XV., What Should Each Man Do? An Afterword.

Well printed on heavy paper. Substantially bound. 186 pages. Price, 65 cents.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer the Light Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only." Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spolling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem, Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization. The Folly and Cruelty of it All. Price 15c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

The Ladies' "PERFECT" Sanitary Protector.

The only Sanitary Protector on the market made of pure rubber and perfectly soft and pliable; will last for years; can be worn with perfect comfort, can be adjusted to any size, no canvas, no cloth, but pure rubber.

This is something that no woman can afford to be without. Perfectly sanitary, comfortable, indispensable and safe.

Price reduced to $1. Order of L. Harman, 500 Fulton St. Chicago.

938.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

To NEW SUBSCRIBERS:—Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing, before the expiration of your trial subscription.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author.

The Sex Passion.
Man, the Ungrown.
Woman, the Serf.
Woman in Freedom
Marriage: a Retrospect.
Marriage: a Forecast.
The Free Society.
Some remarks on the early star and sex worships.
Notes—On the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population.

The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. Price, $1.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

WHITMAN'S IDEAL DEMOCRACY, AND OTHER WRITINGS.

BY HELENA BORN.

Comprising besides the title essay, Thoreau's Joy in Nature; Poets of Revolt: Shelley, Whitman, Carpenter; Whitman's Altruism; Individualism versus Organization; Ingenuities of Economic Argument; The Last Stand Against Democracy in Sex; Inequality in Divorce; Marriage Safeguards. With portrait of author and biographical introduction by Helen Tufts. 125 pages. Edition limited to 500 copies; each copy numbered. Fine paper, uncut pages, bound in boards, paper label. Price $1.

Agents Wanted To sell the Toltec Dandruff Cure and the Toltec Hair Dressing (restores natural color). Are clean and perfect. Liberal commission. Write for circulars. Address: The Toltec Remedies Co., Box 1267 Denver Colo.

"Pages of Socialist History." By W. Tcherkesoff. This book is recommended to Socialists of all schools, as it deals with the history of the "International" and the attitude of Marx and Engels towards Bakounin. Paper covers, 25 cents. By mail, 30 cents

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 466 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.

ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $1.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 15c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.

BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth, $1.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Condemned, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 21 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 428 pages. 50c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

DARWIN, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. G. Spence. 178 pages. 50c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the grandest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James H. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 37 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $3.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum 10c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian religion has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 260 pages. 40c. Postage, 5c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Damons and David Overmyer. 25c.

GIORDANO BRUNO, His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 25c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 619 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HILDA'S HOME. Rose Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 68 page. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 120 pages. Paper, 25c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 37 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Voltaire. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREEZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

KORADINE. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1886, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 60c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III. (1890). Cloth, $1.25. Postage, 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 278 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Tradition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, H. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, faworing that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 40c; paper, 25c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 25c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsle, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $1. Five volumes, plainer binding, $1.25; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 320 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 40c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 50c.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Marietta), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 288 pages. 25c.

THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Witches and Quakers in New England, and Blue Laws extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 261 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and highly sophisticated woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstitions have they come to see that the useless and impure things are celibacy and asceticm; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 96 large pages; twelve copies, 25c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 25c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTERS; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Crisis (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. B. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1626, issued by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuit craft and is a plain index to the underhand working of that order against the welfare of individuals and society. 15c.

THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 10c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Vclupt Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Wilson). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $2.25.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Darling. 15c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 10c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 10c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of that which gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 64 large pages. 25c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. A slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 378 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 950 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

III ED SERIES, VOL. VI., No. 40. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS. OCT., 16 E. M. 302. [C. E. 1902.] WHOLE No. 939

THE RESERVED SECTION.

["The rights and interests of the laboring man will be protected and cared for, not by labor agitators, but by the Christian men to whom God in His infinite wisdom has given control of the property interests of the country."—Mr. Baer.]

In the prehistoric ages, when the world was a ball of mist—
A seething swirl of something unknown in the planets' list;
When the earth was vague with vapor, and formless, and dark, and void—
The sport of the wayward comet—the jibe of the asteroid—
Then the singing stars of morning chanted soft:—"Keep out of there!
Keep off that spot which is sizzling hot—it is making coal for Baer."

When the pterodactyl ambled, or fluttered, or swam, or jumped,
And the plesiosaurus rambled, all careless of what he bumped,
And the other old-time monsters that thrived on the land and sea,
And didn't know what their names were any more than to-day do we—
Wherever they went they heard it:—"You fellows, keep out of there—
That place which shakes and quivers and quakes—it is making coal for Baer."

The carboniferous era consumed but a million years;
It started when earth was shedding the last of her baby tears,
When still she was swaddled softly in clumsily tied on clouds,
When stars from the shops of Nature were being turned out in crowds;
But high o'er the favored section this sign said to all: "Beware!
Stay back of the ropes that surround these slopes—they are making coal for Baer!"

We ought to be glad and joyous, we ought to be filled with glee,
That aeons ago the placard was nailed to the ancient tree,
That millions and millions of ages—back farther than Adam and Eve—
The ichthyosaurus halted, and speedily took his leave,
And so it was all saved for us, the spot with the sign: "Beware!
This plant is run by the earth and sun and is making coal for Baer!"—W. D. Nesbit, in Baltimore "American."

What Is Modesty?

It is so well understood that modesty becomes a woman, that it behooves us as women to know just what modesty really is. If we open the dictionary, we find, according to Webster, that modesty is "natural delicacy or shame regarding personal charms and the sexual relation; purity of thought and manners." Of course every woman will understand that this definition refers especially to her; the rule for men will vary considerably from this, as is no more than right, considering the subordinate position we hold in relation to them.

Certainly it was with a sigh of relief, that I read that modesty was a "natural" delicacy or shame, for as a woman I wished a sure guide for my inquiring mind. If modesty were an affair of nature and not of art, then my way would be smoothed before me; and if I might not trust my own instincts, which perhaps were perverted, I might study a child, in whom there was no art, and so come to the truth.

I might as well admit, at the outset, that I had no clear ideas of modesty. There was this in my favor, however, that I earnestly longed to know what modesty was, in order that I might successfully practice it.

Well, I set about the study of a child's conduct. You can imagine the result. I was shocked, appalled; the little wretch had no notions whatever of—I was going to say modesty; but, perhaps, it will be better to say—the rules of the game. That is a phrase men use, and it ought to please them. It was of no use to study more than one child, in the hope of finding a difference, for the abandoned creatures, without regard to sex or color, or previous condition of servitude, all behaved themselves in the same way, that is to say, most immodestly. They did what they were functionally moved to do, or exposed their nakedness, without any evidence of that sense of shame which is necessary to modesty.

But if nature were at fault in children, I argued, no doubt it would assert itself in savages; so I turned to them. Alas! what a strange and disconcerting state of affairs I found. It seemed as if each race, if not each tribe, had its own different notions of what was modest. I found that there were women in Africa who would brave death itself rather than be seen without a shred of cloth or skin hanging down behind from the waist; others who would have felt it equally infamous to appear in public without a narrow strip of some material hanging from the neck between the breasts; others who satisfied their sense of modesty completely by a dozen strips of hide hung from the waist in front, but without hiding any part of the body; others, again, who jeered at any shred of clothing, saying that the person using it must have some deformity to conceal.

In South Africa were women who held it immodest to appear in public unless their naked bodies were painted; others who were equally ashamed without a belt two inches broad about the waist. In the South Sea Islands if a woman were tattooed she was sufficiently clad, and her modesty was satisfied.

So it was with all the savage people living in warm climates; they went naked and were unashamed. Was not that astonishing? I made up my mind at last that Webster was wrong in saying that modesty was a natural delicacy or shame. Still, I was not to be balked; I must know what modesty truly was; so I turned to the people of another civilization than ours, thinking there might be some help there for me. Turkish and kindred Oriental women had a modesty that would not permit them to show their faces in public; but the creatures wore trousers, betraying the fact that they had legs—or should I say limbs? Can a woman be modest who does not hide her legs—limbs, I mean? Chinese women were too modest to expose any part of the body but the face, and that well covered with paint. Even their hands were kept under cover for the most part of the time; and as for showing their wrists!—not they. All of which was encouraging, but in the midst of my delight over this exquisite modesty, I was told that their private morals were terrible, and that the hussies wore trousers. There remained the Japanese women. Well, the least said of them the better, in this connection. Actually they wore clothing when it was convenient, and went without when that suited them better!

But the worst feature of all this was that travelers insisted that in those countries where women went naked they were more moral and chaste than in those countries where they clothed themselves. Japanese women, for example, are declared to be models of shyness, gentleness and modesty. And they wear clothing or go without, as it suits their convenience—not as suits modesty, mind you, but convenience! Is the thing credible? H. Crawford Angus, the African traveler, goes so far as to say this: "It has been my experience that the more naked the people, and the more, to us, obscene and shameless in their manners and customs, the more moral and strict they are in matters of sexual intercourse." But who wants to pay such a price for mere morality?

Then he goes on to describe what may be called the initiation into womanhood of girls who arrive at puberty, and says these shocking things: "The whole matter is looked upon as a matter of course, and not a thing to be ashamed of and to hide; and being thus openly treated of, and no secrecy made about it, you find in this tribe that the women are very virtuous. They know from the first all that is to be known, and cannot see any reason for secrecy concerning natural laws or the powers and senses that have been given them from birth."

Wallace, the famous traveler and scientist, has the presumption to say of the women of the wild tribes of the Amazon: "There is far more immodesty in the transparent and flesh-colored garments of our stage dancers than in the perfect nudity of these daughters of the forest." Now, of course, stage dancers may be, and very likely are, immodest, but what do you think of a man saying anything in favor of nudity? A respectable gentleman and a scientist, too! For shame!

Do you wonder that I abandoned all ideas of learning anything about modesty from either children, savages or peoples of other civilizations? Of course, I no longer had Webster for a guide, since it was certain that there was no such thing as a "natural" delicacy or shame. Consequently, I made up my mind that modesty was a thing of our civilization, and quite artificial it might be, but not less necessary for that reason; so I set about discovering what conduct was modest and what was not.

This was not as easy as you might suppose, but I finally made up a list which received general endorsement, and then set about verifying it by the conduct of those who should know what to do and what not to do. This is the list, which I made as short as possible. A woman may not expose her le—limbs to view; nor her breasts; nor any part of her body nude excepting her hands and face. She must not betray by word or sign or act that she has any bodily functions to perform, save only eating and drinking. She must not be aware that difference of sex consists of anything more than a difference in style of clothing. She must shudder at the thought of anything distinctly sexual. Actual maternity may be referred to, but possible maternity, being noticed even indirectly, is cause for a change of color, or of fainting, if possible. It is better that a girl's health should be ruined than that her mother should be so indelicate as to speak to her of the especial functions of her sex. A young woman should pretend that she has no thought whatever about being a wife or mother, but secretly must devote her whole mind to winning a husband. She should strive with all her might to destroy every symptom of animal passion within herself, and should know nothing of wifely relations excepting as she can learn of them in secret and stealthy talks with ignorant servants or other girls.

I admit, at once, that the list is not complete, and that some of the rules of modesty laid down are somewhat subject to change under conditions not altogether to be defined. For example, a woman may expose her breasts very freely in the evening, although it would be bad form to do so in the daytime; and a woman who would permit herself to be seen nursing her baby could not hope to retain the respect of anyone. Then she may not only betray the fact of being a biped, but may even show her legs with perfect frankness at the seashore, while to do so in mountain-climbing or in search of health through any exercise, would be shameful. Also, while on the street, she may draw her skirts so tightly about her lower limbs as to leave the imagination no opportunity for exercise. Also, while she may not display her breasts nude on the streets, she may wear a girdle, which while it injures her internal organs, leaves her breasts free to move about in a manner which she has learned is very provocative to men.

I find that some of the rules of modesty lead to ill-health and physical weakness, so that few women are well because of them; but if to be modest is necessary, who can complain of the results?

Of course we all know that health demands proper attention to the excretory processes of the body, but what right-minded female would not rather suffer any anguish of mind and body than even hint to a male any such need on her part? Modesty must be maintained though the most serious of internal injuries and permanent illness result.

Hundreds and thousands of girls injure themselves for life by ignorant conduct at the age of puberty; but what modest mother would save her child one pang by soiling her lips with words that would dispel the child's ignorance? And, of course, a young woman would be saved inexpressible suffering if her male companions only knew that once a month she was subject to a functional change; but what girl would consent to share such indecent knowledge with a boy?

I will not say that I know, now, what makes an act modest or the reverse; but I do know and believe that we women will never have good health until we throw modesty to the winds, and conduct ourselves like some of those shameless creatures who really seem to glory in their sex. Shall we do so? Indeed, we shall not. Do I not know your answer? Let us go on in the good old modest way; sick and ailing all our lives, but not sacrificing one shred of the precious conventions that we have collected about us at such a terrible cost.

Let us live maimed, deformed, decrepit, ignorant, half-sexed caricatures of women—but let us be modest!—Margaret Grant, in "Woman's Physical Development."

An Open Letter to E. C. Walker.

I have read your letter to Lora Carter, and while I do not wish to be understood as declaring in favor of the same course as she has, I cannot forbear to call your consideration to what, while it has a very plausible sound at first, appears to me to be a very shallow observation from you. I refer to your assumption that because a man (or a woman either) is of such a nature as to have single affections, he is therefore unlovable. It is true enough that many girls frequently angle for one boy, or many boys for some particular girl; nevertheless such popular favorites, so far from always being the best or most lovable of persons often make the most disagreeable of marital companions; and I should think that instead of illustrating the all-around lovableness of their own characters, they were rather a standing illustrations of the characterlessness of the crowd who gather around them. I do not mean that this is always true, but it very often is.

On the other hand many whose virtues are not of the showy and popular variety, but of the subdued, retiring, and delicate sort (there are men to whom these adjectives will apply) do not wish to attract a number of admirers, and therefore fence themselves with that wall of reserve the mastery of which is characteristic of strong souls and which prevents even the suggestion of sexual love, who are nevertheless exceedingly lovable and tenacious of their concentrated affections.

Pray understand that I have nothing against love of the other sort; nor do I admire the character I have just been speaking of more than many other types, though I think some sterling qualities are more often found in such natures. All I want to say is that what seems to you a conclusive argument as to a person's unamiability is no argument at all. And while I think Lora Carter might very likely find it difficult to direct her affections precisely in such well-ordered paths as she describes, it is altogether probable that, should she succeed in doing so, she would receive quite as much devotion, and be able to give it too, as she would had she chosen a less exclusive companion.

JANE MEREDITH.

The Difference Between Socialism and Anarchism.

In No. 936 J. William Lloyd says that Charles H. Kerr is really an Anarchist. I have no doubt my fellow clansman can take care of himself quite well, but the subject is such a large one that some remarks from me also may not be amiss.

Mr. Lloyd says: "Anarchists commonly divide all Socialists into two classes; Free or Anarchist Socialists whose contention is that the individual is the unit of society and that society has no rights which he does not by free consent bestow, and State Socialists who contend that society is greater than the individual and has a right to administer his affairs in the way most necessary to its welfare."

Scientific Socialists have no such metaphysical theory. They do not believe in any kind of abstract or natural rights, whether individual or social. In fact Mr. Lloyd is not just to his own school in his statement of Anarchist doctrine. I am sure Kropotkin has no belief in such things as natural or inherent rights, and even Benjamin Tucker tells us that "Anarchism of the 'natural right' type is out of date". (See "Instead of a Book," page 132.)

What, then, is the real distinction which divides all Socialists from all Anarchists? It is the Marxian doctrine of "historical necessity," founded on the economic law of industrial centralization. The Socialist believes that the only alternatives physically possible to mankind are private monopoly and public monopoly, and that the only one of these morally possible is public monopoly. The Socialist does not pretend to have invented an ideal society; he only says that he has discovered a law of nature.

But what is this law of industrial centralization? Only this; that in all developed industries centralized production is cheaper than decentralized, and that in the economic struggle for existence the cheapest method must prevail. The last proposition Mr. Lloyd will hardly deny. He will admit that in the wholesale market there is always one market price for each commodity of a given quality, and that the producer who cannot sell at that price cannot sell at all. Now it is clear that those who produce by cheaper methods can sell cheaper than those who produce by dearer methods, and can force down the market price to a point at which the dearer producer cannot compete. Thus the cheapest method always wins. But Socialists contend that centralized industry, in which vast masses of men collectively handle machinery of enormous size and value, is always cheaper than less centralized industry. Centralized industry must therefore inevitably prevail. Moreover, there is no limit to this process, so the logical outcome of economic evolution is the absolute centralization of each industry in the hands of one great company, which will have, by the mere operation of a natural law, a more rigorous monopoly than all the parliaments and armies of the world could give.

I shall not now inquire whether the Socialists are right in affirming that there is such a law. I merely wish to point out to Mr. Lloyd and others that the discussion between Socialists and Anarchists turns mainly on a question of mathematics, and that it is useless to drag in any other issue until the mathematical one is settled. It might be very nice and very ethical to fly to the moon, but what is the use of talking about it if we cannot do it? Mr. Lloyd will see that, if the Socialists are right, then we have as little power to avoid monopoly as to fly to the moon, and all that remains is to choose whether the monopoly shall be public or private.

Of course the law of industrial centralization does not make it impossible for a poetic and frugal individual to go into the wilderness and live alone on radishes and contemplation. Neither does it hinder the formation of an idyllic community far from the madding crowd. But such communities can only exist when they maintain their exclusiveness and do not try to compete in the world market. If such a community tried to oppose the mighty machine of industrial monopoly in any centralized industry, it would be shivered into atoms by the mechanical operations of natural laws.

Mr. Lloyd will now see wherein all Socialists differ from all Anarchists. They love liberty as much as the Anarchists, but they differ with them as to the limits which natural law has placed on liberty. Believing that it is mathematically impossible to avoid monopoly, they propose to organize the masses of the people together to take this inevitable monopoly out of private hands and vest it in the whole people. But they have not the least objection to anybody living outside the great machine, if he can.

In conclusion, I strongly recommend every reader to send 10 cents to Charles H. Kerr & Co. 56 Fifth Avenue, Chicago, and obtain "Socialism, Utopian and Scientific," by Frederick Engels. Whoever makes a careful study of that book will not only understand Socialism, but will get rid of many intellectual cobwebs of the eighteenth century. It is a particularly good book for Americans, as they have been less influenced by Hegel and Darwin than any other people, and still believe in absolute principles and fundamental rights.

R. B. KERR.

P. S. After mailing the above article it occurred to me that I had been too sweeping in saying that all Socialists accepted the law of industrial centralization. In fact there are certain Socialists of the Bernstein type who doubt its application to agriculture, and think that even in the case of industry in the narrower sense it is not so universally true as was formerly supposed. On the other hand the Anarchist Kropotkin admits the law in the case of some industries, while denying its application to others. On the whole a careful study of the writings of Bernstein and Kropotkin has done more than anything else to convince me of the fundamental truth of the theory, although the evolution is not so swift and straight as predicted by the men of fifty years ago.

R. B. K.

"The New Republic."

I have been waiting for some of the controversalists of Lucifer's circle to pause long enough to recognize the new master.

John Brisbane Walker discovered him and is going to monopolize him for the next year or two in the "Cosmopolitan." "We are here to get better births and a better result from the births we get; each one of us is going to set himself immediately to that, using whatever power he finds in his hand." So says, Herbert George Wells, in the September "Cosmopolitan." Even my old guide C. L. James can learn philosophy in "Mankind in the Making" for he shows that "this over accentuation in the past of man's egoistic individuality" is not the natural order of things. Every student of the Light ought to read this philosopher of the Twentieth Century. After they read him I should like to hear the cock-sure Socialists and Anarchists criticise him.

E. I. PAUL.

"I pray you, O, excellent wife, not to cumber yourself and me, to get a rich dinner for this man or this woman, who has alighted at our gate, nor a bed chamber made ready at too great a cost. These things, if they are curious in, they can get for a dollar at any village. But, let this stranger, if he will, in your accent and behavior, read your heart and earnestness, your thought and will, which he cannot buy at any price at any village or city, and which he may well travel fifty miles, and dine sparely and sleep hard in order to behold. Certainly let the board be spread and let the bed be dressed for the traveler; but let not the emphasis of hospitality be in these things. Honor to the house where they are simple to the verge of hardship, so that there the intellect is awake and reads the laws of the universe."—Emerson.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Heart to Heart Talks.

IGNORING AND DEFYING THE COMSTOCK LAW.

Commenting upon the usual miscarriage of justice in the federal courts, as illustrated in the recently tried cases of Lois Waisbrooker and Mattie D. Penhallow, Henry C. Roberts of Bennington, Kansas, an old and well-seasoned captain in the Light-Bearer army, asks some pertinent and very timely questions—see Lucifer No. 935:

"What should be the attitude of free and independent women and men of our country toward arbitrary and invasive laws such as the Comstock law enacted through rascality and fraudulent methods of unprincipled men? Should not their efforts be constantly to ignore and bring into disrepute such corrupt and vicious laws to the end that they may be repealed? . . . . Cannot the comrades now see that they have slighted the grandest opportunity to trample on the vile creature of Comstock—the law by which the noblest, the most indefatigable of the workers in the cause of the most vital reform of all the centuries, the reform of sex ethics, that is to say, the reform of our antiquated marriage system, are held up and robbed not only of their just meed of praise but of their small savings the result of forced economy and of the strictest frugality?"

* * *

Having waited a few weeks and seeing no response to these timely and pertinent questions I will venture to give my own opinion in regard to them, premising once more that what I may say is given for what it is worth, and not by authority of Lucifer, as is notoriously the custom of editors. The closing sentence of Brother Roberts' letter is in these words:

"In fact I cannot avoid the conviction that the question is up to the reformers for immediate settlement, whether a bad, a vicious law should be respected and obeyed or whether it should be rejected, discarded, trampled down and brought into contempt of the people that thus it may become a dead letter."

A few years ago, within the recollection of many who may care to read these confidential talks, men were sent to prison in this country for the alleged crime of helping fugitive slaves to gain their liberty. Knowing, as we all know, the force of law-abiding habits, of conformity to immemorial usages, it is not too much to say that if it had not been for the rebellious courage of those who went to prison, and who willingly submitted to be held up and robbed of their hard earnings rather than obey the Fugitive Slave Law, we might today be a nation of slave-catchers and slave-drivers, as in the days when the Southern Oligarchy dictated the politics and social ethics for the people of the United States.

A NEW FUGITIVE SLAVE LAW.

Is not the Comstock postal law to all intents and purposes a new fugitive slave law?

Let us see: The old fugitive slave law was designed to perpetuate the form of human slavery that denied self-ownership to the African race. The Comstock law, as can easily be shown, is designed to perpetuate the form of slavery that denies to woman the ownership of her person, the control of her creative powers and functions. This it does by denying the right of free discussion, free investigation into or upon "sex ethics" looking towards "reform of our antiquated marriage system"—quoting the language of Bro. Roberts.

Illustrative and in proof of this statement I will here ask unanimous consent of my readers while I give a bit of personal history. Sixteen years ago a letter was printed in Lucifer giving a realistic account of the treatment of a young wife by her worse than brutal husband, illustrating the legal maxim that the crime of rape is unknown in wedlock, that "once consent means always consent." Plain and forcible language was used in this letter, but none of the words that purists and prudists could call "obscene." For printing and mailing this plainly worded protest against the denial to woman of the right of self-ownership I was prosecuted, tried and condemned in the Kansas Federal Court. When delivering his sentence of five years in the penitentiary and a fine of three hundred dollars, Judge Cassius G. Foster read me a fatherly lecture in which he stated with much precision of language that the gravamen, the head and front of my offense was the attempt to bring odium upon our marriage institution. As much as to say that the outrages committed under sanction of marriage laws and customs, the social ulcers sheltered and condoned by our church-state marriage institution, must not be exposed to the light of day.

As some of Lucifer's Household may not have heard of this episode in my life-history, I will add that after serving four months of this five-year sentence I was released and granted a new trial on account of informality of sentence—the judge having forgot to add, "at hard labor," when sending me to the penitentiary. After many delays and postponements the case was taken up by Judge John F. Philips of the same court, who sentenced me to one year at hard labor in the penitentiary, without fine. This sentence was served out to the letter, in the Federal prison at Fort Leavenworth—less two months' credit for "good behavior." Meantime, however, while awaiting the new trial for printing the first letter—written by W. G. Markland—I was tried and sentenced by Philips to one year in the penitentiary for printing the "O'Neill" letter, written by a New York physician to show the propriety and necessity of such revelations as those contained in the Markland letter. Of this last named sentenced I served eight months in the Kansas penitentiary, the sentence of Judge Philips having been decided irregular by Judge Brewer, then of the United States Circuit Court.

These various prosecutions occupied nearly ten years—all told—during which years I was either in prison or under bonds awaiting trial—all because of printing a manly protest against the enslavement of womanhood and motherhood under our "antiquated marriage system."

* * *

This episode in my personal history is here presented—in as few words as possible—not because I am fond of recalling such experiences, but rather to show that, as men went to prison rather than obey the old fugitive slave law, so also they have gone to prison rather than obey the new fugitive slave law. While the prosecutions, as a sword, were held over my head I republished, more than once, the offending articles, believing I had done no wrong and that it was right and proper that the American public should know just what the offense was that could put a publisher's liberty and property in jeopardy.

In last Lucifer, quoting from Emerson, I said there were those for whom I would go to prison if need be. This brief recital shows that I have gone to prison for the sake of those whom I consider my best friends, the MOTHERS of the race, the mothers enslaved by the antiquated, the irrational, the barbarous, the inhuman, the priest-and-lawyer-made marriage laws; the laws that put the person of the wife in the power, the arbitrary, the irresponsible power of the husband.

* * *

Returning to the letter of Brother Roberts, I have only to add that I, too, "cannot avoid the conviction that the question 'is up' to the reformers for immediate settlement, whether a vicious law should be respected and obeyed or whether it should be rejected, discarded, trampled down and brought into contempt of the people, that thus it may become a dead letter." It will certainly NEVER become a dead letter so long as it is feared, respected and obeyed. It is sometimes said that the best way to secure the repeal of a bad law is to enforce it. But how can a law be enforced so long as it is FEARED and OBEYED? A law that is obeyed needs no enforcement. The old fugitive slave law became a dead letter and was superseded by the "Fourteenth Amendment," because it was NOT obeyed, and could not be enforced without sending to prison many thousands of American citizens. Now let a similar revolt be inaugurated against the new fugitive slave law. Let every one who believes in liberty of speech and press openly and fearlessly ignore and violate this law, and go to prison if need be in defense of that liberty, and soon the Comstock postal law will share the fate of its illustrious type and predecessor.

* * *

I shall doubtless be asked if I am willing to take my own advice, my own prescription, and "take my medicine like a little man," if it should lead again—as it led in the past—to imprisonment in the penitentiary.

Not hastily, not rashly, but with careful deliberation and with the fullest knowledge, based upon experience, of what my words mean, I answer YES! a thousand times YES!

As often said before in these columns, I crave not imprisonment—I have no ambition to be a martyr for the sake of the honor and glory of martyrdom. I love my freedom—such as it is—too well to choose the restraints, the privations, the indignities inseparable from prison life, but believing as I do that only in this way can the power of the Modern Inquisition be effectually broken, that only in this way can the emancipation of womanhood and motherhood be achieved—and through the emancipation of mothers from sex-slavery the emancipation of the race be achieved from ALL OTHER slaveries—thoroughly believing all this I am willing to serve my kindred, my friends, my race, by still another term behind prison bars, clothed with a "convict's" coarse and striped garments and fed on a convict's ill-selected, meager and unhygienic rations. M. HARMAN.

ERRATA.—In issue No. 938, page 308, 2nd column, for "unusual accompaniments," read, usual accompaniments. Same page and column for "eteran worker," read veteran worker. On page 309—same issue, second line from top of first column, for "an usually good share," read an unusually good share.

Lucifer's Place in Journalism.

That it requires the reading of more than one copy to enable minds of even more than average intelligence to fully grasp the aim and purpose of Lucifer is well illustrated in the following letter:

"I have been a reader of your paper for about a year and have scarcely known until lately what reason could be given for its existence. It appears to me now to have a reason for being. It fills a niche in the literature of Love or the Sex-Emotion.

"Love as observed in mankind and the lower animals presents many variant phases; horses and cattle are gregarious and polygamous; the stallion and the bull have their harems; birds (wild ones) usually are monogamous, while domestic fowl are polygamous; man in his highest development, is monogamous; the immortals, the angels, are, so far as we may know, sexless.

"Between these extremes are all gradations and varieties

You contend for the right of every creature to live its own life in its own way and according to its own nature, but you more particularly lay stress upon freedom in sexual matters. This is right and should be contended for by all right minded people. The expressions of love are as various as the combinations which form character. Kraft-Ebing has rendered invaluable service to mankind by his great classical work "Psychopathia Sexualis," in which he classifies the varieties of sexual perversion, and you are doing a good work in aiding to classify sexual defectives of another kind, viz: those in whom good has failed to develop and mature typically. For these Free Love or Selective Variety is essential, and no law of man should vex or interfere with their natural—abnormal development.

"For the typical, normal, developed, man and woman, monogamy is natural and right and for such an one to practice the doctrines you teach would be a degradation, but for the class I have mentioned whose development has not yet reached the monogamous ideal, such monogamous sex-life forced upon them is like attempting to teach trigonometry to a child who knows not algebra, and if monogamous unions are forced upon this class by law it becomes unendurable to them and is tyranny. Such tyranny exists today and must exist so long as our present marriage laws prevail. I wish you success in your fight against this tyranny. More power to your pen is my wish for you. AN M. D."

REPLY.

Among the various avocations of modern life certainly there are none that should enable men and women to better understand and fully appreciate the worth, the necessity, of Lucifer's mission, Lucifer's work, than that of the physician. The facts, the stern, the inexorable facts that daily come under the observation of the intelligent "doctor" and nurse of the sick, must force the conviction that Whitman was in the right when he said, "Sex contains all," and that Grant Allen's elaborate statement concerning the importance of the right use and understanding of the much despised, much discredited, ignored and slighted sex nature, stamps him a true philosopher as well as true philanthropist.

Yes, Lucifer "fills a niche"—occupies a department in the field of journalism, that is filled or occupied by no other journal, so far as I know, and that niche, that department, it cannot be too often repeated and brought home to the heart, mind and conscience of all, is the most vitally important, the most fearfully, most tremendously important, of all the departments of journalistic endeavor to which any human being can possibly devote his or her time and energies.

But while devoting most of our time and space to the cultivation and investigation of the most important of all the departments of human ethics we do not think it best to exclude altogether the closely related departments called economics, finance, or even politics and religion in the non-partizan and non-sectarian sense. In fact Lucifer aims to deal with the great problem of HUMAN LIFE on earth, neglecting no department, no study, that is necessary to the right solution, the right understanding, of that problem, giving first place and chief space, as already said, to the investigations, the studies, that seem to us most vitally important, as well as most neglected and most dangerously misunderstood and misrepresented.

* * *

In one important particular, however, our correspondent seems to be still unable, after a year's reading, to grasp the full meaning, the central idea, of Lucifer's aim and purpose. His language very plainly shows that he thinks we make a specialty of teaching the doctrine known as "Selective Variety," sometimes also called "Free Love" by those who have paid but little attention to the subject. If our "M. D." had read more carefully the editorials that appear from time to time he would have seen that Lucifer's aim is to furnish a FREE PLATFORM to all earnest seekers for truth in regard to the right relation of the sexes.

In order to get the whole of truth we recognize that all sides must be heard. If more of Lucifer's writers advocate Selective Variety than any other form or method of associative sex life it is probably because most of our correspondents believe that Selective Variety is better than Monogamy, at least for the present imperfect or transitional stage of human development. Man, or the genus homo, is believed by evolutionists to be the outgrowth, the culmination, the embodiment, of all the forms of animal life below him, and that all characteristics, habits, peculiarities and endowments of these lower forms of life are to be found in him. If this be true, then it should not be considered strange or wonderful that we find honest and sincere monogamists, polygamists, select varietists, promiscuitists (if this term be allowable) and also opposers of all sex life and sex expression, among the men and women of our acquaintance.

Admitting for the argument that "monogamy is natural and right for the typical, normal developed man and woman," as "An M. D." says, Lucifer still maintains that legal interference, legal control, is not the best way to bring the undeveloped, the abnormal up to the highest or typical plane. Liberty of thought, of speech and of non-invasive action is a much better cure for errors of opinion and of conduct than is meddlesome interference by church or state authority.

"The cure for the evils of liberty [of abnormality] is more liberty."

M. H.

A Study in Sociology.

Individualism as defined in contradiction to Socialism. "Individualism is that state of society in which every individual has the right to do as he wills, provided he infringes not the equal right of any other."

"Socialism is that state of society in which the economic and other sociological functions are regulated and performed by the authority of the State."

Following are some definitions given wide publicity by the Socialist propaganda with a corresponding distinction from the Individualistic philosophy.

"The ethics of Socialism are identical with the ethics of Christianity."

Individualism prescribes no code of ethics but the profitableness of unimpaired experience.

Socialism: "The abolition of that individual action on which modern societies depend, and the substitution of a regulated system of co-operative action."

Individualism: The enlargement of that non-invasive individual action on which modern societies depend and the encouragement of a voluntary system of extensive co-operation.

S.: "A science of reconstructing society on an entirely new basis, by substituting the principle of association for that of competition in every branch of industry."

I.: The science of reconstructing society on a basis of equal freedom by substituting the principle of unlimited liberty of a voluntary association for that of monopoly—special legal privileges and restrictive legislation.

S.: "Any theory or system of local organization which would abolish entirely or in greater part the individual effort and competition on which modern society rests, and substitute co-operation, would introduce a more perfect and equal distribution of the products of labor, and would make land and capital as the instruments of production, the joint possession of the community."

I.: That system of socialism that would promote the largest effectual individual initiative effort, by abolishing all monopolies and repealing all invasive restrictions, leaving all natural resources and rights the full opportunity to be utilized by more and more extensive voluntary co-operation and which would secure to labor the full product by making land and all other natural resources subject to occupancy and use only; by making capital subject to the direction, only, of he who produces it and let labor be as free to apply itself as to effect any disposition of its products.

"Socialism is simply applied Christianity, the Golden Rule applied to every day life."

Individualism is the philosophy applied "Mind your own business," with the diamond rule of kindness thrown in to make a "blameless" life.

"Socialism being the product of evolution, the only danger lies in obstructing it."

Individualists are not unlikely to regard Socialism as "The Coming Slavery" and regret that a System of State Regulation of the Industries, etc. is heralded as a synonym of progress and which ultimately is not unlikely to compel "obstructionists" to desist. "No thinking man will contradict that associated industry is the most powerful agent of production and that the principles of association are susceptible of further and beneficial development"—(John Stuart Mill.)

The function of government is not the organization of Industry as socialism would have—to inaugurate an armored system of co-operation or to compel citizens to associate in economic endeavor—but to further freedom of association by restricting invasions, if restraining the invader can be called "government."

"Socialism has in view as the ultimate end the public or collective ownership and management of the means of production and distribution." (Walter Thomas Mills.)

The Individualist thinks "Yes! and the laborer too." Regulative agency, outside of the real owner of labor's products, has no respect for the right of laborer to regulate that agency. The best regulation is possible only where the laborer himself is free to effect it.

Socialism recognizes the right of the laborer to the unlimited opportunity to produce—and to the full product of his labor.

Individualism recognizes as well not only his right to the full product of his labor but the right to regulate the methods and means of its production and disposition in every particular, provided of course, he does not violate the right of his fellowmen to do likewise. This means progress—not compulsion, I believe.

General Sherman says "War is Hell."

Socialists say "Competition is War."

Individualists, "Monopoly is worse than War."

Socialists confuse "Monopoly" with "Competition."

Individualists and socialists too, should make a distinction.

Monopoly is the cause of most of the economic evil in our present social system. Monopolists manage to prevent competition of capital by means of legislative control of money, by obligations on or acquisition of, most of the land and consequently the means of transportation and commercial industries, and lastly, by patents on tools and other means of production. Thus they allow unlimited competition of labor—but this is not free competition at all. It is evidently foolish to attempt to regulate this one-sided struggle when less effort will serve to repeal these monster monopolies which are the full and sufficient cause of our economic inequalities. To further the comprehension of the distinction I would make between what is monopoly and what is competition I will append two more definitions, the originator of which together with the two appearing at the head of this article, I must acknowledge to be that admirable author of "The Cityless and Countryless World," Prof. Henry Olerich.

"Monopoly is a legislative grant, giving to an individual or class of individuals special legal privileges."

"Competition is an emulous, non-monopolistic endeavor to give better bargains than are given by our emulators."

Trusting these comparisons will help enlarge the conception of relative importance of the proposal that appeals for political action of a kind calculated to create a universal monopoly and the kind calculated to reduce it at least to the sole business of dealing with the invasive individual—I ask, which do you choose as the path of progress?

CASSIUS V. COOK.

A YOUNG MAN talented and of wide experience wishes employment. Experienced mostly as a farm hand, teamster, fireman, hotel worker and vegetarian cook.

H. MCK., Austin, care Lucifer.

Personal—A young man would like to meet readers of Lucifer residing on South Side. Address J. C. M., 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

TOLSTOI'S NEW WORK.

The Slavery of Our Times.

With Portrait of the Gifted Author, and Introduction by the Translator, Aylmer Maude.

CHAPTER TITLES,

I., Goods Porters Who Work Thirty-Seven Hours; II., Society's Indifference While Men Perish; III., Justification of the Existing Position of Sciences; IV., The Assertion of Economic Science that Rural Laborers Must Enter the Factory System; V. Why Learned Economists Assert what is False; VI., Bankrupts of th Socialist Ideal; VII., Culture or Freedom? VIII., Slavery Exists Among Us; IX., What is Slavery? X., Laws Concerning Taxes, Land and Property; XI., Laws the Cause of Slavery; XII., The Essence of Legislation Is Organized Violence; XIII., What Are Governments? Is it Possible to Exist Without Governments? XIV., How Can Governments Be bolished? XV., What Should Each Man Do? An Afterword.

Well printed on heavy paper. Substantially bound. 186 pages. Price, 65 cents.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer the Light Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only." Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem. Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization. The Folly and Cruelty of it All. Price 15c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

The Ladies' "PERFECT" Sanitary Protector.

The only Sanitary Protector on the market made of pure rubber and perfectly soft and pliable; will last for years; can be worn with perfect comfort, can be adjusted to any size, no canvas, no cloth, but pure rubber.

This is something that no woman can afford to be without. Perfectly sanitary, comfortable, indispensable and safe.

Price reduced to $1. Order of L. Harman, 500 Fulton St. Chicago.

939.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author.

The Sex Passion.
Man, the Ungrown.
Woman, the Serf.
Woman in Freedom
Marriage: a Retrospect.
Marriage: a Forecast.
The Free Society.
Some remarks on the early star and sex worships.
Notes—On the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population.

The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. Price, $1.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

WHITMAN'S IDEAL DEMOCRACY, AND OTHER WRIVINGS.

BY HELENA BORN.

Comprising besides the title essay, Thoreau's Joy in Nature; Poets of Revolt: Shelley, Whitman, Carpenter; Whitman's Altruism; Individualism versus Organization: Ingenuities of Economic Argument; The Last Stand Against Democracy in Sex; Inequality in Divorce; Marriage Safeguards. With portrait of author and biographical introduction by Helen Tufts. 125 pages. Edition limited to 500 copies; each copy numbered. Fine paper, uncut pages, bound in boards, paper label. Price $1.

Agents Wanted To sell the Toltec Dandruff Cure and the Toltec Hair Dressing (restores natural color) Are clean and perfect. Liberal commission. Write for circulars. Address; The Toltec Remedies Co., Box 1307 Denver Colo.

"Pages of Socialist History." By W. Tcherkesoff. This book is recommended to Socialists of all schools, as it deals with the history of the "International" and the attitude of Marx and Engels towards Bakounin. Paper covers, 25 cents By mail, 30 cents

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 480 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.

ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $2.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. B. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (B. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.

BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth, $1.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Condemned, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close references to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 31 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 256 pages, 25c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

DARWIN'S TREE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. G. Spence. 178 pages. 25c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Eclectide Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 47 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 2-column index of 11 pages. Cloth. $3.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 10c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian religion has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 160 pages. 40c. Postage, 5c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the Indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Siemens and David Overmyer. 25c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 25c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 529 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HILDA'S HOME. Ross Grant. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 250 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Scotoland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 97 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Voltey, and Voltaire. 25c.

IN HELL, AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

KORADINE. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us not wreathe on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1892, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III. (1899). Cloth, $1.25. Postage, 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 428 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 30c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 25c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Repulsion; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Fruitful Facts; Social sins; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Fruitful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Tuberculosis in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Tradition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, H. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULERS IN THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 25c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponge, the Tromblesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in one volume, $1.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and initial. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are hand painted in water colors. Covers stenciled upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers stenciled upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Very handsome gift book. 50c. brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 50c. brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 50c. All in one volume, $1.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Marietta), Homelessness of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 287 pages. 25c.

THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1656 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Witches and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Denied "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old assertion said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstitions they have begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and asceticism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 32 large pages; twelve copies, 25c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 10c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. H. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A modern protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution. Its effects upon offspring and the influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 15c.

THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1761, noted for its highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuit craft and is a plain index to the underhand working of that order against the welfare of individuals and society. 25c.

THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 10c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Yelled Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Wilson). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $2.25.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Darling. 15c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Relationships. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the bliss of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 3, 1896. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done women by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo. 179 pages. 50c.

Address M. HARMAN, 503 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VI., No. 41. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, OCT., 23 [E. M. 302. [C. E. 1902.] WHOLE No. 940

THE MAN WHO WON.

He kept his soul unspotted
  And he went upon his way,
And he tried to do some service
  For the people day by day;
He had time to cheer the doubter
  Who complained that hope was dead;
He had time to help the cripple
  When the way was rough ahead;
He had time to guard the orphan, and, one day, well satisfied
With the talents that were given him, he closed his eyes and died.

He had time to see the beauty
  That the earth spread all around;
He had time to hear the music
  In the shells the children found;
He had time to keep repeating,
  As he bravely worked away:
"It is splendid to be living
  In the splendid world today!"
But the crowds—the crowds that hurry
  After golden prizes—said
That he never had succeeded,
  When the clods lay o'er his head—
He had dreamed—"He was a failure," they compassionately sighed,
For the man had little money in his pockets when he died.

—Chicago "Record-Herald."

Heart to Heart With Critics.

The single taxers who demur to that view of rent originally propounded in Lucifer by Lillian Harman, but illustrated by me (which is what seems to have rattled them particularly), appear unanimous in thinking that the value imparted to land for which a new use has been found, is not created but drawn away from some other land. This is not according to their prophet. Henry George says that no matter how much the productiveness of the earth increases, rent swallows all above the minimum necessary to support labor and tempt capital. But only a general rise of rent can do any such thing. If discovery of a use to which coal oil could be put raised rent in Pennsylvania merely by lowering it elsewhere, then labor and capital must have gained on rent in all places where it fell not through their becoming less productive but through their being outrun. On the other hand, if rent rose in Pennsylvania and stood still elsewhere, this was due to creation of value (wealth) in Pennsylvania. But he who finds a new means of creating wealth is a public benefactor. It is not the interest of the community to discourage him by saying that his reward for showing them, perhaps at the expense of a life's labor, how to create fifty thousand dollars a year, shall be one dollar a year as his share of single tax; and, if you choose to be casuistical, I see no "justice" in it. His "just" and "natural" reward is what people find it worth while to pay him for his "claim of priority." I might leave the single taxers to find a way out of this dilemma, one of many which vitiate the philosophy of Henry George; but I will be generous and help them, with a chance to say I quibble, by stating that in my judgment a rise of rent at one place does not necessarily mean a fall at another, that vicinity to population is only one factor in the value of land, that what draws labor and capital to any place is the prospect of a larger reward than they could formerly get elsewhere, without which prospect rent will not rise, but with which prospect it must rise while (very likely) remaining stationary at other points. As to the difference between economic rent and monopoly rent, the former is acquired through simple possession, the other only through proprietorship; on the difference between which any Anarchist (or any shyster) can give Mr. Barnes some pointers. Proprietorship (Proudhon's "property"—"la propriete c'est le vol") would be abolished by Anarchy. As I am sure it would not by the single tax, I do not see that this would touch the real evil of landlordism at all.

Adeline Champney thinks no one would be further from the idea of a common cause between prostitutes and free women than the prostitutes themselves. They represent in its perfection "the monster superstition" "that men have sexual needs which women must supply, and in recognition of this service women must receive support." They can understand marriage, which is another phase of the same superstition, but not freedom which repudiates it. This is the old story. Prostitutes are a class—they are all alike—one rule will apply to any of them! But they are not more like each other than like women who are not in their line, and classes are "idols of the den" which exist only in the mind of the classifier. Adeline Champney herself is witness that this "superstition" is the basis not only of marriage and prostitution but "many a so-called free union." Then it is not what distinguishes prostitutes from married women or free women. What does is the social law, which married people, as such, are interested in maintaining, though it bears hard on them as individuals, especially on the married women, but which prostitutes and free women have a common interest in overthrowing. The law is the common enemy; let us know no controversy with whoever will aid, no matter in what way, against it!

For the third time—which is lucky—I now inquire whether the editor's proposal (Aug. 28) that his "Heart to Heart Talks" "should be on the plan or plane of equality" (italics his) agrees with "monopolizing" (his own expression) three whole pages of Lucifer for the purpose of asking me, by name, a series of questions, which if I did not answer, it would naturally be inferred I could not or dared not, and then refusing me the space I am taking here for a reply? Also, whether it is fair to give a correspondent space for an "emphatic denial" of statements I made, and me not a third of the same space to notice him? If this does not appear in print, I shall know these things do harmonize and shall have no difficulty in drawing certain rather obvious corollaries. But if it does appear, then Mr. Clarkson's readers will know that I claim so little space because I do not see his "emphatic denial" denies anything I care to prove. If the Montreal asses are more asinine than I had supposed possible, that is just my experience with the very same variety in other cities. Similarly, I answer the editor only thus briefly, because I am persuaded that the more matter he writes like his last three long letters on vaccination &c. the more he must hurt whatever he represents. I told him so once, which was like a friend "thinking aloud." To go on telling him so, since he won't believe it, would be like a bore, who does not know where to stop. I do. I have no motive to discourage his hurting the anti-vaccination cause, and no wish to encourage his hurting himself, or the cause of woman! Whether, therefore, a more detailed reply to his many highly personal questions would silence him or set him off again, I see a reason for not giving it.

Bertha Moore is right in saying that the spoken word affects the mind at every point. Also that there is no defect in the English language calling for immediate supply. But her plea for the pronoun "they" and its cases, as a substitute for "he or she" strikes me as eminently untimely. Mrs. Stowe was a woman of genius and a woman of learning, who wrote a pleasant colloquial style. The following frightful solecism is from her best known book. "Miss Ophelia was decidedly 'curis'—a term by which a southern servant implies that his or her betters don't exactly suit them." When a writer like Mrs. Stowe is capable of this, and when hundreds of sensational scribblers are cultivating unintelligibility, on purpose, as a piquancy, the moral of the moment is not that gross blunders may be excused, but that the really bad kind can all be avoided by the simple recipe of never writing or speaking faster than you think. I am an Anarchist in grammar as well as other things, and have no reverence for Lindley Murray's rules "deduced from the practise of the best writers." But in grammar, as in morals, the great argument for Anarchy is that rules deduced from other people's practice do not promote but conflict with a fundamental rule, which is subjective. The fundamental subjective rule of morals is to follow your conscience. The fundamental subjective rule of grammar is to say exactly what you mean. The way to be good is to obey your conscience habitually. The way to write well is to be quite sure what you mean. The most ignorant person who observes this "one thing needful" has no difficulty in making others understand him. John Bunyan comes nearer than perhaps any English writer to that classic standard common among Greeks and Romans, who were seldom in a hurry—to leave nothing unsaid, to use no superfluous words, to use each word in one sense, —the most obvious, and to arrange words in the order of ideas. It could have cost Mrs. Stowe only a moment's reflection to save three words and an inextricable jumble of subject with predicate if she had written "by which southern servants imply that their betters don't exactly suit them." If she lacked time to reflect, that is the fault of this busy age, very much aggravated by imitation of "the best writers'" eccentricities without their genius. If ever the English language becomes as awkward a vehicle of modern thought as Latin was in the eighth century, and similarly is supplanted by local dialects which, without aspiring to be smart, are content with being natural, its destruction lies along that road. The recent practice of stating that a proposition applies equally to either sex is very seldom needed, and I will bet is unknown to plain people whose ideas do not require study for their expression. With care enough to avoid it when unnecessary, no apology for a barbarous use of "they" can be found. The parallel of "you" is neither correct nor encouraging. "You," to one person, is, or rather was till it became universal, a foolish magnification—the correlative of the imperial "we." The Quakers and Red Republicans were too late for their protests against it to be useful; but it is a precedent of the kind to avoid, not to follow. C. L. JAMES.

[Mr. James' comment on Clarkson was not refused because of the space it would have occupied. It seemed to me a mere flat contradiction, with no argument or evidence to support it. I had requested correspondents to refrain from that style, and they should not be surprised if such replies do not appear in Lucifer. This applies to those who agree with Lucifer's editors as well as those who differ from them. L. H.]

The Difference Between Them.

In number 937 of Lucifer, C. L. James asks this question:

"Will some one who conceives prostitutes to be made of different stuff from well-behaved women, explain in what way she appears unlike some other victim of the blind archer?"

Of course there is no one, whose philosophy is sound, who thinks that there is more than one kind of human "stuff." Essentially, all things are one; but phenomenally, they are widely different. Mankind are like pictures in the kaleidescope, which, while no two of them may ever be exactly alike, are all produced in the same way and by exactly the same number of colored pieces of glass. I think, therefore, that the question Mr. James asks is altogether an idle one. That the vicious and the virtuous trace their origin to exactly the same source is in itself no defense or justification of the prostitute. In the same way Peter Kropotkin and J. P. Morgan are made out of the identical human stuff, but I shall never for that reason come to esteem the latter as I do the former.

If there is such a thing (I am speaking practically and not metaphysically) as crime the plutocrat and the prostitute are both criminals. There is the same difference between a harlot and a virtuous woman, between Cleopatra and Lucrece, as there is between philanthropy and murder. I do not think there is anything more unspeakably infamous than harlotry. As fierce as poverty often is under the present industrial regime, it is not fierce enough to condone it.

Considered naturally, I know there is no reason why the relation of the sexes should not be as promiscuous as caprice might dictate. There is no natural reason why a dozen men should not find favor from the same woman, even as a dozen horses drink from the same trough, but there are many and valid artificial or civilized reasons for the essentially tyrannical exclusive possession in which every well-balanced man holds the woman of his choice. I am not one of those who deny woman the privilege of doing as she pleases. There is nothing I believe in more firmly than self-ownership. But while the woman owns herself I also own myself, and I shall never be Roman enough to lend a friend my sexual partner. It is not my business however if my neighbor is given to such practice.

Thus, although I accept the anarchist ideal of freedom on one side—the merely negative non-interference of one man with another—I cannot accept it on the communistic side. I do not believe in any kind of positive institutions for the regulation of the conduct of mankind. I do not wish to be subject to any power besides that of a rational and enlightened public opinion, which, while indirect, is still the most despotic and wholesome of all rulers.

The logic involved in the question of Mr. James makes no distinction whatever between men and women—the ignorant and the wise, the vicious and the virtuous. In a transcendental sense, such logic holds, but practically, it does not. So far as nature is concerned, we are all equal, but so far as man is concerned, we are all unequal. The inequality is unmistakably manifest, and it is it alone that makes the abolishment of government an absolute necessity. Where men are equal, government is superfluous and where they are unequal it is impossible.

I do not conceive that civilization needs parliaments, congresses, courts, judges, policemen, et id omne genus, any more than I conceive that language, science or art needs the same. Progress is a spontaneous growth, and while government is a kind of go-cart to it, it should be and is gradually removed as the savage-child grows into the civilized-man. The valid objection to government among people like ourselves is that it reverses the natural order of development in the consideration of things as it should consider persons. To illustrate: The uses we make of iron, copper, etc., are made without any regard to the metals per se. gold may be put to what we call a base use as readily as iron. In the mechanic and building arts, the part that each metal plays is determined altogether by its fitness for the part. Think how unfortunate it would be if the different metals that enter into the construction of a locomotive or build ing came to their places at random, or, if gold and silver were put to every use just because they looked pretty. And yet such is the way we build politically. We permit the man with money to undertake anything regardless of his fitness. The ignorant and the vicious are as likely—more likely—to come into leadership than the wise and good. It is now possible for a Chicago prostitute to own all the real estate of that city and thereby exercise a paramount influence on its destiny. In a rational society this would be, as it should be, impossible. The harlot—that is the woman who, under any circumstances, yields her person without love—would be a perfect outcast. Society would then be divided into classes as much as it is now, but each class would be in just the place and have just the influence —not direct power—that it ought to have. Nor would they be separated "by artificial lines," for I do not conceive that there is anything artificial in separating man from monkey, the white man from the negro, the wise man from the fool, the plutocrat from the philanthropist, the individualist from the governmentalist and the harlot from the free lover. I do not stand for a system therefore that is going to make mankind up into an anthropoidal hash, notwithstanding I know that all men at bottom are made out of exactly the same stuff. The diamond is carbon and so is coal, but we do not decorate ourselves with chips of anthracite, etc.

The quasi-defence of prostitutes by anarchist papers and writers should, I think, cease. We may justly blame government, for the most part, for their existence, but still there are virtuous women in spite of government, and between a woman such as I conceive Lillian Harman to be and a denizen of Boiler avenue, I think there is a gulf as impassable as that between Miranda and Caliban. Like the preachers and the moralists, therefore we must continue to divide mankind into classes. Their scientific classification, however, will take place of itself, when we shall have outlived the present procrustean governmental machine that opposes with its whole force the natural inequalities of mankind. As a result of such sociologic perversity, we see the thunder of Jove in the hands of pigmies, while the true giants of the race pass through life unnoticed and unheard.

JAS. ARMSTRONG, JR.

Aunt Tabitha Trott Expresses Her Views.

Thomas Trott, my beloved husband, has very marked views on many of the affairs and events that keep society in a hubbub the greater part of the time. Thomas expresses his views in very emphatic language when he meets a worthy opponent, and I must say that your Aunt Tabitha is somewhat that way, too.

After I had finished my after-supper work to night I seated myself with my darning at hand, and listened to what Prof. Wheeler, of the University of California, had to say about co-education. As Thomas ended the article he leaned back in his chair, wiped his spectacles and turning to me, said,

"Well, I think it is about time to stop this thing."

"Time to stop what thing, Thomas?" said I.

"This thing of crowding the boys into back seats in everything. Its getting so that a young man has no chance when it comes to starting out in life. I'll be durned if the women ain't making it so that men will have to emigrate to some other planet."

"I'll bet you won't do it till some of those girls invent an air ship that'll carry you!" says I.

"They never'll do it!" says Thomas, "for they ain't smart enough."

"But you say they are crowding the men back in everything," I said. "According to your estimate of man's ability, the girls must be pretty smart, indeed, to do that."

"Oh, there are smart women enough, in fact they are getting too blamed smart. That's the trouble."

"What is it the Professor says about the proportion of girls to boys in the schools, Thomas?"

"He says there's two girls to one boy seeking college education now-a-days."

"Well," says I. "That shows that they have twice as much laudable ambition as the boys. Not so many years ago, Thomas, and its within your recollection, a girl was thought to be very presumptuous to aspire to an education. You men taunted woman with being ignorant. Now you want to stop her from getting away from her ignorance."

"No, I don't want to do that, but there should be a limit to this crowding young men back."

"Oh yes," said I, "but it is all right to crowd the girls back. Thank the spirit of the times, though, for the fact that the girls begin to realize why men dread their enlightenment. You male creatures fear that if the girls learn too much they will cease to be the weak, pliant mortals they have always been, and you can't bear to imagine the dire results of a change."

"If women, after thorough education, would continue to be the household drudge without complaint, letting you men have all the liberties and the greater part of the pleasures of life, you would not fear their education."

"But the young men are getting disgusted with the preponderance of the girls in schools and colleges, and it will have a bad effect on them."

"Of course they get disgusted with the element that shows up by strong contrast the lazy, shiftless character of the average student. The boys go to college to pass away the time at foot ball or other games; in running around the country giving more or less meritorious exhibitions of their musical or clownish cleverness, while the girls put in the time in hard work and come out with more honors than the egotistic male student."

"I say, Thomas," said I, "it shows that the girl of today is a creature to be proud of. If she has the right kind of training her independence and progressive spirit augur well for coming generations."

"I am glad you think so, Tabitha," said Thomas, "but I am not so optimistic."

"Of course not," said I, "for it takes time to make you men see anything. The man in Turkey thinks it means death to the race to let a woman look outside of a harem, where ignorance is cultivated. The Indian would think his life a failure if his squaw should cease being a beast of burden. Our men are but a step removed from the Turk or the Indian. You fear that woman will get above slaving her life away in a kitchen for a couple of new calico dresses per year, and a little grudgingly doled out pin money."

"Now, Tabitha Trott," exclaimed Thomas, who was getting a little warm under my fire, "am I such a niggard with you?"

"Present company is always excepted," says I, "and you know that I never would submit to what millions of women do every year."

"No, I think you are able to stand up for yourself," says Thomas.

"You are right," said I, "and I am glad that so many of my sisters are waking up to the fact that if they want equal rights and the same liberty that man demands they must be equally prepared to enforce their right to all that makes life bearable. Let the college presidents howl, and let the lovers of servile womanhood groan all they want to, the fact remains that woman has had a taste of freedom, and it has whetted her appetite for more, and she'll have it in spite of the Harpers and Professor Wheelers. Long live co-education I say, and if the young men don't want the girls to beat them in the race let them soak some of the egotism out of their swollen heads and, as you slangy men say, get a hustle on themselves and see to it that they keep up with the girls. A little less pugilism and cuteness in general would help the boys, I think."

Thomas merely grunted and turned back to his paper. He always knows when he has had enough of an argument. I could not resist the impulse to give him a parting shot as follows:

"I am really sorry for the poor young men who think their sisters should be barred from the colleges. It must be painful to them to see the dear girls exhibit greater facilities for absorbing learning. Then, too, when the girls are around the dear boys can't swap indecent stories and tell lies about the number of their conquests among the more susceptible sisters. If the benighted youths only could realize it, the very fact of the equal and free mingling of the sexes in the educational institutions of the country tends to benefit both sides of the line. That's my opinion, Thomas, and you are welcome to it."

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

The Outlook.

At this writing—middle of October—the outlook for farmers, fruit growers and live stock raisers, is much better than it was a year ago, at least so far as the larger areas of the great Mississippi valley are concerned. Twelve months ago thousands of these farmers were drawing water many miles for family use, and driving their animals long distances daily, to lakes and rivers, to quench their thirst, while pastures and meadows were literally burnt up by drouth, and corn crops and nearly all other crops were failures.

Now, instead of the intense heat and aridity of last year we have, over this same territory, the opposite extreme—too much moisture and a plentiful lack of sunshine and heat. Yet, notwithstanding excess of rain and lack of sun, the crops for man and beast are abundant, giving farmers, stockmen and fruit-culturists assurance against want of food, besides a surplus to exchange for things they need but cannot or do not wish to produce.

In cities, towns and in manufacturing and mining districts, on the other hand, the outlook for the near approaching winter is vastly different; it is anything but encouraging: and this not because of any lack of the products of factories, mills and mines—which products the agricultural classes are anxious to get in exchange for their surplus of food products—but simply and solely because of our crude and barbaric system of exchanges and because of our insane devotion to certain old-time superstitions, such as belief in the right to own the earth and what it contains; the right to debar others—dog-in-the-manger-like—from using the earth and what it covers, except on conditions that may mean slavery the most abject to him who needs but does not own the earth.

Out of this old-time superstition arises RENT and ROYALTIES—which latter term means the right of kings—from the word ROY, which means a king, the right of kings to receive tribute for that which has cost them no labor.

Closely allied to this barbaric superstition is another scarcely less harmful, namely, the right of kings—or of civil governments—to issue a restricted, a very limited, form of currency called MONEY! which money while ostensibly intended to represent real wealth, represents only a very small part of real wealth, and thus puts it in the power of those who issue or control this currency to exact tribute—unearned tribute or royalty—in the shape of INTEREST for the use of that restricted currency, whereas, under a sane or rational system of currency ALL wealth, all real values, could be monetized, and thus he who has anything to sell, if only his labor, could have money without paying tribute, royalty for the use of the same.

Another leading feature, or danger, of this artificial, this barbaric system of currency, is that, by its restriction in amount, it can be HOARDED in the hands of a few, who, when occasion serves, or when almighty GREED prompts, can force a financial PANIC, without any relation to scarcity of real values, during the reign of which panic and through the legal trick called MORTGAGE, the holder of notes and bonds payable in the legal restricted currency, can force payment of debts at valuations that mean financial ruin to countless thousands of industrious and honest people.

This brief outline gives but a very partial and meager view of some of the basic causes which make millions of people, at this precise hour, look forward with fear and trembling to the closing down of warm weather, and to scan the market reports of the advancing price of coal, of breadstuffs and of other things necessary in providing for the wants of family life.

* * *

Whatever may be the result of the efforts of Theodore Roosevelt and of his cabinet of legal advisers, towards a settlement of the great coal strike in Pennsylvania, it may be accepted in advance that nothing will be done by them to unsettle the two old-time superstitions just mentioned, namely, belief in the right of the few to own the earth and what it covers—including of course the right of the few to own the highways over which commodities must be transported—and belief in the right of governments to issue a restricted currency, by the shrewd manipulation of which the governing classes can live and grow enormously rich at the expense of the real producers of wealth. The interests of this Republican administration—the interests of EVERY administration by whatever name it may be called—lies with the privileged classes, and not with the unprivileged masses. Hence no attempt will be tolerated looking towards the abolition of land ownership by the monopolistic few, or the abolition of the right of "government" to issue an exclusive legal tender currency with the supplementary right to tax out of existence every other form of currency that would compete with this money of privilege,—this highway robber that holds up and robs all industries, all production, all interests, except its own.

In his lecture on money—which lecture brought him many thousands of dollars, Phineas T. Barnum advised his hearers to "get on the right side of money; make money your servant; make money work for you, for until you do, money will be your master, your enemy, and will keep you poor and unsuccessful in everything you undertake"—I quote from memory. M. H.

A Birthday Greeting.

One more greeting—one more message before the season closes at Harmony Home—a birthday greeting to the widely dispersed members of Lucifer's household, or, as some may prefer it, the widely dispersed Light-Bearer army—dispersed but not because of defeat nor demoralization, but for the better carrying forward of the work of World Enlightenment!

On the 12th day of this current month Lucifer's editor, according to the record, reached and passed the seventy-second milestone in his earthly pilgrimage—more than twice the number usually counted as the average of human life. Whether these years have been worthily spent, whether they have been honorably and usefully lived by him is for others to say, and whether the lessons learned during these years of experience are worth the cost of printing and reading by others, by the younger and less experienced members of Lucifer's Household, is perhaps for them to say rather than for him who pens these lines.

That this septuagenarian editor has had experiences such as do not fall to the lot of the average man or woman will probably be conceded by those who have been readers of these pages for some months or years. Experience does not always teach wisdom, yet that it should so teach will probably be admitted by all. I make no claims to superior wisdom, whether the result of experience or because of superior mental powers; the paths that I have traveled have not always been of my own choosing and yet if I could have foreseen whither these paths would lead and what would be my experiences therein, I am not sure that I would have chosen differently. With Alice Carey, in the poem many of our readers doubtless have seen, I am inclined to be thankful for every experience, whether pleasant or unpleasant for the time being—thankful even for the mistakes, the CRIMES, so-called, that I may have committed. The more bitter the experience the more useful and lasting the lesson to be derived therefrom. A life all sunshine and roses, all prosperity and pleasurable sensations, with no clouds or storms of adversity, could only be productive of a weak and worthless character, and in the end would clog and disgust with its monotony.

* * *

Referring to what was said in last week's issue in regard to imprisonment I want to repeat and emphasize the statement that in offering myself a possible victim of further prosecution as a "law-breaker," I am not seeking notoriety, not seeking the honor and glory of martyrdom, but do confess to being emulous of the high character outlined by Emerson when he wrote—see his Essay on Heroism:

"The characteristic of genuine heroism is its persistency. All men have wandering impulses, fits and starts of generosity, but when you have resolved to be great [not common nor petty nor mean], abide by yourself, and do not weakly try to reconcile yourself with the world. The heroic cannot be the common, nor the common the heroic. Yet we have the weakness to expect the sympathy of people in those actions whose excellence is that they outrun sympathy, and appeal to a tardy justice. If you would serve your brother, because it is fit for you to serve him, do not take back your words when you find that prudent people do not commend you. Be true to your own act, and congratulate yourself if you have done something strange and extravagant, and broken the monotony of a decorous age. It was a high counsel that I once heard given to a young person, 'Always do what you are afraid to do.' A simple manly character need never make an apology, but should regard its past action with the calmness of Phocion, when he admitted that the event of the battle was happy, yet did not regret his dissuasion from the battle."

* * *

Yes, I confess to an ardent longing, not simply to be thought by others to be heroic in the sense herein outlined, but to really BE the character, the truly heroic soul, portrayed by Emerson in the quoted lines, and also when he says, "I see not any road of perfect peace, which a man can walk but to take counsel of his own bosom. Let him quit too much association, let him go home much, and establish himself in those courses he approves. The unremitting retention of simple and high sentiments in obscure duties, is hardening the character to that temper which will work with honor, if need be, in the tumult or on the scaffold. Whatever outrages have happened to men, may befall a man again. . . . . Coarse slander, fire, tar and feathers, and the gibbet, the youth may freely bring home to his mind, and with what sweetness of temper he can, and inquire how fast he can fix his sense of duty, braving such penalties, whenever it may please the next newspaper, and a sufficient number of his neighbors to pronounce his opinions incendiary."

* * *

Arrival of carrier prevents further message this week. Time and other work permitting, and no protests being heard meantime, a supplementary message may be sent over the telephone next week, from yours fraternally, M. HARMAN.

Until your expected troubles come right up to your face, and really call for your attention, banish them from your mind; and when these difficulties actually demand solution, you will be surprised how easy this is. Nine-tenths of the worries in the world are over things that never happen; and the other tenth is over things of little or no consequence.—Fred Burry's Journal.

If your subscription expires with No. 940, or before this number, please let us hear from you.

"Free" Socialism.

Chas. H. Kerr challenges Mr. Lloyd "to point to any passage in the writings of any Socialist of international reputation which advocates state tyranny over persons." In "Basis of Social Democracy," Chap. IX., Karl Kautzky says:

"All forms of present wages: remuneration by the hour or piece, special bonuses for extra valuable work. . . . all the forms of contemporary wages, a little modified, are perfectly practicable in a Socialist society."

How could such arrangement be made without organized power?

In Chap. X. on "Socialism and Liberty," Kautzky says:

Socialist production is not compatible with liberty of work, that is to say with the worker's freedom to work when or how he likes. . . . It is true, under the rule of capitalism a worker still enjoys the liberty up to certain degree. If he does not quite like a factory, he can find work elsewhere. In a Social Democratic society, all the means of production will be concentrated by the State and the latter will be the only employer; there will be no choice. The workman of today enjoys more liberty than he will possess in a Socialist society.

"It is not Social Democracy that eliminates the right of choosing work and time, but the development of production itself."

If this is not "state tyranny over persons," what is it? Or is the "development of production" beyond human control? But I quote again:

"Goal and movement in the Social Democracy belong together and are not to be separated from each other. When, however, goal and movement do come in conflict with each other, it is the latter that must give way. In other words, social development stands higher than the interests of the proletariat and the Social Democracy cannot protect proletarian interests when social development stands in the way."

"Social development stands higher than the interest of the workers," says also the capitalist. In what does Mr. Kerr differ from him?

Why Anarchists do not vote? Because they cannot vote for an institution which they strive to abolish. Neither can a "free" Socialist do so consistently. A. ISAAK.

Call for the Second Annual Congress of the National Liberal Party.

TO THE FREETHINKERS OF THE UNITED STATES.

You are hereby earnestly requested to attend the annual Congress of the National Liberal Party in Lexington, Kentucky, Friday, Saturday, Sunday, January, 23, 24, 25, 1903, (303).

The emancipation of the human mind from the bondage of theological superstition has made wonderful progress since the days of the immortal Bruno; but in spite of the culture of modern times, there is still danger that the black flag of Theocracy may float in triumph over the capitol at Washington, and enshroud the Republic of Paine and Jefferson in the darkness of the Middle Ages.

At the close of the 18th century it dawned upon the minds of these great thinkers that all men are created equal and this priceless conception made the 19th century the most marvelous and the happiest period in the history of the world.

Previous to this century of American Freedom the entire earth was filled with cruelty and barbarism and all mankind were under the galling yoke of kingly tyranny and priestly despotism. The very few of the world's inhabitants who could read and write had no illumination but the light of a candle and the work of the world was done by the muscles of man and beast. The human brain in this universal atmosphere of kingly and priestly slavery could know nothing of the laws of Nature and the chemical and physical properties of matter, nor of any of the processes of the world around them; and war, misery, pestilence, ignorance and famine were the common heritage of the human family.

This awful gloom that hung over the world like a funeral pall was dispelled by the Paines, the Jeffersons, the Franklins, and their comrades. Their successful revolt against the kings, the priests, tyrants of the earth, gave to the world a hundred years of hope, progress and unprecedented happiness.

To preserve the priceless fruits of their labors, and transmit them to those who are to come when we are gone, is the purpose of our organization. It can only be done by the combined and co-operative work of the lovers of liberty in America, and we confidently appeal to each and to all of you to join this great movement.

Unlike the 19th century the 20th has dawned upon us with the spirit of kingcraft and priestcraft re incarnated, and unless the soldiers of freedom rally like our fathers did to resist the power of kings and priests the freedom of the 19th century will be forever lost, the Republic overthrown and the hopes of humanity blasted.

In view of this appalling contemplation we confidently appeal to you to come by hundreds to this annual conference, and make it a memorable event in the history of our distracted country. It is a trite but truthful saying that "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty." Never before in the history of the world was there a more imperative demand for vigilance than now because it is an open secret that a tripartite agreement now exists among the political potentates of the earth, the priests of Mammon and the priests of Jehovah, to extinguish the torch of liberty and remand all the peoples of the earth back to a state of serfdom and vassalage.

We, therefore, urge you to come. Besides the election of officers for the ensuing year, other business of far-reaching significance and importance will come before the convention.

F. J. Bowles, President.
J. B. Wilson, Vice President.
Josephine K. Henry, First V. President.
Harriet M. Closz, Second V. President.
Morgan Walmsley, Treasurer.
W. F. Jamieson, Secretary.

Definitions.

Lucifer headed my first letter "Defense of State Socialism." I attempted definitions only. A doctrine cannot be very well defended or advocated until it is defined.

Mr. C. H. Kerr's remarks cause confusion. As I stated, he repudiates the state, then allows the state may run railroads. He is "distinctly opposed to the state as at present organized," but would have the working class "take control of the government, doing away with its coercive features, and conducting it henceforth in their own interest." This makes Mr. Kerr a state socialist as the term has been used in this country. What he means by "coercive features" is uncertain. Men are coerced for what is defined as crime. Will Mr. Kerr abolish laws defining crime and its punishment?

Mr. Kerr says there is not the slightest tendency toward any such split as I suggested. Either he has not heard the protests of the minority at the Peoria convention, or he is acting on campaign policy. There is abundance of evidence to support my statement.

The chief reason for a split is this: Both factions believe in common ownership of collective wealth; but the Social Democrats, or opportunists, or State Socialists, as you like, advocate this principle for any time or condition, while the "class conscious" faction advocate it only under such conditions as they may establish; as part of a program rather than a principle.

I commend the letters of R. B. Kerr on these subjects as clear, exact and logical.

C. F. Hunt.

Forty copies of Lucifer, no two alike, of 1901 will be sent to any address for 15 cents. Nine bundles for $1. We are anxious to place these papers where they will do good. Please let us have your orders soon.

VARIOUS VOICES.

May Hurd, Wellesley, Mass.:—I enclose $1 for my subscription to Lucifer. The paper, always good, has had some very interesting numbers of late. Why has Mary McLane not been reviewed? It is a remarkable book by a remarkable woman and the chapter on marriage is as good as any of us reformers could write. As she is not a reformer but just a natural perfect woman, barring a few minor defects, it seems to me the book should be noticed by those who hold nature above custom.

E. J. Paul, Oskaloosa, Iowa:—I send you this notice of a new force in our work. You will see that he does not rob your father and others of the glory of spreading the light before himself, but he is so universal that he is not hampered by any theory. Have written to Mattie Hursen and hope her other friends will, for she is a soul in distress and a kindly remembrance will help tide her "over the bar." Glad to see you mention Virna. She belongs to the movement. Lucifer never was better.

J. Warner Mills, Denver, Colo.:—We are trying at the present election to amend our constitution so as to permit a tax upon land values for local purposes, and to exempt any or all personal property or improvements such as the voters may choose to exempt. I enclose you a clipping from which you will see that I have had to give some attention to this reform. We are also seeking through what is known as the Rush Bill to amend the constitution so as to create the County and City of Denver and wipe out one set of the officers who live as parasites on the people, and permit the new municipal corporation to have full power of local self government by electing its own citizens to prepare a charter which shall be the fundamental law when adopted by a majority of those voting thereon. This Rush Bill has full provision for the initiative and referendum in making successive new charters, or in proposing amendments thereto. No franchises can be granted except upon prior vote of the people. These two measures with the eight hour amendment to the constitution are the local events of most interest to me personally, and to a large proportion of our people. Politics, of course, are being stirred as usual, but I have attended no political convention since 1896. Please find enclosed check for $10 to be used in any way that you or your father think will aid the cause or your bright and ably edited paper. Wishing you and your father prosperity and health in the advocacy of the fundamental, though tabooed principles that you so ably maintain, I am yours sincerely.

Mr. Baer's assurances that mining operations can proceed if non-union miners are protected by troops, implying as it does that there are plenty of men willing to work for the wages he pays, is either a wilful misrepresentation, or else there is no such prosperity among working men as Mr. Hanna and his plutocratic cronies are boasting of. According to Mr. Baer himself the wages of the 26,270 miners employed by the Reading mines, which he controls, average $296.20 a year. Mr. Mitchell puts it at much less, but never mind; let it go at Mr. Baer's figures. Out of this sum comes rents and rebates for powder, oil and company's doctor, leaving a net balance of $148—slightly more than $2.75 a week—for the support of a miner's family. If miners can be easily got for these wages provided they are protected by troops, what kind of prosperity is it that we are enjoying? Does it quite warrant the Republicans in declaring that prosperity is the foremost issue of the campaign, and urging the people to "stand pat."

It is a piteous wail that Congressman Grosvenor, of Ohio, sends up to J. Pierpont Morgan through the president of Mr. Morgan's ship trust. "Stop the coal strike, and stop it now, or the 9,000 miners in my district will vote against me!" is the burden of his cry. And so demoralized is Mr. Grosvenor that he silences his civic conscience and begs Morgan to interfere. If you do not, screams Grosvenor, there will be a Democratic Congress and your trusts will go to smash; but if you do, you will not only be the greatest man in the country but your trusts will continue to flourish under the fostering care of another grateful Republican Congress. Mr. Grosvenor's fears have run away with his discretion.—The Public.

The Woman Who Dares

BY URSULA N. GESTEFELD.

A novel, whose heroine seeks to find and realize her own individuality and, having found it, dares to maintain it in the marital relation. It is a carefully written story and meant to show the injustice of the marriage relation as usually regarded, and of the dual standard of morality, tacitly accepted however theoretically opposed. The subject is treated forcefully and directly, yet always tactfully and fairly, and possesses all the strength of moderation combined with just and equable criticism. The story reads more like events in real life than those of romance.

It is seldom that the most vital though most delicate of subjects is treated with such delicacy. The large number of letters from women received after its first publication is evidence that there is room for its heroine in many home.

"Here we have a well written story with a noble purpose. It is a woman's novel, and by that I do not mean that it is intended only for women; on the contrary, it ought to be read by every man in America who has the brain, conscience, and refinement of nature to appreciate its masterly presentation of what is the simple right, nay, more, is the sacred duty of every married woman, to demand the absolute right to her own person in wedlock no less than out of wedlock. . . . In the presentation of the vital thought found in these pages, Mrs. Gestefeld has given us a superb piece of work. It is a story of great vitality. The author is a thoughtful and a deeply spiritual woman. With the keen intuitive insight so often met with in profoundly spiritual natures, she has discerned one of the greatest moral crimes of the present." —The Arena.

Size 5 1-4x7 1-2 inches; 388 pages. Beautifully printed on laid paper, bound in green Holliston linen, and stamped in ink with original cover design. Price, $1.25, postpaid. The Gestefeld Publishing Co., Fulham, New York. Department LF.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer the Light Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Ladies' "PERFECT" Sanitary Protector.

The only Sanitary Protector on the market made of pure rubber and perfectly soft and pliable; will last for years; can be worn with perfect comfort, can be adjusted to any size, no canvas, no cloth, but pure rubber.

This is something that no woman can afford to be without. Perfectly sanitary, comfortable, indispensable and safe.

Price reduced to $1. Order of L. Harman, 500 Fulton St. Chicago.

A Private Maternity Home

Or Lying-in Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired.

For particulars and terms give description of case, and address.
Suite 65-119 LaSalle St., Chicago Ill. C. S. Wood, M. D.

940.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

To New Subscribers: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author.

The Sex Passion.
Man, the Ungrown.
Woman, the Serf.
Woman in Freedom
Marriage: a Retrospect.
Marriage: a Forecast.
The Free Society.
Some remarks on the early star and sex worships.
Notes—On the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population.

The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. Price, $1.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

WHITMAN'S IDEAL DEMOCRACY, AND OTHER WRITINGS.

BY HELENA BORN.

Comprising besides the title essay, Thoreau's Joy in Nature; Poets of Revolt: Shelley, Whitman, Carpenter; Whitman's Altruism; Individualism versus Organization: Ingenuities of Economic Argument; The Last Stand Against Democracy in Sex; Inequality in Divorce; Marriage Safeguards. With portrait of author and biographical introduction by Helen Tufts. 125 pages. Edition limited to 500 copies; each copy numbered. Fine paper, uncut pages, bound in boards, paper label. Price $1.

Agents Wanted To sell the Toltec Dandruff Cure and the Toltec Hair Dressing (restores natural color). Are clean and perfect. Liberal commission. Write for circulars. Address: The Toltec Remedies Co., Box 1367 Denver Colo.

"Pages of Socialist History." By W. Tcherkesoff. This book is recommended to Socialists of all schools, as it deals with the history of the "International" and the attitude of Marx and Engels towards Bakounin. Paper covers, 25 cents. By mail, 30 cents.
Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 486 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.

ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $1.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.

BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth, $1.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commanded, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 81 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 438 pages. 50c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 25c.

DARWIN, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. G. Ignoto. 178 pages. 25c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DOGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 50c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 42 chapters, 1,062 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $3.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A. and Cecile Chavannes. 50c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 10c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian religion has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 360 pages, 12mo. Postage, 9c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 25c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 25c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John H. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 219 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 320 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Scotoland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. Compiled by E. P. Roe. Introduction by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Brief biographical sketches of 37 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Volney, and Voltaire. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

KORADINE. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1891, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 25c; paper, 10c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III. (1889). Cloth, $1.25. Postage, 15c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 418 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 30c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression: Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 10c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Tradition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood to Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, S. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 40c; paper, 25c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsia, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $2.50, all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of nerveless tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are hand painted in water colors. Cover sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 25c.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Marietta), Reminiscence of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Lanchester League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 207 pages. 25c.

THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Witches and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated: "To all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 181 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW REGIME. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ancient saw: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and sexlessness; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 96 large pages; twelve copies, $1. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 10c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Withhold (Lucinda B. Chandler). Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (S. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present blighting management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1726, quoted by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuit craft and is a plain index to the underhand working of that order against the welfare of individuals and society. 15c.

THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 10c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Yclept Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Winne). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 15c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and no woman need go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $2.25.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Darling. 15c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Thomas Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 10c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of circling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on Paine's Birthday, 1896. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. The last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. How is now, a state of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 378 pages. 50c.

Address M. HARMAN, 600 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VI., No. 42. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, OCT. 30, E. M. 302. [C. E. 1902] WHOLE No. 941

LIBERTY.

O Liberty, I love thee passing well,
And spurn the sordid thoughts of those who tell
Of values compassed by betraying thee—
Cheap, cheap, too cheap the price at which they sell.

I love the rivers and the open air,
The clouds, the wilderness, and wild things there;
And say a true man is a forest tree,
By Nature planted deep and rooted fair.

I love the wind floods and the shaken sea,
The great blue sky tent's clean immensity,
The manly mountain and the pregnant plain;
With these the song soul breathes in sympathy.

I love the primal, ancient, granite fact,
The mystic meaning moving in the act;
The old world currents tiding in my brain
Make seem small loss the gewgaws I have lacked.

J. William Lloyd, in Conservator.

The "Trial" and Death of Ida C. Craddock.

Nulla manus belli, mutato judice, pura est—"Neither side is guiltless, if its adversary is appointed judge."—Lucan.

"Alas! how many causes that can plead well for themselves in the courts of Westminster, and yet in the general court of the universe, and in the free soul of man, have no word to utter."—Carlyle.

"By robbing Peter he paid Paul, he kept the moon from the wolves, and hoped to catch larks if ever the heavens should fall."—Rabelais.

On Friday, October 10, 1902, Judge Edward B. Thomas, of the United States District Court for New York, Eastern Division, presided at the trial of Ida C. Craddock, argued the cause against her, and brought in a verdict of guilty without leaving his seat.

In earlier days, the jury, in defense of the people against the powers that were, claimed the right to judge the law and the facts. In modern times, the accepted jurisprudence permits the jury to pass upon only the facts, putting into the hands of the judges the interpretation of the law. Judge Thomas, in a case of obscene libel, alleged, refuses to allow the jury to pass upon the important, the vital, fact of the character of the accused publication, declaring that obscenity is a matter of legal definition, with which the court only has to do, not a question of fact, to be ascertained by the jury. As the teachings found in Mrs. Craddock's booklet are new to him, he assumes they are obscene and therefore within the condemnation of the law, and so he tells the jury it has only to ascertain whether the publication was deposited for mailing, as charged in the indictment, and he repeatedly adds in a sort of aside that the depositing has been admitted by the defendant, thus virtually instructing the jury to convict, a thing he has no right to do. Judge Thomas pleaded well the cause of the Vice Society vs. Ida C. Craddock, and he won the cause in his own court, but it is something more than possible his decision may be reversed "in the general court of the universe, and in the free soul of man." Many a judge who convicted and sentenced innocence and justice in the ages gone is now exposed in the pillory of impartial history.

The Peter present was the author of "Right Marital Living" and "The Wedding Night" and the Paul was the Agent of the Society for the Promotion of Sexual Ignorance. From this Peter was taken the constitutional and equitable right of fair trial by a jury and to this Paul was given another "victory" of mock modesty over saving candor, another precedent of the gagged mouth, of the foolishly covered ulcer. Judge Thomas gloriously saved the moon of traditional and conventional vice, masquerading as "the only" morality, from the wolves of investigation.

The jurymen were permitted to examine the incriminated book and Mrs. Craddock, as a witness in her own behalf, was allowed to read from it at will in the effort to show that her intentions were good and the book itself calculated to increase happiness and morality in marriage. Why the judge pursued this course no one seems to know; to put the book into the jury box for examination was a cruel farce if the men in that box were not to be given a chance to express their own views regarding its character, and such a chance was peremptorily denied to them by the court. In spite of all that Mrs. Craddock and her counsel could urge and did urge, Judge Thomas insisted that he alone was competent, under the law, to say whether "Right Marital Living" is "obscene, lewd, and lascivious," and he instructed the jury that all it had to do with the case was to determine, from the testimony, whether Mrs. Craddock did or did not deposit the book for mailing. Again the question—Why, if the jury were to deal only with the physical fact of mailing, was the book put into their hands? What was this more or less than a despicable playing with the hopes and fears of the accused woman? As the jurymen were used by the judge, they were no more than marionettes, played with as he pleased and laid away on the shelf when he was tired of the sport. Besides being a cruel farce, the whole proceeding was ridiculous to the extreme of conceivable absurdity, a travesty on serious law no less than a burlesque of justice. Let us see: There were two questions of equal importance for the jury to answer—Did Mrs. Craddock deposit the book for mailing? Was that book obscene within the intent and meaning of the law? Judge Thomas tells the jury it may answer only the first of these questions, he will answer the second. He says the book is obscene, the jury says she deposited it for mailing. But suppose the judge had held the book was not obscene, while the jury, as it was compelled by the testimony to say, had held that she offered it for transmission in the mails. By the verdict of the jury, the accused would have been "guilty," but guilty of what? Of mailing a book which the judge holds is without offense in the eye of the law! It is to laugh.

Was the book put into the hands of the jurymen that they might, by looking at it, discover if Mrs. Craddock offered it for mailing? Absurd, says an apologist for Judge Thomas. Of course such a supposition would be absurd, but for what other end could the book have been given to the jurymen when the question of mailing was all they had to consider? Their answer to the question, "Did Ida C. Craddock put this book into the mails?" depended wholly upon the testimony, not in the slightest upon the shape, size, or contents of the book itself. The book could have been given to them honestly only with the intention that they and they only should decide as to its mailability under the law. Why was it given to them?

Naturally, the unsophisticated jury floundered badly when it came to announcing the verdict. The foreman said it found the defendant guilty of depositing the book for mailing. As the judge had emphatically insisted that the fact of mailing was all that the jury could consider, the verdict, in the form employed, was just what was to have been expected—no other deliverance was reasonably possible—but the judge at once corrected the foreman: "You find her guilty as charged in the indictment?" The foreman obediently acquiesced. "As charged in the indictment," Mrs. Craddock was accused of depositing for mailing an obscene, lewd, and lascivious book, but the jury had not been permitted to express any opinion as to the moral or any other quality of "Right Marital Living," it had been allowed to deal only with the fact of mailing. How, then, could it find her guilty "as charged in the indictment"?

Judge Thomas made no attempt to conceal his aversion to and disgust with Mrs. Craddock's work. Rather, he took it upon himself to argue the cause against her, giving the prosecuting attorney plenty of time to rest. He said "Right Marital Living" was very dangerous, more dangerous than a coarse and frankly vulgar publication would be; that might repel, while her work, written with skill and refinement, would attract and seduce. A work was obscene, lewd and lascivious if its tendency was to corrupt the minds and imaginations of those into whose hands it fell, and by this definition the booklet was amenable to the law. Mr. E. W. Chamberlain, for the defense, pointed out at length, citing legal and other authorities, that the three words, "obscene," "lewd," and "lascivious," connoted different degrees and kinds of impurity and indecency and therefore the prosecution must prove that the assailed book was obscene, and lewd, and lascivious; it could not establish its contention by showing that the book was obscene, or lewd, or lascivious. The judge declared that it was alike and most obscene, lewd, and lascivious, and terribly dangerous. One must have an unlimited capacity for panic to feel and talk in this way about "Right Marital Living." From the viewpoint of the orthodox moralist, I do not see how a Theist can take the position assumed by Judge Foster. Mrs. Craddock stood for the domination of the physical by the "spiritual"; she was a monogamist, a defender of marriage, and "God" was an active factor in all the relations which she believed to be pure and beneficial. Except in her desire to speak frankly and plainly of matters of sex, Mrs. Craddock occupied the position of the orthodox woman whom we all know, and she found her friends among Freethinkers and social radicals only because these stand for freedom of investigation and expression. The man who thinks her booklets are obscene, and corrupting in the conventional sense, indicts himself; no enemy, however bitter and vituperative, could arraign him more severely and searchingly than he arraigns himself.

Judge Thomas held that Mrs. Craddock intended to commit a crime because she intended to send her booklet through the mails, and so, crime being, in the intention, she was a criminal. This most extraordinary reasoning was based on the judge's own dictum that the book is obscene, and hence forbidden circulation in the mails. In other words, because Judge Foster subsequently holds that a certain publication is obscene, the author of that publication iatended to commit crime when she offered it for transmission before he had given his dictum, and that too when she stoutly maintains its purity and capacity for good! Dogberry come to judgment again!

As the readers of this already know, Ida C. Craddock took her own life on the night of October 16 or early morning of October 17. That is to say, her's was the closing act in the tragedy. But she was not the only character in the terrible drama, and the responsibility for her death lies on other shoulders far more than it lies on hers. The mother who gave her daughter the alternative of prison or insane asylum because she did not approve the work in which the daughter was engaged, the Agent who decoyed and dragged her into the court of injustice, the judge whose blind prejudices regarding sex made him her prosecutor instead of her protector against unfair treatment and who relentlessly denied to her an honest trial by jury—these are the ones immediately responsible for the untimely and infinitely pathetic ending of an earnest life. And back of these, the active wrong-doers, stands the "public," stand the masses of the people, who are makers of unjust laws and the creators of judges that are swayed by inherited and conventional superstitions. Law-makers and law-administrators in a republic can rise but little above the people who select and support them, and if the people are ignorant of sexual genesis and needs, if they conceive sex to be impure and obscene in itself, if they dare not face its issues squarely, and courageously and thoroughly investigate the problems it presents, the prosecutors and judges in their courts will continue to do injustice in the name of justice, will continue to convict innocence and acquit guilt, will continue to write the lines and set the stage for tragedies as needless and terrible as that enacted in the little room on West Twenty-Third Street. The lesson is one that he who runs may read, must read—educate the people out of their besotted superstitions, educate them despite informers who inveigle and judges who accuse; educate the people, if we would be free and sane and healthy.

The prosecutors and persecutors have builded better than they knew or intended, as is always the case when men set themselves to the task of suppression. The fact is as old as human history, but the would-be choke rs of growth are Bourbons of the Bourbons and so have profited nothing by the experience of the ages. No despot ever killed an idea unless he exterminated the people in whose brains it was sown; despots have their little day but the idea has the centuries of the earth and lives and blossoms and gives the ripe fruits of good to the sons of men long after the names even of the despots who would have strangled the idea in its home of the brain have ceased to be memories, have ceased to be the historic symbols of folly and crime. The persecution of Ida C. Craddock, ending in the death of the victim, has already borne its fruit and it is a fruit whose flavor is bitter indeed in the mouths of the believers in injected righteousness. From every side come words of horror for the social crime committed, of sympathy for the woman dead, of interest in the cause for which she gave her life. The study of sexual problems has received such an impetus as has not been given to it before in a decade. Among the letters which have come to me, I select this, because it was written by a business man who has known little of the sex question as presented by progressive thinkers, who has not been identified with radicals, but who met Mrs. Craddock once at a dinner given in her honor and was impressed with her evident sincerity and earnestness:

"Friend Walker: I cannot find words strong enough to express my grief at the sad end of a life that appeared to me to be truly devoted to humanity."

The words are few but they are pregnant with meaning and warning. Agents of vice societies and judges upon the bench cannot afford to have the results of their work thus greeted and condemned by serious men of affairs, men who have lived long lives and who have seen and thought and done well their part in the world.

As Lucifer is so small there is much in connection with the case of Mrs. Craddock for which it cannot find room, and so I am sure its Editor will permit me to say that in "The Truth Seeker" of October 18 and 25 and November 1 will be found articles that should be read by all, should be given the widest circulation possible. "The Truth Seeker" is seven cents the copy and can be ordered of me or from the office of publication, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

EDWIN C. WALKER.
244 West 143d Street, New York City.

The Death of Ida C. Craddock.

"I am taking my life because a judge at the instigation of Anthony Comstock has declared me guilty of a crime which I did not commit—the circulating of obscene literature—and has announced his intention of consigning me to prison for a long term."

In these words Ida C. Craddock, author, lecturer and priestess of the Oriental Cult of Yoga, voiced her protest to the public before committing suicide at her home, No. 134 West Twenty-third street, yesterday.

She was to have appeared before Judge Thomas in the United States Circuit Court for sentence at one o'clock. She had served one term of three months in the penitentiary as the result of a conviction in the State courts, and upon her release had been rearrested, charged with violating the federal statutes by sending improper matter through the United States mails.

In both instances the offence was the publication and circulating of a book dealing with marital affairs.

This book had the approval of some physicians and clergymen, but Anthony Comstock charged Miss Craddock with using it to pervert the morals of the young.

WAS FOUND GUILTY.

The woman was found guilty on Monday last.

In letters to her mother and her counsel, which she left, she said that a long sentence would mean her death in prison, and that, like Socrates, she claimed the right to die as she chose. She elected to end her life in her own room and by inhaling gas.

She was found yesterday morning by her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Decker, of Philadelphia, who had come here to accompany her daughter to court. Miss Craddock occupied a room on the fourth floor of the Twenty-third street house. On the door was a card, inscribed:—

"Ida C. Craddock, instructor in Divine Science."

Miss Craddock was forty-five years old and unmarried. She came from a Philadelphia family of Quaker stock. Her mother is one of the officers of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Philadelphia, and thoroughly disapproves of the work her daughter was engaged in. Mrs. Decker had an engagement to meet her daughter at a restaurant.

When Miss Craddock failed to appear Mrs. Decker went to the house, and finding the door of the room locked and a strong odor of gas, she sent for a policeman.

FOUND HER DEAD.

Policeman Thomas Barnes broke in the door and her mother found Miss Craddock dead in bed, with a tube from the gas jet by her side. Her wrists were also cut, but the wounds were not serious enough to have caused death.

The room was littered with books and papers, and there were indications that Miss Craddock had passed her last day on earth in writing to relatives and friends and in preparing a lengthy statement to the public.

To the editors of several of the newspapers she wrote:—

"I am about mailing to my lawyer, Edward W. Chamberlain, No. 111 West Forty-second street, a statement for the public, in regard to my contemplated suicide, which you may care to present to your readers."

This was neatly typewritten and was signed in ink:—

"Yours truly, Ida C. Craddock."

When these letters were delivered the woman was dead. Her lawyer Edward W. Chamberlain, received a letter shortly after nine o'clock in the morning. He went at once to the Twenty-third street house and arrived shortly after the police had entered. Mr. Chamberlain's letter began:—

"When this reaches you I shall be in paradise. . . . As Judge Thomas is evidently determined to impose a sentence of imprisonment upon me, which shall be equivalent to signing my death warrant it seems to me it can scarcely matter to him whether the death takes place in prison or comfortably and peacefully in my own home.

"I feel, like Socrates, that I have the right to choose the manner of that death.

"The Judge is evidently bent on silencing my propaganda in death. He will, I dare say, be relieved to know that so 'dangerous' a woman has thus anticipated his wishes."

In her statement to the public Miss Craddock defends her writings, which she asserts, are intended for the betterment of the human race. Of "The Wedding Night," the book which led to her arrest and conviction, she said:—

"The book has been favorably reviewed by medical magazines of standing, and has been approved by physicians of reputation. The Rev. Dr. Rainsford, in a letter to me, partially approved the book, so far as to say that if all young people were to read it a great deal of misery, suffering and disappointment could be avoided, and that to have arrested me on account of it, as Mr. Comstock has done, was ridiculous."

NO EVIDENCE PRODUCED.

After stating that social reformers, members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, clergymen and others have approved her books, Miss Craddock says she has been persecuted by Anthony Comstock, and that he obtained her conviction by making false statements about her.

"This man Anthony Comstock, who is unctuous with hypocrisy," continues Miss Craddock, "pretends that I placed the books in the hands of minors, even little girls and boys, with a view of tainting their morals.

"He has not produced any young person so far who has been injured, nor has any parent or guardian come forward who affirms the likelihood of any young person being injured.

"In addition he has deliberately lied about the matter. He stated to Judge Thomas that I handed one of the books to the daughter of the janitor in the building in which I have my office. It so happens that the building has no janitor, nor is there a little girl there, ...

"I am making this statement to the public because I wish to call attention to some of the salient features of Comstockism, in the hope that the public may be led to put down this growing menace to the liberties of the people."

Mrs. Decker will take her daughter's body to Philadelphia for burial.

"HER MOTIVES PURE."

E. C. Walker, president of the Manhattan Liberal Club, paid a high tribute to the memory of Miss Craddock last night. He referred to her as a woman of pure mind and high purpose, who had been hounded to her death by the agents of suppression, "who have exceptional capacity for finding impurity where none exists."

"She was to have met her Judge today," he said, "her Judge who refused to let her case go before a jury, and who was to have passed sentence upon her, in spite of our boasted right to think as we please and of what we thought was our American freedom of expression.

"No one with a rational thought in his head, though he might not agree with Miss Craddock in belief, could have read her books and held that her purpose was anything but worthy and pure."

A Compact.

"Me and God," says Baer,
"Baer and Me," says God.
"All shall know our compact
And bow beneath our rod."

"Baer and I" (Jehovah says)
"Will corner all supplies.
My people kneel not low enough;
No love they exercise.

"I make the coal abundant
And place it on the earth.
Baer keeps it from the poor
Until the awful dearth

Shall make the people tune their songs
In praise of Baer and me,
Hosannas loud, and prayers
In real humility."

C. P. H.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for ustice against Privilege.

Heart to Heart Talks—Once More.

The word SUICIDE has a very unwelcome sound to Christian ears. Burial in consecrated ground has for ages been denied to the suicide, by the oldest and most numerous branch of the Christian church, and entrance into heaven also, if I mistake not, in accord with the "inspired word" which says, "no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him." And yet the whole Christian scheme of salvation is founded upon an act of suicide—the deliberate self-sacrifice, self-murder of the "Son of God."

Among ancient nations—notably the Greeks and Romans and also among some modern peoples, as the Chinese and Japanese, self-murder was and is considered honorable and praiseworthy; and even the most devout Christians hold in high honor such examples of suicide as that of Leonidas and his immortal "three hundred" at the pass of Thermopylae, and that of Arnold Winkelreid, at the battle of Sempach in Switzerland.

* * *

Whether under any conceivable circumstances I could be induced to emulate the example of Ida C. Craddock, as told in another place in this week's Lucifer, I do not know. Certainly no such circumstance, no such temptation, has yet occurred in my life's pilgrimage. When facing a long term of imprisonment, and while the thought of ending my days inside prison walls was a terrible prospect ahead to me, I still felt as did the writer of the poem that closes with these lines:

"It matters not how strait the gate—
How charged with punishment the scroll—
I am the master of my fate,
I am the captain of my soul."

Thus thinking and feeling I would have considered it dishonorable surrender to my persecutors if I had allowed them to drive me to suicide. Nay more, more important still, I would have considered it a betrayal of the trust confided in me by my friends who, outside prison walls, were helping me to fight the battle for liberty of speech and of press and, above all other considerations, the battle for self-ownership of the mothers of the race.

But let no reader of Lucifer think, for one single moment, that in thus saying I would sit in judgment upon and condemn the dear good little woman who, the other night in New York, chose to cut the bonds of tyrannous legal complications by severing the thread of her own mortal life. What would to me have been base surrender may not have been such to her. The circumstances surrounding no two cases are exactly alike, or parallel. She may have believed, though not saying so in words, that her tragical death, in the prime of her young womanhood, would do more to arrest the attention of thinking women and men everywhere to the horrible barbarity of the Comstockian legislation, would do more to break the spell of the modern WITCHCRAFT delusion, known as the crusade against OBSCENITY, than anything it was in her power to do by living on and patiently enduring the indignities and privations of prison life.

* * *

That Mrs. Craddock—this is the title she preferred to be known by—possessed many of the elements of true heroism, her life work abundantly shows. Having known her personally while she lived in Chicago, having heard her lecture a number of times—twice at our own home—I can testify to the lofty courage, as well as to the gentle, the refined and womanly manner in which she presented her peculiar views to the public. Whether she was always RIGHT, scientific or philosophical, in her views, is a question I do not care to discuss, as it is a question entirely outside the consideration of her right to present her views in her own way to any who might be willing to hear or to read them.

The following quotation from Emerson's Essay on Heroism applies, to a very marked degree, to the life work of the much persecuted and the untimely deceased Ida C. Craddock:

"Heroism works in contradiction to the voice of mankind, and in contradiction, for a time, to the voice of the great and good. Heroism is an obedience to a secret impulse of an individual's character. Now to no other man can its wisdom appear as it does to him, for every man must be supposed to see a little farther on his own proper path, than any one else. Therefore, just and wise men take umbrage at his act, until after some little time be past: then they see it to be in unison with their acts. All prudent men see that the action is clean contrary to a sensual prosperity; for every heroic act measures itself by its contempt of some external good. But it finds its own success at last, and then the prudent also extol.

"Self-trust is the essence of heroism. It is the state of the soul at war, and its ultimate objects are the last defiance of falsehood and wrong, and the power to bear all that can be inflicted by evil agents. It speaks the truth, and it is just. It is generous, hospitable, temperate, scornful of petty calculations, and scornful of being scorned. It persists; it is of an undaunted boldness, and of a fortitude not to be wearied out."

* * *

Having heard that Edwin C. Walker, whose home is in New York, and near the scene of the tragedy, has written a full statement, for publication in Lucifer, concerning this latest triumph of the American Inquisition—whose Torquemada is Anthony Comstock—I will say no more, in regard thereto for this issue, except to add that if the said Inquisitor-general can sleep soundly and digest his meals comfortably—if his dreams are not haunted by the pale, sweet and child-like face of Ida Craddock—child-like in its expression of innocence and purity—then Anthony Comstock must be a HUMAN PERVERT! either a born pervert or made such by his environment, and by his chosen course of life. Among the sins laid to his charge by his latest victim, in her last earthly moments, is that of deliberate LYING, in order to secure her conviction in court. Whether this ante-morten charge is true or not, is not for me to say, but if true it should excite no surprise. A man whose usual methods of work are those of fraud and deception—a man who habitually sends decoy letters, lying letters, in order to entrap those he would destroy, cannot be expected to retain a clear perception of the difference between truth and falsehood, or anything like a sense of remorse for violations of the rule which says, "Thou shalt not bear false witness."

END OF THE GREAT STRIKE.

After five long weary months of passive resistance the strikers in the anthracite region of Pennsylvania seem to have won—won so far only as obtaining a tardy recognition that there is, after all, something to ARBITRATE between the miners and their employers. How much this recognition really means, and how far it will go towards securing justice to those who, at the imminent peril of their lives go down deep into the bowels of the earth to bring to the surface one of the necessaries of life, remains to be seen.

That this concession was obtained through the intervention of professional politicians of the Roosevelt type, augurs ill for the proletarian laborer. If the monopolistic trusts have yielded simply because their fellow plutocrats in Washington told them it was necessary to yield something in order to save the PARTY, the party which has ever been the friend and protector of these trusts, and not because of the triumph of justice, not because of the compelling force of public opinion—then we may reasonably expect that the arbitration scheme of President Roosevelt will prove as delusive as were the predictions of the witches in Macbeth, that were said to "hold the word of promise to the ear but disappoint it to the hope"—the hope of him who allows his acts to be guided by such prediction.

While optimistic enough to hope that some good will ultimately come of this settlement and especially from the agitation, the campaign of education, that has led up to that settlement, I shall be agreeably disappointed if—as I said last week, anything should be done by Roosevelt's "scheme of arbitration" to unsettle the two old-time superstitions, viz: belief in the right of the few to own the earth, including the coal-fields and the highways that transport the coal and other merchandise to and from the mines, and the other superstition that puts it in the power of "government" to issue "a currency" of privilege, a restricted currency "by the shrewd manipulation of which the governing classes can live and grow enormously rich at the expense of the real producers of wealth."

Such radical revolution as would be implied in the overthrow of these two old-time superstitions will require more time, more intelligence and more concerted effort than we have yet seen devoted to this movement. It took nearly half a century of painful and perilous effort to unsettle the superstition that the white man had a "God given" right to own the person and the labor of the black man, and it will probably require an equal period of time and an equal amount of painful and perilous effort to unsettle and overthrow its kindred superstitions, namely, that the earth belongs to him who can command the money wherewith to buy it, and the other, the twin superstition to this, that the ruling classes have the exclusive right to issue money, money that shall have the "right of way" over all other kinds or classes of material wealth.

* * *

"It is coming up the steep of time," however, and the "sad old world is growing [a little] brighter," century by century, if not year by year. So, let us continue to labor and to wait in the sure conviction and hope that no honest effort can fail of its reward—subjectively if not objectively.

* * *

Time up for this "supplementary" message to Lucifer's household, from "Harmony Home." The autumn weather in Michigan is simply glorious; the apples are not yet shipped, nor even picked, so our friends may as well prepare for another supplementary Michigan message from yours fraternally and sororally, but not paternally nor parentally, M. HARMAN.

ERRATA:—In last week's issue at top of page 324, "nature" should read, not sure. Same paragraph "clog" should read, cloy.

A Craddock Memorial Meeting was held at Handel Hall, Chicago, on Sunday afternoon, Oct. 26. A report of this meeting will appear next week.

Elizabeth Cady Stanton died of heart failure at her home in New York on Sunday, Oct. 26. A sketch of her life will appear in our next issue.

Much matter has been crowded out of this issue. Among it is the call for the Annual Convention of the American Secular Union. It will be held in Brooklyn, N. Y, Nov. 15 and 16. Among the speakers will be Moncure D. Conway, Hugh O. Pentecost, E. C. Walker, Charles Watts, Herbert N. Casson, and others. Contributions may be sent to E. C. Reichwald, 141 S. Water St. Chicago.

Ida C. Craddock's Last Letter to Her Mother.

Room 5, 134 West Twenty-Third St., New York, Oct. 16,

"DEAR, DEAR MOTHER: I know you will grieve over me for having taken my life. . . My dear, dear mother, oh, how sorry I am to hurt you, as I know this act will do. But, oh, mother, I cannot, I will not consent to go to the asylum as you are evidently planning to have me go. I know that this means a perpetual imprisonment all my life long, unless I either recant my religious beliefs or else hypocritically pretend to do so. I cannot bring myself to consent to any of these three alternatives. I maintain my right to die as I have lived, a free woman, not cowed into silence by any other human being. If, on the other hand, the prison to which Judge Thomas evidently proposes to send me were to be my destined lot—you know very well that he wishes and means to lock me up for a long, long term, which is practically my death warrant—my work is ended so far as this world is concerned. My books have been given a start, approved by physicians and other reputable citizens, but the world is not yet ready for all the beautiful teachings which I have to give it. Other people will take up my work, however, some day—will take it up where I laid it down, and will start from where I left off and do better work than they could have done but for me. Some day you will not be ashamed of me or my work. Some day you'll be proud of me. You will understand that what I have done has been done because you and my father prepared me for just such a propaganda to humanity. You may ask why I did not give it up and come home to live with you, resuming my name of 'Miss Craddock,' and taking up other work. But, dear mother, I could be of no possible help to you, with the shadow of reproach which bigots and impure minded people have put on me. I should be only a hindrance to your respectability. Moreover, my individuality has some rights. I cannot recant my beliefs and throw aside a principle for which I have toiled and struggled for nine years, even at the behest of a mother that is dear to me.

"Do not grieve, dear, dear mother, the world beyond the grave, believe me, is far more real and substantial than is this world in which we today live. This earth life which the Hindus have for centuries termed 'Maya,' that is illusion. My people assure me that theirs is the real, the objective, the material world. Ours is the lop-sided, the incomplete world. You and I shall meet in that beautiful world over there and shall know each other as individuals just as clearly as we do here, only more so. I do not know whether it will be possible for me to return to you; but if I can, I will do so. Only remember that you must try to keep the five rules for clear thinking and correct living which my people have given me. If I do come back, of this I feel sure. As you may have forgotten these I am going to give them here again:

"1. Do your daily earthly duty undeterred by calls to mediumship from any source.

"2. To be self-controlled, and strive to be more amiable and loving every day.

"3. Wait and and watch for the highest.

"4. Avoid selfish seeking of self-ease.

"5. Abide in purity, not merely moral purity, but physical cleanliness. And still more intellectual clearness; that is, freedom from prejudice, think clearly.

"Love all people, even those who have wronged you, if you would receive clear communications from over the border. It is possible that I may come as I have said. I do not know. But in any event it cannot be long before you will join me over here and I shall be on hand to welcome you dear, dear mother, when you do come.

"Oh, if only you could have brought yourself to have let me live at home to carry on my propaganda under your modifying advice, then this need never have been, and I could have lived for many years to carry on a moderate far less crudely radical propaganda than I have done. I have had no one to stand by me and to help me. I have had to carve out my own road without any predecessors to guide me.

"You will find $40 in my trunk. I have written to Mr. Chamberlain tonight to tell you just where I have placed it. I do not know who may read this letter before you get it, and so have taken this precaution.

"Will you mind expressing the various books I have addressed here to night; as you know, I have been unable to get out today to send them off as I hoped to do. For there is an Adams Express Company on this street several doors this side of Fifth avenue.

"Dear, dear mother, please remember that I love you, and that I shall always love you. Even if you get fantastic communications from the border land, remember that the real Ida is not going there.

"The real Ida, your own daughter, loves you and waits for you to come soon over to join her in the beautiful blessed world beyond the grave, where Comstocks and corrupt judges and impure minded people are not known. We shall be very happy together some day, you and I, dear mother; there will be a blessed reality for us both at last. I love you, dear mother; never forget that. And love cannot die; it is no dream, it is a reality. We shall be the individuals over there that we are here, only with enlarged capacities. Goodby dear mother, if only for a little while. I love you always. I shall never forget you, that would be impossible; nor could you ever forget me. Do not think the next world an unsubstantial dream; it is material, as much so as this; more so than this. We shall meet there, dear, dear mother. Your affectionate daughter,

IDA C. CRADDOCK.

"There is no duty whatever on anthracite coal," said President Roosevelt at Cincinnati, when arguing that trusts are not fostered by the tariff. This was supposed to be a "clincher," for it showed that the tariff does not foster the coal trust. But alas for Mr. Roosevelt's argument, there is in fact a duty on anthracite coal. Ordinarily it would not be needed, for but little anthracite coal is known outside of the United States, and the tariff on bituminous coal ordinarily serves to protect anthracite. Yet the anthracite trust evidently feared that a time might come —something like the time that has come—when a tariff on anthracite itself would be handy. So, while leaving anthracite on the free list, in order to cover their tracks—it had been on the free list since 1870—the makers of the Dingley bill fixed a duty upon it surreptitiously. This was done in paragraph 415, which reduced the old duty on bituminous coal from 75 cents to 67 cents, and by which it is provided that not only bituminous coal, but "all coals containing less than 92 per centum of fixed carbon," shall pay the 67 cents duty. Now the fact happens to be that there are no commercial imports of anthracite which come up to that standard. Consequently all imports of anthracite pay duty. This construction of the law was made by the board of general apprisers and has been sustained by the Federal courts. Mr. Roosevelt was mistaken when he asserted so positively that there is no duty on anthracite coal.—The Public.

At last we understand why the mine owners are so obdurate. We have their own word for it. And surely they would not tell a lie, especially when adddressing themselves to the president of the United States. "We must look after the interests of our widows and orphans—our stockholders," said these great and good men, or words to that effect. Who would have ever supposed that the mines and coal roads of Pennsylvania were all owned by widows and orphans! In all my travels I never met a widow or orphan that held any stock in a coal mine, but I've met plenty of them who had to take in washing to buy coal to keep from freezing in the winter. And when one thinks of how much washing one of these widows must do to buy a ton of coal, one cannot help but wonder who is going to look after their interests. How would it do to let these other widows and orphans—the stockholders—do their share of the washing?—Coming Nation.

You Shall Have No Property in Love.

You thought you loved her. But you only respected her as a piece of property. When she ceased to be property your love ceased to be love. You possessed her. But when you thought she had slipped through your contract you bought a revolver and shot her dead. You, anybody, grown coarse with tyrant increase. This you call love. This arrogance of ownership. What did you own in the woman? What did the woman own in you? Nothing—absolutely nothing. The woman gave you all the love you were entitled to. She gave you much love when you inspired it and no love when your attractiveness was gone. Love is not a question of loyalty. It is not a question of virtue. It is only a question of love. You might have all the virtues of the docket. But if you have not that one virtue which commands her love you ought to bow yourself out. But you say the other man came along and stole her affection. Do not believe it. Love cannot be stolen. Love goes with free will or not at all. Did you think her love belonged to you? What put such a lien upon it? Her love was yours as long as you could prove yourself to her love. But when you could no longer prove yourself to her love it was your business to retire. What right have you on the scence after you have been supplanted? You killed the woman's body. But did that restore the love? You shot the man she preferred. But did that reduce the ardor of her preference? Could any coward violence bring her back to you? You go to the bar and pay for a drink. You go to the altar and pay for a love. That is your philosophy of love. As if the woman ever owed you anything you could not convince her of. As if your love being really love would not have hurried away at her first doubt. As if your love would not have proved itself love in confirming her alien resolution. Your love could have grieved to have her choose another. But your love would have welcomed that other love as its own love renewed. You call her unfaithful. Unfaithful to what? Her vow. What vow? Her vow to prefer you. But if her love had ever been blind enough to give such a vow and your love had been blind enough to accept it the rude awakening should have inspired no act of vengeance. Love will neither give nor take oaths. It will neither give nor take properties. Love will remain love while love lasts. That is all that love can promise. I am aware of what you say about virtue and the safety of society. But society is always safe with love. But society is never safe with murder. Back of your love was not love but a weapon. You were afraid to trust yourself to your love. You relied upon some supposed contract or interference. Having been defeated in the only arena which love recognizes you ambush love. Your love was assassination. If you were a real instead of a humbug lover you would acknowledge defeat. You would not remind your love of the past. You would not say that because love was once love it must be forever anchored in the same spot. Everywhere I see this sort of love contending for possession. I write love down a convict. I constitute myself a jailer. If love undertake to escape I brutally assail its sacred depository. And society applauds. Society does not acquiesce in love. It acquiesces in a contract. Love must have the sign and seal of magistracy. It must enjoy the ordinations of systems. It must arrive with the guarantee of the priest. And once love always love. You may turn my love to hate. But love remains love and you may not deserve one loyal hour with me. But I must nevertheless not hostage the alien. Love has no rights. The contract has rights. Yet need not be faithful to love. You must be faithful to the contract. Love is not love. Love is custom. Love is habit. Love is routine. If love rebel we will send our sheriff bloodhounds upon its track. If love threaten to go where it belongs we will intercept it with our brute malinterpretation.

That is why the theatrical Rose shot his wife the other day. That is why every issue we read headlines in papers respecting that ancient burlesquerie about "stolen affections." As if you could steal that which belonged to you. As if you could own that which was not yours.—Horace Traubel, in Conservator.

Trial Trip Subscriptions.

For one dollar we will send Lucifer ten weeks to eight different addresses, and to the one sending us the list, any one of the following books:

The Origin of the Family, Private Property and the State. By Frederick Engels, 217 pages, handsomely bound in cloth. Postage, 6 cents.

The Slavery of Our Times. By Leo Tolstoi. With portrait of author, 186 pages. Blue cloth; silver lettering. Postage 8 cents.

Nora: A Doll's House, and Ghosts. The two dramas bound together. Olive cloth; red lettering. 108 pages. Postage 8 cents. This offer will, we hope, induce our friends to extend Lucifer's circulation materially.

To the Friends of Ida C. Craddock.

We hope that this copy of Lucifer will receive your careful consideration. We expect to carry on the vitally essential part of Mrs. Craddock's work, and should be glad to receive your co-operation.

The Woman Who Dares

BY URSULA N. GESTEFELD.

A novel, whose heroine seeks to find and realize her own individuality and, having found it, dares to maintain it in the marital relation. It is a carefully written story and meant to show the injustice of the marriage relation as usually regarded, and of the dual standard of morality, tacitly accepted however theoretically opposed. The subject is treated forcefully and directly, yet always tactfully and fairly, and possesses all the strength of moderation combined with just and equable criticism. The story reads more like events in real life than those of romance.

It is seldom that the most vital though most delicate of subjects is treated with such delicacy. The large number of letters from women received after its first publication is evidence that there is room for its heroine in many home.

"Here we have a well written story with a noble purpose. It is a woman's novel, and by that I do not mean that it is intended only for women; on the contrary, it ought to be read by every man in America who has the brain, conscience, and refinement of nature to appreciate its masterly presentation of what is the simple right, nay, more, is the sacred duty of every married woman, to demand the absolute right to her own person in wedlock no less than out of wedlock. . . . In the presentation of the vital thought found in these pages, Mrs. Gestefeld has given us a superb piece of work. It is a story of great vitality, the author is a thoughtful and a deeply spiritual woman. With the keen intuitive insight so often met with in profoundly spiritual natures, she has discerned one of the greatest moral crimes of the present." —The Arena.

Size 8 1-4x7 1-2 inches; 358 pages. Beautifully printed on laid paper, bound in green Holliston linen, and stamped in ink with original cover design. Price, $1.25, postpaid. THE GESTEFELD PUBLISHING CO., Pelham, New York. Department LF.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer the Light Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

VACCINATION A CRIME.

With Comments on Other Sanitary Superstitions.

BY FELIX L OSWALD, M. D.

"Vaccination spreads diseases; vaccination impairs the organic functions; vaccination encourages reliance on worthless remedies; vaccination spreads small-pox; compulsory vaccination furnishes dangerous legal precedents."

With illustrations of diseases frequently resulting from vaccination. 198 pages. Price 10 cents. For sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St. Chicago.

If your subscription expires with No. 941, or before this number, please let us hear from you.

941.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author.

The Sex Passion.
Man, the Ungrown.
Woman, the Serf.
Woman in Freedom
Marriage: a Retrospect.
Marriage: a Forecast.
The Free Society.
Some remarks on the early star and sex worships.
Notes—On the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population.

The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. Price, $1.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

WHITMAN'S IDEAL DEMOCRACY, AND OTHER WRITINGS.

BY HELENA BORN.

Comprising besides the title essay, Thoreau's Joy in Nature; Poets of Revolt: Shelley, Whitman, Carpenter; Whitman's Altruism; Individualism versus Organization: Ingenuities of Economic Argument; The Last Stand Against Democracy in Sex; Inequality in Divorce; Marriage Safeguards. With portrait of author and biographical introduction by Helen Tufts. 115 pages. Edition limited to 500 copies; each copy numbered. Fine paper, uncut pages, bound in boards, paper label. Price $1.

Agents Wanted To sell the Toltec Dandruff Cure and the Toltec Hair Dressing (restores natural color). Are clean and perfect. Liberal commission. Write for circulars. Address: The Toltec Remedies Co., Box 1307 Denver Colo.

"Pages of Socialist History."

By W. Tcherkesoff. This book is recommended to Socialists of all schools, as it deals with the history of the "International" and the attitude of Marx and Engels towards Bakounin. Paper covers, 25 cents By mail, 30 cents

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.

ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $1.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Births of the Strasburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.

BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth. $1.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commanded, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close references to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. H. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 31 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 626 pages, 8vo.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 25c.

DARWIN, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. G. Spencer. 178 pages. 25c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the everlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, gilt and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 25c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Fowell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James R. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 47 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum 10c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian religion has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 360 pages. 40c. Postage, 5c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law, G. C. Siemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 25c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 319 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HILDA'S HOME. Rose Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 220 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Scotland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 37 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Voltaire, and Voltaire. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mexican. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

KORADINE. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III. (1890). Cloth, $1.25. Postage, 15c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Palladias, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Shadow Pushed Upon a Shadow; Divorce; Love; Its Attraction and Extinction; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, R. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, an advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Spunsie, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $2.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Keimscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of herbinan tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 50c.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Marietta), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 307 pages. 25c.

THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Witches and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 261 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old moralism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer affirms: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and asceticism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 39 large pages; twelve copies, 25c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 10c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Witchcraft (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Girls (Oliver Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. B. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (R. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Gunn. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1761, quoted by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuit craft and is a plain index to the underhand working of that order against the liberties of individuals and society. 25c.

THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 10c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Yelopt Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Wilson). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 25c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrating full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and woman need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $1.25.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Darling. 15c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 10c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 45 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 170 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 880 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VI., No. 43. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, NOV. 6, E. M. 302. [C. E. 1902.] WHOLE No. 942

IDA C. CRADDOCK.

Suicided Oct. 17th—'02, on the eve of sentence to imprisonment, secured by Anthony Comstock, for mailing her book, "The Wedding Night," leaving a tender and affecting letter to her mother.

Mother, I could not the jail endure,
The empty years in the living grave,
The brutal touch and the look impure,
Breaking the will of a woman brave.

Dear mother, I do not dread to die,
But the sickening prison stifles me;
So down on my little cot I lie,
A few brief struggles and I am free.

I taught but the truth I knew was good!
I could not do other, God knows me true!
If only some loved one had understood!
If only, dear mother, if only you!—

They hounded me, mother, the long years through,
Narrow and creed-bound they held the law—
O how can the lower the high thing view!
With vile eyes looking, they vileness saw.

My purity was but a mock to them
My truth but a thing to spit upon—
They stop my teaching, my books condemn—
Mother, my work on earth is done!

But others shall finish the work I leave,
The world will know why I have to die
Though laws are brutal and priests deceive,
The problem, unanswered, still questions why.

And never shall answer on earth be known
Till sex is held pure and love made free,
Till power steps down from its blood-stained throne
And to differ in kindness all men agree.

Dear mother, I dread not at all to die,
But the sickening prison stifles me,
I could not help it!—dear mother good bye!
A few brief moments and I shall be free.

J. WM. LLOYD.

Elizabeth Cady Stanton.

Elizabeth Cady Stanton died at her home in West Ninety-fourth street, New York, Sunday, Oct. 26. She was conscious almost to the last. For about a week she had been failing. This became more noticeable during the last few days, and then it was known to the family that her death was only a question of days or hours. She succumbed to the infirmities of old age.

Elizabeth Cady Stanton came of Puritan stock, and was born Nov. 12, 1816, in Johnstown, N. Y. Her father was Judge Daniel Cady, a distinguished lawyer of the time. Her mother was Margaret Livingston. She was the daughter of James Livingston, an officer of the Revolutionary Army. It was he who fired on the British ship Vulture when that vessel anchored in the Hudson river.

As a child Elizabeth Cady was precocious—perhaps self-reliant expresses it better. She was imbued with a desire to master Greek, and she applied to her pastor, an old Scotch clergyman, for instruction. Being of an alert mind and blessed with a good constitution, she made rapid progress. She then took up Latin, mathematics, and other "mannish" studies. She had a very proficient instructor in her brother-in-law, Edward Bayard of Delaware. From this man she learned much of poetry and art, and also of physical culture.

When Elizabeth Cady was sixteen she entered Miss Willard's seminary at Troy. Before this she expressed a desire to go to Union college, and fuel was added to the flame in her breast when she was made aware of the discriminations against woman that rendered her ineligible for admission to that famous old seat of learning.

INTERESTED IN ABOLITION.

After leaving the seminary and returning home Mrs. Stanton was thrown in contact with her cousin, Gerritt Smith, the eloquent abolitionist. She became greatly interested in this movement also, and was forcibly struck with the similarity of the conditions which oppressed white women and the slaves of the South. It was at the house of the abolitionist that Mrs. Stanton met the man who became her husband. Her marriage took place in 1840. They went abroad on their wedding trip, and attended the anti-slavery convention in England. A great many women had come on to attend the convention, but they were not allowed to take their seats as delegates.

SPEAKS BEFORE LEGISLATURE.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanton came back to America, and then followed one of the most interesting episodes of her life. After her return she had, in company with others interested in female suffrage, been agitating the matter throughout the state. She received permission from the Legislature for a hearing on the subject of the married woman's property bill. Her father heard that she was going to address the Legislature, and was incensed thereat, but she pleaded her cause so earnestly that she won him over. Finally the momentous day arrived, This was in 1848. Mrs. Stanton spoke to a crowded house. Her speech lasted two hours, and when she was through she was warmly congratulated by her hearers. Shortly afterward she had the satisfaction of seeing the married woman's property bill become a law.

CALLED FIRST CONVENTION.

In the same year Mrs. Stanton and others called the woman's suffrage convention, the first ever held. Resolutions were adoption and a list of grievances made out. The convention was the target for no end of ridicule. Mrs. Stanton said she and her friends were referred to as "cross old maids." Mrs. Stanton had sons at the time.

Since that day Mrs. Stanton never faltered, never relaxed her zeal in the cause to which she was devoted. She attained fame as a worker, a speaker, and a writer. She was also a firm supporter of the cause of temperance. Much of her earnestness and strength of character she inherited from her father.

MEETS SUSAN B. ANTHONY.

In 1851 Mrs. Stanton first met Susan B. Anthony. The Stantons were living in Syracuse and an anti-slavery convention was called to meet there. At the recess for luncheon on the first day Mrs. Stanton walked home with her guests, William Lloyd Garrison and George Thompson. On a street corner they met two women who had also been to the convention, both of whom Mr. Garrison knew and introduced to Mrs. Stanton. One was Miss Anthony and the other was Mrs. Amelia Jenks Bloomer who contributed Turkish trousers among many other things to the movement for the emancipation of American women.

In 1860 Mrs. Stanton again addressed the New York Legislature, this time advocating that drunkenness be included as a cause for divorce. In 1867 she made an argument before the New York constitutional convention in support of her theory that, during the revision of the constitution, the state resolve itself into original elements, and, therefore, citizens of both sexes had a right to vote for members of the convention.

In 1868 Mrs. Stanton was a candidate for Congress. In 1869 she devoted most of the year to addressing Congressional committees and state constitutional conventions on woman suffrage. And all the time she was writing and lecturing on the subject. In these later years she saw the multitude of women's clubs spring up, and on her eightieth birthday 3,000 women attended a birthday party given in her honor at the Metropolitan opera house by the National Council of Women of the United States. There were delegations from most of the leading women's organizations of the United States. Mrs. Stanton sat on the platform between Mrs. Mary Lowe Dickinson and Susan B. Anthony. Only one man was allowed in the hall, and that was Job Hedges, then Mayor Strong's private secretary, who made a speech for the mayor.

FORMED COUNCIL OF WOMEN.

Mrs. Stanton had of late been interested in bringing the women of all nations nearer together, and to that end she formed and was the first president of the International Council of Women. As a writer Mrs. Stanton was most prolific. With Susan B. Anthony and Parker Pillsbury she edited the "Revolutionist," founded in 1868, and she was the joint author with Miss Anthony of the "History of Woman's Suffrage." In 1895 Mrs. Stanton, with others, published "The Woman's Bible."

The plan of the work was to take passages of the Bible that had especial reference to women and reprint them, with comments by Mrs. Stanton and her associate editors. Owing to her increasing obesity and the failure of her voice she had not spoken in public for four years before her death.

Probably one of the last things she wrote was a communication printed Oct. 13, under the heading, "As to Women in the Bible." It was as follows:

"'LINCOLN, Neb., Oct. 9:—In a suit brought by Daniel Freeman of Gage county to prevent the reading of the Bible by a teacher in the public schools, the court decided that the Bible should be barred. The court decides that Bible reading is both a religious and a sectarian exercise when made a part of the teaching program.'

"'Inasmuch as the Bible degrades women and in innumerable passages teaches her absolute subjection to man in all relations, in the state, the church, the home, and the whole world of work, it is to her interest that the Bible, in its present form, should be taken from the schools and from the rising generation of boys, as it teaches lessons of disrespect for the mothers of the race. Or else, an expurgated edition of the book should be got out, putting in one volume the grand declarations, moral lessons, poetry, science, and philosophy, and in another all the Christian mythologies for those who would value it as ancient literature. The first would then be fit to place in the hands of the rising generation. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON.'"

Mrs. Stanton's husband died in 1887, leaving his widow with six children. Henry Brewster Stanton was a lawyer, journalist, orator of national reputation. He was one of the founders of the abolition party, and was a member of the convention of which the Republican party was formed.—Chicago "Inter-Ocean."

Sexual Physiology.

"There is no effect without a cause." What is the cause, or what are the causes of sexual abuse? First ignorance, second, false teaching, third disordered conditions of the body, fourth irreverence, and fifth degrading company.

My own childhood and youth were pure because I had a natural abhorrence for everything low, unnatural, unclean, or disorderly, but I have learned from observation, from the confidences of young people, and from the knowledge of these things acquired by others that ignorance of sexual subjects and the sexual nature, is largely responsible for sexual abuse. As these practises undermine the bodies and minds of our sons and daughters, render them incapable of life's sweetest enjoyments, and unfit to fill life's most important duties, it behooves us, every one of us, to look into this matter most earnestly, and to make it of the first importance, first to impart such knowledge as we have gained to each other, and then, to most lovingly, reverently and earnestly instruct the children and young people. The first work is accomplished by books and through the press, primarily, and by social conversation, and consideration of the subject. The mistaken views of parents, teachers and others in the past have led to the suppression of these aids, but the mistaken ideas of wrongly educated people are giving way before the sound sense of thinking people. Nothing is low that God has created; everything is low that man has degraded. Whatever man degrades in his thought or act he is ashamed of; when man prostitutes the truth in his mind, the same conditions manifest in his body, and he becomes ashamed of the truth, mentally and physically. The parents themselves being ashamed of their bodies and the sexual functions, hide all that pertains to sex and creation, and teach their children that it is indecent to speak of these things, leaving them in total ignorance of the true conditions. The consequence of this is that the young people seek secretly for knowledge of themselves, and get many distorted and false ideas, and know nothing of the dangers of sexual abuse.

When parents and teachers and friends do undertake to give the young people instruction or information on this subject, the best they can do is to give the knowledge they have acquired by experience and such ideas as they imbibed through observation and were taught by others who themselves were ignorant of the laws of nature. The universal teaching is that the sexual nature of men and of many women is to be repressed in certain defined ways, and that this constitutes respectability, morality and virtue. At the same time they are taught that this nature is morally overpowering, and that in men it must be expressed and in women repressed, and men may seek unlawful and secret expression, but women may not. Now the truth is that the whole nature of man and woman is sexual, and the trouble is that the attention is directed and concentrated on one particular expression of their natures. Life is creative, the whole life of man and woman is sexual, and in the truly normal condition life is equally diffused throughout the body, but by concentration may be increased in any particular direction. Think of the tremendous concentration of life and sensation in any one kind of physical creation, when it is carried on generation after generation, and it is taught that this particular method of creation is distinctively sexual, and by nature overpowers every other expression of life. Life is given to us abundantly, and the choice of using it as we will, diffusing and concentrating according to our desire, as shall seem good to us. Everyone who has an excess, and becomes unbalanced, is living ignorantly, and needs to be helped out of his condition. In the normal condition the physical is subject to the mental, but in unbalanced conditions the physical enslaves the mental, and man's life on earth is a place of torment, either from repression or abuse or excessive indulgence. Let us seek the truth with our whole hearts, and then teach it as wisely and beautifully as we are able. The only way to get at the truth is to leave every one to let the light that has been given him shine, and to remember that truth is beauty when rightly expressed.

Disordered conditions of the body brought about by lack of nourishing foods, use of stimulants, indigestible food, lack of cleanliness and exercise are a fertile source of abnormal physical cravings, especially of such expressions as have been developed by concentration. Exercise diffuses, that is, circulates life equally throughout the body; meutal exercise in excess of physical lets the blood stagnate where it is most strongly concentrated, and irritations, inflammations and ungovernable sensations are the result, which the victims do not know how to relieve; hence vices and abuses and crimes, wrecked lives and bodies.

Wherever there is irreverence for truth and good, there is physical degradation, for the one gives birth to the other; as a man thinketh, so is he, mind and body. The parents, teachers and friends have taught the young people irreverence; they are taught to be ashamed of their bodies and the body's functions; they are taught by example and the hearing of the ears to make light of good and truth in many forms, in love, in respect, in social position, in work, in personal characteristics, in the Bible, and religion, in marriage and child-bearing. Reverence is very difficult to acquire after adult life is reached; an irreverent soul is like a blasted rose; he who grows up in the habit of making fun of people, and their conditions, their relations and beliefs, degrades every beautiful function of life, and destroys the nobility of his own soul. Teach children to respect and reverence all that God has created, and feel only sorrow for perverted conditions.

People attract others to them on the plane of their own thought and feelings; young people do not understand that those who appeal to their lower natures and attract them down instead of appealing to their higher natures and leading them up, are not fit company. They do not know why they feel degraded and dissatisfied after associating with the trivial and vain, for they know they are in what the world calls good society, but they do sense sometimes painfully the appeals to the lower nature. The man who attracts others to himself by appeals to what in his thought is degrading will stir up degrading thoughts and feelings in others.

Let men and women appeal to the best and highest in each others' natures; the love of that which is elevating and makes life richer and brighter. Such appeals never inflame, but strengthen the purity and sweetness of others' natures. Young people in the society of such adults, and who so cultivate each others' society, will be poised and well-developed, physically, mentally and emotionally. MARION TRUEMAN.

Scientific Socialism.

I am greatly pleased with the result of my questions to Mr. Chas. H. Kerr in No. 932 of Lucifer in that they have led Mr. Kerr to acknowledge himself a Free Socialist, and have also led both him and Mr. R. B. Kerr to admit that in the Socialism for which they work the rights of free secession and of the necessary land to the user would be assured. On these terms I consider them both Free Socialists, because their ideal society would assure genuine practical liberty to every individual. Having thus satisfactorily settled the main points let us consider a few side questions of more or less importance.

There are a good many differences between these two members of the Clan Kerr which I must leave them to settle between themselves. But in No. 938 Chas. H. Kerr challenges me to point to any passage in the writings of any Socialist of international repute advocating state tyranny over individuals. Frankly I am not prepared to do this, but my impression is that Socialist authors rather dodge this point. It is hardly to be supposed that they would advocate "tyranny"—the word is not popular—but I think the control of the individual is usually implied in the logic and spirit of what they write. And this I know is the universal impression of non-Socialists and of Anarchists generally. And this universal impression must be well-known to these authors themselves. And in view of this I am sure my new Comrade will not wonder if I ask him to quote from these authors, with whom he seems intimately acquainted, passages in which they take pains to explain in unequivocal terms that the dissenting individual will always be jealously secured in his right of free-secession and in the use of enough land to make this right no empty form. My expectation is that Mr. Chas. H. Kerr cannot do this, that he cannot quote from a single author, or a single platform, such an unequivocal affirmation of these fundamental rights, without which the individual is hopelessly enslaved to the collectivity. I do not mean specious and empty phrases about liberty, such as any politician mouths, but clear recogaitions of the right of free secession and of the right to use land as alone securing personal liberty. And yet if these rights are fundamental it is clear, is it not, that their affirmation and reaffirmation should take precedence of everything else—should be the first and easiest thing to find in every Socialistic book, holding a sort of a "Thou shalt have no other Gods before me" position?

Mr. R. B. Kerr does not accept the distinction between Anarchists and Socialists given in No. 930 by Chas. H. Kerr, nor does he accept my classification in No. 936. He prefers to say Anarchists and Scientific Socialists. These "Scientific" Socialists hold that monopoly is a law of nature, and inevitable, and the only question is whether this monopoly shall be private or public, but really it appears that not even this is a question, as the final dictum of Scientific Socialism is that public monopoly is natural law and inevitable.

I do not doubt that Mr. R. B. Kerr quite correctly represents his school, but as to the "science" of the matter I am very sceptical. Much to Mr. Kerr's amusement doubtless I calmly assert that my Socialism is moral and that the only scientific Socialism is that which discovers and affirms the fundamental moral bases of true society. True Socialism is not a question of dollars and cents, of pots and pans, of hours and wages, of wheels and levers, it is a question of human beings and their mutual motives. The simple science of the matter is that when human beings attain a certain stage of evolution their ruling passion changes from a craving to dominate to a craving for liberty—the evolution of self-hood and of sympathy has reached a point after which domination and being dominated are alike intolerable, hideous, impossible. And as fast as such people evolute and increase in numbers, and find each other out, and act together, is True Society inaugurated by inevitable, natural law, not possibly to be thwarted. And these constitute the Comradeship of Free Socialists. And where these comrades are there is society and it cannot be otherwise; and where men have not reached this stage of evolution they are still brutes, struggling and fighting together under the law of might, unsocial, and it cannot be otherwise.

True society is human peace, satisfaction and loving co-operation (a thing impossible where any man is coerced) not an external arrangement of institutions and economic activities. These latter cannot possibly be arranged in beautiful and orderly forms except by a willingly free and loving people and they will arrange themselves inevitably in beautiful and orderly forms where the people are happy and free.

I do not admit that public monopoly is naturally inevitable. I claim that as a scientific fact the evolution of human sympathy will make all monopoly impossible. The social conscience will yet become so universal and sensitive that it will insist upon the sharing of all benefits as the chief joy of living. And even in the mere sense of centralized ability to produce I doubt it. I look for the discovery of a power so efficient yet easily distributed and controlled that practically every man may work his will with it with little need of others' aid.

A few decades back a military man might have claimed that the concentration of destructive power in an army was a natural law, but now the rapid discovery of more and more terrible explosives, easily made, portable, begin to make the army idea ridiculous.

When centralization reaches a certain intensity decentralization again asserts itself, only on a higher plane.

The integration of man will not be a coerced, machine-made thing, but the fruit of spontaneous, voluntary, love-impelled adhesion. J. WM. LLOYD.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 344 W. 143d street, New York.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Farewell to Autumn—The Outlook.

When these lines shall be read by the members of Lucifer's Household—except those who live in far away southern lands and climes—autumn will be gone, or at least fast going.

Even now, in the last expiring days of October, in this latitude, the orchards and forest trees have put off the golden-hued garments in which they have been arrayed the past few weeks, and now point, with bare arms and fingers, heavenward, as if to deprecate the wrath of the frowning skies.

Mauger predictions to the contrary, October—in Michigan, has been a very pleasant month; but few storms, but little frost, no snow, and many, many splendid days of clear, sunny, calm and mild weather—just glorious for out-door work, out-door enjoyment. Crops of nearly all kinds have matured well, in this section at least, and despite the phenomenally wet and cool summer and first autumn month, the farmer and fruit-grower, upon whom all depend, is in good shape to meet the winter.

OUTLOOK FOR PEACE AND PLENTY.

While these lines are being penned a "commission"—a HIGH commission appointed by President Roosevelt, a commission composed of lawyers, politicians and one church dignitary—Bishop Spalding, of the Roman Catholic church [MEM.:—why not a Protestant bishop or two?] are supposed to be entering upon the vastly important work of formulating a treaty of peace, by the acceptance of which treaty by both belligerents it is hoped to end the most memorable of all the "strikes" known to the history of the United States—the great 'anthracite coal strike" of 1902.

I do not need to tell my readers that what are commonly called strikes mean neither more nor less than a state of WAR! In this greatest of labor wars about one hundred and forty thousand miners were arrayed for five months against what are known as the "coal barons" of Pennsylvania, supported as these barons were by the armed militia of that state, and, potentially and legally if not morally and actively, by the whole military and naval forces of the general government of the United States.

* * *

In order to properly appreciate the situation, in order to rightly judge of the chances that the poor laboring man will have for justice before this high tribunal of arbitration, it must be remembered that the arbitrators were appointed by a man who is pledged, by all his political and hereditary affiliations, financial interests, etc., to uphold the present status of things, the status that puts it in the power of a few men with MONEY—no matter how that money was obtained—to monopolize the earth, the coal beds included, and to say to the landless men who apply for work on these monopolized lands,

"Work for the wages I offer you, else get off my land!"—equivalent to saying, "Get off the earth!"—since the same thing that the coal barons are doing in Pennsylvania may be done by the employers of labor everywhere.

Again, it must be remembered that this arbitration commission was appointed by a man who is sworn to execute the Federal statutes—laws presumably enacted to secure justice to ALL—the poor landless laboring man as well as the millionaire monopolist, and yet, notwithstanding his oath of office, this man Roosevelt, ever since he has been in office, has allowed these millionaire coal barons to openly, glaringly and notoriously VIOLATE both the letter and the spirit of these Federal statutes.

In other words, this man Roosevelt is, by his criminal neglect to do his sworn duty, particeps criminis with the law-defying coal barons.

Again—in calculating the chances of the men who have no political or social influence, and no money to back their demands for justice—it must be remembered that the members of this arbitration commission are, without exception so far as I know, by all their affiliations, habits and instincts, HEAVILY BONDED to favor the lordly coal barons in every possible way. That is to say, they are men high up in the social, political and financial world—men whose every record and every hope of future promotion or emoluments binds them to do nothing to unsettle the present relations of capital and labor—the relation that makes capital the master and the laborer the slave.

Another discouraging feature, or element, in the outlook—so far as the personnel of the "commission" is concerned, is the fact that the Roman Catholic Church has been honored—specifically honored, by a place on the board—the church which, of all the religious bodies in this country, is itself most nearly a political organization, with power to cast its vote, solid, as the leaders direct; a church whose entire history shows that it has ever sought political control over the people of the countries in which it gets a foothold—the Roman Catholic Church which never changes its policy, but ever seeks to ally itself with the political party that is most nearly identified with the established order, the order that means privileges for the few and slavery for the masses.

Year by year, administration after administration, it becomes more and more apparent that the Roman Catholic church exerts a powerful, a baleful influence over the national executives, the national policies, while, as all know, the municipal governments of nearly if not quite all the great cities of the country, with their horrible corruptions, are in the hands of the same religio-political organization, and hence I repeat, the appointment of Bishop Spalding to a place on the arbitration board, to the exclusion of the representatives of all other church organizations, is a pointer that augurs NO GOOD for the poor workingman, in the coming treaty of peace, if a treaty of peace lasting in its effects, is really to be the outcome of the present negotiations between the coal barons and the leaders of the Mine Workers' Federation.

* * *

Speaking of Roosevelt's failure to enforce the Federal statutes in reference to "trusts," that is, combinations that rob producer or consumer or both—it is usually considered that a man who violates his oath is a PERJURER. Is not an official who makes no effort to enforce laws he is sworn to enforce a perjurer?

Again: Is it customary for public officers charged with the duty of enforcing the laws, to open NEGOTIATIONS with notorious law-breakers, with the aim to ascertain on what terms they will consent to become law-abiding citizens?

It will be remembered, doubtless, that, in thus using the terms "law-abiding" and "law-breakers," I use them in the common and popular sense. Emerson says, "The good man will not obey the law too well." There are statute laws that all good men should break; laws that in themselves are law-breakers; breakers of the "higher law" of humanity and justice. Such laws should be ignored and violated, to the end that they become a dead letter, or be removed from the statute book,

But laws intended to restrain men from robbing and murdering their fellowmen are in the interest of humanity and justice, and the official who fails to enforce such laws, and who temporizes, condones, enters into amicable negotiations with robbers and murderers, should certainly be impeached and deprived of his office, if not punished as a co partner with such robbers and murderers.

To elaborate this matter further is useless and quite unnecessary. The worst robbers and murderers are those who, for private and personal gain, deprive their neighbors of their equal right to life, liberty and pursuit of happiness by compelling some to work for a beggarly pittance or starve, and by putting up the price of the necessities of life controlled by them, to others, to a figure beyond their means to pay.

Ordinary BRIGANDAGE—ordinary bank-robbing, or highway robbery and murder, are petty crimes, venial sins, when compared to the robberies and murders of the coal barons, railway magnates of Pennsylvania, whose acts are condoned and whose "property" is protected by government officials, such as Roosevelt and Governor Stone.

* * *

THE WAR STILL ON.

While the outlook for cheaper coal in cities is improving, news from the seat of war is by no means what the friends of peace and of justice were hoping it would be.

Yesterday's Chicago "American" reports as follows:

"Hazleton, Pa., Oct. 30.—Upon advice of President Mitchell, President Duffy and the executive board of District No. 7 today ordered the strike continued at the collieries of J. S. Wentz & Co., Coxe Bros. & Co., G. B. Markle & Co., A. Pardee & Co.

"Seven thousand men are affected. The order includes steam men as well as miners. The strike will be continued until the objectionable agreements are withdrawn. The strikers will be taken care of by the strike relief fund."

This means that workingmen, all over the country, whose earnings are a little above what is absolutely necessary to support life for themselves and families, will give of their scanty means to help the men who are continuing their defensive fight against a government-protected gang of LAND PIRATES, the worst, perhaps, that this age has produced in any country, whether called savage or civilized.

* * *

ATTEMPT TO BRIBE THE PEACE-MAKERS.

Another paragraph from the seat of war reads thus:

"The operators this morning made another effort to induce the members of the anthracite coal strike commission to accept the use of a special train which they were willing to furnish free to the commissioners to carry them around the mining region while they are making their investigations."

It is to the credit of these commissioners that this attempt to influence their decision was refused. Whether these same commissioners would have declined the proffered bribe if they had not known that the eyes of the reading public were upon them, is hard to tell. It would be decidedly interesting, however, to know how many of these well-paid public officials are in the habit of accepting a RETAINING FEE in the shape of "free rides" over the roads owned and controlled by the robbor barons.

* * *

Many other items of interest connected with the attempt to settle the points at issue between the man Baer—the partner of "God."—and his fellow lords of creation, on the one hand, and the poor laborers who risk life, and all that life means, to enable others to enjoy the comfort that comes from burning what are known in science as "black diamonds,"—many other items connected with this the greatest, perhaps, of all the labor wars of history, seem to call for at least a passing notice, but just now the writer of these lines is engaged in the, to him, arduous task of packing up his goods and chattels preparatory to a return to the great city—the modern Babylon known as Chicago.

If it be true that Winter sometimes "lingers in the lap of Spring," it is likewise true that summer sometimes lingers in the lap of Autumn. Though the nights are generally cool, even frosty, the days in Michigan continue delightfully warm, clear and mild, hence while anxious to get back into the regular harness again I am loth to quit the memorable precincts of "Harmony Home."

M. HARMAN.

A Good Example.

Box 309, Portland, Oregon, Oct. 24, '02.

EDITOR LUCIFER:—Enclosed you will please find postal money order for payment of fifteen subscriptions secured for your bright and interesting publication. I regard Lucifer as one of the grandest journals in existence today, and it is doing more for the cause of outraged humanity than all other publications put together. Let every reader of Lucifer solicit a few subscriptions from their friends and it will be but a short time before the subscription list will be trebled and the tremendous influence for good that these subscriptions will do cannot be overestimated.

Come brethren, how many will volunteer to do their share towards assisting with the good work by securing several subscriptions—no matter how small?

R. C. C.

Ida C. Craddock's last letter to the public will be given in our next issue. It is very important, and will occupy more than two pages. There will be other matter of interest concerning Mrs. Craddock. We hope that those who want extra copies will send in orders early.

Kate Austin, a writer well known to Lucifer's readers, died at Kingman, Kansas, on Oct. 28.

Memorial for Ida C. Craddock.

Twelve hundred men and women met at Handel Hall yesterday afternoon and heard three speakers declare that in committing suicide on October 18 Ida C. Craddock became a martyr to the cause of free speech.

The methods of Anthony Comstock were denounced and it was asserted that Miss Craddock had been persecuted, not prosecuted, because of the propaganda that she had made her life work.

Dr. Alice B. Stockham and Dr. Juliet Severance of this city spoke of the beauties of Miss Craddock's character and of the injustice of her prosecution and Mrs. Loomis of Boston criticised the postoffice inspectors whose short-sighted zeal, she said, had been responsible for the ending of a life whose every effort had been directed toward the enlightenment of humanity.

Miss Craddock used to live in Chicago. Her mother was at one time the treasurer of the National Woman's Christiam Temperance Union and Miss Craddock had been William T. Stead's secretary. She had given herself to humanitarian work ever since her girlhood. She was arrested in New York six weeks ago charged with sending immoral literature through the mails. She was convicted. Firmly believing she had done nothing wrong, she killed herself rather than go to prison for a long term.

Dr. Alice B. Stockham in her address to the men and the women who attended the Handel Hall meeting declared that Miss Craddock had died a martyr's death. Continuing she said:

"Miss Craddock elected to devote her life to instruction upon tabooed subjects. She believed that people were unnecessarily ignorant and that they suffered from that ignorance. Anthony Comstock failed to distinguish between literature which is demoralizing in intent and the literature that Miss Craddock wrote. Her writings taught scientific facts and were prepared and promoted with the intention of enlightenment.

"Honestly, and with the faith of a martyr, she gave her time, talent, ardor and enthusiasm to the enlightenment of men and women. She pleaded that the heart life, the real life, should become manifest in thought and word and deed."

Other speakers demanded that "honest thought uttered for an honest purpose should receive protection from the authorities instead of persecution."—Chicago American, Monday, Oct. 27.

Ruminations.

While the republication of "Discontent" is unavoidably postponed for a little longer, the people in Home are not asleep. The settlement presents a constant picture of activity, and of sure, if apparently slow progress. There has been no time, for many moons, when we have not had one or more dwelling houses in process of erection. Four are now going up, with others in prospect between now and spring. A large building is planned for this winter, which, when completed, will provide ample space for the school, the printing establishment and the public hall. The school is now holding its session in the late print shop, with the writer as teacher, assisted by Nettie S. Mueller as assistant and specialist in drawing, writing and singing. At the time of writing, there are thirty-four pupils with two more in prospect. Three of them are non-residents, whose parents, living in Tacoma and Seattle, regard Home as the best place to send them during the school seasons. The steamer from Tacoma has now adopted its winter schedule. From now until late spring, intending visitors will take the Tyconda or Typhoon at Commercial Dock, Tacoma, Sundays at 8 A. M., Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 1:30 P. M. Make a note of this, if there is any chance of your coming our way.

—

We have just had occasion to mourn the untimely death, from infant disease, of little Blossom Govan. She was a free-born child, and one of the sweetest little beings ever known. Her brightness and lovable ways had won her a place in the affections of all who knew her; and it made our hearts ache to part with her. Friends gathered at Mary C. Parker's house, where the feelings of all were expressed by Fannie Minor and the writer. Blossom was a bright spot in the life of her mother and of all our people; and we shall miss her more than we can tell.

—

To William Fretz I would say that Lillian Levison is certainly either a morphine slave or an insane woman. Her statements were so transparently false that even the Tacoma papers discredited them, as soon as challenged. Lois Waisbrooker, Sadie A. Magoon, James W. Adams, Gertie Vose and myself, are certainly well enough known to the Liberals of the country, to be worthy of belief, against the ridiculous stories of a half-crazy adventuress. If not, we can furnish absolute proof of the falsity of her statements to all who care to investigate. If friend Fretz lived in Tacoma, he would know better.

—

W. N. Slocum errs, if he thinks that I either misunderstand or misrepresent Socialism. Many able Socialists, including the editors of "Advance" and the Seattle "Socialist," could inform him to the contrary. I have spoken many times in Socialist meetings, and have warm friends among ardent Socialist propagandists. Their ideals are closely akin to my own. I am perfectly aware that many Socialists yearn for liberty; and I do not impugn their motives, nor accuse them of conscious tyranny, when I pronounce their methods to be ill adapted to the end they aim at. What they profess, or what they sincerely and ardently desire, is not the question. The signers of the Declaration of Independence and even the drafters of the Federal Constitution, apart from Hamilton, would certainly not have desired the criminal imperialism of today. The desire of Socialists is one thing; their logic is another. We have grave reasons for fearing that actual Socialism would involve an intolerable State tyranny; but this is not to misrepresent present day Socialist leaders, nor to accuse them of wishing to be tyrants.

—

The International Congress of Journalists voted down a resolution in favor of free speech and a free press, for fear of meddling with politics. And it is such dastards that have the making of public opinion! O for a Milton to thunder with a new Areopagitica against these servile trucklers, and in behalf of the most vital principles of human progress! Up to date, I cannot learn of one state, national or international Socialist congress or convention, which has recognized free speech as an issue, and declared in its favor. Such silence is cowardly and criminal. It is absolutely without excuse or palliation. Freedom of expression is menaced today on every side. Its enemies admit it as the vital question; and "reformers" and Socialists ignore it. Hundreds of readers of Lucifer, who know better than others its importance, and that no political movement incorporates it, remain indifferently or stupidly aloof, and will give no help to the one organization which exists to work on this specific line—the Free Speech League. I repeat that the Treasurer of the League is E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D., 120 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. Let him receive at least a dollar as membership fee from every reader who is averse to the enslavement of humanity.

—

Southern "honor" is again made visible in the forced resignation of Professor Andrew Dodd, of Emery College, Oxford, Ga., for denouncing the infamy of lynching. Free speech is sadly at a discount, both North and South.

JAS. F. MORTON, JR.

Trial Trip Subscriptions.

For one dollar we will send Lucifer ten weeks to eight different addresses, and to the one sending us the list, any one of the following books:

The Origin of the Family, Private Property and the State. By Frederick Engels, 217 pages, handsomely bound in cloth. Postage, 6 cents.

The Slavery of Our Times. By Leo Tolstoi. With portrait of author, 186 pages. Blue cloth; silver lettering. Postage 8 cents.

Nora: A Doll's House, and Ghosts. The two dramas bound together. Olive cloth; red lettering. 108 pages. Postage 8 cents. This offer will, we hope, induce our friends to extend Lucifer's circulation materially.

Call for the Annual Congress of the American Secular Union and Freethought Federation.

TO THE LIBERALS OF AMERICA: The Twenty-Sixth Annual Congress of the American Secular Union and Freethought Federation will be held Saturday and Sunday, November 15 and 16, 1902, in Brooklyn, N. Y. The place of meeting is the Long Island Business College Hall, South Eight street, between Bedford and Driggs avenues.

This is the hall of the Brooklyn Philosophical Association, which is an auxiliary of the Union and Federation. The Association has kindly and generously extended the invitation to the Union and Federation, and its members will do all they can to make things pleasant for the visitors, of whom there ought to be many. The Brooklyn Association is one of the largest Freethought societies in the country.

The objects of the Union and Federation are to protest against the union of church and state in this country, and to endeavor to remedy the evil by influencing legislators and legislation whenever and wherever possible. It is the business of the organization to oppose legislation in the interests of Christianity or any other religion. The principle of the Union and Federation is that every religion and religious worshiper must pay its and his own bills, and also refrain from encroaching upon the rights of others in religious matters, as is now done by our Sunday laws, the reading of the Bible and religious books in the public schools, the exemption of churches from taxation, and in various other ways indicated in the Nine Demands of Liberalism.

All favoring these are invited, and those opposed are welcome. We will try to change the views of the latter.

The last Congress was held in Buffalo. The report of this meeting is now in press and will be mailed to all members and contributors as soon as issued.

This Congress is also the annual opportunity for the Freethinkers of the country to get together and get acquainted with each other. This is by no means the least enjoyable part of the meeting. There are several good and moderate priced hotels near the hall, the Delaverne being perhaps the best. Those desirous of higher priced accommodation can easily find it in New York. The hall is but a few blocks from the ferry. Visitors unacquainted can obtain all information at "The Truth Seeker" office.

Among the speakers will be Moncure D. Conway, Hugh O. Pentecost, E. C. Walker, Charles Watts, Herbert N. Casson, and others.

Contributions for the expenses of the Congress are desird, and may be sent to the Secretary, E. C. Reichwald, 141 S. Water street, Chicago, Ill.; to the Treasurer, Henry White, 1231 G street, Washington, D. C., or to the President, E. M. Macdonald, "Truth Seeker" office.

Let everybody come and have a good time at this annual reunion of the Freethinkers of the country.

E. M. MACDONALD, President.
E. C. REICHWALD, Secretary.

942.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on t he wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with th is number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author.

The Sex Passion.
Man, the Ungrown.
Woman, the Serf.
Woman in Freedom
Marriage: a Retrospect.
Marriage: a Forecast.
The Free Society.
Some remarks on the early star and sex worships.
Notes—On the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population.

The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. Price, $1.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

WHITMAN'S IDEAL DEMOCRACY, AND OTHER WRITINGS.

BY HELENA BORN.

Comprising besides the title essay, Thoreau's Joy in Nature; Poets of Revolt: Shelley, Whitman, Carpenter; Whitman's Altruism; Individualism versus Organization: Ingenuities of Economic Argument; The Last Stand Against Democracy in Sex: Inequality in Divorce; Marriage Safeguards. With portrait of author and biographical introduction by Helen Tufts. 126 pages. Edition limited to 500 copies; each copy numbered. Fine paper, uncut pages, bound in boards, paper label. Price $1.

Agents Wanted To sell the Toltec Dandruff Cure and the Toltec Hair Dressing (restores natural color). Are clean and perfect. Liberal commission. Write for circulars. Address: The Toltec Remedies Co., Box 1267 Denver Colo.

"Pages of Socialist History." By W. Tcherkesoff. This book is recommended to Socialists of all schools, as it deals with the history of the "International" and the attitude of Marx and Engels towards Bakounin. Paper covers, 25 cents. By mail, 30 cents

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.25.
ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.
AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 75c; paper 25c.
ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.
A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $2.75.
A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.
A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. H. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strasburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. H. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.
AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.
BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth, $1.
BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.
BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.
CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.
CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 81 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 428 pages. 50c.
CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.
DARWIN, THE. (A novel.) Minna D. Slenker. 25c.
DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. G. Spencer. 178 pages. 25c.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer the Light Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

VACCINATION A CRIME.

With Comments on Other Sanitary Superstitions.

BY FELIX L. OSWALD, M. D.

"Vaccination spreads diseases; vaccination impairs the organic functions; vaccination encourages reliance on worthless remedies; vaccination spreads small-pox; compulsory vaccination furnishes dangerous legal precedents."

With illustrations of diseases frequently resulting from vaccination. 195 pages. Price 10 cents. For sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St. Chicago.

If your subscription expires with No. 941, or before this number, please let us hear from you.

The Woman Who Dares

BY URSULA N. GESTEFELD.

A novel, whose heroine seeks to find and realize her own individuality and, having found it, dares to maintain it in the marital relation. It is a carefully written story and meant to show the injustice of the marriage relation as usually regarded, and of the dual standard of morality, tacitly accepted however theoretically opposed. The subject is treated forcefully and directly, yet always tactfully and fairly, and possesses all the strength of moderation combined with just and equable criticism. The story reads more like events in real life than those of romance.

It is seldom that the most vital though most delicate of subjects is treated with such delicacy. The large number of letters from women received after its first publication is evidence that there is room for its heroine in many home.

—

"Here we have a well written story with a noble purpose. It is a woman's novel, and by that I do not mean that it is intended only for women; on the contrary, it ought to be read by every man in America who has the brain, conscience, and refinement of nature to appreciate its masterly presentation of what is the simple right, nay, more, is the sacred duty of every married woman, to demand the absolute right to her own person in wedlock no less than out of wedlock. . . . In the presentation of the vital thought found in these pages, Mrs. Gestefeld has given us a superb piece of work. It is a story of great vitality. The author is a thoughtful and a deeply spiritual woman. With the keen intuitive insight so often met with in profoundly spiritual natures, she has discerned one of the greatest moral crimes of the present."—The Arena.

Size 5 1-4x7 1-2 inches; 386 pages. Beautifully printed on laid paper, bound in green Holliston linen, and stamped in ink with original cover design. Price, $1.25, postpaid. THE GESTEFELD PUBLISHING CO., 128 Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ills. Department LF.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Head ill. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DIGGING FOR RED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wellock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 21 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $3.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 50c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 10c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian religion has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 360 pages. 40c. Postage, 5c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Siemens and David Overmyer. 25c.

GIORDANO BRUNO: His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 25c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Daily Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 419 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 256 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 120 pages. Paper, 25c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Scotoland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Dying Words of Infidels." "Dying Throes." "Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 97 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Voltney, and Voltaire. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

KORADINE. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1896, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III. (1899). Cloth, $1.25. Postage, 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Apostolic. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very 8.00. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 30c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The Stale Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 10c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 10c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, R. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Free-thinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 25c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 25c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Siponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $1. Five volumes, plainer binding, $2.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 320 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 50c.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intuition (Marietta), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 207 pages. 25c.

THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Witches and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 261 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old asceticism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In groping their way, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the caresses of babes." Paper covers; 32 large pages. 10c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 10c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Widehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (H. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management thereof. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1626, quoted by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuit craft and is a plain index to the underhand working of that order against the welfare of individuals and society. 25c.

THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 10c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Social Action (Ernest Wilms), Fraud, Telepathic Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Wilms). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 15c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Geo. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $1.50.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Durfing. 15c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 10c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. What man owes to woman, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the caresses of babes. Paper covers; 32 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 1, 1898. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Amos. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. 75c. In Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done women by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 50c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 179 pages. 50c.

Address M. HARMAN, 880 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VI., No. 44. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, NOV. 13, E. M. 302. [C. E. 1902.] WHOLE No. 943

SELF-DEPENDENCE.

Weary of myself and sick of asking
What I am, and what I ought to be,
On this vessel's prow I stand, which bears me
Forwards, forwards, o'er the star-lit sea.

And a look of passionate desire
O'er the sea and to the stars I send,
"Ye who from my childhood up have calmed me,
Calm me, ah! compose me to the end.

"Yet once more," I cried, "ye stars, ye waters,
On my heart your mighty charm renew!
Still let me as I gaze upon you,
Feel my soul becoming vast like you!"

From the intense, clear, star-sown vault of heaven,
Over the lit sea's unquiet way,
Through the rustling night air came the answer,
"Would ye be as these are? Live as they!"

Unaffrighted by the silence round them,
Undistracted by the sights they see,
These demand not that the things about them
Yield them love, amusement, sympathy.

And with joy the stars perform their shining,
And the sea its long moon-silvered roll,
For self-poised they live, nor pine with noting
All the fever of some differing soul.

O air-born voice! Long since severely clear,
A cry like thine in mine own heart I hear:
"Resolve to be thyself, and know that he Who finds himself, loses his misery!"

—Matthew Arnold.

Ida C. Craddock's Last Words.

TO THE PUBLIC:—I am taking my life because a judge, at the instigation of Anthony Comstock, has decreed me guilty of a crime which I did not commit—the circulation of obscene literature—and has announced his intention of consigning me to prison for a long term.

The book has been favorably reviewed by medical magazines of standing, and has been approved by physicians of reputation. The Rev. Dr. Rainsford of this city, in two letters to me, partially approved this book so far as to say that if all young people were to read it, a great deal of misery, suffering, and disappointment could be avoided, and that to have arrested me on account of it, as Mr. Comstock had done, was ridiculous. This little book, "The Wedding Night," and its companion pamphlet, "Right Marital Living," have been circulated with approval among Social Purity women, members of the W. C. T. U., clergymen and reputable physicians; various physicians have ordered these books from me for their patients, or have sent their patients to me to procure them or to receive even fuller instruction orally; respectable married women have purchased them from me for their daughters, husbands for their wives, wives for husbands, young women for their betrothed lovers. On all sides these little pamphlets have evoked from their readers commendation for their purity, their spiritual uplifting, their sound common sense in treating of healthful and happy relations between husbands and wives.

In contrast with this mass of testimony to their purity and usefulness, a paid informer, who is making his living out of entering complaints against immoral books and pictures, has lodged complaint against one of my books as "obscene, lewd, lascivious," and proposes to indict the other book later on, so as to inflict legal penalties on me a second time. This man, Anthony Comstock, who is unctuous with hypocrisy, pretends that I am placing these books in the hands of minors, even little girls and boys, with a view to the debauchment of their morals. He has not, however, produced any young person thus far who has been injured through their perusal; nor has any parent or guardian come forward who claims even the likelihood of any young person's being injured by either of these books; nor has he even vouchsafed the addresses of any of the people from whom he states he has received complaints. In addition, he has deliberately lied about the matter. He stated to Judge Thomas of the United States Circuit Court (secretly, not while in court), that I had even handed one of these books to the little daughter of the janitress of the building in which I have my office. It so happens that there is no janitress in this building, nor is there any little girl connected with same. I took a paper around among the tenants to this effect, which they signed, and which I sent to the judge by my lawyer; also a paper to the same effect, which my landlord stood prepared to attest before a notary, if need be. But even this made no impression upon Judge Thomas; he still is firmly convinced (so he says) that Anthony Comstock is a strictly truthful man.

On Friday last, October 10, I underwent what was supposed to be a fair and impartial trial by jury; but which was really a most unfair trial, before a thoroughly partisan judge, at the close of which he abolished my right of trial by jury on the main question at issue, namely the alleged obscenity of "The Wedding Night" book. My counsel was not permitted to present in evidence circulars which showed that as far back as 1898 and 1899, I was accustomed to state in print that any applicants for oral instruction upon marriage who were under 21 would have to produce written consent from a parent or a guardian. My evidence was almost wholly choked off; neither my counsel nor myself was permitted to endeavor to justify the book by argument. The most the judge would do was to permit me to read from various paragraphs in the book, without comment, if these could explain the indicted paragraphs. Even with this tiny bit of a chance, I made such good use of my opportunity before the jury, that Judge Thomas, who was evidently prejudiced in advance against both myself and my book, saw that he dared not now risk the case to the jury, or he might not manage to convict me after all. And so he announced that he himself intended to pass upon the character of the book. He stated that there is in existence a decision of the United States Supreme Court which gives him this right.

He said he would not let the question go to the jury; he considered the book "obscene, lewd, lascivious, dirty." He added that he would submit to the jury only the question of fact: Did the defendant mail the book? (The charge was "mailing an obscene book.") He said: "Gentlemen of the Jury, the question for you to pass upon is, Did the defendant mail the book? You know that she admits having mailed the book. Please render your verdict. I do not suppose you will care to leave your seats." And the poor little cowed jury could do nothing but to meekly obey the behests of this unrighteous judge, and to pass in their ballots, "Guilty of mailing the book." Which, of course, was no crime at all.

I fully expected that the public press of New York City would duly chronicle this most remarkable invasion of the rights of the people by such an abolishing of the trial by jury; but so far as I could learn, the press remained totally silent.

It is evident that the political pull of the party which fathers Anthony Comstock is too powerful for any newspaper in New York to dare to raise a protest when, at the instigation of this ex officio informer, an innocent woman, engaged in a laudable work of sex reform, indorsed by reputable citizens, is arrested on false information and denied her right of trial by jury.

Since Friday last, people of influence and respectability have written to the judge on my behalf and have been to see him; but he announces his inflexible intention of sending me to prison, and, he is careful to malignantly add, "for a long, long term." I am a "very dangerous woman," he adds; Mr. Comstock has told him most shocking things about me—not in court, however, this paid informer being far too cute to dare to face his victim openly with any such lies.

At my age (I was forty-five this last August) confinement under the rigors of prison life would be equivalent to my death-warrant. The judge must surely know this; and since he is evidently determined to not only totally suppress my work, but to place me where only death can release me, I consider myself justified in choosing for myself, as did Socrates, the manner of my death. I prefer to die comfortably and peacefully, on my own little bed in my own room, instead of on a prison cot.

I am making this statement to the public because I wish to call attention to some of the salient features of Comstockism, in the hope that the public may be led to put down this growing menace to the liberties of the people.

As I said not long since in the Boston "Traveler," if the reading of impure books and the gazing upon impure pictures does debauch and corrupt and pervert the mind (and we know that it does), when we reflect that Anthony Comstock has himself read perhaps more obscene books, and has gazed upon perhaps more lewd pictures than has any other one man in the United States, what are we to think of the probable state of Mr. Comstock's imagination today upon sexual matters?

The man is a sex pervert; he is what physicians term a Sadist—namely a person in whom the impulses of cruelty arise concurrently with the stirring of sex emotion. The Sadist finds keen delight in inflicting either physical or mental humiliation upon the source of that emotion. Also he may find pleasure in gloating over the possibilities to others. I believe that Mr. Comstock takes pleasure in lugging in on all occasions a word-picture (especially to a large audience) of the shocking possibilities of the corruption of the morals of innocent youth.

This man serves two masters; he is employed and paid by the Society for the Suppression of Vice, but he secures from the United States Government an appointment as postal inspector without pay; so that he is able, if he wishes, to use his official position for the furtherance of the private ends of his society and, presumably of himself. Ex officio informers, with their attendant spies and decoys, have been throughout history notoriously a means of exploiting the government for private and corrupt purposes.

For over nine years I have been fighting, single-handed and alone, against Comstockism. Time and time again I have been pushed to the wall, my books have been seized and burned, and I myself have been publicly stigmatized in the press by Comstock and Comstockians as a purveyor of indecent literature. Yet this very literature has been all the while quietly circulating with approval among men and women of the utmost respectability and purity of life, and I have received numerous letters attesting its worth.

Not only this. Comstockism can be used, as was the mediæval Inquisition at times, to gratify private malice, as the complainant does not need to appear in court. This was done to me in Philadelphia because, while holding a petty position as amanuensis in the Bureau of Highways, I declined right along to pay political assessments to the Quay party. For months they tracked me night and day wherever I went, vainly hoping to learn something detrimental to my character, and at last they arranged to have me indicted for mailing immoral literature, as they could find no other means of successfully damaging my reputation.

John Wanamaker once stated in a political speech that the Quay party were relentless in hounding those who refused to pay political assessments. They would follow up such a person even when he went into the service of other employers, and leave no stone unturned to ruin him in after years. This may or may not be so in my own case; I do not know. But I do know that when I went to Washington a secret complaint was lodged with the police. My accuser never faced me openly in court. I pleaded my own case before the police judge, saved one book ("Right Marital Living") and won many encomiums from those present in court because of the uplifting character of my plea; nevertheless I was driven from the city.

Each time that I have been arrested, I have escaped by a compromise; but I resolved, when I came to New York, that if again attacked by Comstockism, I would stand my ground and fight to the death. Perhaps it may be that in my death, more than in my life, the American people may be shocked into investigating the dreadful state of affairs which permits that unctuous sexual hypocrite, Anthony Comstock, to wax fat and arrogant, and to trample upon the liberties of the people, invading, in my own case, both my right to freedom of religion and to freedom of the press. There is only one lawful excuse for the community's interfering with any one's religion or publication in America; and that is, the invasion, by means of that religion or those publications, of other people's rights to life, liberty, or the pursuit of happiness. No proof of such injury wrought has been produced in my case; the testimony for the government against me rests entirely upon the mere say-so of this paid informer.

Every one of the paragraphs indicted in "The Wedding Night" is the outcome of talks which I have had with distinguished physicians and also with women and men among my pupils. I have looked into the hearts of hundreds of men and women during the nine years in which I have been engaged in sex reform work, and my soul burns within me when I see how husbands and wives are suffering, and how nearly all of this suffering could be done away with, if only Anthony Comstock were not hoodwinking the public into believing that sexual information in printed books must be kept away from them, so as to protect the morals of innocent youth. Surely, Mr. Comstock's idea of the nature of the marriage relation must be singularly impure, when he ventures to pretend that it should not be known as to its details by young people who are sufficiently mature to be seeking for enlightenment!

In the courts, however, in obscene literature cases, a precedent has been established by which the defendant is forbidden to produce witnesses in behalf of the accused book, so that I was legally prohibited from summoning physicians to testify on behalf of the book.

Owing to this and to other legal precedents which hamper the defendant in obscene literature cases as is done in no other criminal cases anywhere; owing also to the dense ignorance and prejudice which prevail in regard to the scientific, open discussion of sexual matters; and, most of all, owing to Mr. Comstock's persistent lies and to his adroitness in depicting the shocking possibilities of corrupting the morals of innocent youth by permitting young people to peruse any enlightening literature upon the details of normal, healthy, pure marital relations—matters have now reached the point where it is only necessary to accuse a person of mailing so-called "obscene" literature in order to convict him. As no witnesses are allowed to testify as to the effect of the book upon themselves or their young daughters or young sons, or, if physicians, upon their patients, neither judge nor jury are in a position to learn the actual facts in the case. And now, in my own case the other day, the legal precedent has been established by the action of Judge Thomas, in the United States Circuit Court, of not only excluding witnesses in behalf of the indicted book, but even forbidding either the defendant or her counsel to attempt to explain the reasons for printing the indicted paragraphs or in any way seeking to justify, in an argument, the publication of the book; and then finally, by a legal subterfuge, abolishing the defendant's right of trial by jury; the latter being a proceeding which has always been recognized by true patriots as a serious menace to the liberties of the people.

In addition, in my own case, there is the matter of persecution for my religious views. Although this question did not directly arise before Judge Thomas, yet, from the paragraph which I read from my book, and which I was permitted to read only without explanation, it must have been evident that the book contained a religious propaganda, and that, indeed, the religious teaching was the foremost matter, the physical teachings being only subservient thereto.

But in my trial under the New York state law last March, under three judges, the religious question did very decidedly arise. In that court, Judge McKean so far forgot his oath of office (to administer justice impartially) as to hotly denounce my book as "blasphemous" (presumably because I am teaching the duty and the joy of Communion with God in the marriage relation, so as to render it sacramental). Of course, this was illegal on his part. No judge has any right to denounce a prisoner because he differs with that prisoner in his religious belief.

I earnestly hope that the American public will awaken to a sense of the danger which threatens it from Comstockism, and that it will demand that Mr. Comstock shall no longer be permitted to suppress works on sexology. The American people have a right to seek and to obtain knowledge upon right living in the marriage relation, either orally or in print, without molestation by this paid informer, Anthony Comstock, or by anybody else.

Dear fellow-citizens of America, for nine long years I have faced social ostracism, poverty, and the dangers of persecution by Anthony Comstock for your sakes. I had a beautiful gospel of right living in the marriage relation, which I wanted you to share with me. For your sakes, I have struggled along in the face of great odds; for your sakes I have come at last to the place where I must lay down my life for you, either in prison or out of prison. Will you not do something for me now?

Well, this is what I want the American public to do for me. Only one of my books, that on "The Wedding Night," is at present under legal ban. "Right Marital Living," which is by far the more important book of the two, and which contains the gist of my teaching, has not yet been indicted. Mr. Comstock, however, told me, when arresting me, that he expected to get both books indicted. If sufficient of a popular demand be made for this book, and especially if that demand voice itself in the public press, he will not dare to attack the book in the courts. Will you do this one thing for me, those of you who have public influence? Remember, it is for you and for your children that I have fought this nine years' fight. And although I am going to a brighter and a happier land, nevertheless, I shall still look down upon you all here, and long and long and long that you may know something of the radiantly happy and holy life which is possible for every married couple who will practice these teachings. Even in Paradise I cannot be as happy as I might, unless you share with me this beautiful knowledge.

I beg of you, for your own sakes, and for the future happiness of the young people who are dear to you, to protect my little book, "Right Marital Living."

I have still other teachings to follow this, upon the marriage relation, later on. I have written a book of between 450 and 500 pages upon "Marriage" in which my teachings are set forth more fully. This book, in manuscript form, is at present stored in a safe place, in friendly hands. It will not be given to the public until such time as the public shows itself ready for it, and prepared to protect this fuller and franker book from persecution. Meanwhile, however, "Right Marital Living" remains unindicted; it sets forth a gospel of marriage which is being preached by no other teacher in America. Its teachings will make your married lives healthier, happier, holier. Will you publicly voice your demand for this little book, "Right Marital Living," and protect it from Anthony Comstock?

IDA C. CRADDOCK.

The Position of the Socialist Party.

Your number 940 contains two interesting letters in criticism of what I have written for your columns. In view of the fact that your space is limited I will defer replying to Mr. Isaak until another issue.

Replying to Mr. Hunt I wish emphatically to disclaim any originality or peculiarity for the views I am presenting. My object is to state the views held by nine-tenths of the organized Socialists both in America and Europe.

In speaking of "the coercive features" of the State as at present organized I referred to the familiar fact that the chief function of the present state is to support the institution of property, or, in other words, to keep the laborers in subjection to the capitalists. When this function of the State is abolished, as Socialists propose, there will be no occasion for the "punishment" of "crime." The only offences calling for restraint will then be due to atavism and will demand the attention of the physician and the teacher rather than the jailer and the executioner.

Mr. Hunt's allusion to the Peoria Convention could hardly have been intelligible to those not connected with the Socialist party of Illinois. The fact of the matter is that at the State Convention held last July there was a spirited discussion over the question whether the platform should embody a list of the specific measures which Socialists would enact if elected, or should stop with a simple statement of the principles of revolutionary Socialism. The Convention voted by a considerable majority in favor of the latter proposition. Personally, however, I spoke and voted on the side of the minority. But neither I nor any of those who voted with me, so far as I have been able to learn, have the least desire to split the party on account of this difference of opinion.

The central thought of organized Socialism is not merely common ownership and not at all any arbitrary programme:—it is the class struggle, which is destined to bring the working class into control and to abolish the parasitic class.

CHARLES H. KERR.

Would That There Were Many Such Workers!

Every reader of Lucifer will be doing noble work by securing one or more subscribers and thus help the cause to grow. Many reform journals are making energetic efforts this time of the year to increase their circulation and there is no reason why Lucifer cannot hold its own with any of them if each friend will do their part—no matter how small it is. Words of praise are all right in their way but don't weigh very much when it comes to paying composition, paper, printing and numerous other bills. The writer is in the newspaper business himself and has had a little experience in this line. Now, brethren, get together—"get a hump on yourselves" right now and let us help in the glorious work of freedom by hustling for a few cash subscriptions.

R. C. C.

Box 309, Portland, Oregon.

We want to send samples to your friends. Send names, please.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 344 W. 145d street, New York.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Retrospect and Prospect.

The departure of Summer; the frosts and falling leaves of Autumn; the long cold rains and sleet of November, suggestive of the snows of December, all admonish us that the year is closing—a year that has witnessed a number of very noteworthy events.

Among the more important of these events are the ending of the South African war; the total destruction of St. Pierre with its inhabitants—the capital city of Martinique, the most important city and island of the French West Indies, by a series of eruptions from Mt. Pelee; the five months' labor war in the anthracite coal fields of Pennsylvania—a war that is not yet ended but merely suspended, under "flag of truce," so to speak, while a government-appointed "commission" is trying to arrange terms of peace that will be satisfactory to both of the contending armies.

* * *

Of these three noteworthy events the labor war easily takes precedence in point of importance to the lives, the comfort and welfare of non-combatants in this country, if not the world over. The South African war was for political supremacy, and also for control of the revenues arising from monopoly of diamond mines—a commodity in which the common people of the world have little or no interest, and it can easily be shown that so far as material comforts and rewards of labor are concerned, it makes little difference to the proletarian worker, whether the political government is in the hands of native or foreign rulers. The farmers, shepherds and miners of South Africa will probably be no more robbed by British tax-gatherers than they would have been had the Boers been victorious in their valiant two-and-a-half years' struggle for political independence. The sympathies of the world were mainly with the Boers, not because their own rulers would be less exacting and cruel than would be the agents of the British crown, but because of the world-wide prejudice, or instinct, that all peoples should have the right to choose by whom they are to be ruled and robbed. It is the ages-old admiration for the "patriot"—for him who fights and dies in defence of "home and native land."

In the case of the West Indian outbreak it was a war inaugurated by the pent-up forces of nature, seeking vent, or equilibrium. It was not a question of ethics; not a question as to who would be hurt or who benefited by the display of force and fireworks, but simply an unconscious, unintelligent, unsympathetic overflow, or inundation of cosmic energy, very similar to the periodic overflows of great rivers, or the occasional outflow of atmospheric air, when it takes the form of the tornado or cyclone.

In the war between the coal miners and the men who claim to own the coal beds, the case is very different from either of the aforementioned disturbances. It was and is not a question of political supremacy, nor of relief from pent-up cosmic energy, but rather a question of PROFITS—of unearned revenues, on the one hand, and of bare SUBSISTENCE—of bread, clothing and shelter, on the other hand.

Every one who cares to understand the causes of revolt of labor against the monopolistic employers of labor, should read President Mitchell's letter to the arbitrating commission. In this letter the indictment against the coal lords and transportation barons takes the form of some twenty-three counts; of these I select the following:

"The average annual earnings in the anthracite coal fields are much less than the average annual earnings for occupations requiring equal skill and training.

"The rate of wages in the anthracite coal fields is insufficient to compensate the men workers, in view of the dangerous character of the occupation, in relation to accidents, the liability to serious and permanent disease, the high death rate and the short life incident to this employment.

"The annual earnings of mine workers are insufficient to maintain the American standard of living.

"The increased cost of living has made it impossible to maintain a fair standard of life upon the basis of present wages, and has not only prevented the mine workers from securing any benefit from increased prosperity, but has made their condition poorer on account of it.

"The wages of the anthracite mine workers are so low that their children are prematurely forced into the breakers and mills instead of being supported and educated upon the earnings of their parents."

* * *

COMPROMISE—COMPROMISE.

Our readers know something of the history of political "compromises" in this country, over the African slave question. They know that these compromises began in the "convention" of 1787, when the constitution of the United States was formulated. They know the history of the famous "Missouri Compromise" of 1820, when the parallel of 36 30 was fixed upon to limit the area of slaveholding in the "territories," and they know the result of the breaking of that compromise by the adoption of the Kansas-Nebraska Bill, under the leadership of Stephen A. Douglas. They know that compromises between Freedom and Slavery, between justice and injustice, have never brought peace, brotherhood, satisfaction or happiness.

Will it be different now? If the proposed compromise between the lords of the mine, the mill and the means of transportation, on the one hand, and the slaves who work in the mine, the mill, and who man the decks of the transportation systems—on land and water, on the other hand,—if this new compromise shall bring lasting peace, happiness and contentment, it will do what no former treaty between freedom and slavery has ever done.

When will mankind awake to the realization of the fact that no freedom for the masses can possibly exist so long as the materials and the tools of production, and also the means of the exchange of products, are monopolized by the few.

* * *

HOME AGAIN.

After a little more than four months of vacation in the Michigan Fruit Belt I find myself once more in the thills, so to speak, and ready to help draw Lucifer's load. Continuous November rains—very cold and disagreeable—delayed the homeward journey beyond expectation, ending with a stormy ride across Lake Michigan, Friday night Nov. 7, causing not a little anxiety as to whether my vacation was to end in a shipwreck and watery grave for Lucifer's editor.

Looking backward over these four months—months of free exposure to sun and wind and rain, months of pretty close association with farmers and fruit-growers, also of occasional near acquaintance with friendly visitors from Chicago and elsewhere to the house we called "Harmony Home" I find myself not much richer in dollars but very, very much richer in EXPERIENCE, and while a large part of this experience is of a nature I would not care to have repeated, am free to say that not for a whole month's income of John D. Rockefeller and of J. Pierpont Morgan, with a week of President Baer's thrown in, would I have MISSED that experience, or those experiences.

What those experiences were like I will try to give some general idea in the near future, if our readers do not object, but owing to the fact that I find Lucifer's forms for this issue about full, this article will have to be postponed for the present.

* * *

Looking forward to the near approaching season of snows, of short days and of long winter nights, while there is much in the prospect ahead that is cheerless and uninviting for the poor, the moneyless and propertyless workers there is much also that is encouraging. Never before in the memory of man, perhaps, has there been such a campaign of education along radical lines, revolutionary lines of thought, as now; never before has there been so many signs of a general waking up, and shaking up, of the stupid masses; and while not many are yet prepared to shake off the yoke of bondage to old-time creeds, to economic, religious and sociologic superstitions, the spirit of unrest is abroad as never before, in this generation, reminding us of Ella Wheeler Wilcox's stirring lines:

"Be not content; contentment means inaction,
The growing soul aches on its upward quest—
Satiety is kin to satisfaction—
All great achievements spring from life's unrest.

"Prize what is yours, but be not quite contented.
There is a healthful restlessness of soul
By which a mighty purpose is augmented
To urge men onward to a higher goal."

M. HARMAN.

CONTRIBUTED articles on Anarchistic and Socialistic problems have necessarily been crowded out of this and recent issues, to make room for matter pertaining to the death of Ida C. Craddock.

To the many friends of this the latest victim of the remorseless American Inquisition we would say that copies of recent issues of Lucifer can still be had, containing letters of sympathy and respect for the departed, and words of indignant protest against the prosecution and the prosecutors that caused the untimely ending of this exceptionally brave, true and good young life.

Ruminations.

By this time, every reader of Lucifer has doubtless been apprised of the murder of Ida C. Craddock by the unspeakable fiend, Anthony Comstock. I use the term "murder" advisedly. The desperate hounding of this noble woman, acting on her extremely sensitive organism, proved more than she could endure, and added her to the list of Comstock's victims. We are paying a heavy price for our indifference to the cause of free speech; and the end is not yet. I knew Mrs. Craddock personally, and honored her for her purity of soul and sincerity of purpose. She never uttered a word, or wrote a line of which the most refined woman need have been ashamed. Her persecution was one of the most infernal outrages of modern times, and was possible only in a land completely permeated with the poison of Comstockism. The miserable judge who sentenced her is fit only to be a companion in infamy with the notorious Jeffries.

What are we going to do about it? We cannot undo the wrong, nor bring Ida Craddock back to life; but we can fight to the death the damnable Comstock law, under which a venal and heartless knave like Comstock, assisted by corrupt judges and ignorant juries, can thrust advanced thinkers into prison, and hound sensitive women to suicide. The time has come to make a last vigorous stand for free speech, and to persist in it, until we force the masses to recognize that here is the one gigantic issue of the day. The element in power is determined to strangle all freedom of expression. The devilish conspiracy cannot be carried out all at once, for fear of arousing too dangerous a storm of protest. The most unpopular sects must be attacked first, on one specious pretext or another, until the American people have become familiar with the idea of a censorship. After that, the Russian policy, which forms part of the program of imperialism, can proceed more rapidly. A pleasant prospect, is it not? Apparently most of you think so, since you refuse to help the work of the only society which is formed expressly to combat the malign influence that is undermining the very foundations of liberty in this country. Had the Free Speech League been launched five years ago; had it received the active support of all who claim to be reformers; had speakers been put on the platform in every section of the country; had literature bearing on this one vital issue been everywhere circulated; had the United States been leavened with the idea that free speech was a heritage of the vastest consequence to every human being; Ida Craddock need not be lying dead today. Comstockism and its allies shun the light; for their vocation is one of darkness. It is by education and publicity that the assaults on freedom of speech can be met and vanquished. But there is no time to lose. Precedents are being accumulated, which strengthen the enemy, and bring discouragement to the friends of freedom. Our cause is in danger from apathy. The Socialists, who form the largest single class of advanced reformers today, show themselves utterly indifferent to the principle of free speech. In spite of the monstrous outrages of Comstockism, anti-Anarchist legislation, injunctions against free assemblage in the strike fields, imprisonment of editors in Havana and Manila for venturing to criticise the United States, dismissal of public servants for speaking against imperialism, the suppression of the Declaration of Independence in the Philippine Island as a "damned incendiary document," countless local outrages on free speech, free press, free mails and free assemblage—in spite of these and countless other evidences of a deliberate plot to arrest all progress by choking up its source, which lies in free discussion, not one Socialist platform up to date has contained a declaration dealing with this all-important theme; and nearly every Socialist editor in the land keeps absolutely mum on the subject of free speech, except when the particular victim of its denial happens to be a member of his own party. And yet there are those who affect to wonder that some of us are not eager to accept Socialist professions of zeal for the cause of freedom. The Single Taxers are a little more wide awake; and some of their organs are doing splendid service in the cause of free expression. The Anarchists, being the first to suffer from the policy of suppression, are naturally foremost in protesting against it; but many of them, if not all, are also prompt to defend the rights of persecuted individuals with whose opinions they do not agree. The Freethinkers, who ought to take the lead in demanding free speech for all the advocates of all opinions, are shamefully lethargic, as a class; though there are some magnificent exceptions.

If you wish to be guiltless of the death of Ida Craddock; if you wish to check the outrages of which Anarchists, sex reformers, trades unionists, Cubans, Filipinos, Porto Ricans and already some Socialists and Anti-Imperialists are the victims, and which will shortly be multiplied against all these, and extended to Single Taxers, Freethinkers and religious, social and political "heretics" of every school; you must shake off your indifference, which in such a crisis is almost criminal, and take an active part in the struggle for free speech. Join the Press Writers if you are able to wield a pen; but in any case, join the Free Speech League, and enable it to place speakers on the platform, and to flood the country with literature on the most vital issue of the day. Send a dollar more if you can spare it—to E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D., 120 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. Now let us see how many of Lucifer's readers really mean business.

That eccentric and pugnacious Texas periodical, yclept Reed's Isonomy, has in its October issue a plea for the re-enslavement of the negro. This will do to go with Charles Carroll's absurd claim, based, like many absurdities, on the Bible, that the negro is a mere beast, created simply to be of service to the white man. The argument, based on the presumption that the silly aspect of human nature known as race prejudice will persist through all time, and can down the law of evolution, is of course too self-stultifying to be worthy of serious attention.

Our population is still on the increase. Among the latest arrivals, are Olivia Freelove Shepard and Fannie Spaulding, late publishers of "Spirit Mothers." Lois Waisbrooker is enjoying a well-earned vacation from office work, and is spending a little time in the lecture field. Mattie D. Penhallow is in Boston for the winter.

"After calm and mature deliberation," I am still persuaded that our tactics in the Waisbrooker and Penhallow cases were the wisest under all the circumstances. I do not believe that any real opportunity was slighted. I have already given full reasons for having taken this position, and need not now repeat, as these reasons are good, until refuted.

Home has just enjoyed a visit from B. Molenaar, a teacher from Holland, to whom the writer in particular feels indebted for much interesting information with reference to European educational methods. JAS. F. MORTON, JR.

The Work Before Us.

DEAR FRIEND HARMAN:—Nothing in Lucifer escapes me and I feel that in writing the editorial you did in No. 939, you said the very best thing that could be said. The death of Mrs. Craddock, which was to all practicality a murder, should, if properly taken advantage of, give a great impetus to the work you have undertaken for purity and for the emancipation of women. All of those who have received good impulses and impressions from her nine years of devoted teaching should be brought in to continue the work that she began with so much bravery and for which she gave up her life, and these people should be brought into line to follow up exactly the work mapped out in your article.

Mrs. Craddock had hosts of friends who appreciated her efforts and the letters that have come to me since her death have overwhelmed me and kept me busy in many ways. You may be sure that I will not fail to push the gospel of freedom and purity at all times. Yours sincerely,

EDWARD W. CHAMBERLAIN.
111 W. 42 St., New York, N. Y.

What Is "The Truth?"

What are we going to tell Mrs. B., of Texas, my Lucifer, you and I? "I must have the truth at any cost" she says with all the naivete of Pilate when he asked "What is Truth?" Shall we give her a weak and evasive answer, as did the divine Jesus of Nazareth, or shall we rise like a man and acknowledge you out of your vast and varied experiences and I in my narrow little way that neither has one word of comfort for her.

What shall be THE truth to her? Here is an actual momentous question demanding an immediate practical answer, and O for the wisdom of ages that we might say the right word to her!

There is one answer that would be almost a solution to her problem; an answer such as Stephen Girard might have made—an economic answer which if not the truth would be as potential.

There is another answer that a physician might give—but would not.

There is a theological answer which misere di deo I fancy she has heard.

That a child shall be born—what is to be consulted, the child's welfare or the parents' gratification? Is there in maternity a joy equal to or exceeding another joy, or is there in paternity a careless ignorance or an unconscious animality? We cannot call a man to account who is dead to his responsibility and he must be said to have a good conscience—because it was never used.

I hope I do not seem flippant. My heart goes out to the mother in these critical moments and also for the loss of her child. The way of life is fraught with more peril and hardship than the way he has gone. She would have grieved in the certainty of his danger here, and beyond our little systems the universe is ordered for good. How consoling to think of him as promoted.

But the other transition—the new life coming. Can she not endow it with the love of love at least? It is time for her to realize her power in all its fulness.

Let her know that she is her own deliverer, that her child may never be the victim of the despair that is now hers. Emerson's Essay on Self-Reliance will help her.

You who have more of the truth give more.

690 W. 13th., St., Phila., Pa. H. B. BOLAND.

VARIOUS VOICES.

J. C. S., Minneapolis, Minn.:—Ever since I heard of your work and paper I have been a subscriber, and believing that right knowledge and action along the lines of purity and sexual freedom is one of the most important questions of the day, I shall continue to do what little I can to hold up your hands, in what I believe to be good work. The more of your columns you devote to the solution of the sex problem the better I am personally pleased.

Volney Abbey, Wathena, Kansas:—Enclosed find $1.10 to be applied on subscription and for a few copies of Lucifer containing Ida Craddock's last letter to the public. Berta and I have lately returned from Colorado after an extended visit of five months We went in a one-horse buggy and camped out and had a most enjoyable time. Yes, Denver is truly the storm-center of thougght—so many radicals on all lines of reform.

Kate Austin! What memories came back to all of us liberals at the thought of her name. We all mourn her early death in the springtime of life. Having been personally acquainted with her and her companion, Sam, I feel the loss all the more. O, the world is so slow, so slow. Sometimes I am almost discouraged and ask myself if there has been much progress from the legal murder of Christ down to the legal murder of the good men in Chicago fifteen years ago: and now to contemplate the late legal murder of the good Ida Craddock! Well, we all follow the line of least resistance and so we will continue to agitate, agitate, agitate.

Dr. Loretta Mann Hammond, 415 College Ave., Rosedale, Kansas:—Every day since I read in the Kansas City "Star" of the suicide of Ida C. Craddock, I have tried to get time to write to you. My thoughts have been with you in sympathy for the woman and the cause. You introduced me to her in Chicago, you remember. I was pleased that the truth had so pleasing an advocate. The pivotal truth in her book was the law of conscience through spiritual growth, which I know to be true and have known it for many years, before I read it in any book. Indeed, in my younger days I promised myself, "sometime," to write a book, on that subject. But when others began to write, and much better than I could have done, I concluded I could do better work in circulating their books than in writing another.

Referring again to my personal meeting with Mrs. Craddock, I realized at the time that she was abnormally sensitive. You remember she wrote a long letter of apologies on some neglects that I never should have thought of, for you to send to me. I should have written her a letter, but I merely put a line in one I was writing to you saying to tell her I had not once thought of it, which was the truth. I bought her books, but I never gave her of myself, and now that I realize how much her nature needed human sympathy, I feel very sorry that I failed. When a person has a great truth, we are prone to think they are great enough to stand alone in every respect. Mrs. Craddock's ending shows that she could not; and in it we all stand indicted, i. e. all who failed to drop her a line of sympathy. You (Moses) showed that you were great enough to stand alone, but possibly your environments may have been better. If I remember correctly when she came out from her three months' incarceration she said the place was foul and infested with vermin; while you, out west, in some respects had a pretty good place. Another thing, you did have many sympathizers who made a noise about it. You felt that you had moral backing, and as you said in your last editoral you would have betrayed a trust to have committed suicide. But poor Mrs. Craddock's case hardly made a ripple. She did not hear much from her "constituents." The fact is, people are getting accustomed to these incarcerations. There have been a good many of them since that of Lucifer's editor. My poor sympathy might not have stood for much or changed the result, but all the same I feel very sorry I neglected to write to her, and you are about the only people who will understand how I feel, so I write to you.

The Woman Who Dares

BY URSULA N. GESTEFELD.

A novel, whose heroine seeks to find and realize her own individuality and, having found it, dares to maintain it in the marital relation. It is a carefully written story and meant to show the injustice of the marriage relation as usually regarded, and of the dual standard of morality, tacitly accepted however theoretically opposed. The subject is treated forcefully and directly, yet always tactfully and fairly, and possesses all the strength of moderation combined with just and equable criticism. The story reads more like events in real life than those of romance.

It is seldom that the most vital though most delicate of subjects is treated with such delicacy. The large number of letters from women received after its first publication is evidence that there is room for its heroine in many home.

"Here we have a well written story with a noble purpose. It is a woman's novel, and by that I do not mean that it is intended only for women; on the contrary, it ought to be read by every man in America who has the brain, conscience, and refinement of nature to appreciate its masterly presentation of what is the simple right, nay, more, is the sacred duty of every married woman, to demand the absolute right to her own person in wedlock no less than out of wedlock. . . . In the presentation of the vital thought found in these pages, Mrs. Gestefeld has given us a superb piece of work. It is a story of great vitality. The author is a thoughtful and a deeply spiritual woman. With the keen intuitive insight so often met with in profoundly spiritual natures, she has discerned one of the greatest moral crimes of the present." —The Arena.

Size 5 1-4x7 1-2 inches; 358 pages. Beautifully printed on laid paper, bound in green Holliston linen, and stamped in ink with original cover design. Price, $1.25, postpaid. THE GESTEFELD PUBLISHING CO., 179 Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ills. Department LF.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer the Light Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

VACCINATION A CRIME.

With Comments on Other Sanitary Superstitions.

BY FELIX L. OSWALD, M. D.

"Vaccination spreads diseases; vaccination impairs the organic functions; vaccination encourages reliance on worthless remedies; vaccination spreads small-pox; compulsory vaccination furnishes dangerous legal precedents."

With illustrations of diseases frequently resulting from vaccination. 192 pages. Price 10 cents. For sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St. Chicago.

FOR CHRISTMAS.

Just fix a letter. THE RESURRECTION OF ADAM; the sin(?) of Adam and Eve and what came of it. By Mabel Gifford, D. L. S., 15 cents

HERE'S HEALTH FOR YOU! Simple mental and physical exercises. By Mojoie O. Mann (Mabel Gifford), 25 cents.

CHRISTMAS CAT BOOK. By Mildred Norman, the Children's Story-Writer. Greeting on cover. Artistic make-up. Amusing to children and grown-ups. Teaches kindness to animals and the care of them. 12 original half-tone ill., 25 cents. Sold by Mabel Gifford, Blue Hill Ave, L. Mattapan, Mass.

943.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author.

The Sex Passion.
Man, the Ungrown.
Woman, the Serf.
Women in Freedom.
Marriage: a Retrospect.
Marriage: a Forecast.
The Free Society.
Some remarks on the early star and sex worships.
Notes—On the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population.

The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. Price, $1.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

WHITMAN'S IDEAL DEMOCRACY, AND OTHER WRITINGS.

BY HELENA BORN.

Comprising besides the title essay, Thoreau's Joy in Nature; Poets of Revolt: Shelley, Whitman, Carpenter; Whitman's Altruism; Individualism versus Organization; Ingenuities of Economic Argument; The Last Stand Against Democracy in Sex; Inequality in Divorce; Marriage Safeguards. With portrait of author and biographical introduction by Helen Tufts. 125 pages. Edition limited to 500 copies; each copy numbered. Fine paper, uncut pages, bound in boards, paper label. Price $1.

Agents Wanted To sell the Toltec Dandruff Cure and the Toltec Hair Dressing (restores natural color). Are clean and perfect. Liberal commission. Write for circulars. Address: The Toltec Remedies Co., Box 1307 Denver Colo.

"Pages of Socialist History" By W. Tcherkesoff. This book is recommended to Socialists of all schools, as it deals with the history of the "International" and the attitude of Marx and Engels towards Bakounin. Paper covers, 25 cents. By mail, 30 cents.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 466 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 25c.

ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $1.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolidge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.

BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth, $1.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commanded, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving clear references to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES.—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 31 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 128 pages, 25c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

DARWIN, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 60c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. G. Spence. 178 pages. 25c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An hegiral treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, cloth and paper bound. Prices, $1.50, $1.00 and 50c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James H. Alexander. Over 600 illustrations, 47 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 2-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $3.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 50c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Gyer D. Lum 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John H. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian religion has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 280 pages. 40c. Postage, 5c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harmon, under the Comstock law, G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 25c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 25c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso. The history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 319 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HILDA'S HOME. Rose Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 230 pages. Paper, 25c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Scotland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 37 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Volney, and Voltaire. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry R. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

KORADINE. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tisdall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III. (1890). Cloth, $1.25. Postage, 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALism. THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 418 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Do and When They Are Not Variefiable; The New Women; What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love; Its Attraction and Expression; Is She a Pleasure Seeker? Lloyd, Platt, and the Free Lovers; Fools; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Phillip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, R. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled ruffiodeists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 35c; paper, 25c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 25c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Oxford Northcote. 25c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $3.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story," 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon Arches edged hand made paper of gorgeous tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 50c.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Marietta), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sense and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 256 pages. 25c.

THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Witches and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 187 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old Socratean maxim said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and asceticism; that the pure and beautiful and healthful thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 32 large pages; twelve copies, 25c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 10c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. H. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution. Its effects upon offspring and its influence upon advancework. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1761, quoted by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuit craft and is a plain index to the underhand working of their order against the welfare of individuals and society. 10c.

THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 10c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Yelegt Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Wizard). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. $1.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, given. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $2.25.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Darling. 15c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 10c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us not ashamed to be ashamed of what makes us men and women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the enarching arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 1, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first slave that existed. The taste of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of women in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 172 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 600 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VI., No. 45. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, NOV. 20, E. M. 302. [C. E. 1902.] WHOLE No. 944

THE HOPE OF THE AGES.

Back in the ages, when earth was young
The demon, Greed, stalked from out its den,
And soon by its cruel hand was wrung
Kindness and love from the hearts of men,
Where peace and happiness long had dwelt
Strife and misery took their place:
Men at the shrine of Mammon knelt
And saw but the sheen of its brazen face!
War and famine and pestilence came;
Freedom seemed sunk in eternal sleep:
Kings despoiled in Greed's foul name
And deeds were done that made angels weep.

So were the classes born that day—
The Rich to rule and the Poor to toil—
Masters and slaves, yet all of one clay,
Fashioned alike from the earth's warm soil.
Mankind seemed lost in its own dark shame,
But a hope divine lay smouldering there,
Eager to burst into glorious flame
And light the way to an earth more fair.
An earth with no hatred, nor strife, nor wrong,
An earth where Justice and Love shall reign;
Where the purl of the brook and of childhood's song
Shall not be marred by the clanking chain.

O, Hope of the ages, burn ever on!
Strong be thy light to guide our path;
Give shame to those who trembling fawn
In fear of Greed and its deadly wrath.
Give courage, O, Hope! until men shall rise
And sweep the earth like a tidal wave
With a mighty roar that shall reach the skies
And loose the shackles from every slave.
Then shall Freedom come and Greed be killed,
Then the tasks of life shared alike by men,
The Hope of the Ages be fulfilled
And love and kindness shall rule again.

—W. W. Atkinson, in "The Comrade."

Concerning Divorce.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEW YORK JOURNAL:—Mrs. Stanton is right in commending your articles on divorce, and in saying that on any commission there should be women as well as ecclesiastics and lawyers, but I would add, let there be physicians also. The fact is that if the way in were guarded by the consent of physicians as well as of parents and clergy, there would be less work for the lawyers in opening the way out.

What I have to offer is not with any expectation that it can be published. It is merely for your education, if need be. Ida Craddock was, in her feeble and inoffensive way really doing the right kind of work against divorce, for her main idea was to so instruct married folks, or those taking that important step, that they might be able to find the hoped-for harmony in marriage. Last Sunday's Journal had an account of a woman in a western town who left her husband on the fifth day after marriage, with a note saying "we have made a mistake." Perhaps they had, and may be it was merely a case of sexual inadaptation that might have been overcome by advice from a knowing sexual physiologist. I am in a position to know the inside history of many a marital dissension, and it is my opinion that no one thing would be so effective in preventing divorce as a more general knowledge of so-called "forbidden subjects." I have actually been invited by broad minded clergymen to write a book or tract on "The Wedding Night" that could be placed by them in the hands of young and inexperienced couples whom they marry every day, and I simply had to tell them it was impossible to write such a tract that would "fill the bill" and not risk my liberty. Now there is the fact, young folks undertake in ignorance relations and responsibilities they are entirely unfitted for, and in five days they want to quit and get out. All glittering generalities and persuasive pleading of your wise-wig bishops cannot alter the bottom fact that if folks hitch up who are sexually misfits they will not stay together, and may be it is physiological law that they should not, but often the misfit or inadaptation is merely not knowing how to adjust themselves to each other, a status of affairs that might be easily remedied by more instruction of the right kind at the right time.

All your writers of the symposium are bound to hit around the bush. I am the only one who hits the real mark of the most common and inevitable cause for divorce, and of course you can't use this because it wouldn't be proper. Yet it is well known, and not an uncommon subject of confidential talks just "'tween you and me." If you will turn this over to Mrs. Wilcox may be she can find a way to discuss this center-shot aspect of the divorce question, but until some one does do so, it is "with Hamlet left out."

Here is my funny notion of what might be. The officiating minister of a marriage might require from the couple coming before him not only the usual formal and meaningless license, but also a paper from their family physician saying that to the best of his knowledge and belief they were fit and ready, and such papers should not be issued till he has acted as father confessor to both, learned their hopes and expectations, informed their ignorance, and paved the way for mutual understandings and satisfaction such as can only come from looking ahead before you leap. I heard that in Brazil a suitor for a young woman's hand must pass an examination for fitness at the hands of her father's physician. So far so good, and parents here might well follow that excellent example, but more is necessary in order to save certain neuters or asexual women from entering on a state of life which they ought to keep out of. That aforesaid lady in the west may have been almost ignorant of what would be expected of her as a married woman, and may be her mistake was in entering upon a new mode of life of which she had no fair idea, and for which she really had no liking.

B. B. FOOTE, JR., M. D.

Better be a nettle in the side of your friend than his echo. The condition which high friendship demands is ability to do without it. He only is fit for this society who is magnanimous. —Emerson.

Can We "Lend" An Individual?

In Lucifer No. 940 Jas. Armstrong Jr. in replying to C. L. James' question in 937 makes use of the following language. "I do not think there is anything more unspeakably infamous than harlotry. As fierce as poverty often is under the industrial regime, it is not fierce enough to condone it," and further on "We may justly blame government for the most part for their existence."

Is government to blame for the present industrial regime? If not, will Mr. Armstrong explain what has led to the present condition? If no poverty is fierce enough to condone this offence, then government cannot justly be blamed for their existence.

But is it true? Under the shadow of the gaunt spectre that lurks in the tenements of our great cities, is there no excuse? Do the sweat shops of New York offer no palliation? Eking out a terrible existence on the pittance that is scarcely sufficient for food, and yet must furnish lodging and raiment as well; crowded into reeking unsanitary tenements, a thousand times worse housed than hacks and pointers; worse fed than your dogs or your sheep; is it any wonder that out of the thousands thus suffering a few should turn from the sordid reality to the alluring prospect held out before them?

Many of these unfortunates are victims of a false education. There is nothing but social ostracism for the girl who "loves not wisely but too well." Society closes its doors against her while receiving her partner with open arms. Life has nothing more for her, so in sheer desperation she flings herself into the vortex of prostitution.

There is also the law of supply and demand which can be applied to this question and helps to place the blame where it justly belongs—on the shoulders of the "Lords of creation." They are responsible for the mistakes of government, and in a measure for the social ostracism, and they alone make the demand of which the supply is the result.

Mr. Armstrong further says "There is nothing I believe in more firmly than self-ownership" and . . . "I shall never be Roman enough to lend my sexual partner to a friend." The woman in this case ceases to be an individual and becomes simply Mr. Armstrong's sexual partner. He would not "lend" her but would she have the same control over his actions? It is the old idea of ownership which Mr. Armstrong despite his boasted love of liberty has not succeeded in overcoming. Would he think of "lending" his business partner? In the firm of Armstrong & Co., does Mr. Armstrong "lend" Co.? or is Co. an individual with the right to control his own private actions? Mr. Armstrong's "sexual partner" is just as much a person as is Co. in the business partnership, and he has just as much right to speak of "lending" one as the other. A man may lend a mowing machine, but I cannot conceive how one person can lend another, even though she has so far lost her individuality as to become Mr. Armstrong's "sexual partner."

Wathena, Kansas. MAUD ABBEY.

Why Am I An Ex-Christian?

In answering the above question asked me by a few of my friends, I will say that when I was a believer in Christianity, I thought that sex-communion outside of the state of matrimony was almost if not quite the greatest sin, and my prayer ever was "Father in heaven, keep my dear children from this sin." I had unbounded faith in God's ability and willingness to do this, or anything else. Judge then of my feelings when the knowledge came to me that our dear first-born would be a mother before she would have been a wife the allotted time prescribed by church and state. I still believed in God and Christianity, and accepted this great trial as a cross to be borne with Christian grace and fortitude.

Some time after this I was impressed with the idea that something very terrible was going to happen to us, but that I must not let it shake my belief in God. The calamity came in the shape of the fact that our second daughter not yet fourteen years old had been seduced by her sister's husband. I was horror-stricken almost to a state of insanity. We consulted the oldest doctor in town. He said he would not permit a daughter of his to become a mother at that age; that he could prevent it, and he did.

I still believed in God and Christianity, though wondering much why God chastised me so severely. But believing from the Bible that "whom He loveth He chasteneth" I accepted this additional cross as best I could, and lived on, often wondering what would happen next and how much more I could stand and retain my reason.

Up to this time none of the children were church members, but now the oldest daughter united with the church and soon afterwards the second followed her example. Before the second united with the church I thought it right to let the preacher and members know of her great sin. (We lived some distance from the church and it was not generally known). I wrote a letter to the preacher, stating the facts. She united with the church, but the sisters were not the same to us as before, and the next time we went they did not speak to us, or look towards us. And I had expected and thought I needed Christian sympathy.

Think of it. A Christian mother heart-broken over a loved child needing and seeking and expecting sympathy, Christian love and fellowship in the church of God, and not finding it! There are no words to express my feelings. To say I was shocked is putting it very mild. I asked myself, Is this Christianity?

On the way home I did not stop thinking, and suddenly, without a moment's warning, every particle of my belief in Christianity and God left me, I had no voice whatever in the matter. My faith was gone and I had no ability or inclination to recall it, and never in all time do I expect to be able to desire to recall it. It is to me a broken idol, and having served its purpose it dropped out of my life, giving place to the more rational, the more humane belief that every one will finally be saved not because of any or all church doctrines but because it is a principle in nature that nothing can be lost. S. C. C.

From One Woman's View-Point.

I was so glad to see the open letter addressed to E. C. Walker relating to the Lora Carter letter. It was just what I felt like saying though I didn't take the trouble to do it. Mr. Walker's determination to uphold certain radical ideals—the varietistic one for instance—often makes him cast anchor a long way from the truth; makes him appear narrow, to say the least. As a rule, however, we lesser ones hardly feel like tackling so much wisdom and authority as some of our masculine philosophers represent, so we allow them to rest in peace; though I think, as in this instance, that the truth wouldn't suffer by the occasional interference of the poor little mind of the woman.

Woman isn't so much of a philosopher as man; though she reaches ideal truth much easier than her philosophizing brother, and for this reason she ought not to cower before his seeming pompousness, but speak right out in "meetin'." This, as I hinted, is what she isn't so apt to do. Instead, she smothers the truth welling up in her own soul, while, if she speaks at all she voices the philosophy peculiar to man.

This is so noticeable in the case of sex reform writers. Man is seen so often to have swallowed up the woman. We have woman's signature to an article, but the masculine philosophy, which more often than not debars from the real truth.

What we need at this time is more of the woman. We want her to speak from herself, and not speak what she has learned from man.

Woman doesn't need to borrow ideals and philosophies. She herself is a well of living truth filled to the brim. What she does need is to learn how to let this truth overflow, instead of smothering it in her own breast while she speaks things foreign to her nature. She must let it flow over until man is saturated and permeated with her own true ideals and conceptions.

And this time will come, the time when man's ideals will have been lifted to the plane occupied by woman's; then she will no longer have occasion to question his reasonings, for his philosophy must needs be in harmony with her own intuitions.

In this glad day I am quite sure that the open letters of our dear brothers and comrades will not be subject to the untoward criticism of the sters. CARRIE A.

Ida C. Craddock's Mother Speaks.

The following letter from Ida C. Craddock's mother will, I think, interest those who have read the matter concerning the Craddock case recently appearing in Lucifer's columns. I will admit that my impressions of the mother were similar to E. C. Walker's in an earlier issue. My motive and manner in addressing Mrs. Decker was with stringent disparagement of all concerned in "Comstock Censorship" or supporting the "Society for the Prevention of Purity by the Promotion of Ignorance" in their persecution of the "Gospel of Purity" preached by this sweet soul. I am glad to apprise the public of the motherly attitude and thus acknowledge the misjudgment.

W. C. T. U.
Mrs. Lizzie S. Decker, Treas.
1030 Race St.

Philada., Pa., Oct., 28, '02.

CASSIUS V. COOK:—Yours duly at hand, and I thank you for your kind sympathy and all the true and good expressions of thought and feeling, for daughter. Much as you value her virtues, you fall short of my dear child's merits. She has been misunderstood, and oh that was so hard for us both, but she suffered what no tongue can tell from the time Comstock published to the world, "That she met the girls—mere children, coming out of school—gave them her books—had them in her office in the evening—and a lot of young men met the girls at the door as they came out." etc.

She did not know where a school house was in New York. That burnt into her very soul.

That woman was as pure as God's snow and as chaste as His ice.

Comstock has haunted her from city to city and hounded her to death. She hoped and struggled up to the last moment, for freedom of thought and speech. Her refined nature suffered so much during the three months in prison. She felt it too severe to put in five years more of such a life and so ended it.

The penalty was five years and as she had offended more than once she would be sure to get that term—death to her—so every one said. She has gone down, but I hope she will have made a bridge for others to walk over and teach all that was good and pure in her idea of life. She read any part of the Bible at two and a half years—wrote at five—spent her whole life studying and writing. A linguist—a musician—a born teacher, and it is too sad she is no more with us. Yours in friendship,

LIZZIE S. DECKER.

And now, who can say that censorship does not cause more misery than it cures? C. V. C.

Repeal the Comstock Laws.

In the suicide of that bright, brainy woman, Ida C. Craddock, liberals have a gatling gun loaded with legitimate condemnation—facts and righteous indignation against Comstockism for the increasing number of reformers who are being driven to their graves by the "Society for the Suppression of Vice." That Comstock's society is now being attacked by the secular papers is shown by the following excerpt from the New York "Press" of Nov. 4:

"After the meeting of the society was over Anthony Comstock said: 'I understand that the Rev. Dr. Rainsford says that in view of my actions in connection with the Ida C. Craddock case I am not fit to hold the position I hold. I am going to give Dr. Rainsford the opportunity to make the amende honorable. . . . If necessary I will take him into court on a warrant.'"

In a letter written to Dr. Rainsford inviting him to come before their meeting and present any charges to his discredit, Comstock pleadingly asks: "Will you not, like a fair-minded man and a consistent preacher, . . meet face to face one who has endured much in order to shield the children of the nation from the moral cancer planters of the day"?

Just think of the gall of calling such teachers of stripiculture as Ida C. Craddock "moral cancer planters?"

In view of the published threat to bring Dr. Rainsford into court, have not the people the right to call Anthony Comstock a drastic court plaster? But I do not believe in calling names. It is facts that must be considered.

Let Anthony Comstock trot out the multitude of "injured" innocents that he has "endured" so much to "shield" from "moral cancer planters of the day." How many are there?

If teaching people to live in harmony with the laws of the universe; if trying to raise the standard of mental and physical health; if to know what comprises "Right Marital Living;" if the knowledge of how to cease propagating defectives and demanding information upon generative laws—if all these are denied us, then indeed will Comstockism plunge us into the abyss of the dark ages. But this cannot be. The tide of Freedom and Progress rolls onward with the ripening of old mother earth.

A repeal of the Comstock laws is now in order!

FLORA W. FOX.

Elizabeth Cady Stanton's Last Appeal to Women.

To the many noble women and men who have labored during the last half century to secure equal laws for all the citizens of this republic I appeal for the same interest in another important battle yet to be fought.

What we have accomplished in the state we must now demand in the church.

Lord Brougham, one of the learned English authorities, long ago declared the civil laws for woman were a disgrace to the Christianity and civilization of the nineteenth century.

Canon Charles Kingsley, an equal authority in the church, said: "This will never be a good world for woman until the last remnant of this canon law is wiped out from the face of the earth." Many of our most odious civil laws have been essentially changed, and some of the civil rights of women have been recognized over a vast area. . . . .

The greatest block in the way of woman's complete emancipation is the canon law, with the discipline of the church, the teachings of prelates in their pulpits, the innumerable texts in the Bible, altogether so degrading to the mother of the race, making her subordination absolute, because taught by the church as the will of God; thus perverting her religious sentiment, the strongest element in her nature.

Woman has always been one of the chief pillars of the church, contributing generously from her wealth for its support, and by her steadfast faith in its creeds and authorities has maintained its stability. Hence it is her right and duty to use her voice in purifying its laws and discipline, securing equal rights, justice and freedom for all womankind.

I earnestly appeal to my suffrage coadjutors to begin at once this battle, fraught with such vital consequences to the race, for we can never have a true civilization until, in the moral world, woman holds an equal place with man.

To this end, let us call an international convention of liberal men and women to prepare an expurgated edition of the Bible, placing in one volume all the grand declarations, moral lessons, science, philosophy and poetry, and in another the Christian mythology, the contradictions and absurdities for those who value it as ancient literature.

The one would then be fit to place in our schools and in the hands of our children, worthy the title of "The Holy Bible," inspired by the great Creator of the Universe.—Chicago American.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Experiences at "Harmony Home."

"O wad some power the giftie gie us
To see oursel's as ithers see us."

All real knowledge of men and things comes to us through experience—our own or that of others. A free exchange of experiences would thus seem to be the dictate of wisdom.

* * *

One of the most readable of all the stories that appeared in the "Atlantic Monthly" during its best days, fifty years ago or thereabouts, was one entitled "Experiences of the A. C.," the letters A. and C. being an abbreviation for "Arcadian Club."

The members of the Arcadian Club were city people—Bostonians, as well as I remember who had become disgusted with the shams, the abnormalities, the artificialities of life in the great city, tired of and disgusted with the conventional lies of hothouse civilization, the unhygienic habits and customs from which none can escape while in the city, and were longing for the more natural and less artificial life which they fondly hoped and believed to be the heritage of all who lived in the country.

At one of their meetings, an elderly member of this very select coterie said something like this:

"For many months if not years we have been meeting once a week or oftener, to talk 'dress reform,' 'food reform'—'getting back to nature,' etc., etc., but what have we DONE to practicalize these ideas?—what effort have we made to demonstrate or verify the truth of these beautiful ideals? Now it so happens that I own a little place in one of the most beautiful and sequestered parts of New England. I have never seen it but am told the house is large enough for what I am about to propose, and that everything is in fairly good shape for such an experiment. I have been working pretty hard for many months and feel that a vacation is in order. How many of you are ready to join in an earnest, an honest attempt to practicalize our reform notions? My wife and I have talked the matter over and we now invite as many as wish to try the experiment, to go with us to spend the summer at the sylvan retreat of which I am telling you."

According to the story this proposition was joyfully accepted by the group, and preparations made for putting it into immediate effect. The most enthusiastic of the little band of reformers was a young poet who now gave voice to his emotions in words like these:

"O Nature! Nature! generous and loving, yet wise and stern Mother Nature! You are now to see the return of your truant children to your maternal arms. Too long and too far have we strayed from the right paths, and now, repentant and foot sore, we ask to be received, instructed and guided by thee, and by thee only. Teach us, O teach us, wise and true parent, to avoid the errors into which false teachings and unnatural creeds and customs have led us. Help us, O help us, to learn the all-important lesson that only Nature's ways are ways of pleasantness, and that only her paths are paths of peace."

While uttering rhapsodies like this the poet of the group would close his eyes, throw back his head and, with his wide-nostrilled retrousse nose pointing heavenward, would impress some of his hearers with the belief that an inspired prophet of a new dispensation had arisen to preach a newer and better gospel of life, and to lead mankind out of the mazes of artificiality and of diseased conditions to the promised land of health, of happiness and of right living.

* * *

It is not my purpose to repeat in detail, the "Experiences of the Arcadian Club," but would say that in planning for the late individualistic-socialistic experiment near Benton Harbor, Michigan, I tried to avoid some, at least, of the errors into which the Arcadian Club were led, through what I believe to have been too great desire for uniformity—on the part of the self elected leader of the movement, and also because of crude and unscientific notions in regard to what "getting back to Nature" really meant, or should mean. For instance, when the leader of the movement—who was the poet aforesaid, was asked how they were to know what kinds of food and drink were natural and healthful and what were not, his reply was,

"Do you see that pimple on my cheek? When that pimple dries up the last of the effects of unhygienic living will have disappeared from my physical organism. Then my bodily senses and appetites, being normal, will be a perfect guide in dietetics."

When this diminutive pustule had disappeared the leader announced that all flesh-meats are abnormal and injurious, if taken into the human stomach, and that all "condiments," including common "salt," must also be abjured.

As might have been expected, however, these stringent rules were not willingly submitted to by all members of the Arcadian Club, but such was the psychic influence exerted by the oracle that for a time there was no open rebellion. One morning at breakfast this enthusiastic preacher of the new gospel of health and right living noticed a movement he could not quite understand; an underhanded movement, so to speak. He noticed that something was being passed from hand to hand beneath the table and then sprinkled upon the lettuce, onions, etc, that composed the morning meal. The autocrat of this breakfast table at once demanded an explanation. After considerable hesitation a young lady co-operator very timidly ventured to say,

'It's only a little—a little Chloride of Sodium!"

"A little WHAT"?—thundered the autocrat—then adding, "let me see it!"

After tasting and smelling the contraband stuff he pronounced it COMMON SALT, and having tried it on his own vegetables he decided that Mother Nature permits the use of Chloride of Sodium on lettuce and onions!

Not long after this it was noticed that certain members of the group were habitually absent at a certain hour of the day. Investigation into the cause revealed the terrible fact that these absences were caused by clandestine visits to a neighboring brook for the purpose of catching trout and broiling and eating them in the grove. About the same time, too, the leader happened to be "nosing" about among the barrels in the village grocery when his olfactories were pleasantly assailed by the smell of dried codfish! At once he decided that codfish was a permissible article of food, and thenceforward fish, both fresh and "cured," was given a place in the dietary of the Arcadian Club.

* * *

As intimated a few moments ago, I had the history of the Arcadian Club, thus briefly described, in mind when planning for the experiment near Benton Harbor, Michigan, called "Harmony Home." I had also in mind many other Socialistic, Autonomistic and Anarchistic experiments of whose history I had some knowledge, either through personal experience or otherwise, and if I know myself, I tried hard to avoid the whirlpools, the breakers and the quicksands that had proved disastrous t

most previous voyagers and prospectors for the yet undiscovered "Islands of the Blest"—the islands inhabited by colonists from the mainland where reigns Privilege for the Few and Slavery for the Many.

First of all I decided to attempt but little and therefore could expect but little; remembering the old Beatitude—"Blessed are they that expect nothing, for they shall not be disappointed;" and well it was, and is, for my own mental tranquility, that such was my plan of campaign—as the sequel seems now to show. On my way Chicago-ward, while waiting the hour of departure at the Benton Harbor landing, I had a short interview with a neighbor who had, from the first, manifested considerable interest in the success of the experiment at Harmony Home. This neighbor—whom I will call Jones, because Jones is not his name—had at one time confided to me a plan of his own, to get liberal people from Chicago and elsewhere to join in a co-operative experiment in the Michigan Fruit Belt. As a friend and sympathizer I now asked Brother Jones if he still cherished the plan just referred to.

"No," said he, with emphasis, "I gave that up long ago."

"Well," said I, "I think your plan a good one, and I should like very much to see it tried, and to take part therein myself."

In substance if not in exact words Brother Jones replied as follows:

"If my advice is worth anything you will stick to your writing in the future, and let co-operative schemes alone. As a writer you are a success, but as a man of practical affairs you are a failure, a pronounced failure. This is not my own opinion merely but that of nearly if not quite all your neighbors and nearly all who have taken any part in your co-operative experiment. Of the visitors who came here with high expectations and sincerest regard for you and your work I know that the large majority have gone away disappointed, and am sure that hereafter you will find them taking little if any interest in you or your paper. I did not mean to say this to you, but your question seemed to make it proper if not unavoidable."

Asking for names and particulars Brother Jones gave most of the names of my neighbors with whom I had dealings, and also the names of nearly all who had stopped at the "Home" for a shorter or longer visit.

Having much else to do before this paper goes to press, and having little strength to do it with—suffering as I am from a severe cold caught in last week's storm, and during my trip over the lake, I shall have to postpone my answer to Brother Jones till next issue, and for this time will only say that I regard the soft impeachment—as to lack of good business tact and talent—as eminently TRUE! Yes, as a MANAGER of men, and especially of WOMEN, I have never been a success, and it is perhaps hopeless to expect it now. This statement, however, as I see it, has reference only to the SOCIALISTIC features of business affairs. As an INDIVIDUALISTIC worker I think it not hard to show that I have achieved a very fair average of success, in all or nearly all the lines of human endeavor in which I have from time to time engaged.

I will just add for the benefit of those who know nothing of what was attempted at Harmony Home, that I did not engage to BOARD my visitors, and that to the very best of my knowledge and belief I did for them all quite as much as I promised to do, and for some of them MUCH MORE than I promised, and that, so far as I have heard, the persons most dissatisfied got the greater share of accommodations for the least pay, or for NO pay at all; but that, putting myself in their places—looking for CAUSES of actions and words, I BLAME NO ONE! Each has followed the line of least resistance, and under like circumstances and with like initial bent of character, I myself would have done and said as my critics have done and said.

M. HARMAN.

Forty copies of Lucifer, no two alike, of 1901 will be sent to any address for 15 cents. Nine bundles for $1. We are anxious to place these papers where they will do good. Please let us have your orders soon.

Memorial Meeting—November Eleventh.

The fifteenth anniversary of the never-to-be-forgotten November Eleventh was duly celebrated in Chicago at the North Side Turner Hall. The number of persons present was variously stated by the city papers at 2,000 to 3,000. The meeting was opened by the chairman, L. S. Oliver, of Maywood, Illinois, in a few brief but very suitable remarks.

The first address was delivered in Italian by G. Ciancibelli, who as our readers will remember, was imprisoned in Spring Valley, Illinois, for alleged treasonable utterances in his magazine, "La Protesta Umana," at the time of the assassination of President McKinley.

The second address was in English, and was delivered by George Brown of Philadelphi, who in opening said,

"I am by trade a shoemaker and hope that I know much better how to make shoes than to make speeches."

In the opinion of one, at least, of his hearers Brother Brown must be a remarkably good shoemaker if his own judgment of himself is to be taken as the correct one. I have heard many addresses commemorating the most tremendously important event of the last century—the offering up of the lives of the "Chicago Labor Martyrs" on the altar of Mammon, the altar of Ignorance, Credulity and Class Privilege—but never have I heard the case quite so well put, and in so few words. That an ordinary manual laborer, with no special training and with but little previous practice in public speaking, should be able in a forty-minute address to present so clearly and so fully the case of the Unprivileged Masses against the Privileged Classes, is simply marvelous.

Having been present at the Haymarket massacre, as a spectator rather than participator, Mr. Brown was able to give unbiased testimony in regard to the TIME of the throwing of the fateful bomb. He says the volley fired by the police PRECEDED the bursting of the bomb by not less than THREE MINUTES!

The city papers, with their usual disregard for truth and fairness, reported Mr. Brown as praising the act of Czolgosz. In emphasizing his opposition to "government" because government means "force"—means MURDER, Mr. Brown used a quotation from a well known poem, Browning's "Paracelsus," published a half century ago or more, in which occur these words:

"No shepherd king regal for his white locks; no youth who stands silent and very calm amid the throng, his right hand ever hid beneath his robe until the tyrant pass; no law giver, . . . too hard!"

The entire poem should be read in order fully to understand the purpose of the reference to the "youth who stands" etc. Evidently the reporters for the city dailies had either never read "Paracelsus," or they were hard pressed for something out of which to make a sensational charge against the speaker and those who cheered him.

The address in German was delivered by R. Grossman, of Paterson, N. J., now under sentence of five years' imprisonment for alleged complicity in the late "riots" of that city.

In our next we shall probably have something more to say of the Memorial addresses and of other important meetings held recently in this city. For the present our space is full. M. H.

"How Shall We Solve the Divorce Problem?"

The editorial columns of the Chicago "American" and of the New York "Journal-American," have been largely filled for a month or more with articles on the Divorce Problem, written by distinguished men and women, representative men and women, in the various literary avocations and "learned" professions in this country. Leading educators, clergymen—including priests, bishops and archbishops,—women of national fame, such as Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Julia Ward Howe, Belva Lockwood, Clara Barton and others, have taken part in a "Symposium for the Discussion of How to Check the Divorce Evil, the Great National Disgrace, and Preserve the Purity of the American Home."

The last named in the above list, Clara Barton, President of the American Red Cross Society, gives her views in an article numbered XXVI. of the series, and printed in the Chicago "American" of Tuesday Nov. 11. As compared with nearly all the other essays I have seen on this subject, forming the "American's" Symposium, this one of Miss Barton's is so sensible, so rational and so nearly voices the thought of the majority of those who oppose legislation of any sort upon the conjugal relations of women and men, that I herewith insert the following paragraphs, forming perhaps one-third of Miss Barton's essay. M. H.

Again: Is it not possible that divorce per se, bad as it is may not be the worst evil that exists along these lines—not the worst in the world, as we are apt to regard it? May not the prime evil lie largely back of this? Are there not many more persons married every year who are totally unfit for the marriage relation than are divorced or than seek to be divorced?

From my point of view, the prime evil seems not so much in their seeking to get apart, as in their ever having gotten together. This having been permitted, sanctioned by the highest and strongest laws and customs of the land, if the parties prove unable or unfit to live together, what recourse is to be sought?

Compelling them to remain together will scarcely make them more fit companions for each other.

If, as suggested, the object of marriage is parentage, it can hardly be conceded that children born under or reared amid such circumstances are the most hopeful product, either for society or the state, and least of all for themselves.

Taking for granted that all persons are constituted and intended for marriage, that in order to fulfill the divine behest and their duties to mankind, socially and rationally—this is the object to be attained and the life to be lived—what preparation is made, what instruction given the young men and women on whom this duty devolves?

Who carefully cautions them? Who is appointed to give them words of wisdom, to teach them how to live together, and not wish to get apart?

Who warns them that they are about to take hold on real life, and not a round of merrymaking; that a spirit of willingness to bear each other's burdens and endure their frailties would be worth more to them than wedding presents?

All other professions in life require and receive instruction. What provision is made for this?

Alas! None save what comes by chance.

Ignorant, misled, blindfold, too often deceived, they enter gayly in through an easy swinging gate, and the law, stern and relentless, bolts it after them.

When they awake to realizations they never dreamed of, to the entanglement of meshes they cannot thread, what could be more natural than that they turn to the law, to withdraw its bolt and let them loose? They have suddenly awakened from a rosy dream, to find a bed of thistles.

Revelations and disappointments follow each other; defects magnify; humiliated and perplexed, students of unrest, victims of ignorance, where shall they find the patience to endure, the wisdom to make the best of it, and the calmness to be content within the galling lines?

The silken cords have grown to bands of steel. All nature rebels against enforced confinement—the hound pulls at his leash, the tiny bird beats the wires.

To some, open disclosure and an appeal for divorce were worse than death; and for this, and for the love of the children that may have come to them, the life is lived, if life it can be called. All smooth on the surface, the public is not disturbed, and these cases, often the most pitiful and the most worthy, do not enter in, and have no part in this consideration.

We are reformers in spring and summer. In autumn and winter we stand by the old. Reformers in the morning; conservatives at night.—Emerson.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Cornelia Boecklin, Brooklyn, New York:—Ida Craddock has passed away—another victim to the indifference of the general public. Evolution is indeed a very slow process. A few only seem capable of seeing what might be.

Katy C. K., Manistee, Mich.:—Please send me copies of Lucifer Nov. 13 containing Ida C. Craddock's last letter to the public. I enclose stamps for same. Could you tell me where Miss Craddock's book "The Wedding Night" can be obtained? I am very anxious to own it. Miss Craddock should have lived to promulgate her high ideals but being dead she yet speaketh.

Henry Thomas Buckle's thoughts and conversation were always on a high level. Once he remarked: "Men and women range themselves into three classes or orders of intelligence; you can tell the lowest class by their habit of always talking about persons; the next by the fact that their habit is always to converse about things; the highest by their preference for the discussion of ideas."

Lydia R. Todd, 1213 Powell St., San Francisco, Cal.:—It is impossible for me to exist without Lucifer. Enclosed find another dollar for same. I think it is the best liberal paper I have ever read. I hope your father's country life has done him good, and will keep him in good health so he can keep on with this grand work of woman's emancipation. There will never be freedom until we have free mothers.

Albina L. Washburn, 1569 6 St. San Diego, Cal.:—I have been here a week and expect to remain all winter "and then some." Have had only time to get located and learn the points of the compass and a few streets, take a glimpse of the bay and of Point Loma, and to write a few letters back to the land of snows and backbone. Hope to soon find some Lucifer readers, Socialists, Anarchists and other free people.

Kate Kraus, Pomona, Kansas:—I have enjoyed reading Lucifer more than any other sheet I read, though not approving all it contains. It champions the cause of woman and believes in fair play, and that, in itself, makes it valuable to me. Enclosed find $3 on subscription. Regret that I have been so slow. Glad you have had a pleasant vacation and hope you may continue many years in your chosen work, causing people to think.

W. A. Whinrey, Caplinger's Mill, Mo:—Myself and wife have known and neighbored with Kate Austin and her family, some five or six years, and we freely say that a more honest, charitable, and devoted person we have never met. Her only enemies were those who knew her the least. To know was to admire her as she was always extremely considerate of her neighbors' rights. She was a true blue Woman's Rights woman and never lost an opportunity when it was presented, to blast the blinding superstitions that infest our political and social institutions.

Nellie M. Mastick, Home, Wash.:—Will you kindly send my Lucifer to Home, Washington until further notice, as I expect to spend the next few weeks and possibly the winter there. We have a little place there and our family have been there all summer and we think it an ideal place to live, Mrs. Levison to the contrary notwithstanding. Just fancy going from the city into a community where each and every individual greets you as a friend and comrade. Where every neighbor sends you choice fruits, flowers and vegetables, fresh from his own garden—where you may leave your windows open all night and your doors unlocked all day and never have a fear of being robbed or otherwise molested. Where you send out an invitation in the afternoon, and every man, woman and child in the settlement will gather at your home to spend the evening, with music, songs and social converse. All this and much more is possible at Home and to us there is no place like it.

E. B., Nebraska City, Neb.:—I believe that the judge and prosecutor have, in the case of Ida C. Craddock, done more harm to society than Ida C. Craddock could have done in a lifetime—even if her teaching had been pernicious.

E. C. Walker's article in 941 was fine. While writing I wish to express my opinion of the controversies carried on from time to time between C. L. James, R. B. Kerr and others over Socialism, Anarchism, the Single Tax, Vaccination, etc. A controversy in a paper is much like an argument on the street, "interesting only to those engaged therein"—and the newspaper argument is not usually even as interesting to the bystanders as the street discussion. Each man is supposed to know something about the side he espouses—let him present it as he sees it, the other man presenting the other side, and then leave the reader free to decide for himself. Then if the controversialists want to "scrap it out to a finish" let them "go off behind the barn" for the "scrapping match," and not torment a disinterested public.

The Woman Who Dares

BY URSULA N. GESTEFELD.

A novel, whose heroine seeks to find and realize her own individuality and, having found it, dares to maintain it in the marital relation. It is a carefully written story and meant to show the injustice of the marriage relation as usually regarded, and of the dual standard of morality, tacitly accepted however theoretically opposed. The subject is treated forcefully and directly, yet always tactfully and fairly, and possesses all the strength of moderation combined with just and equable criticism. The story reads more like events in real life than those of romance.

It is seldom that the most vital though most delicate of subjects is treated with such delicacy. The large number of letters from women received after its first publication is evidence that there is room for its heroine in many home.

"Here we have a well written story with a noble purpose. It is a woman's novel, and by that I do not mean that it is intended only for women; on the contrary, it ought to be read by every man in America who has the brain, conscience, and refinement of nature to appreciate its masterly presentation of what is the simple right, nay, more, is the sacred duty of every married woman, to demand the absolute right to her own person in wedlock no less than out of wedlock. . . . In the presentation of the vital thought found in these pages, Mrs. Gestefeld has given us a superb piece of work. It is a story of great vitality. The author is a thoughtful and a deeply spiritual woman. With the keen intuitive insight so often met with in profoundly spiritual natures, she has discerned one of the greatest moral crimes of the present." —The Arena.

Size 5 1-4x7 1-2 inches; 358 pages. Beautifully printed on laid paper, bound in green Holliston linen, and stamped in ink with original cover design. Price, $1.25, postpaid. THE GESTEFELD PUBLISHING CO., 178 Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ills. Department LF.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer the Light Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

VACCINATION A CRIME.

With Comments on Other Sanitary Superstitions.

BY FELIX L. OSWALD, M. D.

"Vaccination spreads diseases; vaccination impairs the organic functions; vaccination encourages reliance on worthless remedies; vaccination spreads small-pox; compulsory vaccination furnishes dangerous legal precedents."

With illustrations of diseases frequently resulting from vaccination. 126 pages. Price 10 cents. For sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St. Chicago.

944.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author.

The Sex Passion.
Man, the Ungrown.
Woman, the Serf.
Woman in Freedom
Marriage: a Retrospect.
Marriage: a Forecast.
The Free Society.
Some remarks on the early star and sex worships.
Notes—On the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population.

The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. Price, $1.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

WHITMAN'S IDEAL DEMOCRACY, AND OTHER WRITINGS.

BY HELENA BORN.

Comprising besides the title essay, Thoreau's Joy in Nature; Poets of Revolt; Shelley, Whitman, Carpenter; Whitman's Altruism; Individualism versus Organization: Ingenuities of Economic Argument; The Last Stand Against Democracy in Sex; Inequality in Divorce; Marriage Safeguards. With portrait of author and biographical introduction by Helen Tufts. 125 pages. Edition limited to 500 copies; each copy numbered. Fine paper, uncut pages, bound in boards, paper label. Price $1.

Agents Wanted To sell the Toltec Dandruff Cure and the Toltec Hair Dressing (restores natural color). Are clean and perfect. Liberal commission. Write for circulars. Address; The Toltec Remedies Co., Box 1267 Denver Colo.

"Pages of Socialist History." By W. Tcherkesoff. This book is recommended to Socialists of all schools, as it deals with the history of the "First International," and the attitude of Marx and Engels towards Bakounin. Paper covers, 25 cents. By mail, 30 cents

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 25c.

ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $1.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-bond. 5c.

BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth, $1.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commanded, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close references to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. H. S. Foote, Jr., M. D. 10c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 32 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 626 pages. 50c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

DARWIN'S, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. G. Spence. 178 pages. 50c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the everlook—freedom and optimism. Head it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and His Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James H. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 41 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 50c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 10c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian religion has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 50c.

FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 280 pages. 60c. Postage, 5c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Remens and David Overmyer. 50c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 25c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John H. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 619 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HILDA'S HOME. Rose Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 230 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Scotland. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 37 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Volney, and Voltaire. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

KORADINE. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1896, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III. (1899). Cloth, $1.25. Postage, 15c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author has ever did. It is very R.h. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 30c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth, 75c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What Is She? What Will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Conservatives; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory), R. B. Kerr, and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, favoring that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretations: with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 25c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Spondee, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $2.50; all in one volume, $1.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 25c.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intuition (Marietta), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 207 pages. 25c.

THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Witches and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Mill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 261 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstition, they have begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and asceticism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 89 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 10c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTERS; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Harper), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon edonswork. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1870, quoted by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuit craft, and is a plain index to the underhand working of that order against the welfare of individuals and of society. 15c.

THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 10c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Yelept Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Wilmot). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Geo. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $2.25.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Darling. 15c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 10c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of electing sense of being." What gives us the kisses of lovers and the sublime agony of babes." Paper covers; 48 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 3, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Amos. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. The Bible of Mrs. Gage's woman and man will want it. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman does. woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 178 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VI., No. 46. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, NOV. 27, E. M. 302. [C. E. 1902.] WHOLE No. 945

BATUSCHKA.*

From yonder gilded minaret
Beside the steel blue Neva set,
I faintly catch, from time to time,
The swee, aerial midnight chime—
"God save the Czar!"

Above the ravelins and the moats
Of the white citadel it floats;
And men in dungeons far beneath
Listen, and pray, and gnash their teeth—
"God save the Czar!"

The soft reiterations sweep
Across the horror of their sleep,
As if some demon in his glee
Were mocking at their misery—
"God save the Czar!"

In his Red Palace over there,
Wakeful, he needs must hear the prayer.
How can it drown the broken cries
Wrung from his children's agonies?—
"God save the Czar!"

Father they called him from of old—
Batuschka! . . . How his heart is cold!
Wait till a million scourged men
Rise in their awful might, and then—
GOD SAVE THE CZAR!

—Thomas Bailey Aldrich.

*Batuschka means "Little Father," or "Dear Little Father," a term of endearment applied to the Czar of Russian folk song.

Mrs. Grundy's Two Boarding Schools.

Once upon a time there was an energetic lady called Mrs. Grundy, who kept two boarding schools, the one for little boys and the other for little girls. Mrs. Grundy had many merits, but she had one quality that made all the little boys and girls hate her. She could not bear that people should enjoy themselves. She thought all pleasure was wicked, and was always hovering round stair heads, or listening at key holes, in order to make sure that none of the children were having any fun.

The pleasure which more than all others shocked Mrs. Grundy was that of eating jam. Having a sweet tooth herself, she thought nothing else could be so dreadfully nice as that. So she took the strongest measures to make sure that none of the children should ever taste jam. Not only did she take care never to give them any herself, she also told them that if they ever ate jam they would go to the bad place. Moreover, she made a rule that she should be informed at once if any boy or girl was caught eating jam; and the bad child was to be put in a corner in disgrace, and held up to the scorn of the whole school.

The rule was the same for both schools, but its reception was very different. The boys considered it a glorious joke. They spent half their time scheming how to get jam on the sly. When Mrs. Grundy was not looking, they ran and stole her jam. At nights they got out of the dormitory windows, and went to town for jam. Of course no boy ever told on any of the others; on the contrary they concealed everything, and told many a fib to keep one another from being found out. Sometimes a boy was caught, and put in a corner in disgrace. But instead of looking down on him the other boys made a hero of him, and sniggered and exchanged telegraphic signs the moment Mrs. Grundy's back was turned. The whole thing became such a farce that Mrs. Grundy decided the boys were incorrigible, and gave up the jam question as hopeless, so far as they were concerned.

With the girls it was quite otherwise. They took for gospel truth all Mrs. Grundy said, and really believed that eating jam was a very wicked and dreadful thing. They thought nothing was so noble as to watch each other day and night, to see that no jam was eaten; and the proudest day of a girl's life was when she could run to Mrs. Grundy and tell how she had caught one of the others eating jam. When a girl was caught, she was put in the corner, and treated with such disdain and contempt by all the other girls that she usually ran away from school because she could not bear it. In fact the girls were so anxious to catch each other eating jam that they often made unjust accusations, and some girls who had eaten none were yet punished for doing so. The slightest suspicion had the same effect as proof positive, for the girls all believed eating jam was such a delightful thing that envy and jealousy made each one think all the rest were having a good time except herself. Really, however, each girl was so closely watched, and so afraid of the rest, that very few managed to get any jam.

Some may suppose that Mrs. Grundy was much prouder of her dutiful and obedient girls than of her bad boys. Quite the reverse. She was always boasting of her boys, but spoke of her girls only with contempt. She said the boys were spirited, but the girls were poor sneaking creatures. In private she often admitted that the jam rule was only suitable for girls, and she had no objection to the boys having jam if it were not too openly licensed. At last it became well understood that only girls were forbidden jam, although the rule read the same for both schools.

Children, which would you rather be like, Mrs. Grundy's bad little boys or her good little girls?

R. B. KERR.

An Open Letter to the Vice Society.

The following letter to the president of the Vice Society was written by Mr. Chamberlain, on the 30th October. Up to the present time no answer has been received by him. It is not likely that any answer will be forthcoming:

111 West 42d Street, New York, 30 Oct. 1902.

Mr. Welcome G. Hitchcock President and others—The Executive Committee of the Society for the Suppression of Vice.

GENTLEMEN:—You cannot fail to be sensible of the fact that public opinion holds your society responsible for driving Mrs. Ida Craddock to desperation and death by persistent misrepresentation of her motives and conduct.

This misrepresentation appears so palpably and so flagrantly that it is impossible to conceive of it as proceeding from any honest purpose. The differing stories of your agent Comstock, told at various times, all calculated to create prejudice against Mrs. Craddock seem, when compared with each other to be so fictitious as to excite wonder that misrepresentation itself cannot be more consistent.

In a letter written by Comstock to Mrs. Craddock 31 January 1902, he says, "The complaints that have been sent to this office by mothers who have been to your lectures describe them as gross and very improper for young people."

The New York "Evening Sun" of 17th October reports Comstock as saying. "About this time a prominent business man came to me and complained that his daughter, a girl of sixteen, and her friend, a girl of the same age, had been accosted by the Craddock woman at the entrance to his place of business. She gave the two girls copies of her books. I saw the mother of one of the girls, and she was in a hysterical condition over the matter." Evidently Comstock had forgotten the old story of the mothers who had attended Mrs. Craddock's lectures, and hastily improvised a hysterical woman for the occasion.

But on the alleged trial of Mrs. Craddock the story was that the janitress of the building was horrified to find that Mrs. Craddock's books had been given to her daughter. Now it so happens that there is neither janitor nor janitress in that building, and no daughter and the story is a pure creation of Comstock's imagination.

It is also likely that the "mothers" of the letter of 31 Jan. and the "prominent business man" of the "Evening Sun" report have the same mythical identity.

Your society certainly owes it to the people to whom you appeal for funds, to see to it that the allegations as to Mrs. Craddock's distributing her pamphlets among young girls to their detriment be either substantiated or refuted in which latter case it would be consistent with your pretensions to discontinue the employment of Mr. Comstock, and I propose that you require Mr. Comstock to produce before a committee of seven citizens of whom I will name three, you three and they the seventh.

1. The mothers who were so shocked by Mrs. Craddock's grossness.

2. The prominent business man. We will omit the janitress unless Mr. Comstock should care to produce some woman to act the part.

I have absolute confidence in Mrs. Craddock's integrity and truthfulness when she disclaimed ever having given her books to minors. If you have equal confidence in Mr. Comstock you will not decline this test.

Yours &c.

ED. W. CHAMBERLIN.

Why I Am Not a Socialist.

I have been an interested reader of the discussion in Lucifer, which has resulted from J. W. Lloyd's question as to the rights of secession under Socialism, but I have not felt like taking part in it until now. R. B. Kerr's last communication, however, seems to require some answer to explain why a great many persons, and myself among the number, refuse to join the ranks of the Socialists.

Mr. Kerr says that with industrial centralization, production is cheaper than when it is decentralized. This is only partially correct. In many lines of production, decentralized production is much less wasteful, more convenient, can make use of spare hours, and in fact has much more of the elements of true cheapness, than centralized production. Decentralized production has besides an immense advantage over centralized production, in this, that the individual has much more personal independence. For these reasons, I do not believe that the dream of the Socialists will ever become true, and all production fall in the hands of the state.

I personally believe in organization and in majority rule, but I believe that the law of economic organization is not, as the Socialists claim, one monster organization, embracing all the individuals, but a series of organizations, increasing in numbers and in complexity, and each with a special sphere of usefulness.

This is the law in biology. An individual is an organization of cells, each with a special work to do, with which the ego does not interfere. These cells organize themselves into what we call subordinate organisms, each with special functions, and each possessing an intelligence and will of their own, sufficient to control their own actions. These subordinate organisms in their turn organize themselves into what we call the ego, which has a general control over the whole, and attends to that part of conduct which cannot be controlled by the cells or subordinate organisms separately.

The same law obtains in politics and economics, not, as Mr. Kerr points out, because men will to do so, but because it is the condition of progress.

It is because the Socialists do not recognize this law of series of organizations in economics, that I am not willing to join them. True to their principles, they ask for many things in their program which I do not believe would be conducive to my happiness or to social prosperity. Thus I do not want to see the wage system abolished, for I believe it best that the best workman should receive the highest salary; I want to own my own home, and have no desire to become a life tenant; I do not want to see the right of inheritance abolished, for I want my children to benefit from my labors.

And especially I am not a Socialist because every economic advantage they are striving for, can be attained without resorting to their scheme of gigantic organization. We can reach the same result, and at the same time increase our individual independence, by extending public ownership to the limit where centralized production is cheaper than decentralized, by carrying on public business at a profit so as to defray public expenses, and thus abolish taxation, and by limiting the ownership of land. By so doing, not only will we reach the highest production at the least expense of efforts, but we will have what I call an intelligent distribution, that is, an equal distribution of the products due to the ownership of the means of production, and an unequal distribution of the results of individual efforts.

The social dream of the philosophical Anarchists has no attraction for me, but I want to see as large an amount of personal independence as is compatible with economic prosperity, and I believe that this will be attained when the principle of gradation of organizations, each with a special sphere of control, will have been recognized. It is not organization which today unduly restrains individual conduct, but the encroachment of the larger organizations upon the sphere of control of the lesser. The state encroaches upon the cities, the cities upon the families, the families upon the individuals, and the individuals upon the subordinate organisms. This encroachment manifests itself just as much when the ascetic denies his faculties that normal exercise which is necessary to them to enjoy pleasant sensations, as when a state denies a city home rule, or a city seeks to make laws to regulate conduct which concerns only the individuals.

When the units of society will have acquired sufficient knowledge to recognize the law of organization, and will have applied it to the control of politics and economics, the question asked by Mr. Lloyd will be easily answered.

Whenever a certain number of individuals will find themselves in the majority in any organization, they will be allowed to manage it as they think best for their happiness. Anarchistic families will not be interfered with, and can increase in number in any location, until they can control large territories, even including cities and states. They will not be allowed to secede from the nation, and will have to submit to the control of the larger organization, in all these things for which it has been organized.

But within their own organization, they will have full control, and thus will be able to experiment as to the practical value of their special ideas, and their experiments will be watched with interest by the remainder of the nation, and adopted by all if found conducive to human happiness.

But under Socialism, as now expounded by its adherents there will be no chance for secessions, even in the least degree. The nation will control everything, and only such changes or experiments will be made as will be acceptable to a majority of the citizens. The present system has many faults, but until Socialists modify considerably their program, I prefer Capitalism to Socialism.

ALBERT CHAVANNES.

Symposium on Divorce.

One of the most interesting—because showing the drift of popular thought—of all the discussions now carried on in the columns of metropolitan journals, is that concerning the proposed national d'vorce law. Last week we republished part of an essay on this subject by Clara Barton, President of the American Red Cross Society. This essay was selected because of its moderate tone, and for the unusually sane, rational and humane treatment of a problem that is now giving the leaders of modern society much anxiety and trouble. This week we reproduce from the Chicago "American's" editorial pages a contribution from the pen of Mrs. Burton Harrison who is called by the editor "the distinguished American novelist and social leader," and lest any one should say that the quoted paragraphs do not fully express the thought of the writer we give the essay entire—as follows:

Following what has been said on this vital subject in the "American" by so many leaders and lawgivers of church and state, so many women honored in our land for the strength and wisdom of their views, I feel that my words need be few.

It is, however, a theme upon which one cannot afford to be silent who has stood in any shape before the public for the exaltation of the American home, and the ridding of American society of its chief reproaches in the eyes of the outside world.

Wherever of late years in other countries the discussion of our national characteristics has occurred in my hearing, there has been no answer to a summing up like this:

"Great, prosperous, overpowering in successful achievement your America may be; the willing, generous stepmother of our sons and daughters whom we send to you; bounteous in giving to all the world; as a rule more exemplary in domestic life, and decent in externals than any other community of like importance on the globe; but scandalous in her free practice of divorce!"

What can be said in protest, when so often is seen, challenging all eyes in foreign capitals by her resplendent toilets and equipage, some woman recently the heroine of an unsavory divorce suit in New York, or Boston, Chicago, or San Francisco, whose affairs have been a precious morsel rolled upon every gossip's tongue, going forth to display herself in Hyde Park or the Bois de Bologne, beside the new husband acquired at such a cost?

Nay, more, when following in their wake appears the ex-husband of this unblushing personage, in his turn equipped with a wife picked up among the flotsam of still another wreck of a home and a marriage vow?

Or shall we venture to defend the spectacle, unfortunately nowadays not rare, in foreign theaters, hotel restaurants and other such places of resort—that of well-known American couples, snatched severally from their bonds of matrimony and united elsewhere according to their own sweet will; former husbands facing, or sitting near former wives; all cool, indifferent, panoplied by wealth and conspicuous position, come abroad to get out of the commotion produced by their astounding actions in a society, which, however, will receive and forgive them on their return to their native land?

What wonder at the confusion of mind among European hotel keepers, who see their American patrons come back after a brief season's absence bringing with them a distinctly new assortment of old material in the way of connubial ties!

These are sights of such frequent recurrence abroad they may not be overlooked.

They make of us a byword among nations, a laughing stock for the light-minded and an eyesore to respectable lookers-on.

While the crying shame of them continues to be laid to our account, America cannot take her proper, dignified place among nations, Americans cannot hold up their heads and look the world squarely in the face!

In our own country the exhibit and its influence are even worse, for here the whole structure of society is gradually becoming permeated with the ease of the divorce and remarriage habit among people exalted by public voice to be leaders of the rest.

Young girls have become used to hearing the practice complacently discussed among their elders, to seeing its followers soon welcomed again within the fold of polite society as if there had been nothing in particular to overlook.

The change of partners is at most a nine days' wonder. For such a one, who has been pitied for the wretched infelicities of her married lot, does not lose caste or vogue, when, after a short absence from her accustomed haunts, she is announced to have been divorced, and promptly marries another man.

Thus, the young mind of today is trained to look upon the evil as merely a slight irregularity, the result of mistaken judgment in selection, regrettable, but happily remediable by law.

Is it not a cruel wrong inflicted upon her child by any mother who allows these matters to remain blurred in the child's mind through lack of understanding?

I am not here decrying the practices of thoroughly bad men and women, reckless of consequence.

It is at the phase of our national social disease as exhibited among respectable people that one looks with infinite sorrow, wondering when and how it may be checked—the now common acceptance of divorce in the circle of one's acquaintance—the glossing over of its offence against the most sacred safeguard of our lives and homes.

REMARKS.

The first and most obvious of the reflections suggested by reading the above is that Mrs. Harrison's standard of sex-morality is that of the "old world"—Europe, and of barbaric or medieval times. "Ridding American society of its chief reproaches in the eyes of the outside world," seems to concern this "social leader" more than any other consideration. Evidently Mrs. Harrison does not think Americans have a duty to perform in giving to the old world a new and better code of sex ethics, as well as a new and better code of political morality.

In this slavish following of old world standards, however, there is no cause for surprise, since the entire example of our leaders—social, religious, political, financial and commercial, is in the same direction. We are neither more nor less than servile imitators of old world systems of government, of religion, of morals, of social customs, fashions—EVERYTHING!

Time was when to be an American meant something different from this. Time was when America was looked upon by the oppressed everywhere as the synonym for liberty and progress; the home of freedom of thought and of action; the land where all had the right to life, liberty and pursuit of happiness, each in his or her own way, so long as there was no violation of the equal right of all others to the same heritage. How is IT NOW?

* * *

A careful canvas, however, of the history of the American nation, so-called, compels us to admit that in one respect at least, the principles of the "Declaration of Independence," here as elsewhere, have always been a dead letter, and that is in the matter of conjugal relations, the sex relations of women and men. The right of self-ownership and control of the reproductive, the creative, powers and functions, has never been conceded by the rulers of church and state, and for the very good reason that, consciously or unconsciously these rulers know that freedom of parenthood, especially freedom of motherhood, would mean, in the near future, an end to class-privileges, class distinctions, in human society, and with the end of class privileges would necessarily come an end to the necessity for government of man by his fellow man. The most obvious moral to bedrawn from Mrs. Harrison's showing of the troubles of divorced people would seem to be, DON'T GET MARRIED!

M. HARMAN.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

The Outlook.

Among the discouraging features of the general outlook are the following:

First: The very evident drift of public affairs in this country towards unlimited monarchy—imperialism. There is not a monarch in Europe, not even the czar of Russia, whose power over the destinies of his people is so nearly unlimited as is that of the President of the United States.

It is commonly stated and currently believed that the American government is one of "checks and balances," whereby no department can dangerously encroach upon the prerogatives o any other department. That the President is simply the executive arm of the government while the business of law-making and law-interpreting are reserved for other and co-ordinate departments. But in his management of the Philippine business—involving as it did, a complete overthrow of the traditional policy and principles of our general government, President McKinley was law-maker, law-interpreter and law executor—all in one, and in the adjustment of the recent naval difficulty, the Schley-Sampson affair, President Roosevelt has followed the example set by McKinley, in addition to carrying out the policy of his predecessor in regard to the Philippines.

And now in the proposed adjustment of the trouble between the coal-barons and their employes there is much danger, much probability, to say the least, judging from the drift aforesaid, that the settlement will be such as will best suit the interests of a strong, centralized, one-man-power government, whose interests, it need not be said, are always identical with the interests of concentrated capital and time-honored privilege.

The very worst feature of this drift towards imperialism is the fact that the great mass of the voting population seems quite contented and well satisfied to have things done in this way. These seem to prefer a strong ruler, an aggressive, self-willed, autocratic ruler; one who asks no advice from anyone except from counselors of his own appointment, that is, from members of his own official household. The late elections seem to show that the rank and file of the political armies are fairly well satisfied with Roosevelt and his methods of administering the national affairs.

* * *

PER CONTRA.

On the other hand, a close examination of the intellectua and moral horizon shows that the people are not all asleep; that a few, a pretty large minority in fact, are making themselves heard and felt in protest against the popular drift towards imperialistic control of the destinies of the great masses of people by a privileged and self-seeking few. The fact that the coal-barons, through their mouthpiece, President Baer of the Reading Railroad, have felt themselves compelled by public sentiment to make a defensive statement of their side of the questions at issue, is of itself a hopeful sign. Hitherto the barons have always assumed that "there is but ONE side to this question, and that is OUR side."

* * *

Another hopeful sign in the general outlook is the prominence now given, in the large city dailies and in the magazines, also in sermons from the pulpit, to the Divorce Problem. The fact that so many of the popular leaders of modern society, women and men, are coming to the front with elaborate essays in defense of the ages-old institution called marriage—"the only form of serfdom now sanctioned by law," as John Stuart Mill calls it—this fact is evidence to me that this venerated institution is now in its dotage and tottering to its fall. While it may be true that few of the marriage reformers fully understand the work they are doing; while few know the real nature and history of the relic of barbarism they are contending against, the fact that this unorganized band of reformers have put the advocates of marriage on the defensive, is enough to gladden the hearts of all who labor and wait for human emancipation from class privilege whose strongest hold is "canon law" marriage.

* * *

And still another hopeful sign is the increasing revolt against the modern Witchcraft Craze, commonly known as Comstockism—the revolt against the modern crusade that would prevent communication of the knowledge of what is true and good and healthful in the sex relations of women and men, the knowledge of how to lift mankind out of the mire of sensualism, of vicious and criminal indulgence of the sexual passion, by the only means possible, namely, ENLIGHTENMENT!

The tragical ending of the life of Ida C. Craddock, of which full particulars have been given in these columns, has brought the work of this man Comstock prominently before the public, and especially before the thinking people of New York City, the headquarters of the society of which Anthony Comstock is the founder and most active member.

Among those who have denounced Anthony Comstock and his methods is Dr. Rainsford, pastor of St. George's Church New York. As an orthodox clergyman Dr. Rainsford would naturally ally himself with the New York "Society for the Suppression of Vice," but having read Mrs. Craddock's book and made himself acquainted with the persecution against her, this well known and highly respected clergyman did not hesitate to say that Anthony Comstock had "hounded her to her death," and that he was "not fit to hold the position" he has so long held as public censor of morals. The New York "Press," of November 4, in giving an account of a monthly meeting of the executive committee of the Society for the Suppression of Vice—which society "The Press" says is "better known as the Comstock Society"—reports as follows:

"MR. COMSTOCK'S WOE.

"'There is nothing much for me to say,' said Mr. Comstock. 'How so truly good a man as the Rev. Dr. Rainsford could say such things about me'—here Mr. Comstock clasped his hands and rolled his eyes in a look of unspeakable horror—'when I you see, I sent a letter to Dr. Rainsford, asking him to come to the Executive Committee meeting. I sent the letter by messenger, but I am told he is out of the city. I am so sorry! In my letter I told him he would be accorded all the time and opportunity to say anything he had against me to the committee.'"

PIETY, THE LAST RESORT OF KNAVES.

Some one has said that "patriotism is the last resort of knaves." Is it not true, likewise, that PIETY is often the last resort, or main reliance of knavery?

For more than a quarter of a century this man Anthony Comstock has held a lucrative position as head of an amateur organization of men and women whose professed object is to protect the public, and especially children, from the contamination of vicious literature, pictures, statuary, etc. In other words this society arrogates to itself the functions of an index expurgatorius, a tribunal that assumes the right and duty to decide what books, papers, pictures and statues are of a moral and uplifting tendency and what are not, a tribunal similar to the Roman Catholic "Holy Office" that formerly sent men and women by hundreds and thousands to prison and to the stake for promulgating literature condemned by that church.

The men who composed this holy tribunal in Roman Catholic countries were eminent for their piety and for their zeal as defenders of public morality, and especially for their zeal as guardians of the faith and morals of the young, the ignorant and the unwary, and the general public accepting these professions of superior piety and goodness, continued the censors in office until the slowly growing sense of justice and humanity demanded the repeal—or at least the modification, of the powers of the "Holy Office."

Are not the reasons given by Anthony Comstock for the powers granted to him by an over-indulgent public, an undiscriminating, an ignorant and priest-led public, precisely similar to those urged by the Roman Catholic Inquisition, a century or two ago? All through his career of more than twenty-five years this man's utterances have been literally UNCTUOUS with piety, and also with self-praise, as in the paragraph quoted from the N. Y. "Press," which paper is only one of many journals of metropolitan circulation and influence that are now holding up to public scorn and contempt the man who, it is charitable to believe, has become a MANIAC, a mental PERVERT, by his unceasing contemplation of what he calls the "moral cancers" of human society; but which social phenomena so far as they can rightly be called cancers, are in great measure the direct as well as indirect result of such methods of suppression as those Mr. Comstock and his society are champions of. M. H.

Experiences at Harmony Home.

The little foxes that spoil the vines.—Old Proverb.

A guilty conscience needs no accuser.—Old Proverb.

A conscience void of offense needs no defender.—New Proverb.

Trust thyself. . . . . Go upright and vital, and speak the rude truth in all ways. . . . . Do not take back your words. . . . . Be true to your own act. . . . . A simple manly character need never make an apology. . . . . Whoso would be a man must be a nonconformist.—Emerson.

* * *

THE LITTLE THINGS OF LIFE.

On Sunday November 16 I had the privilege of listening to a discourse on prisons and prison discipline, by John L. Whitman head-keeper of Cook County jail, Chicago, claimed to be one of the largest institutions of its kind in the world, and also one of the best managed.

Mr. Whitman gave some account of the reforms introduced by himself into this penal institution, and of the work he is now personally doing among the prisoners. One thing, among many, that arrested my attention was the account given by him of his efforts to convince those under his charge that it was inattention to little things, rather than intentional wrong doing, that had brought them to where they now are, and that it will depend on little things rather than on great ones—upon the way in which they discharge the little everyday duties required of them—as to how soon, if ever, they are to be restored to liberty and to useful and honorable citizenship.

In this view Mr. Whitman is in accord with R. W. Emerson when he says—see Essay on Heroism:—

"The unremitting retention of simple and high sentiments, in obscure duties, is hardening the character to that temper which will work with honor, if need be, in the tumult, or on the scaffold."

That is to say, it is careful and conscientious attention to the little duties, the daily requirements that seem too insignificant to deserve mention, that will prepare the man or woman to act heroically when great occasions arise, and that without such preparation, without the "hardening of one's character" by attention to little things it will be impossible to meet the strain, with credit to ourselves, when great deeds, or great endurance, are required of us.

* * *

CAUSES OF FAILURE.

Looking for causes of failure of the late experiment in co-operation at Benton Harbor, Michigan—if Brother Jones is right in calling it a failure—I would name as prominent among those causes,

First, Inattention to little things.

Second, Too much Socialism.

To begin, however, I do not admit the alleged fact of failure. No honest effort ever is, ever was or ever will be a failure. It will have its subjective success, its character-building success, if no other.

Some great chieftain said, "We may not achieve success, but we can do better; we can DESERVE it;" and in the best sense of the word, to deserve success is to achieve it.

The common and popular standards of success are false, irrational, delusive. The accumulation of money for money's sake; the applause of the populace for deeds of daring—often in a bad cause, or to secure promotion in an army of aggression, as for instance the reckless daring of British officers on the danger line in the late South African war—these and similar illustrations might be extended indefinitely to show the falsity of popular standards of success and of failure.

"They are slaves who will not be in the right with two or three," says Lowell. I would paraphrase by saying, He is a slave who will not be in the right with only ONE, and that one HIMSELF. Hence I am not greatly disturbed by Bro. Jones' report that I am considered a failure by my Michigan neighbors, or by my visitors while at "Harmony Home."

In returning from my summer's vacation in the Michigan Fruit Belt I said in Lucifer: "I find myself not richer in dollars but very, very much richer in experience," and now, treating my readers as I would like to be treated in turn, I purpose in the ensuing weekly issues of our little paper, to show in what respects the experiment at "Harmony Home" failed to achieve all that was hoped from it, and also the causes of such partial failure, as I see them. M. HARMAN.

A Far-Reaching Decision.

The following paragraphs clipped from the editorial columns of a leading Chicago daily paper would seem to indicate that the writer thereof has been reading Peter Kropotkin's works, or listening to the lectures of Emma Goldman:

It has just been decided in court that somnambulism is not disorderly conduct, and that if a person while asleep is caught perambulating the public thoroughfares without being attired according to the rules that are supposed to be observed by refined and cultured people, he cannot be punished—since, being asleep, he is not responsible for what he does.

It is a far-reaching decision, and if carried out to its full logical length it would play havoc with all the branches of government.

The man that is asleep is not responsible for what he may do—while asleep—and how many of us are asleep!

In fact, how few there are that are truly awake!

The overwhelming majority of us are asleep all our lives—not physically, but mentally, morally and spiritually—and we are no more responsible for our actions than the somnambulist is for his.

Legislators, lawyers, the constabulary, preachers, psychologists, would do well to find out just how many people are really awake in this world before they go any further with the making and executing of the laws of the land.

If only those are to be punished who are really and truly awake—awake "mentally, morally and spiritually"—the business of administering our cumbrous, our vastly voluminous and very costly body of statutory and judge-made law, would be reduced to very small proportions. M. HARMAN.

Emma Goldman in Chicago.

The Chicago Philosophical Society has been meeting weekly for some months in Handel Hall a large, centrally located and well known place of holding meetings that call together the non-church-going and independent thinkers of the city. Among the speakers employed by this association have been leading political reformers such as Samuel Jones, Mayor of Toledo, Ohio; advocates of the Single Tax, the Referendum, and other popular reforms. Sunday Nov. 23, Emma Goldman of New York, was announced as first speaker. It will be remembered by most of our readers that Miss Goldman was imprisoned in this city a year ago, accused of complicity with Czolgosz in the assassination of President McKinley, and released after a few weeks' detention, for lack of evidence. As shown by the following paragraph clipped from the "Inter-Ocean" of Nov. 24, the doors of Handel Hall were closed against the Philosophical Society last Sunday afternoon:

"The doors of Handel Hall were shut against the members of the Chicago Philosophical society yesterday. It had been announced that Emma Goldman was to speak upon 'Modern Anarchism,' and the management of the hall refused to allow the place to be used for the discussion of the subject. That, however, was not the subject of Miss Goldman's talk, and when the meeting had adjourned to Trades' Union Hall, at 55 North Clark street, she addressed the audience that packed the hall, upon the subject. 'The Radical and the Child.'

"She said she believed that parents owed more to their children than the children owed to the parents, because the children were not born of their own volition. She said that she did not believe a ceremony made a marriage any more binding than a mere agreement."

Lack of time and space prevent further report of Miss Goldman's lecture, for this week's issue. The importance of the subject and the circumstances under which the lecture was delivered, would seem to demand a more extended notice from Lucifer, which notice we hope to give in next week's issue. M. H.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Volney Abbey, Wathena, Kas.:—Please send me a few copies of Lucifer containing Ida Craddock's last letter to the public. I want them for missionary work; in fact I use all my Lucifers in that manner.

Richard Daverkosen, Home, Wash.:—Enclosed is $1 for one year's subscription to Lucifer. I have seen but two copies since leaving Home, and I miss it very much. I admire the courage and clearheadedness of its editor and his assistant, Lillian. I shall endeavor to keep paid up hereafter and in case of removal will give timely notice.

Mrs. K., N. Dak.:—I am obliged to ask you to discontinue sending Lucifer to me. Don't send another copy, please. I am not making this request because I wish to, but because my husband peremptorily demands it. But I mean to have a divorce from him as soon as it can be procured, then I will read what I choose. How very slowly evolution moves! It seems so strange to me that people in general have so little sympathy and perception. Supplying their animal wants, and a little amusement, seems to fill their lives.

W. H. Walz, Joplin, Mo.:—I have been reading your accounts of the outrageous persecution of Mrs. Craddock. It is certainly hard to endure such things in these "enlightened" times. But truth must finally triumph. What are the prices of her books? I have moved my free reading room to 215 W. 5 St. It is large and well fitted up for the benefit of the public. If you or any of your readers have any books, either new or old to donate to this reading room I would be pleased to receive them. If the donor does not feel able to pay charges, the books may be sent by express at my expense.

W. Belt, Detroit, Mich.:—I received a sample copy of Lucifer and found it very interesting reading. Herewith I enclose two clippings from Detroit "Evening News" of November 8, in relation to vaccination. The City Council of Detroit had appropriated fifty thousand dollars for the purpose of compulsory vaccination. This appropriation had slipped through, as usual, by deception and trickery. The Board of Health had asked for a larger amount, but was given $50.000. Now they are sending out notices to people, "You are required to be vaccinated, unless you can show certificate of vaccination within five years." The Health Board, being a gang of politicians, and having used their influence last winter in securing the passage of Ripper laws which took the appointing power out of the hands of the Mayor, are now getting their reward—getting their hands into the public purse. The vaccination law is not compulsory, but these men send out their notices, make a big bluff, as though they were doing something—then pocket the money!

Enclosed find twenty-five cents for which send "Vaccination a Crime," by F. L. Oswald M. D., 10 cents, and "Vaccination a Gigantic Crime," 15 cents, by Samuel Darling. Send books right away, as I want to use them; also send complete catalogue of books.

Incineration a Party Badge.

I have seen brief mention of Kate Austin in the last three numbers of Lucifer, and would like to see, at an opportune time in the near future, a brief sketch of her life and work, cause of death etc. When I read the two line notice on page 340, which told of one more of our fellow Press-Writers passing away, I could not help feeling that the notice should have read, "and was incinerated at——?"

Of course cremation did not take place in either her case or Ida Craddock's, but as this final disposition of the body has become the party badge of radical Liberalism all over the world, how much more fitting would it be for all of us Liberals to see to it that arrangements are made when we are alive that will insure incineration after death?

We should not lose sight of the fact that if we decree the burial of our body we decree the poisoning of so many feet of earth for a period variously estimated at from twenty to sixty years, and in some well proved instances for longer periods.

Cremation is as cheap as earth burial. Cremation certificates payable in ten per cent installments are now issued by several cremation companies and if from $25 to $35 can insure cremation after death it should not be neglected by believers in burial reform when they are alive and well.

Let us say to ourselves, if you are living a good life in this active existence on this planet don't commence to poison mother earth when your activities are over. WALTER BRYEN.

"Search Me."

The people by thousands were crowded about
And the president spoke, with intent to give out
His position on trusts—and the things that he said
Caused every codger to doddle his head
And remark:
"Well, whar does he stand? D'ye see?"
And I said
"Search me!"

The newspaper fellows were writing like smoke,
Shorthanding every darn'd word that he spoke,
But when the pothooks and curves were unspun
I heard each a-asking the next other one
This remark:
"Where did he land? Could you see?"
And he said
"Search me."

The folks read the papers, all anxious to see
How dead right on trusts our Teddy must be,
But when they had scanned all thorough and clean
Each turned to his neighbor with questioning mien
And remarked:
"Well, whar in this trust business is he?"
But 'tother un said:
"Search me."

—People's Paper.

Trial Trip Subscriptions.

For one dollar we will send Lucifer ten weeks to eight different addresses, and to the one sending us the list, any one of the following books:

The Origin of the Family, Private Property and the State. By Frederick Engels, 217 pages, handsomely bound in cloth. Postage, 6 cents.

The Slavery of Our Times. By Leo Tolstoi. With portrait of author, 186 pages. Blue cloth; silver lettering. Postage 8 cents.

Nora: A Doll's House, and Ghosts. The two dramas bound together. Olive cloth; red lettering. 108 pages. Postage 8 cents. This offer will, we hope, induce our friends to extend Lucifer's circulation materially.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer the Light Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

Forty copies of Lucifer, no two alike, of 1901 will be sent to any address for 15 cents. Nine bundles for $1. We are anxious to place these papers where they will do good. Please let us have your orders soon.

FOR CHRISTMAS.

Just fits a letter. THE RESURRECTION OF ADAM; the sloth of Adam and Eve and what came of it. By Mabel Gifford, D. L. S., 15 cents.

HERE'S HEALTH FOR YOU! Simple mental and physical exercises. By Rejoice O. Mann (Mabel Gifford), 25 cents.

CHRISTMAS CAT BOOK. By Mildred Norman, the Children's Story-Writer. Greeting on cover. Artistic make up. Amusing to children and grown-ups. Teaches kindness to animals and the care of them. 12 original half-tone ill, 25 cents. Sold by Mabel Gifford, Blue Hill Ave, I. Mattapan, Mass.

The Ladies' "PERFECT" Sanitary Protector.

The only Sanitary Protector on the market made of pure rubber and perfectly soft and pliable; will last for years; can be worn with perfect comfort, can be adjusted to any size, no canvas, no cloth, but pure rubber.

This is something that no woman can afford to be without. Perfectly sanitary, comfortable, indispensable and safe.

Price reduced to $1. Order of L. Harman, 500 Fulton St. Chicago.

A Private Maternity Home

Or Lying-in Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired.

For particulars and terms give description of case, and address.

Suite 63-119 LaSalle St., Chicago Ill. C. S. WOOD, M. D.

945.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author.

The Sex Passion.
Man, the Ungrown.
Woman, the Serf.
Woman in Freedom
Marriage: a Retrospect.
Marriage: a Forecast.
The Free Society.
Some remarks on the early star and sex worships.
Notes—On the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population.

The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. Price, $1.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

"Kipling is Dead"

This is the title of a strong, critical article in the "Goose-Quill," the new unconventional literary magazine that is making such an unprecedented sensation on account of its virile letter-press and audacious illustrations. If you like the brain-annihilating slushmushgush magazines, you won't like the "Goose-Quill." Every number's a verbal volcano. Interesting articles in recent numbers are:

'Schley, Dewey, Miles and Roosevelt" (a critical comparison.)
"The Rage for Leg-Literature."
"Kipling is Dead."
"The Truth About Robert Louis Stevenson."
"Bossett's Startling Poem, 'Jenny'" (reprint)
"About That Man in East Aurora."
"Oscar Wilde's 'Ballade of Reading Gaol'" (reprint)
Also full-page caricatures of Hall Caine and Zangwill.
"Recent Rubbish" (Book Reviews)
"Why Chicago is a Hell Upon Earth."
"The Fleshly School of Poetry."
"Sir John Suckling's Audacious 'Ballad on a Wedding'" (Reprint)

The "Goose Quill" is for sale everywhere in Chicago price 10 cents each, or a copy will be sent postpaid on receipt of 15 cents in stamps. Address, the Managers, The Goose-Quill, Chicago, Ill.

NOTE—The subscription to the "Goose Quill for one year (12 issues) is $1 and the time to subscribe is now, because those subscribing before January 1 will receive the above mentioned numbers free.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 30c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.

ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $1.75.

A FLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.

BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth, $1.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Condemned, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 31 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 430 pages. 50c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

DARWIN, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. G. Spence. 178 pages. 50c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Head it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 37 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $3.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A sad Cecile Chavannes. 50c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 10c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian religion has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 360 pages. 40c. Postage, 5c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Siemens and David Overmyer. 25c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 25c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kinley, of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunber Kelen. 419 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 250 pages. Paper, 25c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Scotland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 27 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Volney, and Voltaire. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry H. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mar'ian. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREEZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

KORADINE. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 31, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III. (1899). Cloth, $1.25. Postage, 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 412 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIHUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race Life, and Tyrannic Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The Stats Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Printed Facts; Social Vs. Sexual Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectists in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory), R. H. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is inevitably opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Free-thinkers who are only unbelieving or disrrunfled reflationists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's Attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of free republicanism. Cloth, 25c; paper, 10c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Spunels, the Toothsome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "tea line," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $3.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 320 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 50c.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Mariette), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 287 pages. 25c.

THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Witches and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old Ancients said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are ordinary and excellent; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 48 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 10c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? Sudity Immodest? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is sudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 25c.

THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Henrietta B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Mayo)? 25c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. R. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. H. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Grace. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 50c to 25c.

THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1761, quoted by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuit craft and is a plain index to the underhand working of that order against the welfare of individuals and society. 15c.

THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 10c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Sexual Action (Grant Allen), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Whine). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $2.25.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Darling. 15c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 10c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetism. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Why we come to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, and of what gives us the blisses of lovers and the shrieking arms of babes." Paper covers; 64 large pages. 25c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 3, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERSIGNED. An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's famous and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 170 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 806 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VI., No. 47. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, DEC. 4, E. M. 302. [C. E. 1902.] WHOLE No. 946

SUCCESS.

'Tis the coward who quits to misfortune,
'Tis the knave who changes each day,
'Tis the fool who wins half the battle,
Then throws all his chances away.

There is little in life but labor,
And tomorrow may find that a dream;
Success is the bride of Endeavor,
And luck—but a meteor's gleam.

The time to succeed is when others,
Discouraged, show traces of tire;
The battle is fought in the homestretch—
And won—'twixt the flag and the wire!

—John Trotwood Moore.

Mrs. Stanton's Last Plea for Women.

Three days before her death, at the advanced age of eighty-seven, Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton sent to the "American," New York and Chicago, the following contribution to the "Symposium for the Discussion of How to Solve the Divorce Problem," now running in the Hearst newspapers:

I have read all the papers so far printed in the American's educational symposium on the divorce question, and disagree most heartily with most of the eminent churchmen who have stated their views.

Bolton's Hall's article was exceptionally good; it must have been written in a spirit of true liberality.

I take pleasure in submitting a second paper, which gives my views more fully than my first article printed recently.

If marriage is a human institution, about which man may legislate, it seems but just that he should treat this branch of his legislation with the same common sense that he applies to all others. If it is a mere legal contract, then should it be subject to the restraints and privileges of all other contracts. A contract, to be valid in law, must be formed between parties of mature age, with an honest intention in said parties to do what they agree. The least concealment, fraud, or intention to deceive, if proved, annuls the contract.

A boy cannot contract for an acre of land or a horse until he is twenty-one, but he may contract for a wife at fourteen. If a man sell a horse and the purchaser find in him "great incompatibility of temper"—a disposition to stand still when the owner is in haste to go—the sale is null and void; the man and his horse part company.

But in marriage, no matter how much fraud and deception are practiced, nor how cruelly one or both parties have been misled, no matter how young or inexperienced or thoughtless the parties, nor how unequal their condition and position in life, the contract cannot be annulled in this state.

My attention was called to this question very early in life by the sufferings of a friend of my girlhood—a victim of one of those unfortunate unions called marriage. What my great love for that young girl and my holy intuitions then decided to be right has not been changed by years of experience, observation and reason.

I have pondered well these things in my heart and ever felt the deepest interest in all that has been written and said on this subject, and the most profound respect and loving sympathy for those heroic women who, in face of law and public sentiment, have dared to sunder the unholy ties of a joyless, loveless union.

Think of a husband telling a young and trusting girl, but one short month his wife, that he married her for her money, that those letters so precious to her that she had read and re-read and kissed and cherished were written by another; that their splendid home, of which, on their wedding day, her father gave to him the deed, is already in the hands of his creditors; that she must give up the elegance and luxury that now surround her unless she can draw fresh supplies of money to meet their wants!

When my girlhood friend told the story of her wrongs to me—the abuse to which she was subject and the dread in which she lived—I impulsively urged her to flee from such a monster and villain as she would before the hot breath of a ferocious beast of the wilderness, and she did flee, and it was well with her.

Now, who believes that such wretched marriages are made in heaven? That all these sad, miserable people are bound together by God?

But, say you, does not separation cover all these difficulties? No one objects to separation when the parties are so disposed.

To separation there are two serious objections; first, so long as you insist on marriage as a divine institution, as an indissoluble tie, so long as you maintain your present laws against divorce, you make separation even so odious that the most noble, virtuous, and sensitive men and women choose a life of misery rather than a partial, disgraceful release.

Secondly, those who, in their impetuosity and despair, do, in spite of public sentiment, separate, find themselves in their new position beset with many temptations to lead a false, unreal life.

This isolation bears especially hard on women. Marriage is not all of life to man. His resources for amusement and occupation are boundless. He has the whole world for his home.

His business, his politics, his club, his friendships with either sex, can help to fill the void made by an unfortunate union or separation.

But to woman, as she is now educated, marriage is all and everything—her sole object in life—that for which she is taught to live, the all engrossing subject of her sleeping and her waking dreams.

Think you that human law can set bounds to love?

Alas, like faith, it comes upon us unawares.

It is not by an act of will we believe new doctrines, nor love what is true and noble in mankind.

If you think it wise to legislate on human affections, pray make your laws with reference to what our natures are. Let them harmonize in some measure with the immutable laws of God.

A very wise father once remarked that in the government of his children he forbade as few things as possible; a wise legislation would do the same.

It is folly to make laws on subjects beyond human prerogative, knowing that in the very nature of things they must be set aside.

To make laws that man cannot and will not obey serves to bring all law into contempt.

It is all important in a republican government that the people should respect the laws, for if we throw law to the winds what becomes of civil government?

So long as people marry from considerations of policy—from every possible motive but the true one—discord and divison must be the result.

So long as the state provides no education for youth on these questions and throws no safeguards around the formation of marriage ties, it is honor bound to open wide the door of escape.

From a woman's standpoint, I see that marriage, as an indissoluble tie, is slavery for woman, because law, religion, and public sentiment all combine under this idea to hold her true in this relation, whatever it may be, and that there is no other human slavery that knows such depths of degradation as a wife chained to a man whom she neither loves nor respects; no other slavery so disastrous in its consequence on the race or to individual respect, growth, and development.

The question today with the Protestant world is not whether marriage is an indissoluble tie, but, as a civil contract, for how many and what reasons may it be dissolved.

In closing let me submit the following propositions:

1. In the language of John Milton, "Those who marry intend as little to conspire their own ruin as those who swear allegiance, and as the whole people is to an ill government, so is one man or woman to an ill marriage.

"If a whole people, against any authority, covenant, or statute, may, by the sovereign edict of charity save not only their lives, but honest liberties, from unworthy bondage, as well may a married party, against any private covenant which he or she never entered to his or her mischief, be redeemed from unsupportable disturbances to honest peace and just contentment."

2. Any constitution, compact, or covenant between human beings that failed to produce or promote human happiness could not in the nature of things be of any force or authority, and it would be not only a right, but a duty to abolish it.

3. Though marriage be in itself divinely founded and is fortified as an institution by innumerable analogies in the whole kingdom of universal nature, still a true marriage is only known by its results, and, like the fountain, if pure, will reveal only pure manifestations. Nor need it ever be said: What God has joined together let no man put asunder; for man could not put it asunder; nor can he any more unite what God and nature have not joined together.

4. Of all insulting mockeries of heavenly truth and holy law none can be greater than that physical impotency is cause sufficient for divorce, while no amount of mental or moral or spiritual imbecility is ever to be pleaded in support of such a demand.

5. Such a law was worthy those dark periods when marriage was held by the greatest doctors and priests of the church to be a work of the flesh only, and almost, if not altogether, a defilement, denied wholly to the clergy, and, a second time, forbidden to all.

6. An unfortunate or ill-assorted marriage is ever a calamity, but not ever, perhaps never, a crime; and when society and government, by its laws and customs, compels its continuance, always to the grief of one of the parties and the actual loss and damage of both, it usurps an authority never delegated to man nor exercised by God himself.

7. Observation and experience daily show how incompetent are men, as individuals or as governments, to select partners in business, teachers for their children, ministers of their religion, or makers, adjudicators, or administrators of their laws; and as the same weakness and blindness must attend in the selection of matrimonial partners, the dictates of humanity and common sense alike show that the latter and most important contract should no more be perpetual than either or all of the former.

8. Children born in these unhappy and unhallowed connections are in the most solemn sense of unlawful birth—the fruit of lust, but not of love; and so not of God, divinely descended, but from beneath, whence proceed all manner of evil and uncleanness.

9. Next to the calamity of such a birth to the child is the misfortune of being trained in the atmosphere of a household where love is not the law, but where discord and bitterness abound, stamping their demoniac features on the moral nature, with all their odious peculiarities, thus continuing the race in a weakness and depravity that must be a sure precursor of its ruin as a just penalty of long violated laws.

An Essay in Classification.

Jas. Armstrong Jr. quotes from me (in number 937 of Lucifer) as follows: "Will some one who conceives prostitutes to be made of different stuff from well behaved women explain in what way she appears unlike some other victim of the blind archer?"

Who is "she"? Reference to Lucifer 937 will show that "she" is Bianca, in Shakespeare's Othello, of whom I also remarked that, unless Cassio wrongs her, she is a prostitute in love. This makes the sentence intelligible. Please remember it.

It has the effect of reducing most of Mr. Armstrong's criticism to what logicians call an ignoratio elenchi. "That the virtuous and the vicious trace their origin to exactly the same source is in itself no defense or justification of the prostitute." Who said it was? This reply does equally well for every passage which assumes that I justify prostitution.

There are, however, some real differences between Mr. Armstrong's view of the social evil and mine. He thinks the question I asked altogether an idle one—because no two pictures in a kaleidoscope are alike, though all are made of the same colored glass. My question was in what respect Bianca, a prostitute in love, appears unlike some other woman in love? The parallel therefore, strikes me as like "the legs of the lame."

"The plutocrat and the prostitute are both criminals." I think rather differently. Both may be bad in some respects. So are we all. But a criminal is a breaker of laws which it was meant he should keep. Plutocrats and prostitutes are social functionaries, representatives of institutions essential to society as it is, against whom laws made by that society are buncombe.

Mr. Armstrong does "not think there is anything more unspeakably infamous than harlotry." I think "the essentially tyrannical exclusive possession in which every well balanced man holds the woman of his choice" is worse! At any rate it cannot exist without harlotry. Louis the Ninth of France (St. Louis) and Maria Theresa, both proved that, by the actual experiment of putting the harlotry down till they found the result was to make this "essentially tyrannical exclusive possession" insecure.

Mr. Armstrong's idea of a well-balanced man is very consistent with his declaration that he will "never be Roman enough to lend a friend" his sexual partner. But I find a trifling inconsistency between his idea that the sexual partner is an article of "essentially tyrannical possession" which it may be optional with him to "lend" or not, and his assertion that he believes in nothing more firmly than self-ownership! Nor does the statement that it is none of his business if his neighbor is given to such practice impress me as quite harmonious with his assertion that, in a rational society, the harlot would be a perfect outcast; or with his demand that the quasi-defense of prostitutes by Anarchist papers and writers should cease.

His arguments in favor of Anarchism strikes me as very sensible. But when he says he wants to be subject to a him where he expects to find it? Will existing public opinion do? Apparently not; for Mr. Armstrong exposes many of its absurdities in a way which I think entirely satisfactory. The public opinion which is to be so rational and enlightened that Mr. Armstrong would like being subject to it, must, however, divide mankind into classes. And we get some information as to what sort of classes Mr. Armstrong thinks a rational and enlightened public opinion such as he would like to live under, will have to recognize. It must draw a broad black line dividing "the white man from the negro"!!! It must also divide the wise man from the fool. Quite a job. It had need be pretty enlightened. Perhaps Mr. Armstrong proposes going to Heaven in search of it? Little as I believe in submission to public opinion which I have always found to mean public stupidity, I will agree that when Mr. Armstrong finds his Menu he may learn something. For the public opinion which is to be so rational and enlightened as to command his loyalty will draw a line dividing "the harlot from the freelover." That is more than Mr. Armstrong can do; or he would not cite Cleopatra as an example of a harlot. It will also draw a line dividing "the dividualist from the governmentalist." I fear Mr. Armstrong will find it divide joints and marrow, soul and spirit. For is the man a governmentalist or an individualist who wants classes like the above established by status, and who also says scientific classification will take place of itself when we have outlived "the present procrustean governmental machine" (an excellent characterization)? I vow I cannot tell. I doubt if he can. Perhaps a rational and enlightened public opinion could.

The trouble with Mr. Armstrong is at bottom the same as with Mrs. Stowe and Bertha Moore. If it does not affect his English, it does his logic. He writes faster than he thinks—a perhaps inevitable journalistic fault, but one of which he must cure himself before his abilities have fair play. Firing off one's wishes regardless of their compatibility with each other is—he has furnished me the simile—like putting gold and silver to every use just because they look pretty. It is a good way to make a sensation—a poor one to produce anything else. And he says that in spite of government there are virtuous women! Perhaps there are. How does he know? There are many who pass for virtuous undoubtedly. One of them was Mrs. Quickly. I extract a recipe for seeming that way from her note-book. Divide your neighbors into classes, as prescribed by "rational and enlightened public opinion," and dispose of them as such.

Evans. What is your genitive case plural, William?

William. Genitive case?

Evans. Aye.

Wil. Horum, harum, horum.

Mrs. Quickly. Vengeance of Jenny's case! fie on her! never name her, child, if she be a whore! C. L. JAMES.

How Is the Country to Be Peopled?

One out of three marriages in Topeka fails so abominably that the enchained ones seek divorce. How about the number of those who have not the nerve to seek divorce, but would to heaven they were out of it? I believe that three-fourths of those who marry are of this kind.

Now I want to call attention to a matter which is rapidly becoming grave. With this growing hatred of marriage and determination to get out of it, on the one side, and on the other the general insistance that it is the chiefly divine institution that we have, and that children mustn't be allowed to exist except by coming through its perfect portals, how is the population of the United States to be kept up? As people grow intelligent they will not marry; but it is made difficult to have and rear children in freedom. Hence the supply of intelligence is cut off at its fountain source, the having of children by the most intelligent. The country is peopled by the duller and lower. But evidently (see Topeka) intelligence on this subject is growing rapidly—hence it will soon come that the country will not be peopled at all, except by the semi-insane which are sent here by European monarchies to get rid of them to save the monarchs' crowns.

If the free bearing of children is to be opposed, and yet if population is to be continued, I see no way but to let the Chinese flood in, and respectfully hand over the populating of the United States to them. Probably they will not object to abiding by the family, in exchange for America, while the people here would clearly rather give up America and let the American race die than to permit that sacred ghost the family evaporate.

We live for ghosts, we must take the consequences. I myself think marriage was made for man, not man for marriage. I don't care a hang for any institution that isn't for the best good of the race, however sacred it may have been. What is the use of existing for the may-have-beens?

The free people should leave children of their own blood to fight the battles of liberty. A devil was once asked why he did not procreate devils. He replied that he considered it a crime to bring little devils into life with a view to improving hell, for it couldn't be done. I would not say exactly this of the world although I do admit that it is hard on children to produce them to fight the battle of world-improvement. Yet the prospects of success are growing brighter. We have had to fight the battle and we can hand on better weapons to them. If there were only more of them, of the intelligent fighting kind. And as good blood is itself the chief weapon, ought not the liberated to continue their blood in the world? MORRISON I. SWIFT.

The Motherhood Trust.

In your recent paper, "The Motherhood Trust" you rightly recognize the primary development of the instinct of the savage to appropriate what is the common right of all, and use it for his personal advantage only.

But in common with other social reformers who denounce the granting by the State of proprietary rights in those gifts of Nature that should be free to all, you advocate with passionate insistence the right of every individual to use the supreme gift of Nature for his individual gratification.

If the human species was able to rationally appreciate the source through which the greatest of blessings must be derived, it would be recognized that in every community, however numerous, there is at any particular moment one man, and one man only, who by the fitness of his age, by his mental and physical endowments as well as by the character of all that in the past he has attempted and achieved, is pointed out as the only one through whom the highest development of human life may be inherited by posterity. And yet, while you claim it as the most sacred right and duty of a woman to choose such as the father of her child, you claim it as a superior right that he may refuse and waste this gift in barren commerce with a prostitute. Such "rights" mutually destroy each other; how do you propose to harmonize them?

Whatever folly may be ascribed to imagined deities Nature is not such an inconsequential fool as to send "Men and women up and down the earth famishing" for a gratification the indulgence of which will render unavailing the culminating glory of organic evolution. What their system blindly craves is the stimulus of their vital functions that the organs of sex can alone supply; not by such a degradation of the function of creation as may be attained by a process akin to the promiscuous slicing of potatoes into "sets," but by the assiduous cultivation of the whole plant, whose seed may conduce to the development of life in consequent perfection.

In this matter we inherit the ignorance of those races of bloodthirsty and lecherous lunatics who by their abuse of the human attributes have, as far as their species is concerned, changed this world into a shambles and a brothel from which we have hardly yet begun to dream of delivering ourselves.

These races have always been the victims of the extortioner and tyrant, to further whose interests the social development of the race has been moulded, first by brute force and subsequently by the more insidious bias of ideas that derive their sanction from "revelation" only.

I am ready to continue this argument if you encourage it by publication. Yours very truly, CHAS. THONGER.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 344 W. 143d street, New York.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

The Worst of All Slaveries.

Half a century ago the upholders of "law-and-order" in the United States were put upon the defensive by such "lawless" agitators as Stephen Foster, Gerrett Smith, Wm. L. Garrison, Wendell Philips and others. Learned doctors of divinity and of the civil law; presidents of colleges, etc., etc., felt themselves compelled by the agitation headed by the aforesaid champions of the right of all men, black as well as white, to own their persons and the proceeds of their labor—compelled by this persistent agitation to take up the cudgels and fight, with tongue and pen, in defense of the time-honored institution called chattel slavery.

Now, at the beginning of the twentieth century of the Christian Era, we find a very similar conflict raging in regard to another of the pet institutions of modern society, that of statutory and canon law marriage. By far the most elaborate series of articles that has appeared in any newspaper for many years is that which has now been running for many week's in the Hearst newspapers, New York and Chicago, entitled "How Shall We Solve the Divorce Problem—A Symposium for the Discussion of How Best to Check the Divorce Evil, the Great National Disgrace, and Preserve the Purity of the American Home." More than forty double column articles have appeared on the editorial pages of the aforesaid widely circulated and influential journals, most of them written by leading clergymen, bishops and archbishops of the Roman Catholic and Protestant churches, also by learned judges and presidents of colleges, also by women of national fame as writers and lecturers.

The demand of most of these writers is for a National Divorce law; a law which shall have much the same effect upon discontented wives and husbands as did the Fugitive Slave law of half a century ago, namely, to make it more difficult to escape from the chains of legalized slavery. If this law should be enacted fugitive wives and husbands would have to leave the United States and go to Canada or Mexico, in order to gain marital freedom, as the fugitive slaves of the south were compelled to do, by the enactment of the national fugitive slave law.

* * *

Robert G. Ingersoll's latest lecture entitled "What is Religion," delivered before the Boston Free Religion Association, will probably go down to future generations as his most important public utterance, because in that lecture he gave a summary of his matured thought upon what is the true, the basic cause of human ills such as poverty, vice and crime, which cause he most emphatically declared to be the denial of self-ownership to woman, in the relation of wife and mother. In other words this distinguished orator and image-breaker in his last appearance before the public, planted himself squarely upon the platform long before occupied by the people called in derision "free lovers," namely, that womanhood and motherhood must be FREE! free to do the best possible in creating new human beings.

"There is but one hope," says Col. Ingersoll in the lecture referred to. "Science must make woman the owner, the mistress of herself. Science, the only possible savior of mankind, must put it in the power of woman to decide for herself whether she will or will not become a mother. This is the solution of the whole question."

The logical outcome of the demand for self-ownership is the abolition of statutory and canon law marriage. It is a coincidence that augurs good for mankind that the woman whose name stands highest among women reformers in this country, has left as her latest legacy to the world, utterances very similar to those just quoted from Robert G. Ingersoll's last lecture. In her latest public utterance, an article sent, three days before her death, to Hearst's "American," New York and Chicago, Elizabeth Cady Stanton wrote these ever memorable words:

"I see that marriage, as an indissoluble tie, is slavery for woman, because law, religion and public sentiment all combine, . . . to hold her true to this relation, whatever it may be, and that there is no other human slavery that knows such depths of degradation as a wife chained to a man whom she neither loves nor respects; no other slavery so disastrous in its consequences on the race or to individual growth, respect and development."

On our first page will be found the entire article from which this quotation is taken. It is to be hoped some enterprising publisher will print this grand utterance in leaflet form, so that it can be scattered and read by liberty loving people in every land and clime.

M. HARMAN.

Replies to Critics.

ROOSEVELT AND THE TRUSTS.

In the "Truth Seeker," New York, of Nov. 15, among editorial brevities appears the following paragraph:

"We notice in Lucifer some pretty wild writing against President Roosevelt. Mr. Harman accuses him of 'criminal neglect' in allowing the coal barons to violate the federal statutes. It would be much more to the point to show how Mr. Roosevelt could have interfered in Pennsylvania's affairs than to declaim against him. Mr. Roosevelt did all he could to get the coal strike settled. The commission has and can have no authority except as the parties to the arbitration agree to abide by its decision. The national government has powers delegated to it by the states, and the power to compel the coal barons to be decent toward the coal miners does not appear on the list. Neither does the power to compel the miners to work when they do not choose to."

REPLY.

With the man, Theodore Roosevelt, and with the motives that lie back of his acts, I have nothing whatever to do. "Judge not." "Who made thee a judge?" "Neither do I condemn thee." These sayings attributed to the Nazarene are excellent as mottoes to be remembered, but with the acts of public officials, public servants, it is a very different matter. The acts of a public official are public property; they concern all who are politically or morally responsible for the election or appointment of such public official, and are therefore proper subjects of criticism.

And so also with the man whose name appears as editor of the "Truth Seeker," and who shoots his barbed arrows from behind a breastwork—the impersonal "we," the autocratic, the arrogantly dogmatic, the despotic editorial "we." Many of the editorial writers and leading contributors to the columns of the New York "Truth Seeker" have treated Lucifer and its editor fairly, honorably, justly, fraternally. Most heartily do wish I could say as much for the personality represented by the editorial "we." If instead of a garbled sentence or two this champion of state-craft and of its chief exponent now in the Presidential White House, had quoted a characteristic paragraph or two from my brief editorial, and had told his readers where Lucifer is published and given the date of the number containing the matter criticized by him, I would have thanked him for the courtesy, and the necessity of this reply would have been mainly removed.

Personally, and on general principles, I do not object to criticism; on the contrary am always glad to have my friends—also my enemies if I have such—to tell me candidly and honestly what they think of my utterances. Criticism that enables us to see ourselves as others see us is perhaps the best of all educators. But criticism such as that I have just quoted is so evidently unfair and disingenuous that its value to the person criticized is microscopic, if it can be found at all. A careful search of Lucifer's columns for some weeks past fails to show with certainty what particular editorial it was to which Bro. Macdonald has reference. In No. 942, under date of Nov. 6, I spoke of Roosevelt's "failure to enforce the Federal Statutes in reference to 'trusts,'" and called attention to the oath that the Presidents of the United States must take, when entering upon their official duties. Among the laws Mr. Roosevelt has sworn to enforce is one called the Sherman anti-trust law, which law prohibits combinations of operators of coal mines with the owners or operators of transportation lines. That the operators of the Pennsylvania coal mines have habitually violated this law is conceded by all, if I mistake not, and that they have done so with the knowledge and connivance of the federal authorities is also notorious.

Bro. Macdonald wants to know how "Mr. Roosevelt could have interfered in Pennsylvania's affairs." If the federal statutes are violated in Pennsylvania, and if Pennsylvania is within the jurisdiction or limits of the federal government, it strikes me that THERE, if anywhere, is the place to punish violators of the federal statutes. Would the editor of the "Truth Seeker" have Roosevelt's Attorney General go to Canada, to Russia or to Abyssinia, in search of territory in which the United States laws have been or may be violated?

As to the dogmatic assertion that "Mr. Roosevelt did all he could to get the coal strike settled" I would briefly say, judging from my experience with and observation of politicians and their ways for more than half a century, Mr. Roosevelt could not have done LESS, if he did any thing at all in the matter, than appoint a commission of his friends to arbitrate the differences between the law-breaking barons and their protesting victims. This would naturally relieve him of the responsibility of failure to enforce the laws he is sworn to execute, and would give him the honor, the prestige, of being a friend to the real workers of the country and the opponent of the non-producing trusts.

One thing more, however, he has done to relieve himself of present responsibility, and that is to recommend a Constitutional Amendment to take the place of, or to serve as basis for, Congressional legislation restraining the almighty greed of the trusts. This constitutional amendment dodge is an old one, and is perfectly safe as a political subterfuge, and was doubtless anticipated or inserted by the friends of aristocratic privilege in the Constitutional convention of 1787, as a sure means of heading off the friends of liberty and justice and preventing them from ever obtaining any real protection from that political hodge-podge called the Federal Constitution. In order to secure an amendment to this document so much time is required by the terms of that document itself, and so many are the ways in which such amendments may be defeated by a rich and unscrupulous and yet small minority of citizens, that this alleged safety-valve against tyranny is practically useless; useless and vain except for purposes of political buncombe and jugglery to deceive and pacify those who suffer from concentration of power and wealth in the hands of a few individuals—as in the case of the poor coal-miners against the rich and soulless corporations who operate the people's mines and the people's railways.

* * *

In replying to the "Truth Seeker's" criticism I would by no means have it understood that I claim superior political wisdom. I am only a learner, an investigator, a challenger of old time superstitions. To my thinking the logic of "freethought"—of which modern cult "The Truth Seeker" claims to be par excellence the organ and exponent on this continent—to my thinking the logic of freethought is quite as much the foe of political government—government of man by man, as it is of religious or priestly rule, through belief in the existence of an anthropomorphic god, angels, devils, vicarious sacrifices etc. In what I now consider my CALLOW days, the transitional and sophomoric period of my mental development, I too was a devout believer in "the State," the "Government," as expounded by the leaders of the Republican party. But for more than twenty years I have said, as Ibsen has since put it:

"The State must go. That will be a revolution which will find me on its side. Undermine the idea of the State, set up in its place spontaneous action, and the idea that spiritual relationship is the only thing that makes for unity, and you will start the elements of a liberty that will be something worth possessing."

By the State I of course mean the body of old-time superstitious, man-made statutes, that compose the authoritarian political machine.

With those who want political rulership and who are willing to pay for it and allow others to accept or refuse—as in the case of religious governments, I can have no quarrel, but when political fakirs compel me to pay for the running of their machines—machines whose chief business is robbery and murder, I REBEL, and for much the same reasons that I rebel and refuse to be led by the nose by religious fakirs such as Alex. Dowie, Cyrus Teed, Wm. Booth, Archbishop Ireland, or by such religio-moralistic fakirs as Anthony Comstock, The New York Society for the Suppression of Vice, the leaders in the crusade for National Divorce, etc., etc.

Let those who want marriage—with or without divorce attachment, have it, at their own expense; let those who want political government of the Roosevelt and Hanna and Dingley and Grover Cleveland brand, have it, at their own expense. Let those who want their children to grow up in ignorance of the most momentous facts of human life, manage their children in their own way and at their own expense, but let all these fakirs and reactionaires towards medieval darkness keep their foul fingers out of the pockets and off the persons of such as have evolved to higher intellectual and to purer ethical planes.

MOTHERHOOD AND FATHERHOOD.

In his letter entitled "The Motherhood Trust" Chas. Thonger has correctly indicated the basic cause of the social evils that afflict the human race, namely IGNORANCE! But when he assumes that "there is in every community. . . . . one man and one only. . . . through whom the highest development may be inherited by posterity,"—that is to say, but one man who is best fitted to become the father of all the children of such community he ignores the teachings of all past experience, also the dictates of physiology as well as of psychology. DIVERSITY and not UNIFORMITY, is the tendency or trend of untrammeled Nature, in all her realms, and in none more than in that department of animal life known as the human. Unless compelled to do so by outside authority, paternal authority, or by force of economic, religious or societary influences, all the women of any given community would not choose one man for the father of their children. Temperamental differences alone would prevent such choosing. In mating for reproduction the prospective mother must IDEALIZE the father of her child, and must be drawn to him by what is termed a "grand passion," an overpowering, all-controlling attraction, in order that best results may be obtained.

That a comparatively few men in any community would in freedom be chosen for the fathers of all the children of that community, is doubtless true; true of all communities as they now exist, but this is largely if not chiefly owing to lack of freedom of motherhood in the past. Most men of today are the children of slave mothers, mothers who were not allowed to freely choose the fathers of their children, the result being that most men are APORTHOUS, poor apologies for men, rather than well developed specimens of the genus homo. What wonder then that the well-developed few should be elected for the tremendously important office or function of fatherhood.

As to the possible waste of virile forces, under freedom, by the best man or best men, Bro. Thonger forgets that with liberty comes the sense of responsibility for one's acts. The best man will be governed by altruistic considerations—a feeling of responsibility to the larger ego, the whole human race, rather than by narrowly egoistic selfishness.

The subject is much too large and important for exhaustive treatment at this time and place. Friend Thonger, as well as all other readers and helpers of Lucifer, are invited to send in their condensed thoughts upon the subject of freedom of motherhood and of fatherhood as factors in the evolution of a better race of human beings.

M. HARMAN.

Emma Goldman's Lectures.

In last week's issue mention was made of the closing of the doors of Handel Hall against the meeting arranged for Miss Goldman. The rent money had been accepted by the management, but when people in large numbers came at the appointed hour they were denied admission. The same thing occurred on Sunday Nov. 30. Aurora Hall had been engaged and the proper announcements made when, by the arbitrary and despotic interference of Police Captain Wheeler Miss Goldman was informed that she would not be allowed to speak in his 'district."

Another attempt will be made in another police district. Uhlich's Hall at 27 North Clark street, has been engaged, for Sunday Dec. 7, at 3 p. m., to protest against the adoption of Russian police methods in Chicago; at which time and place it is hoped the freedom loving and justice loving citizens of this great city will show by their presence and their voices that the "Spirit of '76" has not yet been entirely extinguished by the popular drift towards imperialism in the United States.

Miss Goldman has sent us a short article giving her experience with the police authorities in Chicago. Lack of time and space will prevent the publication of this article for this week. It will appear in our next.

Sunday December 14 Miss Goldman will lecture in Cleveland, Ohio, at Hungarian Hall, on the student and peasant riots in Russia.

M. HARMAN.

FRIENDS OF MATTIE E. HURSEN will be interested to know that she is now in Chicago, at the Home for Incurables, 56th St. and Ellis Ave., where she will be glad to see all her old friends or to receive letters from such as cannot call in person.

Honor to Thomas Paine.

EDITOR LUCIFER:—The Centennial of Thomas Paine's return to America was celebrated by a dinner in the same house in which he lodged while residing in Philadelphia, and where Washington used to visit him during the "times that tried men's souls," where they used to discuss matters of Statecraft—over bread and cheese. It was here in this modest dwelling that Paine wrote his reply to the Abbe Raynal's history of the Revolution.

A unique feature of the dinner was the napkin rings made from a tree growing upon Paine's grave at New Rochelle the gift of Captain G. W. Lloyd, and a candlestick once owned by Thomas Paine. The repast finished, Major F. L. Taylor the President being unable to be present on account of sickness, Thomas Phillips of New Jersey was selected to preside. Mr. Phillips was born at Paddington where Paine's iron bridge was exhibited. He has talked with men who worked in the foundry in which it was made.

Letters from members of the Association from Maine to California were read regretting their inability to be present. The company present were of all shades of religious belief—Atheists, Deists, Spiritualists and Agnostics.

A poem on Thomas Paine by John Prescott Guild was read by Anthony Baker. It has appeared in the "Torch of Reason" and "Investigator."

By request the candles were lighted and Thomas Phillips then read Common Sense from the original edition of 1776, which carried the audience back again into the dark days before the Revolution.

TOASTS.

May the Association live as long as a slanderer of Paine remains.

Our women helpers and Paine defenders—may they increase as the years roll on.

The heroines of Freethought of the Eighteenth and Nineteenth centuries—Mary Wollstonecraft, Francis Wright and Ernestine Rose, whose work made possible the writers and speakers of the Twentieth Century.

Only cowards forget their heroes.

Only the base their benefactors.—T. B. Wakeman.

I never miss an opportunity to show my appreciation of the character and work of the one man who was never guilty of diplomatic lies—Thomas Paine—M. H. Brigham. (Mass.)

Capt. G. W. Lloyd—Ring the Liberty Bell—again as it was when the Declaration of Independence was announced.

Frank Stephens—Paine made America a Republic; may it continue to be such as he labored to make it.

What a wonder that man (Paine) was!—Moncure D. Conway.

It would take the whole of Lucifer to tell what the Association has accomplished since it was organized.

Yours Sincerely, J. B. ELLIOTT, Secy.

3515 Wallace St., Philadelphia, Oct. 30, 1902.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Mrs. C. D., Selma, Ala.:—Your sample copy of Lucifer was received and I am particularly interested in the case of Ida C. Craddock. I enclose 25 cents for which please send me Lucifer for three months beginning with the first issue of November.

A. A., Cleveland, Ohio:—I intend to join a Socialist order next Sunday and perhaps may be able to help you to a few subscribers by distributing Lucifers where they will do the most good. Am sending you addresses to which you may send sample copies.

T. J., Lock Box 589, St. Joseph, Mo.:—Enclosed find $1 for Lucifer for the coming year. Our subscription expired some time ago. I thank you for having sent it right along. Mrs. J. and I want to obtain "Right Marital Living" and "The Wedding Night" by the lamented Mrs. Craddock. We want one of each for ourselves and perhaps may want one or two more for wedding presents. Also find 15 cents for forty back numbers of Lucifer.

W. B. J., Monroe Center, Mich.:—For the enclosed $1 please send Karezza to accompanying address. Can I get Ida C. Craddock's "Right Marital Living" and what would it cost? When will come the time we shall put an end to Comstockism? Years ago when Bennett edited "The Truth Seeker" Comstock was practicing his diabolical work, and a so called just God has allowed this man to live and persecute many an innocent person.

Mattie B. Coy, Monson, Maine:—Enclosed you will find $1.25 for which please send me "Karezza" and credit my subscription to date. Please stop my copy of Lucifer—not because I don't want it, for I value it highly, and bless you for publishing it. But I live in the house with my sister and she has Lucifer, and I thought I might do more good by buying a book now and then, than by subscribing for the paper. I feel sorry to stop it, for the principles it teaches are what is needed to make this grand land of America a perfect home.

Trial Trip Subscriptions.

For one dollar we will send Lucifer ten weeks to eight different addresses, and to the one sending us the list, any one of the following books:

The Origin of the Family, Private Property and the State. By Frederick Engels, 217 pages, handsomely bound in cloth. Postage, 6 cents.

The Slavery of Our Times. By Leo Tolstoi. With portrait of author, 186 pages. Blue cloth; silver lettering. Postage 8 cents.

Nora: A Doll's House, and Ghosts. The two dramas bound together. Olive cloth; red lettering. 108 pages. Postage 8 cents. This offer will, we hope, induce our friends to extend Lucifer's circulation materially.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer the Light Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

Forty copies of Lucifer, no two alike, of 1901 will be sent to any address for 15 cents. Nine bundles for $1. We are anxious to place these papers where they will do good. Please let us have your orders soon.

FOR CHRISTMAS.

Just fits a letter. THE RESURRECTION OF ADAM; the sin(?) of Adam and Eve and what came of it. By Mabel Gifford, D. L. S., 15 cents.

HERE'S HEALTH FOR YOU! Simple mental and physical exercises. By Rejoice O. Mann (Mabel Gifford), 25 cents.

CHRISTMAS CAT BOOK. By Mildred Norman, the Children's Story-Writer. Greeting on cover. Artistic make-up. Amusing to children and grown-ups. Teaches kindness to animals and the care of them. 17 original half-tone ill., 25 cents. Sold by Mabel Gifford, Blue Hill Ave, L. Mattapan, Mass.

The Ladies' "PERFECT" Sanitary Protector.

The only Sanitary Protector on the market made of pure rubber and perfectly soft and pliable; will last for years; can be worn with perfect comfort, can be adjusted to any size, no canvas, no cloth, but pure rubber.

This is something that no woman can afford to be without. Perfectly sanitary, comfortable, indispensable and safe.

Price reduced to $1. Order of L. Harman, 500 Fulton St. Chicago.

A Private Maternity Home

Or Lying-in Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired.

For particulars and terms give description of case, and address.

Suite 63-119 LaSalle St., Chicago Ill. C. S. WOOD, M. D.

946.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author.

The Sex Passion.
Man, the Ungrown.
Woman, the Serf.
Woman in Freedom
Marriage: a Retrospect.
Marriage: a Forecast.
The Free Society.
Some remarks on the early rise and sex worships.
Notes—On the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population.

The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. Price, $1.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

"Kipling is Dead"

This is the title of a strong, critical article in the "Goose-Quill," the new unconventional literary magazine that is making such an unprecedented sensation on account of its virile letter-press and audacious illustrations. If you like the brain-annihilating slush-and-gush magazines, you won't like the "Goose-Quill." Every number's a verbal volcano. Interesting articles in recent numbers are:

"Schley, Dewey, Miles and Roosevelt" (a critical comparison.)
"The Rage for Leg-Literature."
"Kipling is Dead"
"The Truth About Robert Louis Stevenson."
"Rossetti's Heart-rending Poem, 'Jenny'" (reprint)
"About That Man in East Aurora"
"Oscar Wilde's Ballade of Reading Gaol" (reprint)
Also full-page caricatures of Hall Caine and Zangwill
"—— scent Rubbish" (Book Reviews)
"Why Chicago is a Hell Upon Earth."
"The Fleshly School of Poetry."
"Sir John Suckling's Audacious 'Ballad on a Wedding'" (Reprint)

The "Goose Quill" is for sale everywhere in Chicago price 10 cents each, or a copy will be sent postpaid on receipt of 15 cents in stamps. Address, the Managers, The Goose-Quill, Chicago, Ill.

NOTE—The subscription to the "Goose Quill" for one year (12 issues) is $1 and the time to subscribe is now, because those subscribing before January 1 will receive the above mentioned numbers free.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 75c; paper 25c.

ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $2.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

A TALK OF THE STRASBURG GEESE. R. S. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strasburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. H. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Elmile Zola) 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.

BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth, $1.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Condemned, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 31 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 626 pages, 10c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

DARWIN, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. G. Somme. 178 pages. 50c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DIGGING FOR RED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James H. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations. 47 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 2-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $3.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 10c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian religion has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 360 pages, etc. Postage, 5c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Jamieson and David Overmyer. 25c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 15c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Rita Dunbar Kelso. 519 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 256 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES: or, Life in Socialand. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 37 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Voltaire, and Voltaire. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

KORADINE. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us not put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1896, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also: Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III. (1896). Cloth, $1.25. Postage, 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large size, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 378 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyrants; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 10c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Tradition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, R. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disrunted religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c, paper, 25c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; sparkling newer; latest version. Paper, 15c. tation; with original introduction; sparkling newer; latest version. Paper, 15c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Oxford Northcote. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Hypatia, the Little Lady Professor. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "two line," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $2.50; all in one volume, $1.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 252 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle-edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 50c.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Marietta), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 207 pages. 25c.

THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Witches and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. 75 Illustrations. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 181 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as man have freed themselves from medieval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and asceticism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 96 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 10c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 25c.

THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1761, quoted by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuit craft and is a plain index to the underhand working of that order against the welfare of individuals and society. 10c.

THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 10c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Velvet Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Winne). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $2.25.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Dowling. 15c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let no cause to be ashamed of what makes us men, of stirring arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 3, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Proclamation of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. "It is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman does read it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now pagan. 10c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VI., No. 48. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, DEC. 11, E. M. 302. {C. E. 1902.} WHOLE No. 947

JUSTIFICATION.

She has uttered her heart to them all. The warm maiden moon,
The stars gleaming white in the zenith when night is at noon,
The clear dawning flame, and the sunset-sky rivers which show
Rare gold and red beauty and purple that follow and flow,
Cool depths of dim woods, and crystal-voiced hesitant streams,
Blown clouds in the sky that wander like dreamers of dreams,
Wide emerald fields made glorious with blossoms of flowers,
The hills in the dim purple distance, the zephyrs and showers,
Have heard her love's story; by day and deep in the night
She has breathed to the world all her hope, her desire, her delight.

The love of a heart is the boon that she joys to possess;
The love of a heart, and the kisses and every caress.
The union of all within all, and the service and meeds,
The whole of love's uttermost gifts and rich rapturous deeds
Are hers, in life's springtime; untainted, unbroken; the whole
That a soul full of love and of truth can confer on a soul.
It is rapture; a joy unconfined, and that needs must be sung;
A glory of hope and of faith from a heart that is young;
A love that but claims what it gives that the life lamp may burn—
An equal abandon of life unto love in return.

She has uttered her heart to the earth, and all pure things that live;
She has spoken her soul, and besought these responses to give.
The sunlight has blessed her; the moonlight has kissed her white brow;
The trees sigh delight to her message; the wild blossoms bow;
In the vales, on the hills, all voices are gladness in throng,
And her purpose is sealed by the sound of sweet birds in their song.
Naught has she invoked but has heard her, and answered her so
With a voice or an aspect most fair; and she surely doth know
That what seems to her sweetest of sweet things a glad soul may tell,
Is at one with all beauty that lives; and she says, "It is well."

She yields for a gift all she is to him finding her fair,
A splendor of longing and courage, her spirit stands bare,
And confesses itself; clear discerning, the while it is fed,
All shapes of all sorrow as nothing thrust from it and fled;
While the fervors of passion grow strong and consume as with flame
Dim darkening doubts and the shadowy substance of shame.
All sound she deems music; all bitterness changes to sweet;
All souls seem as one, and all pathways grow smooth to her feet.
Good fills the whole world, around her, beneath, and above;
Joy melts into life, and the substance of life into love.

WILLIAM FRANCIS BARNARD.

George Macdonald on the Craddock Case.

I should not suppose that anything but a total lack of sensibility could have spared Anthony Comstock the remorse of a murderer when he heard of the death of Ida Craddock; for her blood is on his hands as certainly as that of the woman who defends her person at the expense of her life is on the hands of the ravishing brute. But Comstock's talk since the tragedy shows that he has no realization of the fact. Between him and the man of sensibility there is the difference that marks "the boundary line between the beast and man." A dog having chased a kitten and kroken its back, looks up at his owner, wagging his tail, expecting praise. He does not know that he is a dog. Comstock drives a woman to suicide, and then whines because some of his owners, the clergy do not praise him. He does not know that he is a comstock.

—

I had thought out some comments on the trial of Mrs. Craddock, but, being slow in the matter, I did not write them down. They have been anticipated by Mr. E. C. Walker in an article contributed to Lucifer. It was a solemn travesty of justice—the judge on the bench assuming to say for the people that the indicted pamphlet was criminal, and then passing it to the jury for that body to determine whether the defendant had mailed it as she admitted that she had. I can imagine the jurymen soberly turning the leaves over and looking at both sides to discover corroborative evidence of the fact that, as stated by the prisoner, she had deposited the same in the United States mails; and then returning a verdict of guilty. Guilty of what? Of mailing a pamphlet, of the character of which the jury would not presume to judge. It might have been a book of directions for playing krokinole; their verdict would have to be "Guilty" if the jury believed Mrs. Craddock when she said she mailed it. And supposing the judge had decided that the work was innocent, there was no way for the jury to acquit. The jury must confine itself to the question whether Mrs. Craddock deposited it in the mails; and she admitted that she did. Why was the book given to the jury at all, to the peril of the juryman's morals, when the admisson of the defense and the opiaion of the court had already convicted the prisoner? The proceeding was so unbelievably idiotic that it cannot be burlesque, and it defies ridicule by being itself more ridiculous than anything that words can picture.

The agent of the Vice Society has in his repertory of transparent fictions the story of a woman who found her daughter in possession of Mrs. Craddock's "Wedding Night," and went into hysterics. But are prisons built and courts established to prevent hysterical women from exercising their gift? How sternly, then, should justice deal with a person turning loose a mouse among the female population? Who would have been responsible if some woman, with a sense of humor, being present at this trial, had yielded to the comicalities of the proceedings and laughed herself into hysterics? Seriously, are hysterics comparable to death? Admitting that Mrs. Craddock caused another woman to become hysterical it is not charged that she hounded one of that sex to her grave.

—

I read the "Wedding Night" a while ago. In its way it should prove as informing as a cook-book in the housekeeping department. I cannot say how much it would add to the theoretical knowledge of young people of today, whose general ignorance of such matters as it treats of I believe parents are prone to exaggerate. Instinct and the imagination of adolescent youth make them wise, and experience does little but dispel illusions. Nevertheless, knowledge is fortified, good inclinations strengthened, and the imagination cooled by sober, scientific reading; and I should judge that the circulation of the work would lessen the number of marriages that prove to be the funerals of bright anticipations. Certainly, if there is as much blindness among young people as some of us fondly believe, it is time that a little consciousness was introduced. Pious souls find no fault with St. Paul for substituting intelligence for the ignorant devotions of the Athenians.

I have not seen any remarks about the wickedness of suicide in connection with the death of Mrs. Craddock. She had served a term of imprisonment, and saw a longer one in prospect, which she was convinced would be fatal. Under these conditions life, not death, became the king of terrors. She preferred illuminating gas to the atmosphere of a cell because it spared her suffering, and there is no bodily pain in the grave. Whatever doubts she may have had about another world—of that she seems to have had none—she knew it could not be worse than this while the Vice Society exists here. As to her sanity, I cannot deem a person insane who chooses the devil before Anthony Comstock.

I had a little conversation with Mrs. Craddock just after her Blackwell's Island experience, and asked her if she did not think she had better join the veteran corps. I spoke cheerfully, and said I regretted to see youth and beauty sacrificed to the vice-hunting ogre. She replied that, although she enjoyed living, she would that her life might be turned to water and poured out for cleansing the lives of others. I saw that she was every inch a martyr, and devoted in the old sacrificial sense. For one, I am grateful to her. It is good for us that such people live nobly and die bravely to inspire us with a little more earnestness and seriousness. When I think of her calmly and without agitation sitting at the typewriter, with all her thoughts in order, thumping out her last words on the machine, correcting the sheets with a pen, and then lying down in the belief that she died as she had lived, that the cause nearest her heart might gain new sympathizers, I see how to her there was truth in the lines of Halleck's apostrophe to death:

> Thy voice sounds like a prophet's word,
> And in its hollow tones are heard
> The thanks of millions yet to be.
> —"Truth Seeker," N. Y., 11–15, '02.

Free Speech in Chicago.

EDITOR LUCIFER:—For the benefit of those of your readers who still believe that freedom of speech is a reality, and that America is the freest country on earth, permit me to give you a few details of my experience with the Chicago police.

I came to this city to acquaint the American public with the conditions in Russia, and to raise funds for the unfortunate victims of the Russian knout, many of whom have been flogged to death, while others have been sent to long terms of imprisonment, simply because they dared to ask for bread for the suffering Russian peasants.

To my amazement I found two hundred policemen—some of them high officials, at my first meeting; men who came not out of sympathy with the starving Russian people but who were there to take me to the nearest police station should I not meet their own conception of what liberty means.

O Liberty! poor outraged, degraded Liberty. Fallen indeed art thou from thy once lofty height when every petty policeman can soil thy pure form with his foul hands, and trample in the mire of Chicago's streets thy beauteous lineaments.

Since that first meeting the police have followed me from hall to hall, threatening me with arrest if I dared to say anything against the American government. "Say what you please about Russia, but you must not attack our institutions," said Captain Campbell to me at a meeting on the West side.

Another little Tzar, Captain Wheeler, went his colleague one better: "I will not have Miss Goldman speak in my district," and prohibited the meeting that was to take place at Aurora Turn Hall, corner of Ashland Ave. and Division street.

Surely there must be something wrong with the American Institutions of today; something terribly black and corrupt, if they cannot stand the light of criticism; if they can thrive only when physical force is used to defend them against the light of free discussion.

This is not the first time that meetings for free discussion have been prohibited here; not the first time speakers have been shadowed from place to place. On previous occasions the Chicago authorities have had to give some excuse for such interference. They have had to plead either public excitement, too radical utterance on the part of the speaker, or some similar excuse as justification of their acts.

What excuse will they give now?

What excuse will the self-styled Jeffersonian-Democratic mayor of Chicago give for the acts of his subordinates?

There is now no public excitement; no radical utterances made—at least not in reference to "our own sacred government."

What other conclusion can be reached, or inference drawn, than that America is fast being Russianized, and that unless the American people awake from the pleasant dream into which they have been lulled by the strains of "My Country 'tis of Thee," etc., we shall soon be obliged to meet in cellars, or in darkened back rooms with closed doors, and speak in whispers lest our next door neighbors should hear that free-born American citizens dare not speak in the open; that they have sold their birthright to the Russian Tzar disguised by the coat of an American policeman?

Is it not time that SOMETHING BE DONE?

Is it not time that all advanced people unite in protesting against such brutal invasion? all, at least, who have enough Americanism left in them to maintain the right of freedom o speech, of press and of assembly?

Or, are they going to wait until the number of victims of suppression increase to legions—as in Russia today?

Chicago, Nov. 30, 1902. EMMA GOLDMAN.

What Is "Free Secession?"

From Comrades Lloyd and Morton we learn of two sorts of Socialists, "Free Socialists" and another sort not named, but "Tyranny Socialists" might be inferred. I note the benevolence of these comrades in allowing that the latter sort mean well enough but their logic is faulty; they advocate tyranny unknowingly. They will not permit of "free secession" and the necessary land.

In 1880 the Socialists in the Greenback Convention offered but one resolution, which was approximately as follows: "Resolved, that land, light, air and water are free gifts of Nature to all mankind; any law or custom that permits any one to monopolize these gifts, we earnestly condemn and seek to abolish." Mr. Lloyd should not object to this, and it has never been repudiated. Within a year or two a faction left the Socialist party of that time because not enough freedom was taught, and this faction became known as Anarchists. Some of them advocated absolute liberty of action, unlimited by any sort of rules, laws or codes, even to taking of life. "Murder is Righteous" at least one of them was fond of saying.

There may be Socialists who would not permit an individual to secede and hie away to the woods, but I never met one. Those I have met are occupied in seeking the law of relations where association is accepted as natural and right. They may debate at times with those mental giants who state the abstract law of liberty but never apply it to human affairs.

With many individualists "free secession" means the right to secede but remain in a collectivity, refusing to bear the burdens but continuing to enjoy collective benefits in the way of pavements, light, fire protection, etc. They may contribute but must not be taxed, basing their position on the idea that the rights of the individual are greater than the rights of the majority; that is the rights of one are greater than the rights of many, for if he use a pavement built by many he is consuming their product just as any other form of privilege would permit him to do.

Speaking of logic, I think the Anarchist who is sure that common ownership of collectively used wealth logically leads to tyrannical interference in personal matters, will not stand examination much better than the Socialist who advocates despotism without knowing it. I mean "Ironicus."

BRASSICUS.

Philosophy of Socialism.

I am surprised to read a letter from Albert Chavannes in last issue of this paper which indicates that the good brother does not comprehend the Socialist philosophy. He mistakes the facts.

Under Socialism every citizen would have a home, for all that is "privately used would be privately owned." This would be impossible under the conditions Chavannes points out where inheritance, wage slavery and land monopoly are allowed. "Limiting land ownership" would be about as much of a remedy as limiting the size and weight of a foot-pad's weapon.

Dr. Herron and others have shown that the wages system is in fact a form of slavery, and that chattel slavery could not today hold its own in competition with wage slavery.

The very fact that Bro. Chavannes wants larger wages than others who may be toiling just as faithfully at his side shows plainly that he is a long way from the true brotherhood spirit. The trades unions have already demonstrated the feasibility of a uniform wage scale. Under Socialism industry will be conducted for the best good of all and for the greatest happiness of all. The state will go out of fashion and will exist only as a bureau of information.

Strange to say the features of Capitalism that the good brother would retain are the elements which today more than all others are filling the world with misery and strife and war.

The fact is capitalism has ceased to be decent, moral or humane. The wage system is at best an exploiting system. "It is no fit system for free men," says Dr. Herron. I believe that any person who has shown as much heart and conscience in the writing of several books as Bro. Chavannes has shown only needs to be fully and correctly informed as to the true Socialist philosophy in order to accept it. He holds a false idea of what Socialism really is, so opposes it. These books give a correct idea: Socialism and Slavery, Hyndman; or, any books by the following authors: Liebknecht, Engels, Vail, Lafarque.

HENRY E. ALLEN.

P. S.: If the above authors fail to convince the good brother then as a last resort "Shrouds with Pockets, A Life Sketch," by the writer might be tried. This book is promised to come from the press Dec. 10, and is guaranteed to either kill or cure.

H. E. A.

Organization, the Watchword!

A new liberal fraternal organization will shortly be launched at Portland, Oregon. Representatives from surrounding communities and radical clubs met in Portland, Oregon, on November 29, 1902 and perfected a temporary organization, selected committees and adjourned subject to the call of the chair, as it is the desire of those participating to hear from all earnest workers for the cause before effecting permanent organization.

We therefore extend a cordial invitation to all readers of Lucifer to write to the chairmen of the various committees and give them the benefit of advice and suggestions that will make this organization a grand and glorious movement for the cause of liberty.

The idea expressed by the delegates is to pattern our order after the plans of the Independent Order of Forresters, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, Fraternal Order of Eagles; and other similar fraternal societies whose local lodges pay sick and distress benefits together with funeral expenses. This will give our membership a surer interest in our order and arouse greater and united efforts for our fundamental principles.

The fundamental principles of our order will be the promulgation of all liberal and radical ideas and protection to our membership agitating the same. We aim for a free press and free speech. Had Ida C. Craddock had an organization of this kind behind her she would have been saved years of persecution that caused her untimely death.

We want earnest workers everywhere to act as organizers and unite all liberal minded men and women in local lodges in each city or hamlet.

The work of organization will be pushed just as rapidly as we hear from sincere men and women who are working for the cause of outraged humanity, who will aid in this good work by giving us the benefit of their ideas for our constitution, a name for our order and all other suggestions needed for a liberal minded modern fraternal order.

RALPH C. CLYDE, Chairman.
Chairman Committee on Organization and State of Order. P. O. Box 309, Portland, Oregon.

MARCUS SUGARMAN, Secretary.
Chairman Committee on Constitution, Oregon City, Oregon.

ALBERT A. PRICE,
Chairman Committee Selection of Name. P. O. Box 273. Oregon City, Oregon.

First Impressions of Home.

On the evening of Nov. 7, I landed from the little steamer Tyconda on the floating dock which rides serenely on the waters of Joe's Bay, opposite the Anarchist colony of Home, Wash. To those who are acquainted with the climate here it will be unnecessary to mention that it was raining a little. The location is charming; a gentle slope between the forest and the sea; on one side the tall firs stand like sentinels to guard against further invasion, while away to the front stretch the placid waters of Puget Sound, one of the prettiest sheets of water on earth.

A lovelier spot could not have been chosen for the abiding place of Truth, Justice and Liberty. I was surprised at the amount of work that had been done since this place was settled.

The people here are the most hospitable and friendly that I ever had the good fortune to meet. They say "Blood is thicker than water;" I believe congeniality of mind is thicker yet. If the comrades here like me one half as much as I do them, we stand a chance of being on very good terms. We are trying here to live up to the ideals of Anarchy and freelove; but theory is one thing, practice is another. A few days after my arrival here a twelve year old boy came crying down the street; he had been grabbed by the neck and roughly shaken by a man who does not believe in the doctrine of force, because the boy had not returned a boat to its proper place. Another Anarchist friend of mine could not control a mischievous child of five years who threw clubs at the door and indulged in other childish pranks, without giving him a sound spanking with a board. And another comrade, who is one of our best declaimers on the right of free speech has been known to command children in his care to "shut up" and to enforce such commands by superior strength.

Without doubt there is a great deal more kindness and love shown to children here than in the average community of its size. A command to a child is the exception, a request is the rule.

The display of affection between grown-up people is quite customary. I have seen more kissing in the few days I have been in this colony than I would see outside in a year, and the way some of them have of going at it I should judge it was real good.

There is a whispered undercurrent of opinion that a few have not found freelove in practice quite as pleasant as in theory. Perhaps it is true that we expect too much of each other; at any rate we know what people shouldn't do who "live in glass houses."

A few years ago I was an avowed and outspoken freelover (I am yet). A sweet young woman and I got married, intending to live a free life. Within a few weeks the "green-eyed monster" took complete possession of me—I don't know what the Devil took possession of her—and for the short time we stayed together I continued without much effort to make every one around me exceedingly miserable, including myself. For a year or so after that I did not have much to say about freelove, but I did considerable thinking. Because a man makes a fool of himself once is no reason to suppose he will repeat it all his life. "Though thou slay us yet will we trust in thee." If the experience of the past is any guide for the future, I hope to say in years to come—kind Fate, that drifted my storm-tossed weather-beaten bark to a pleasant anchorage in Joe's Bay.

Lake Bay, Wash., 11-17, '02. J. J. LASON.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Experiences at Harmony Home.

In his Address to the Devil Robert Burns wrote:

> But fare you weel, auld Nickie-ben!
> O wad ye take a thought an men'!
> Ye aiblins might—I dinna ken—
> Still hae a stake—
> I'm wae to think upo' your den,
> Ev'n for your sake.

In these characteristic lines we may see, as I think, the basic cause of the very pronounced heterodoxy of Robert Burns. His kindly sympathetic nature could not endure the thought of perpetual purposeless suffering, nor of everlasting vengeful punishment—as taught, even at this late stage of evolutionary progress by the vast majority of Christian creeds.

Burns wanted all wrong-doers, including the orthodox devil himself, to be allowed a "stake"—a chance to "take thought and mend"—that is, a chance to learn from experience to avoid the errors, the mistakes, the crimes, into which ignorance, momentary impulse or prolonged and uncontrollable passion—insanity—may have led them.

* * *

Believing this to be the true philosophy of human life, human conduct, I will utilize the mistakes into which inexperience and misdirection led the co-operators, myself of course included, at the place called "Harmony Home," near Benton Harbor, Michigan, during the summer of the year three hundred and two, of the Brunonian Era.

As said in No. 935 I think the failure of this co-operative experiment, so far as it can rightly be called a failure, was owing mainly to,

First, Inattention to little things.

Second, Too much Socialism.

The word Socialism is here used in its narrow, its restricted, its unscientific sense, rather than in its general, its philosophic or truly scientific meaning. Socius means a companion; hence all who live in families, in communities, in political or religious organizations, in SOCIETY of any kind—are socialists.

The Morgans, the Rockefellers, the Goulds and other magnates of the financial and commercial world, are as truly Socialistic as are the members of the latest organized club of wage-earners under rules laid down by the leaders of the organization calling itself par excellence the "Socialist Party."

All government officials from President to Constable are socialists. All churchmen of high and low degree, also all church women, are socialists, no matter how vigorously they may repel the charge. Hence the attempt to appropriate and monopolize the term socialist by a comparatively small and modern political organization is as futile, as illogical, as bigoted, as sophomoric, as arrogant and self-conceited as is the attempt to appropriate and monopolize the name "Christian" by John Alexander Dowie, or by the followers of that other ambitious Scotch sectary and inordinately egotistic hierarch, Alexander Campbell.

* * *

In the broader, truer, sense—the etymologic sense, I claim to be a socialist. I am also an individualist, in the true, the etymologic, the scientific sense. My individualism and socialism are interdependent—neither can get along without the other. Without the socialistic act of my mother and father at the moment of conception, there would have been no ego, such as now pencils this line. Without a persistent and continuous fight for individualized existence on my part, from the moment of conception onward, there never would have been the personality now and here known as Moses Harman.

The fight for separate or individualized existence is commonly known as egoism or egoistic selfishness, and is generally condemned by moralists as wrong, unless kept well in check by the opposite principle or motive commonly called altruism, or sympathetic care for others.

To attain or practicalize the proper balance, the normal or healthful balance between egoism and altruism, or between individualism and socialism, is the most difficult and yet most important of all problems pertaining to human life and human progress. To contribute a little, though ever so little, towards the practical solution of this ages-old problem, this race-old problem, was one if not the chief object in view when planning my summer outing in the famous Michigan Fruit Belt.

* * *

After this somewhat prolix introductory I proceed to say that the first serious mistake was the failure to provide myself with a horse and vehicle for the accommodation of visitors and co-operators. This mistake was a socialistic blunder, pure and simple. Wishing to economize in all ways I thankfully accepted the offer of an enthusiastic brother socialist who said,

"Tell your Chicago friends that I will see that they get free transportation from and to the boat-landing at Benton Harbor."

I had spent a week or more in the vicinage before leasing the house, and had been thoroughly charmed and delighted with the uniform friendliness of manner, the cordiality, simplicity and sociability of almost everybody I met. When walking along the road it was a common experience to be invited to ride—by women as well as men. The farmers and fruit-growers seemed all to have buggies or spring-wagons and fat and sleek horses. The roads were excellent; the distance from the Benton Harbor street car line to the house I was leasing was less than three miles—only a pleasant and healthful walk for an active pedestrian, with the almost certainty of being invited to ride, in case he or she should tire of walking. All these considerations suggested to me the uselessness of buying a horse and wagon for the four or five months we would probably need them.

Illustrative of the vexations consequent upon my failure to take a horse and vehicle with me from Chicago to the farm, and as a fit comment upon my text—"Inattention to little things and too much Socialism"—I will give just one realistic instance out of many that could very truthfully be related:

After a short visit to the Home in the Fruit Belt two of our Chicago lady friends wanted transportation to the boat-landing. Having made several fruitless efforts nearer home I finally succeeded in getting a horse and buggy of neighbor Kelley. On returning the same to the owner I asked the charge.

"Suit yourself," was the reply—a very good and characteristic answer from the socialistic standpoint; as much as to say:

"It is a matter of indifference to me. If you want to pay me anything, all right. If not convenient to pay, it is all right anyway. I do not make my living by letting my horse and buggy and can afford to be neighborly."

Now it so happened that I had spent nearly all my loose cash and had but twenty-five cents in pocket. Consciously or unconsciously I thought and felt something like this:

"When living in the country I never, or scarcely ever, charged a neighbor for the use of my horse and buggy. Brother Kelley's horse has nothing to do; it is probably a kindness to give him a little exercise on the smooth road; and yet the harnessing and unharnessing is worth SOMETHING." I remembered also that on a former occasion when there was a prospect that a friend would need conveyance to the Harbor I had asked Bro. Kelley what the charge would be for a horse and buggy. "Fifty cents," was the reply—this to include a coachman or driver. So I thought, as no coachman was required in this case one half the regular charge will probably satisfy him. So I said,

"It so happens that I am short of change this evening. Here is all I have"—offering him one of Uncle Sam's quarters—"will this answer the purpose?"—or words to that effect.

Taking the proffered coin he answered, somewhat hesitatingly as I thought,

"Yes, I guess so."

As I now see it, and as the sequel proved, I made a serious blunder just here. Proper attention to little things should have prevented the offer of a sum so SMALL as twenty-five cents. The proper reply to the socialistic and indifferent "suit yourself" would have been,

"I have practically no money now, but will pay your usual charge, when I get the change." This would have been plain straight-forward individualism and would have prevented the most regrettable scene witnessed in Michigan. As soon as my back was turned my hitherto cordial and obliging neighbor began a socialistic fire in the rear; so I was informed just as I was leaving for Chicago. Following the tactics of Teddy the Strenuous when he brought down the Spaniard by a well directed shot in the back, Bro. Kelley began telling all his neighbors what a small mean man I was. Judging from his manner on taking the quarter that his "suit yourself" didn't mean what the words would naturally imply, I offered to pay him an additional quarter the next time we met, which offer was, however, very promptly and decidedly refused, but without a word of explanation, for such refusal. Later, and as I was getting ready to leave the neighborhood I made one more attempt, in language like this:

"Friend Kelley, I would feel much better pleased if you would take something more for the use of the horse and buggy I had of you."

"I want nothing from you," was the short and incisive answer. "You and I have had one deal and we'll never have another."

Not being apt at repartee I did not reply to this palpable Hiberuicism by saying, as I should have done,

"When I ask you for another deal it will be time enough to refuse me. I am now asking only the privilege of straightening out a former deal that seems to have not been satisfactory to you."

Surprised at his language and manner I asked for an explanation.

"I mean what I say," said he, with increasing energy and wrath. "When a man deceives me once he will never have a chance to do so again. When you asked for the horse and buggy you said you wanted it for a couple of lady friends who were able to pay for it. Then to come to me with a poor mouth and say you had no money—that was enough for me. I will have nothing more to do with you!"

In rep'y I said, in substance, that while I had no recollection of telling him the ladies could or would pay, yet admitting that his statement was correct it is certainly never too late to correct mistakes, or to mend what is amiss, and so I urged him to take fifty cents, seventy five cents, or one dollar, if that would make the matter right, but NO! The more I urged the more angry he became, and so, to avoid being ordered out of his house I withdrew, with as little exhibition of resentment as possible, for the very uncivil and ungentlemanly treatment I had received, and with the thought uppermost in mind that Bro. Kelley must have had good orthodox training in Christian theology, the creed that will not allow a repentant sinner to make restitution or compensation, after the final sentence, "Depart from me ye cursed," etc.

* * *

As before said, this episode in my recent Michigan experience is now recalled for the purpose of emphasizing or clenching a double lesson, namely:

First, Be careful of the little things.

It is the "little foxes that spoil the vines;" the OLD foxes take the fruit but do not spoil the vines that yield the fruit. It is the little things of life, the every day duties, more than large affairs, that make for success or failure.

Second, Beware of socialism in the business affairs of life.

Socialism, as commonly understood, keeps no books; no accounts; makes no settlements. WHY SHOULD IT?

Everybody is sure of a home and a sufficient support. Why then should we keep tab on every little transaction, such as the hire of a horse, the number of hours spent in labor for others, or why should we inquire whether the work done in those hours be faithfully and efficiently performed?

The owner of the vineyard in the parable was doubtless a good socialist, a benevolent and sympathetic if not public-spirited citizen, when he paid as much to him who worked one hour in the cool of the evening as he did to him who had "borne the burden and heat" of ten or twelve hours toil in a hot climate.

The time MAY come in the dim and distant future when book-keeping will be no longer necessary; when skill and diligence will no longer be factors in estimating the worth of the worker; when he who hates work on general principles and who habitually shirks his equitable share of work will be rewarded and welcomed equally with him who loves his work, loves it for the work's sake and for the things of use and beauty it produces; who loves it also for the subjective, the character-building effect of work faithfully and lovingly performed; but, for one, I confess to no great desire to live to see that day.

There are many who call themselves socialists who would more truthfully be called individualists, co operating individualists, or perhaps voluntary co-operators. Names are often misleading, and among all misleading names, thought-confusing names, I know of none more confusing and misleading than the names "Socialist" and "Socialism."

* * *

If my talks on this subject, and my object lessons drawn from practical life, help a little to clarify this old-time problem, and to show how individualism and socialism may be made to harmonize and work together for the common good of all, I shall think myself well rewarded for any labor and expense in time and money it may cost to write and to print these "Heart to Heart Talks," to and with the readers of Lucifer.

M. HARMAN.

"Modern Phases of Anarchism."

This was the subject of Emma Goldman's lecture at Uhlich's Hall, this city, yesterday, Sunday Dec. 7. Elsewhere in this issue will be found a short statement of her late experiences with the Chicago police, by Miss Goldman herself. On opening the meeting Chairman Brown said that Chief O'Neil had stated that if Miss Goldman had been prevented from speaking in Chicago it was without orders from him. So then it would appear that in suppressing freedom of speech the police captains had acted without authority other than that of their own arbitrary and despotic wills.

In her opening remarks Miss Goldman said the speech to which she was then about to give utterance was the same that had been advertised far and near by the public press, also from pulpit and platform, as that which caused the killing of President McKinley.

Being slightly deaf I did not hear all that was said by the distinguished speaker, and as we go to press each week on Monday, a report of this historic address, and of the discussion to which its recital gave rise, will have to be postponed till next week.

On Saturday Dec. 6, a farewell reception, followed by music and dancing, was tendered the speaker, on her return from Milwaukee, at Ruel's Hall on West Twelfth street, this city, which seems to have been a very enjoyable social function to a pretty large section of Miss Goldman's many Chicago friends.

On the way to her home in New York Miss Goldman will speak, Dec. 15, in Cleveland, Ohio, the city in which was first delivered the address entitled "Modern Phases of Anarchism," and which is still currently believed, by those who know nothing of the facts, to have instigated Leon Czolgosz to fire the fatal shot at the breast of the nation's chief executive, September 6, 1901. M. HARMAN.

THE WORKMEN'S EDUCATIONAL CLUB'S Lecture and Reading Room 278 Blue Island Ave., is now open every evening, six to ten o'clock—Saturdays and Sundays all day. Lectures every Saturday evening at 8 o'clock. Saturday eve Dec 13, M. Harman will speak on Some Social Problems that should interest All Workers in the Great Human Hive.

All are welcome.

Varietism.

I think that "Carrie A" in number 934 probably expresses the feelings of many at the present day in regard to varietism. We would be much indebted to her if she would explain the ideal of exclusive love, and how it can be carried out by persons who are neither much above nor much below ordinary human beings. Must this exclusive devotion be "first love" on both sides? for certainly no subsequent variety can compare to the change involved in relinquishing the first love, yet this is an experience that nearly every one of us, except those of a very unenthusiastic temperament, has to go through.

The importance of first love in the life of the individual seems as great as that of "love's coming of age" in the history of the race; yet this crisis is certainly embittered by the ideal of exclusive love, so often preached and so seldom practised.

I know a man who was hopelessly in love for the eight best years of his youth—without any dishonorable trifling on the part of the girl. None but a puritan fanatic could doubt the injury to moral and physical health by this protracted tragedy; it was, I believe, due to the acceptance of the current morbidly selfish ideal of exclusive love.

If first love is to be sealed with the exclusive seal, at what age should this take place? Sex companionship is greatly needed by boys and girls in their teens: is exclusive love endowed with preternaturally early power of choice for life?

Again, is not exclusive love infringed by devotion to another object? Yet if so, every woman with her child in her arms is disloyal to her man companion, who may well doubt if he even ranks as a "side love"—to borrow the language of some of our comrades.

The inheritors of puritan ideas have, I believe, but one test of exclusive love, and it is the same crude test recognized by the law. But our puritan ancestors, living simple animal lives, were content to regard the "husband," or the "wife," as a combined social comrade, sex-companion, parent of children and upper servant; are we content so to regard our domestic partners?

Suppose a vigorous young woman whose intellect and affections are satisfied in her man companion, and who does not wish to leave him, finds her ambitions as to motherhood and as to the magnetism of ardent passion are disappointed, is she to be debarred from these last for the rest of her life? Is this the ideal we are to hand on to our descendants? and will they accept it?

Who but a bigot does not rejoice to learn that Zola, who had no children by his wife, had two by another woman, and that the wife was quite friendly to the other woman and her children?

Let me say that I should never dream of accepting a philosphy of sex from any individual, least of all from a man. My beliefs are my own, founded on my own observations and experience of life, and on my own reading. DORA FORSTER.

Function of the State.

By "function of the present state" does Mr. Kerr mean the function defined by the fundamental law, or what may be inferred as such function from the many violations of that fundamental law? In either case his assertion that the function of the preseat state is to keep the laborers in subjection to the capitalists, will not stand the test of facts. Most laborers choose the present condition, and choice eliminates tyranny. No people can be said to be in subjection who periodically and persistently endorse the same set of parasites.

How is it that the central thought of Socialism is not merely common ownership, but in addition "it is the class struggle," when it is evident that private ownership of collective wealth is the only thing that gives the parasites the power to struggle, and common ownership would render them powerless.

C. F. HUNT.

VARIOUS VOICES.

H. C. Roberts, Bennington, Kas.:—Can you give me the address of the Crematory Association nearest to us?

[We think there is one in Kansas City, but are not sure. Probably some of our readers can give the desired information.]

Lena Selde, Davenport, Wash.:—Will you kindly tell me if the books for which Ida C. Craddock suffered death can be obtained? I feel like saying with others, How many more noble lives will have to be given to the cause of free speech, before the bridge is built over which we all may pass? I enclose $2,50 for which please send me the accompanying list of books.

Mrs. Lizzie S. Decker, 1032 Race St., Phila.:—Thanks for promptness in sending me the desired papers—back numbers of Lucifer. Can you use in schools an excellent book on Primary Phonography? My daughter Ida C. Craddock wrote it especially for the boys of Girard College while teaching there. She taught there eight years. What we have on hand is the second edition. They cost $1,12 each book. Plates are expensive. I will sell them now at 80 cents each.

Celia B. Whitehead, Denver, Colo.:—I believe in free speech as the basic remedy for all our ills, and am willing to take my medicine. Nevertheless, when a specially nauseous dose comes along I must be pardoned if I swallow it with a wry face; I can't help it. A case in point is Lucifer's first page article, Nov. 27, entitled "Mrs. Grundy's Two Boarding Schools." If R. B. Kerr has grown only to the height of manhood where "eating jam" seems a fit, delicate and sufficiently important action with which to compare the use of the organs of human creation it is his inalienable right to advertise it; nevertheless—as I said. Perhaps such things are necessary reactions against Comstockism. As to the question with which the fable closes—I should reply in the words of a good old down-easter I once knew: "Some folks say 'Of tu evils chuse the least,' but I say chuse neither."

The only sin is to be unkind; the only virtue is to serve.
To expose another is to expose yourself.
If a man has faith in his power, he can wait.
Our greatest deeds we do unknowingly.
It is a fine thing to make yourself needed.
All that glitters is not brass.
I used to live in a glass house, but now there is nothing left but the sash.—Fra Elbertus.

It is the act of an ill-instructed man to blame others for his own bad condition; it is the act of one who has begun to be instructed to lay the blame on himself; and of one whose instruction is completed to blame neither another nor himself.—Epictetus.

REMOVAL NOTICE.

Facilities for properly conducting my ever increasing Mail-Order Department being inadequate in Denver I have permanently located in this suburb of Chicago, and trust my many friends and patrons will continue to favor me with their many kind orders.

Send for prices of Watches, Diamonds, Opals, Silver, Plated and Optical goods, Music boxes, Jewelery, Chains, Clocks, Freethought and other badges, Ingersoll spoons, and my tract—"Theism in the Crucible"—free. OTTO WETTSTEIN.
La Grange, Illinois.

We have more power than will; and it is often by way of excuse to ourselves that we fancy things are impossible.—Rouchefoucauld.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer the Light Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

Forty copies of Lucifer, no two alike, of 1901 will be sent to any address for 15 cents. Nine bundles for $1. We are anxious to place these papers where they will do good. Please let us have your orders soon.

FOR CHRISTMAS.

Just fits a letter. THE RESURRECTION OF ADAM; the sin of Adam and Eve and what came of it. By Mabel Gifford, D. L. S., 15 cents.

HERE'S HEALTH FOR YOU! Simple mental and physical exercises. By Rejoice O. Mann (Mabel Gifford), 25 cents.

CHRISTMAS CAT BOOK. By Mildred Norman, the Children's Story-Writer. Greeting on cover. Artistic make-up. Amusing to children and grown-ups. Teaches kindness to animals and the care of them. 12 original half-tone fit, 25 cents. Sold by Mabel Gifford, Blue Hill Ave, L. Mattapan, Mass.

The Ladies' "PERFECT" Sanitary Protector.

The only Sanitary Protector on the market made of pure rubber and perfectly soft and pliable; will last for years; can be worn with perfect comfort, can be adjusted to any size, no canvas, no cloth, but pure rubber.

This is something that no woman can afford to be without. Perfectly sanitary, comfortable, indispensable and safe.

Price reduced to $1. Order of L. Harman, 500 Fulton St. Chicago.

A Private Maternity Home

Or Lying-in Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired.

For particulars and terms give description of case, and address.
Suite 63-119 LaSalle St., Chicago Ill. C. S. WOOD, M. D.

947.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

Trial Trip Subscriptions.

For one dollar we will send Lucifer ten weeks to eight different addresses, and to the one sending us the list, any one of the following books:

The Origin of the Family, Private Property and the State. By Frederick Engels, 217 pages, handsomely bound in cloth. Postage, 6 cents.

The Slavery of Our Times. By Leo Tolstoi. With portrait of author, 186 pages. Blue cloth; silver lettering. Postage 8 cents.

Nora: A Doll's House, and Ghosts. The two dramas bound together. Olive cloth; red lettering. 108 pages. Postage 8 cents. This offer will, we hope, induce our friends to extend Lucifer's circulation materially.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author.

The Sex Passion.
Man, the Ungrown.
Woman, the Serf.
Woman in Freedom
Marriage: a Retrospect.
Marriage: a Forecast.
The Free Society.
Some remarks on the early star and sex worships.
Notes—On the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population.

The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. Price, $1.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

THE RATURE.

00 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 25c.

ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $1.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. B. R. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (H. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.

BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth, $1.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commanded, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 81 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 288 pages. 50c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

DARWIN, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. G. Spencer. 170 pages. 25c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.50 and 50c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 Illustrations, 37 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 7-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $3.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 50c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian religion has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 280 pages. 40c. Postage, 5c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Ramsom and David Overmeyer. 20c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 25c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John H. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Eliza Dunbar Kelso. $10 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HILDA'S HOME. Rose Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 250 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Scotland. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 37 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Voltaire, and Voltaire. 10c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mar-tien. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREEZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

KORADINE. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 25c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III. (1889). Cloth, $1.25. Postage, 25c.

MAGNETISM, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A Look (Free) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 416 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIHUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies. A Criticism: When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties: The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The Stale Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Extinction: Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 10c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 5c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, H. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is basically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. R. G. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's Interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsta, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $2.50; all in one volume, $1.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Hammott type upon double edged hand-made paper of ceruleau tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 50c.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 128 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Marietta), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 307 pages. 25c.

THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Witches and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have feet swift enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 381 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old saying, 'Be virtuous and you will be happy,' etc. The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from theological superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and asceticism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 32 large pages; twelve copies, 25c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lizzie D. White. 5c.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 10c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 25c.

THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Widehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (R. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 15c.

THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1761, quoted by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuitical craft and is a plain index to the underhand working of that order against the welfare of individuals and society. 25c.

THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 10c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Yclept Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Wiese). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $1.50.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Darling. 15c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet that every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 10c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW; a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "It is a crime to be ashamed of what makes us men, of circling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 1, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. The condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo. 428 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 50 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VI., No. 49. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, DEC. 18, E. M. 302. [C. E. 1902.] WHOLE No 48

A CREED.

There's change in times, in fashions, manners, speech;
There's change in parties, governments, and creeds;
There's the exchange, whose pious fingers reach
The heart of commerce, and it straight way bleeds;
There's change in what we learn, and what we teach;
There's change in what one writes, and what he reads;
There's change in everything, or—not to mock it—
In everything except a poor man's pocket.

I like experience, though, howe'er it tells
For or against me; all is one at last.
These hearts of ours are much like soundless wells,
Wherein the shining pearls of Truth are cast;
And very happy he who rightly spells
The sweet and bitter lessons of the past,
For only thus he comes himself to know,—
Which all his knowledge is, as Pope will show.*

I like experience, therefore. I have had
My share of blows and bruises; but I think—
Let it be good, indifferent or bad—
The "wine of life" 's a very decent drink.
Yet, if a man lives on, and don't go mad,
When finally he trembles on the brink
Of death,—I judge, though certain people threat it—
The chances are that he will not regret it.

I relish self-dissection; for I woo
All knowledge, and this process finds it out.
I love to judge between the false and true;
Blow off the dust of romance and of doubt;
Break error's crust and let the sunlight through;
Ope mystery's doors; give bigotry the knout:
I love the good, the beautiful, the great,
And all the noblest hopes in man's estate.

—William Winter.

* "And all our knowledge is ourselves to know."—Pope's "Essay on Man."

Parry and Thrust.

Voting is war.

Parties are prisons.

Schwab, "he wipes 'em out."

Perhaps Mr. Baer can hibernate.

Abolish divorce by abolishing marriage.

All up-to-date lies are carrying fine disguises.

"Intellectual lights" are very often only gas lights.

Does Christmas come but once a year because we are poor?

Those who work for Truth rarely have interviews with the cashier.

The god of the Single Taxer is land; but liberty gives more than land.

Theologians are the tribute which superstition pays for the use of fools.

Wall Street thinks Mr. Roosevelt an ass, but Wall Street itself is bulling long ears.

When woman learns that she was not made for man's use she will learn what she was made for.

Dr. Parker used to say that religious talks to business men made a labor of Hercules. Honest Parker!

The latest party cry is that the President settled the coal strike. Perhaps he settled it as he settled Spanish soldiers.

"Socialism is coming." So are cyclones, earthquakes, and tidal waves. What then? Simply this, things are not good just because they are coming.

Many who had begun to fear that "Liberty" was "kinder Tuckered out," will be glad to know that Benj. R. is working again at the Sign of the Ragged Edge.

Someone is spreading the story that Anthony Comstock was looking for a light opera engagement, but that a late tragedy changed his plans. What a pity!

Strange how people forget their history. This man Morgan, why, wasn't he the fellow who used to be so feared long ago? "Morgan, Morgan the raider?" Of course; yes.

A man with capital and land can do a great deal; a man with capital and no land can do something; but a man with land and no capital can—well he might read "Progress and Poverty."

Now is the season when the rich go through the blessed ceremony of giving away other people's money in charity, and "all God's little ones who are hungry are cared for and fed." How nice!

In Russia they knout arrested suspects; but in "free" America they only starve them, put them in dungeons, insult them, question them till they are nearly mad, and will not allow them to secure bail. What a difference!

The dupes of Dowie furnish another proof that until now men will endure privation, insult, ostracism, ridicule and all kinds of persecution for the sake of monstrous tyranny. When will they endure these for liberty?

In the recent elections the Socialists claim to have cast 400 000 votes. It is about time for the "practical politicians" to think about going over to this party and show those who follow its flag the inevitable logic of political action.

The "benevolent assimilation" (guarded eating) of an Asiatic island people is proceeding apace, and it is calculated that with the right kind of persuasion (guns and bribery) their savagery (love of liberty) will disappear within a decade or two.

Fourteen people were roasted to death in a Chicago fire recently, but as the responsible men were government officials and not Anarchists their acts do not result in public madness, attempted killings, and other excesses dear to law-abiding peoples.

An American statesman favors the passing of a law which would make it a capital crime to advocate the abolition of government, and this regardless of the means advocated. That is just the thing. This man is destined to shine, and should be given a chance.

The creed of liberty is that a man only knows enough to manage his own affairs, and that it is to the interest of every man to work for such social adjustments as shall make this management inevitable, that each minding his own business and possessing enough for his needs, may spontaneously keep order.

Love is a law of life; marriage is a crime against it. Love comes, and goes as it will; marriage endeavors to hold it in check. Love brings sorrow perhaps, but marriage brings misery. Love is freedom; marriage is slavery. Love is life; marriage is the death of love. Let those who love look at those who marry; what do these gain? Body possession perhaps, but nothing more. To possess the flesh without the spirit is to be treasuring a corpse. Love is free or it dies. IRONICUS.

Marriage and Divorce.

For some time, and with increasing vehemence in recent years, that element in our society, which calls itself Christian, has been agitating for more stringent divorce laws. This agitation found expression at a recent meeting of the Bishops of the Episcopal church, which was held in the city of San Francisco, in the passage of the following resolution:

"That no minister shall solemnize a marriage between any two persons unless by enquiry he shall satisfy himself that neither person has been, or is, the husband or wife of any other person living, unless the former marriage was annulled by a decree of some civil court of competent jurisdiction—for cause existing before the former marriage."

The foregoing resolution is now a part of the canon of this religious sect, and at the behest of the same element the congress of the United States recently passed a law for the District of Columbia, which went into effect on Jan. 1st, 1892, in which one cause only, that of infidelity, is recognized as sufficient cause for the granting of a divorce.

The chief interest in these acts centers in the fact that this same element is now striving with all its power to induce congress to pass a uniform divorce law for the whole of the United States and its territories, and we are forced to conclude that should they succeed, the law passed by it for the District of Columbia is a fair sample of what they would enact for the whole. Whether such a law, if passed, would be for the better or for the worse for humanity is the question which we are herein to discuss.

To increase the sum total of human happiness in this world is the purpose for which governments are organized and laws passed. Any law that does not have this effect, is a bad law.

"By their fruits, shall ye know them," says the Proverb. Right principles lead to peace, prosperity and happiness, while wrong ones lead to slavery, contention and war.

Measured by this standard, the correctness of which I believe will be admitted, the recent law passed by congress for the District of Columbia and also all other laws, state or national, that make impossible or more difficult the dissolvement of unhappy unions, are bad.

In the District of Columbia, a man may now marry an innocent, worthy and confiding woman whom he has made to believe that he is the personification of goodness, love and manhood, but who may immediately prove to be just the reverse of all this. From the day of their marriage, he may abuse her to his heart's content. She is his captive, his slave, his prisoner while life shall last, without any hope of escape.

He may squander his earnings for drink and make no effort to provide for her or her offspring. He may abandon her entirely at any time and yet she must remain his wife as long as she lives. For her, there is no hope in this world; no relief save in death.

The Christian world and the United States congress have built the gates strong and forever closed them in her face. They have both, in effect, said to her that the woman who makes a mistake, or who is deceived into an unhappy marriage by a man, no matter how much a villain he may be, is deserving of no mercy, no pity. What has been said of the mistake of the woman, may also be said of that of the man.

The woman whom he marries may prove to be an entirely different person from what he believed her to be. She may wreck his fortune, refuse to cook his meals, absent herself from his home for long intervals, or abandon him entirely. Indeed, she need not trouble herself in the least about trying to make life pleasant for him. He is alike her captive, and there is no escape for him.

What can more surely develop the tyrannical element in the nature of two persons than, by force of law, to make them the life long unwilling slaves of each other?

Such laws are the generators of Anarchy; for those who find themselves thus imprisoned can scarcely help becoming bitter enemies of both church and state, which have made their escape impossible.

William Jennings Bryan recently said in the "Commoner," while speaking on this subject, "that a Christian home is not a prison." If this is true 'tis equally true that a Christian prison is not a home; and that is all that can be said of a union held together by ties other than those of pure love.

Where there is no love there is no marriage; no matter how impressive the ceremony of the priest or how solemn the declaration of the state may have been. These things do not constitute marriage. The union that is solemnized by jumping over a broomstick is as likely to prove a wise and happy one as any solemnized by the most elaborate priestly auguries.

Not only is it true that where there is no love there is no marriage, but if there be love and it dies for any cause, the divorce has already taken place, and it is not within the power of the church or state to restore the marriage, and it is unwise and unjust to insist that divorced persons should continue in a conjugal union. They should not only be permitted to separate for the preservation of purity and morality but they should be encouraged to do so. Nothing can be more pure than a conjugal union that is held by no bonds save those of pure love, and these are the only ones whom God has really joined together. while nothing can be more immoral than for two persons to continue in such union when united by other ties, whether with or without the permission of the priesthood or the state.

Those who surrender themselves in the most sacred relation of the sexes in obedience to any other consideration save those of pure love, commit a crime against both morality and humanity, for offspring resulting from such union can not be endowed with the finer qualities of either, and as between the woman who surrenders herself for a moment to one whom she does not love, for a small material consideration, and the one surrenders herself for life for a larger material consideration, there is no difference in point of morality.

What has either church or state to gain by trying to compel, or even persuade, a man and woman to continue a conjugal union that has proved to be a degrading bondage to both?

If such a union has proven destructive of their mutual happiness, why should it continue? Both church and state admit that it is competent for a man and woman to determine whether they should enter into the married relation or not. Certainly then, if they are competent to determine this, then they must be equally competent to determine whether or not they have made a mistake; whether the union, which both may have entered upon in good faith, has proven a blessing or a curse. No one is so competent to decide as they, and it concerns no person, and no social order, so much as it concerns them.

If they both have decided that the union was a mistake and a separation is desirable, why should they not be considered as competent to make an agreement for dissolving the union as they were to effect it?

If an agreement for separation can not be arrived at between them, it is perfectly in order that the courts should intervene, as it is the function of courts to settle disagreements.

But where no disagreement exists as to desirability of separation or the terms thereof, the invasion of the state through the medium of the courts is an abridgment of human liberty, and a denial of the right of contract, for which there seems no consistent or reasonable excuse. If the simple procurement of a recorded announcement or license is sufficient notice to the public that an agreement for a union has been effected, why should not a like announcement be sufficient notice to the public when an agreement for separation has been made? Why should the parties to such an agreement be compelled to go into court and make public their unhappiness? I cannot see that any one is benefitted by compelling them to do so, except Mother Grundy.

I. WM. KELLEY.

[TO BE CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.]

An Unconscious Socialist.

In his article in No. 945, entitled "Why I am not a Socialist," Albert Chavannes shows that he is not only a Socialist, but a very up to date one. I was thinking of advising Lucifer's readers to get "Collectivism and Industrial Evolution," by the Belgian leader, Emile Vandervelde; but Mr. Chavannes' views are such a perfect synopsis of Vandervelde's, that he has made it almost unnecessary to read the book.

Mr. Chavannes thinks that Socialists want the nation to own and operate everything. Such was once their proposal, but it is no longer considered necessary. The following quotations indicate the modern view:

On page 50 of his book Vandervelde says: "Nothing hinders us from imagining a socialist state in which individual property and labor should co-exist with collective property and labor."

On page 46 he says: "Peasant proprietorship, the industry of the artisan, and the little independent business are not on the eve of disappearing; and wherever they survive, realizing the union of property and labor, Socialism has no thought of using compulsion to socialize them."

On the same page Vandervelde quotes the following from Frederick Engels, written about 1894: "It is evident that if the public powers came into our hands we should not think of expropriating forcibly the little peasants (with or without compensation), as we should be obliged to do with the large proprietors."

In his new book on "The Social Revolution" Karl Kautsky expresses the belief that a good deal of individual ownership will continue under Socialism. In its "Report on Fabian Policy", 1896, the Fabian Society, which contains half the ablest Socialists in England, advocated the right of each individual "to practise all arts, crafts, and professions independently," and repudiated the idea that everything should be owned collectively.

Modern Socialists have no wish to force everybody into the Socialist organization. Most of them believe, however, that the superiority of centralized production will in time bring nearly all producers in staple industries into Socialism, while perhaps the more skilled and artistic occupations will remain partly individualistic.

Socialists do not believe in having only a great central organization. They believe that some industries, like the railways, must be managed on a national or even a continental scale; but most Socialists favor local and municipal management wherever practicable.

"I do not want to see the wage system abolished", says Mr. Chavannes. It is true that the silly phrases, "abolition of the wage system," is still used by Socialists, though the best writers are discarding it. The real aim of most Socialists is to abolish rent, interest, and profit, so that the whole product of labor may be distributed as wages. Of course many Socialists, including myself, dream of a golden age of communistic equality; but we all admit that it is not a practical issue of our time.

As for the right of inheritance, and owning one's own home, Mr. Chavannes will at once see that these things are quite consistent with the views of the writers I have quoted.

R. B. KERR.

Mrs. Craddock's Books.

Ever since Mrs. Craddock was driven to her death no day has passed without my receiving one or more requests for her books or for information where they can be procured. So impossible is it for the American citizen to comprehend that he is in the grasp of a censorship which stands in the way of his getting information on matters of vital importance that among these letters is one from a member of the very jury whose supineness delivered Mrs. Craddock to the vindictiveness of Judge Thomas.

Mrs. Craddock's books are certainly very valuable contributions to the subject they discuss and so far from being injurious to any one they are of the most useful and beneficient purpose. They are models of refined and delicate treatment of their subject, and as to this I want to produce right here a letter not heretofore given to the public which reads as follows.

March, 15, 1902.

DEAR MADAM:—I heartily endorse Dr. Rainsfords's letter of Jan. 25 1902 to you. I do not see how your book, on account of which, I hear, you have been arrested, could harm anyone. I know that there are many to whom it would do good. You are at liberty to make what use you please of this letter. I am

Yours Sincerely BOLTON HALL.

111 Broadway, N. Y.

Many other testimonials to the value of these books are in my possession and I would certainly like to promote the widespread circulation of the books but the death of the author seems to have marked, for the present at least, their total suppression. During Mrs. Craddock's imprisonment at Blackwell's Island the sale of her books was so great that the edition was nearly exhausted and as matter of fact I do not know where a supply of them could be obtained at present and the purpose of my writing this is to state the fact to the applicants for the books, who are so many that I must hereby apologize for being unable to respond to each one individually. ED. W. CHAMBERLAIN.

"Whom God Hath Joined Together."

We in Europe are all greatly interested in that Italian man who, with a woman, went to the naturalization office of New York in order to get married, and only got naturalized.

They only swore solemnly to uphold and support the Constitution of the United States, instead of promising to keep their love and faithfulness to each other safe. The police are after them.

After all, as they have committed no crime, the police may catch them.

However, I prefer the story of the couple who had been married by a registrar in the State of Maine, and who in the evening, heard a knock at their door.

"Who's there?" cried the bridegroom.

"It's me?"

"Who's me?"

"Me, the registrar."

"Well, what d'ye want?"

"Come out quickly. I made a mistake. I gave you a dog license."—Max O'Rell.

A Fine Portrait of Elizabeth Cady Stanton

Is printed in the December issue of "The Comrade," together with a tribute by Leonard D. Abbott. Many other timely and interesting contributions, illustrations, portraits and cartoons.

Price, 10 cents a copy; one dollar per year. Bound volumes $2.25, postpaid. THE COMRADE PUBLISHING CO.

111 Cooper Square, New York.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Some Social Problems.

William Shakspeare puts into the mouth of one of his characters words like these:

"Who steals my purse steals trash. Who steals my good name takes that which not enriches him but leaves me poor indeed."

Many good and wise sayings are credited to the "bard of Avon," but how is it with the one just quoted?

Money, as representing the product of time and labor; money as a means of exchange between producers and consumers, is not "trash," but a very useful and desirable thing.

Money of some kind is one of the prime social necessities.

It is only when used as a means of oppression, of exploitation, of robbery—only when used as an agent whereby the products of labor, the labor of all, may be monopolized by the few, that money becomes something much worse than trash. Of itself money is neither good nor bad.

* * *

Much the same may be said of reputation. As commonly understood, a man's good name is part of his capital; part of his available wealth. It means that if he has no money, no exchangeable property of any kind, he can still get what he needs because of his reputation as a man of veracity, a man of honor, of integrity, of diligence, frugality, etc.

On the other hand a good man's reputation may suffer eclipse from no fault of his own, but simply because he is not understood. The people with whom he associates may not be able to catch, seize or sense the occult vibrations that emanate from his personality; from the invisible, intangible substance we call his ego. Whatever this man may do, or may not do, he is the victim of misrepresentation, of calumny, of persecution and prosecution, sometimes even unto death.

Yes, reputation, like money, may be a friend or it may prove a foe. It may be used to help or to crush, and that without real merit or demerit on the part of the object of such help or persecution.

But when a man—or woman—is misunderstood, misrepresented, persecuted; when his or her good name is cast out as evil, it does not necessarily follow that the person thus misunderstood and maligned is "left poor indeed"—as Shakspeare puts it. Poor he or she may be in this world's goods and yet rich in the best sense of that word; rich in CHARACTER!—something wholly different from and incomparably better and more enduring than reputation, or good name.

Often it happens, as I think, that the person maligned, persecuted, robbed of good name and material wealth, is made richer by such robbery, such persecution. The fires of persecution, of calumny and detraction serving as the best possible school or training to develop the inner qualities, the mental and spiritual fiber, that constitute real manhood or womanhood.

* * *

AS TO GLASS HOUSES.

Elbert Hubbard says:

"I used to live in a glass house, but now there is nothing left but the sash."

I would amend by saying that in my case the SASH ALSO is gone!

There is not left even the iron framework of what was once my glass house.

That house was not built for my own comfort, health or convenience, but rather to please my Grundyite neighbors who lived in glass houses and wanted me to do likewise.

One by one the panes, stained with various colors—some pretty and attractive enough but all ARTIFICIAL, all more or less grotesque and fanciful—have been broken, and not only have I refused to go to the expense and trouble of replacing them but have deliberately removed even the sash, so that now I am beginning to feel that there is nothing to keep out the light, the pure and health-giving sunlight and starlight of Truth; of truth as it is in Nature.

* * *

RESTRAINMENT VERSUS GOVERNMENT.

Last Sunday eve—Dec. 7—I listened to an interesting address by Emma Goldman of New York, sometimes called the "High priestess of Anarchy." Her subject on this occasion was "Modern Phases of Anarchism." As stated last week in these columns, it was this address, first delivered in Cleveland, Ohio, that was reported far and wide as having prompted Leon Czolgosz to assassinate President McKinley.

In this historic address, as I heard it, there was certainly no language used that could be construed as counseling deeds of violence or murder. As I now recall it the address was mainly devoted to showing the difference between the methods of reform advocated and used by Anarchists of a generation or two ago, and those advocated and used now, by Anarchists such as Leo Tolstoi, Benjamin R. Tucker, and other distinguished teachers of that cult.

At the close of the lecture, in response to invitation by the chairman, several short addresses were made by persons in the audience. Among the rest I took occasion to briefly state my own views in regard to Anarchy and Anarchists, in language something like this:

With the speaker of the evening I recognize that there are more kinds of Anarchists than one—almost as many kinds as of Socialists. For twenty years I have been called an Anarchist. In reply to those who thus catalogue me I sometimes say: Give me my own definition of the word and I have no objection to the name Anarchist, but emphatically protest against being reckoned such in the common and popular meaning of that much abused term. With Miss Goldman I agree that "propaganda by deed"—that is, by violence, by assassination, is not Anarchy—in the modern, the evoluted and more philosophic meaning of the word. The assassination of McKinley, in my opinion, was not the act of an Anarchist, but rather of a revolutionist who scarcely knew what he wanted, or what the natural effect of his act would be.

With the facts before me, bearing upon the question, I incline to the belief that Leon Czolgosz was a tool, a victim, in the hands of others. In obedience to his instructions—as I now think it probable—he called himself an Anarchist; said Miss Goldman's speech incited him to kill McKinley; said, "I have done my duty," and refused to say more. His managers pretty evidently feared he would talk too much, and hence took special and unheard-of precautions to prevent him from talking to the public.

Personally I accept the definition of liberty given by Herbert Spencer: "Each has the right to do as he pleases so long as he invades not the equal right of others," and this is what I understand by Anarchy. A legitimate inference from this definition is that invaders should be restrained; that those who cannot or will not limit their acts to their own proper sphere of action should be compelled to do so—compelled by physical force if necessary. This restraint, this resistance to invasion is demanded by the law, or principle, of self-preservation, and should be exercised by the person invaded, in his own behalf, and also co-operatively, by all who do not wish to be invaded—assaulted, robbed or murdered.

In accord with this view I have advocated the term "restrainment" to take the place of what is now called "government," government of man by his fellow man. I have also favored the use of the word "Autarchy," or "Auto-archy," meaning self-government, to take the place of Anarchy, which means denial of government, or opposition to government.

This in brief is a synopsis of my five minute talk in comment upon the subject of the lecture. In her reply to criticisms Miss Goldman spent most of her closing fifteen minutes in an effort to refute the views presented by me. She said, in substance, that restrainment is the same as government, and that my arguments were simply those in common use by the defenders of our present system of government, namely, that evil doers must be restrained and that for this purpose we have courts, sheriffs, taxes, jails, penitentiaries, etc., etc., all the machinery of government.

"Who is wise enough to decide", asked Miss Goldman, "where one man's right ends and another man's begins? who will have the right, under freedom, to say who shall be restrained and who shall not? There are many who think Mr. Harman should be restrained from printing and mailing the doctrines he has been teaching many years past. Who shall decide in cases like this?"

Proceeding Miss Goldman said she did not condemn violence; did not sit in judgment upon the man Czolgosz and condemn him for his act. On the contrary she felt unbounded sympathy for one who was not allowed the citizen right to say a word in his own behalf—kept in a dungeon and treated more like a wild beast than a human being.

When deeds of violence are committed the rational method of procedure would be to study the causes that led to such acts, then by removing the causes prevent a like occurrence in future.

This, if I heard correctly, is a brief but substantially correct synopsis of Miss Goldman's concluding remarks, at her last appearance before the public in Chicago. Expecting to meet her again before her departure for New York I hoped to have, from her own hand, a synopsis of her speech at Uhlich's Hall, for publication in Lucifer, but of this I was disappointed.

* * *

Under the peremptory ruling of the chair, which ruling was sustained by the custom of giving the last word to the first speaker, I was denied the privilege of even a very brief rejoinder to Miss Goldman's reply to my remarks. I wished merely to say, at that time, that I certainly had not the slightest desire or intention to misrepresent the speaker's attitude on the question of the right to use violence, force, as a means of righting unendurable wrongs. I wanted to say that I, too, take the ground,—as I have often done in public as well as in private—that there is nothing man or woman CAN do that, under conceivable circumstances, it may not be perfectly right and proper for him or her to do. I also wanted to add that I did not, and do not, sit upon and condemn the MAN, Czolgosz, nor the MOTIVES that prompted him to fire the fatal shot. Of persons and their motives I know—judicially know—nothing, but of their ACTS I must form a judgment, and decide for or against them. The conditions of human existence upon earth demand this much of me, and of every other rational human mind.

Elaborating a little upon this point I would now say that, from a rational standpoint the act of Czolgosz was most unwise, because furnishing the enemies of freedom with a most unanswerable argument in favor of drastic measures against human liberty.

Second. The act of Czolgosz was a plain violation of the Spencerian formula in regard to human liberty, since it was an invasion of McKinley's right to life, liberty and pursuit of happiness, without any attempt to show how or when he—McKinley, had forfeited such right by first invading Czolgosz. It was also an invasion of the right of all those who wanted McKinley to live and to be their chief ruler.

In answer to Miss Goldman's question, will say that I would have all disputes settled by arbitration—by arbiters selected by the disputants themselves. For instance, when the wolf charged the lamb with the offense of defiling the water that he must drink, if disinterested arbitrators should decide that the charge was sustained by the facts, even though the water ran from the wolf towards the lamb, then the wolf would gain his suit and the lamb be restrained from repeating the offense in future.

For another illustration, take the case of Anthony Comstock against Ida C. Craddock. If the plaintiff could have shown to the satisfaction of the board of arbitrators that Miss Craddock had really corrupted his own morals, or the morals of children of which he was parent or guardian, then a verdict of "guilty" would have been rendered and Miss Craddock would have been enjoined not to repeat the offense of selling or giving her literature to Anthony Comstock, his minor children or minor wards. If, on the contrary, the board of arbitration should decide in favor of defendant then the plaintiff would be liable to indictment for unwarrantably meddling with Miss Craddock's affairs.

Likewise in my own case—reference to which was made by Miss Goldman. When certain citizens of Kansas complained that I had sent to them an immoral document, namely, Lucifer, containing a plainly worded account of and protest against marital outrage, if the properly selected arbiters had decided that the complaint was valid, and that I had no legal nor moral right to harrow up the feelings of my subscribers and patrons by such recitals, then it would have been competent for such arbitration board to assess damages in dollars and cents, much as judges now assess damages in slander suits, and in "breach of marriage promise" cases, and I would have been enjoined not to send any more such literature to the plaintiffs in the case.

Failure to obey the injunctions, the awards, of boards of arbitration would, I presume, be punished, under freedom, by the boycott, by loss of social standing and by loss of financial patronage on the part of all who subscribe to, or support the principle of arbitration as against government by authority of officials backed by professional butchers and cutthroats—the standing armies and navies of the world.

A FEW DEFINITIONS.

While it may be true that Miss Goldman is a much better linguist or philologist than I as her criticism would seem to assume, I will, with all due diffidence, venture to suggest that she study the origin, the true meaning, of the words "restrainment" and "government." This latter word is derived from the Latin gubernare, and is defined thus:

"To steer a ship; to order, to manage, to conduct."

"Restrainment" is derived from the Latin restringere, and is defined: "To bind; to stop; to stay."

Thus it is seen that the two words are radically different in meaning. Government means DIRECTING or GUIDING power, as a pilot directs or guides a ship; while restrainment means simply to PREVENT further advance; to STAY or limit the power that directs or guides.

Many apt illustrations of this radical difference in meaning will doubtless occur to many of our readers, but the great length of this article prohibits further elaboration of social and governmental problems for this issue.

* * *

The proof sheet of this editorial utterance was made the text and outline for an hour's talk by the writer, before the Workmen's Club, at their Reading Room, 278 Blue Island Ave, Saturday eve, Dec. 13. M. HARMAN

Marriage and Divorce

Will be the subject of discussion at the regular meeting of the Society of Anthropology Sunday afternoon Dec. 21. Dr. Juliet H. Severance will deliver the opening lecture. The views of this pioneer worker in radical reforms, upon the subject of Marriage are well known to Lucifer's readers, but the prominence recently given to Divorce, in leading public journals, will no doubt call out an up-to-date handling of the whole question by Dr. Severance and by members of this the most radically iconoclastic club of Chicago. Meeting opens promptly at 3:30 p. m. It is hoped that a FULL ATTENDANCE will greet the opening speaker, and that all will come prepared to take part in the discussion of this vitally important subject. Remember the place—Hall 13, ninth floor of the Masonic Temple.

A Socialist's View of Lucifer's Literature.

Phoenix, B. C., November 10 1902.

DEAR COMRADE:—I see that you recommend Edward Carpenter's admirable little book "Love's Coming of Age," and I think that you may be interested to have names of some other books on the sex question. I send you the two last numbers of Lucifer—the only periodical devoted to this immensely important subject.

I would especially recommend the following, all mentioned in Lucifer's advertisements.

1. "Woman in the Past, Present and Future," by August Bebel, leader of the German Socialist Party.
2. "What the Young Need to Know," by Edwin C. Walker.
3. "The British Barbarians," by Grant Allen.
4. "Motherhood in Freedom," by Moses Harman.
5. "Origin of the Family," by Frederick Engels, one of the foanders of scientific socialism.

It is to be regretted that American Socialists shirk this subject, which has been frankly and so well dealt with by European Socialist leaders—such as Marx, Engels, Bebel, Carpenter, Grant Allen and Bernard Shaw. In America nearly all the advanced thinkers on the sex question have been driven into the Anarchist movement.

With warmest good wishes yours fraternally. F. D. K.

Bebel's book ought certainly to be in the hands of every woman who is at all interested in herself, either as a mere member of the human family or as the mother of the race. It is in thinking of ourselves in this latter capacity that we first begin to realize our vast importance in the world. Has the motherhood of the universe reason to be most proud or most ashamed of the present product of her womb? Can we improve the men of the future by improving ourselves now, by giving ourselves a chance to develop rationally into the beautiful beings nature is capable of making us if she but has half a chance? "The Origin of the Family" is most interesting as I mentioned some weeks ago. The other books named I have not read, but they are not so expensive they cannot be obtained by even a "poor Socialist," and I shall get them. M. Harman, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, supplies them. Another book mentioned in Lucifer's catalogue that I think may be of use to the mother whose letter introduced this subject is "Sexual Physiology for the Young," price 50 cents. This with "What the Young Need to Know," 10 cents ought to provide suggestions enough to enable any mother to enlighten her children along these lines without needless embarassment.

Thank you, Comrade Dora, for your information, and for the copies of Lucifer. I shall do what I have long meant to do, send in a subscription. Your encouragement is heart-warming. The motives of a woman who essays reforms in matters of sex are always open to the worst possible construction by "ower" modest world. It is gratifying to be understood. Write again. —By Dorthy Drew, in "The Western Socialist," Vancover, B. C.

SEND US NAMES for samples and trial subscriptions.

Views of An Attravist.

We often hear it said "There is nothing new under the sun." Did it ever occur to you that the converse of this is also true. There is nothing old under the sun? That is, old in the sense of being worn out, obsolete and lost.

I was reading some short time ago of the customs of Ancient Egypt and an article on the marriage laws of Egypt struck me with great force, more especially as the writer assumed that nothing like what he described now existed, and that the belief and practice of the peculiar marriage rites of Egypt had wholly vanished from the world. These obligations contemplated the complete sovereignty of the wife in the home. The husband swore to obey her without default or hesitation, and she vowed to punish him in case he failed to do so. That she, at least, kept her vow to the letter, is abundantly proved by the pictures and statuettes of the period. These show the wife administering to the disobedient husband the needed correction in many ways.

It was assumed that this mode of life had disappeared completely, but we find that it has not done so. There is now a constantly increasing body of very intelligent people in all civilized countries who follow in the steps of the people of Ancient Egypt. These people are a quiet unobtrusive sort of folk. They seek no recognition of their belief. They belong to all churches, and to no churches at all. They seek no converts although, in a sense, they are extremely clannish, and regard themselves as of a peculiarly holy cast of faith. Although all churches teach the subjection of women, the Attravist appeals without hesitation to the Bible for support in his belief. He points to the fact that in the Bible narrative the serpent went to Eve, not to Adam; he would most certainly go to the most important of the pair. Again, once convinced herself, Eve does not reason with Adam. She simply gave him to eat and he did eat. Adam defended himself on the ground that "The woman thou gavest me did give to eat and I did eat." In other words the guide you gave me led me astray. The woman is told that she shall be subject to man. This is her punishment. It certainly bears the inference that the man before this was subject to her. Again Christ says, "A man shall leave father and mother and cleave to his wife." In other words his wife shall take the place of his father and mother who certainly controlled him up to that time in these countries. It is evident that the disciples of Christ read his meaning the same as the Attravist does, for they were deeply offended old Jews, they could not bear to think that their master taught them subjection to their wives.

But it is not only among the believers in the Bible that this cult is making progress. Men well read in science defend it on other grounds. Sexual reformers claim that it solves the problem of the social evil; and best of all, those who have the experience claim it as an ideal life. Yet with all this in its favor a court in enlightened liberal Canada refused to acknowledge the validity of a contract based on this form of marriage.

C. C. CARLYLE.

P. S. The writer would like to hear from those holding Attravist views or having experience in accordance therewith.

C. C. C.

I know I am restless and make others so.
I know my words are weapons, full of danger, full of fire,
For I confront peace, security, and all the settled laws, to unsettle them.
I am more resolute because all have denied me than I could ever have been had all accepted me.
I heed not and have never heeded either experience, caution majorities, nor ridicule.
And the threat of what is called hell is little or nothing to me.
And the lure of what is called heaven is little or nothing to me.

—Walt Whitman.

Forty copies of Lucifer, no two alike, of 1901 will be sent to any address for 15 cents. Nine bundles for $1. We are anxious to place these papers where they will do good. Please let us have your orders soon.

REMOVAL NOTICE.

Facilities for properly conducting my ever increasing Mail-Order Department being inadequate in Denver I have permanently located in this suburb of Chicago, and trust my many friends and patrons will continue to favor me with their many kind orders.

Send for prices of Watches, Diamonds, Opals, Silver, Plated and Optical goods, Music boxes, Jewelery, Chains, Clocks, Free-thought and other badges, Ingersoll spoons, and my tract—"Theism in the Crucible"—free. OTTO WETTSTEIN.
La Grange, Illinois.

We have more power than will; and it is often by way of excuse to ourselves that we fancy things are impossible.—Rouchefoucauld.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer the Light Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Woman Who Dares

BY URSULA N. GESTEFELD.

A novel, whose heroine seeks to find and realize her own individuality and, having found it, dares to maintain it in the marital relation. It is a carefully written story and meant to show the injustice of the marriage relation as usually regarded, and of the dual standard of morality, tacitly accepted however theoretically opposed. The subject is treated forcefully and directly, yet always tactfully and fairly, and possesses all the strength of moderation combined with just and equable criticism. The story reads more like events in real life than those of romance.

It is seldom that the most vital though most delicate of subjects is treated with such delicacy. The large number of letters from women received after its first publication is evidence that there is room for its heroine in many home.

"Here we have a well written story with a noble purpose. It is a woman's novel, and by that I do not mean that it is intended only for women; on the contrary, it ought to be read by every man in America who has the brain, conscience, and refinement of nature to appreciate its masterly presentation of what is the simple right, nay, more, is the sacred duty of every married woman, to demand the absolute right to her own person in wedlock no less than out of wedlock. . . . In the presentation of the vital thought found in these pages, Mrs. Gestefeld has given us a superb piece of work. It is a story of great vitality. The author is a thoughtful and a deeply spiritual woman. With the keen intuitive insight so often met with in profoundly spiritual natures, she has discerned one of the greatest moral crimes of the present."—The Arena.

Size 5 1-4x7 1-2 inches; 356 pages. Beautifully printed on laid paper, bound in green Holliston linen, and stamped in ink with original cover design. Price, $1.25, postpa'd. THE GESTEFELD PUBLISHING CO., 179 Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ills. Department L.F.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only," Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders: The "Spolling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem, Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization. The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 15c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

A Private Maternity Home

Or Lying-in Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired.

For particulars and terms give description of case, and address.
Suite 65 119 LaSalle St., Chicago Ill. C. S. WOOD, M. D.

948.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

Trial Trip Subscriptions.

For one dollar we will send Lucifer ten weeks to eight different addresses, and to the one sending us the list, any one of the following books:

The Origin of the Family, Private Property and the State. By Frederick Engels, 217 pages, handsomely bound in cloth. Postage, 6 cents.

The Slavery of Our Times. By Leo Tolstoi. With portrait of author, 186 pages. Blue cloth; silver lettering. Postage 8 cents.

Nora: A Doll's House, and Ghosts. The two dramas bound together. Olive cloth; red lettering. 108 pages. Postage 8 cents. This offer will, we hope, induce our friends to extend Lucifer's circulation materially.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author.

The Sex Passion.
Man, the Ungrown.
Woman, the Sect.
Woman in Freedom
Marriage: a Retrospect.
Marriage: a Forecast.
The Free Society.
Some remarks on the early star and sex worships.
Notes—On the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population.

The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. Price, $1.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50
ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the Address on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c
AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 75c; paper 25c.
ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.
A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the various body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $2.75
A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.
A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. H. Karr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. H. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.
AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.
BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth, $1. Unabridged. Defended and Explained by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.
BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.
CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.
CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 23 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 426 pages, 50c.
CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.
DARWIN, THE. (A novel.) Hinton D. Hooker. 50c.
DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. G. Spahon. 176 pages. 50c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Hand lt. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperamente; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James H. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 81 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 2-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 10c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian religion has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 320 pages. 40c. Postage, 5c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Siemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 25c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John H. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 619 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HILDA'S HOME. Rose Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James A.Edgerton. 128 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Scotland. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 27 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Burns, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Voltaire. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREEZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

KORADINE. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1886, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 31, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III. (1889). Cloth, $1.25. Postage, 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Conference of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very S.s. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 418 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Variefiable; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Political Parties; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 10c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Tradition (H. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, R. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 15c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsle, the Evolutionary Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr. Five volumes in "one ring," presentation edition, $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $3.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 320 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Cover in brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 25c.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Marietta), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sense and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first triennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Manchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 320 pages. 25c.

THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Witches and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 50c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "To all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old asceticism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstitions they have begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and asceticism; that the pure and beautiful and unclothing thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 80 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 10c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Loyal Wakefield (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. S. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1761, issued by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuit craft and is a plain index to the underhand working of that order against the welfare of individuals and society. 25c.

THE STATE, ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 10c.

THE UNPOPULARITY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Telepathy (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Winne). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $1.25.

TRAVELS OF FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Darling. 10c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet of 32 pages. Paper, 10c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW. A Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women. Let us grow up to the stature of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 3, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free." The last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal man and woman will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.60; paper, 75c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first enslaved. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. A slave of the slave. This is the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now paper. 10c.

This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 378

Address M. HARMAN, 339 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VI., No. 50. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, DEC. 25, E. M. 302. [C. E. 1902.] WHOLE No. 949

THE MAN HE KILLED.

SCENE: The settle of the Fox Inn, Stagfoot Lane.

CHARACTERS: The speaker (a returned soldier), and his friends, natives of the hamlet.

Had he and I but met
By some old ancient inn,
We should have sat us down to wet
Right many a nipperkin.

But ranged as infantry,
And staring face to face,
I shot at him, as he at me,
And killed him in his place.

I shot him dead, because—
Because he was my foe,
You see; my foe of course he was;
That's clear enough; although

He thought he'd 'list, perhaps,
Off-hand like—just as I—
Was out of work—had sold his traps—
No other reason why.

Yes; quaint and curious war is
You shoot a fellow down
You'd treat if met where any bar is,
Or help to half-a-crown.

—Thomas Hardy, in Harper's Weekly.

Parry and Thrust.

Justice has always been a vagrant.

The true spelling of "right"—C-u-s-t o-m.

A thief is a man who steals from the rich.

The rights of woman are kept in trust for her.

J. P. Morgan is Napoleon minus the ideals of Napoleon.

De Wet's book should be suppressed; it will hurt Britain.

How good we must be; it is always the other man who is bad.

Love is the one passion which makes wise men and fools act alike.

It is easy to defend her name, but it is hard to defend Freedom herself.

Freak thinking should not be confused with free thinking; there is a difference.

Hillis condemns trade unions, but trades unions do not condemn Hillis; they let him do that.

Let us have another war; that will bring the people back to our "grand" institutions with a rush.

The unctuous moralist digs in his mind for filth. An eastern one has found a veritable Comstock lode.

Enough may be as good as a feast. If the workers of the world had but enough it would seem like a feast.

The Illinois bituminous coal companies have doubled the price of their product; wages though are unchanged.

Roosevelt in his writings has assailed the names of several presidents, using vile epithets. Don't assail Roosevelt.

"The fear of God is the beginning of folly," the preparation of a state of mind in which the fear and respect of tyrants finds birth.

Dissatisfaction initiates progress, and the fault-finder is a greater friend of his kind than the defender of the "best of all possible worlds."

A prominent eastern financier fears that America has reached the pinnacle of its prosperity and that the time of decay is near. We may yet be happy?

Venezuela assumes a defiant attitude. Perhaps the State Department at Washington could explain all this bristling. The President is fond of war. Watch him.

It may be accepted as axiomatic that any social change which involves a sacrifice of liberty, be that sacrifice ever so small, is not a change for the better.

The Single Tax is a misnomer, because it would leave undisturbed the tax on buildings, called rent, and the tax on other forms of wealth, called interest.

An Illinois girl is accused of murder, and the State is spending thousands of dollars to convict her. The Lincoln Hotel murderers can testify that in their cases justice was peeking.

Cap. Streeter has been convicted, and "The District of Lake Michigan" is no more. When you want to "grab" land, have more money than the other man, a political "pull," and then irritate him into shooting.

Recent suppressions of free speech in Chicago remind one again of the old homily, that lies always ask to be protected from the sunlight of criticism, while truth only asks an opportunity to be heard of men.

When "Brassicus" becomes fair enough to correctly represent me, quoting with exactitude, I will reply to his animadversions. At present he has the brass; and I—well, I have the patience to await his crow eating.

Life is too short to be making one's self crystal-clear to every enquiring mind and facile tongue. Utter your message with seriousness and enthusiasm, and though polemics crowd thick as smoke, and logic do its worst, the truth will live.

The difference betwixt Marx and George, in a word—
(It emerges at last from the strife so hodgepodgical)
George in his logic is perfectly absurd,
While Marx in his absurdity is perfectly logical.

The new school of evolutionists, the exploiters, ring the changes on the struggle for existence, and the survival of the fittest. They find themselves the fittest. Here's to you, Gentlemen; now find no fault with labor or its methods if it aims at becoming the fittest. "Sauce for the goose."

"God is love," in that old book, the Bible, we read;
But we doubt when we hear of God's rod.
Why should we? For Love all Hell's torture will breed
For those who take Love for their God. IRONICUS.

Marriage and Divorce.

[CONCLUDED FROM LAST WEEK.]

There are certainly very many cases where a separation becomes desirable on the part of both the contracting parties, without either one of them being to blame; many cases in which God has not only not joined them together, but composed them of such elements as to make a union impossible; that God has joined together persons whose union is a perpetual torture to them both, and whose legal relation is a distressing bondage, is a libel upon infinite wisdom and goodness.

By what process of reasoning either church or state arrives at the conclusion that in making impossible or more difficult the dissolution of such unions they are serving either Christ or humanity, is more than I can comprehend. Their intentions are doubtless good but their judgment is open to question.

If all the laws concerning the relation of the sexes were wiped from the statute books at one stroke, not one couple who are really married would separate. Those who are really married need no bonds save those of love to keep them together. No estimate of the sacredness of the marriage relation can be placed too high. It ought to be high enough at least to permit those who have become divorced or who have never really been married, to separate, in order that they might get married.

The priesthood and the state may give their consent to, and they may even insist that two persons who have proven to be as water and fire to each other, shall continue in a conjugal union, but neither can marry them. The priesthood may consign them to hell if they refuse to obey, and the state may consign them to prison, but if they do obey, they need not go to either place. They are in both already.

Nothing can be more erroneous or productive of evil than the idea perpetuated through the centuries, that a ceremony by a priest or official constitutes marriage and sanctifies a union.

If a man and woman are wedded by the laws of their being in temperament and adaptability and the affection that alone can sanctify a conjugal union—ceremony can only announce the fact. If they are not so wedded, no ceremony or man-made law can unite them.

The state is only interested in the status of the child. It should be protected from incompetent and neglectful parenthood. Further than this, it has no right to interfere; therefore, where there are no children of immature age, it has no valid excuse for interfering in a separation at all unless invited to do so.

The best environment and most important education influence for the child is a harmonious home and family life, but this can never be furnished by incompatible, inharmonious parents. While inharmony exists, the reasons why the child should be removed from its influence are more weighty than any that can be named why its parents should be forced to remain together. The well-being of the child in such cases will be better served by making it dependent upon the state, either by separating it entirely from its parents and placing it in homes provided by the state, or by making the mother a pensioner of the state in proportion as she may have contributed to its inhabitants, so long as they may require her protection.

N civilization can ever be worthy of the name that permits its mothers to become economic dependents upon any one man, who as likely as not will prove to be a tyrant. Economic dependence is the basis of all slavery, and the well-being of society demands that at least all enslaved mothers should be set free. Under a true civilization, every child would be considered the child of the state, and every mother, the mother of the state's children, and as such, entitled to its very first and best consideration.

Since the law passed by congress for the District of Columbia went into effect, I notice in one of our exchanges a very vivid pen picture of a woman resident of that district—holding in her arms a starving babe while fleeing from a drunken husband, who had already pounded her face into a pulp.

Now think of the priesthood bidding the state to forever slam the door shut through which this woman seeks to escape from this wretch, and send a policeman with a club to drive her back into his arms. A wise state might say to this man, "you can not longer have this woman for your wife or any other. Your habit has rendered you incapable of performing the sacred duties of parenthood," but to forever shut the door of escape in this woman's face—to compel her and her child to remain economic dependents upon this man, or to refuse her the right to leave his bed and board, and to form a union with another, is none the less a crime because it is committed by the state or in the name of religion.

The increasing number of divorces of which our clergy complain and which they would seek to lessen by the force of a uniform divorce law, such as congress has passed for the District of Columbia, are not evidence of decaying civilization, but of social progress. They are not evidence of increasing immorality but of social purity.

The divorce law passed by congress for the District of Columbia is not a step forward and toward a higher civilization; it is a step backward and toward barbarism. Its extension over our states and territories would be a national calamity—a death blow to human liberty.

Every nation since civilization began has had its laws respecting divorce, and the degree of civilization to which a nation had attained when these laws were written can always be determined by their liberality, especially toward women.

The first we see of the institution of marriage the woman is a captive of war—no hope—she was the absolute property of her captor. He was her lord and master. She had no rights that he felt in the least bound to respect. He could put her away at his pleasure, but she must remain while he wished. He could abuse her to his heart's content, even put her to death.

What laws there were, were made to protect the rights of men. Women didn't have any. She was later an article of definite worth; a much sought article of exchange; considered unworthy of occupying even a place at the table with her own husband.

Thence, step by step, slowly but steadily, she has climbed the ladder of emancipation, though beaten back at every step by church and state, both of which have been dominated by men, until at last men really seem becoming conscious of the fact that women do have some rights that they ought to respect, and above all her right to be through life the absolute owner of herself, and no institution that in effect reduces her to property is either good or sacred.

The whole world of nature around and within us, together with the whole history of the past, stands a monument in evidence that social freedom is necessary to social purity. It is the water above the dam and in the pond that becomes poisonous and emits foul odors and disease. It is only from enslaved forces that explosions result. No matter when or where or in what line of human activity liberty has been tried, it has always been beneficial.

The law of love is the only law upon which conjugal unions can safely be based. All attempts at perpetuating them by arbitrary force are both unwise and unchristian.

It is a sorry day for Christian faith when it seeks to incorporate barbarous customs into law and compel obedience to them as religious duty.

It should be the privilege of each individual to live in obedience to their highest conceptions; the adherents of any creed may rightfully make such rules or laws respecting the conduct of members as they may deem proper, but when under penalty they seek to compel non-subscribers to comply with their rules and regulations they abandon the law of all true Christian conduct.

J. WM. KELLEY.

Repeal the Comstock Law.

Anthony Comstock chuckles again over another victim, the late Ida C. Craddock, formerly of Chicago, latterly of New York, when he induced Judge Thomas, to convict her on a charge of publishing obscene literature, and depositing same in United States mails.

As this was her second conviction, and knowing her innocence of this, as of the former charge, rather than submit to unjust, cruel and degrading imprisonment, similar to that already suffered, Mrs. Craddock nobly preferred to get off the earth, and by her own hand.

This monster in shape of man, Anthony Comstock, seems happy only when running to earth and hounding to death helpless men and women who dare undertake to educate on lines of sex, for the information of the ignorant, and uplifting of humanity.

This work, educating the ignorant and uplifting humanity had been the ruling thought, the sole purpose of Ida Craddock's life.

Strange to say, nobody has ever been known to be injured by her literature; the only complainant being the champion decoy letter writer and prosecutor himself.

But Anthony Comstock dare not attack formidable corporate medical publishers who publish and deposit in United States mails, literature on precisely similar lines to that of Ida C. Craddock, and yet no meddlesome espionage or police interference was ever inflicted upon them. Therefore I ask in the name of all that is just, why should the postal laws discriminate between a strong medical corporate body and a weak individual?

If a treatise on biology or sexual science by the one is obscene, so also is the other. If the one has a right to the mails for such literature, so also has the other.

Why then should the small individual publisher be dragged to prison and debarred the use of the mails, while the other, the great corporate publishers, are allowed to go free? Practically the United States mails in such cases are forbidden to the poor and their use connived at in the rich.

The literature of Ida C. Craddock was not obscene. On the contrary, from a moral and medical standpoint it was clean as the cleanest. It advocated clean living. It was simply a sermon on morals, a homily against social vice and the sin of licentiousness in married life, telling of its woeful effects upon adult human lives and lives of offspring.

Is there anything obscene in this? Yet it was for this that Ida Craddock was doomed to a long term of degrading penal servitude, which servitude to her intensely fine and sensitive nature would be living death; therefore she preferred to make her exit to the land of souls "where the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest."

And now the question is, did Anthony Comstock hypnotize Judge Thomas, and thus make him believe the literature obscene? Judge Thomas did not submit the indicted literature, as was his plain duty, to the argument of competent persons, men and women of judgment and culture, whose opinion should be best regarded on this subject. Judge Thomas evidently took Anthony Comstock's word for it, and convicted the innocent defendant accordingly.

But who is this highly moral American censor who is always so averse to sex knowledge, sex literature? who hoodwinks judges and hoodoos his victims to prison? to suicide? to death? Is he a saint or a devil? or is he a cross between these? A saint perhaps he may be; a reincarnation of the old original St Anthony who unlike Mark Anthony could not be tempted by the charms of woman; for like our modern St Anthony the original was cold as an iceberg.

Tell this man, Anthony Comstock, Mr. Editor, that while it is his privilege to engage in open warfare against sex knowledge and sex literature, he is butting his head against a stone wall, or scientific sex knowledge, for the purification of morals and redemption of the race, must prevail. If Anthony could see it in this light, instead of suppressing such literature he would welcome and encourage it, if his aim is what he claims it to be—and congratulate its promoters. He would also see that the public has a right to all useful knowledge; that while suppression of knowledge benefits no one it is this suppression alone that is dangerous.

Tell him that as well might he try to blot out the King of Day as try to suppress the alleged obscene literature. He cannot do it. If such literature could be killed his cruel tactics would have killed it long ago, when he hounded to death some of its best authors and defenders, men whose names are honored far above his own, and ever will be, as martyrs to cruel wrong.

Referring to the question of obscene literature I argue there is no such thing; nothing obscene in all nature. No department of the human being is obscene; every part is sacred, and so also is its literature. What God—or Nature—has made sacred cannot be obscene, and to say that treating of the creative functions makes literature obscene is grossest ignorance; an infamous libel on the Creator who is said to have created man in his own image. "In the image of God created He him." If, therefore, man is the image of the divine there is no department of his organism obscene; why then should any literature concerning this organism be considered obscene?

I repeat, there is no such thing as obscene literature. If literature such as that of Ida Craddock's were freely admitted to circulate among the masses, it would do more to suppress vice in a hundred years than the Comstock Anti-Vice Society, without such literature, could do in one hundred million years.

I have written the above, not only to tell of a dangerous subversion of justice, and of the awful tragedy resulting therefrom, and of the awful lesson to be learned therefrom, but also out of respect to the memory of one of the brightest of intellects, most devoted and most unselfish of characters, one of the noblest of souls, and most steadfast in the inculcation and promotion of social purity—the highest cause of enlightened humanity.

But who is responsible—morally responsible—for this deplorable tragedy? Anthony Comstock, Judge Thomas, or the American public? If you say the American public, then, in all seriousness, let there be an immediate WIPING OUT of the abominable unAmerican Comstock law, which law was first enacted in the interests of a pious scoundrel, one whose heartless methods of administering it makes Comstock infinitely worse than the senseless law itself, both of which are a national disgrace, and for the sake of public decency both should be removed at the next assemblage of Congress.

Awake! Awake! O ye liberals, or soon your "land of the free" will be a thing only in name! See, already your liberties are being abridged, and if there are further abridgements you and your apathy will be chiefly to blame. Wake up!

Chicago, Ill. A SPIRITUALIST.

Money.

I have received requests for money from my small pile from many parts of this nation, recently. This causes me to know there is a demand for money; money to help keep men, women and children, now, from poverty, misery and from enforced idleness.

Old men and old women ask for money, also the white and black prostitutes want money, money. Prophets behold signs of a famine of work and of income.

Lucifer—The Light-Bearer, be thou our light as in a wilderness. Show us how we may live in abundance now. Men and women worked in spring, summer and autumn; now they ask for money to exchange for products which they lack, and of which there is abundance in stores and store-houses.

Money—the love of which is because it is a good medium of exchange for other products of the energy and industry of mankind.

Do you, Mr. Lucifer, ever think of the many more subscriptions you might have if your readers had money?—money?—money?

Now the worst form of slavery is to be in money poverty and no employment.

Liberty-loving people want money to exchange their products with others who have work or other things to sell. I hope Lucifer, though you be his Satanic majesty incarnated, you may lead us with good advice about money. You ask for money. I want, I need money.

A. P. HILL.

Press-Writer 76, 13 Isabella St., Boston, Mass.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 14th street, New York.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Prosperity in Chunks and Bunches.

Among the well established institutions of Chicago—with branch offices in London, Paris and Berlin, is the Chicago "Daily News," now in its twenty-seventh year of publication claiming an average daily paid circulation of more than three hundred thousand copies. The five o'clock edition of the "Daily News" Dec. 15, contained the following editorial—entitled "What is Prosperity?"

"Are the people of this country more comfortable now as a whole than they are in years that are not so prosperous, according to the boasts of statesmen and the figures of statisticians? Perhaps so. Yet Superintendent Bicknell of the Chicago Bureau of Charities calls attention to one peculiarity of flush times that should not be overlooked. Prosperity, he says, increases the hardships of poverty because prosperity raises prices of food and fuel.

"People must live. The trouble with what the world calls prosperity is that it comes in bunches. If it could be handed around with careful attention to evenness of distribution everybody would rejoice in its abundance. However, as it manifests itself in this imperfect world prosperity has its victims as well as its beneficiaries. When one man is abnormally prosperous at another man's expense the situation is not enjoyed by the latter. The contentment of the man who obtains the big profits is surpassed only by the disquiet of the man who not only gets left out in the distribution of good things but is distinctly less prosperous than at other times because of the high price of everything he buys.

"Prosperity which does not reduce the volume of suffering has something the matter with it. Superintendent Bicknell says: 'The present winter promises to test the resources of Chicago's charities to their utmost.' There is a lesson here which is not simply the lesson of giving bountifully.

"All persons who are prospering under present conditions should endeavor to eliminate the element of greed from their prosperity, not only that they shall not cause suffering elsewhere but that their own prosperity may endure. The reasonable profit should suffice and the extortionate profit should be driven out of the avenues of trade so that real prosperity may come among us."

* * *

As poverty is the lot of the vast majority of people in this city, if not in all the cities, towns and rural districts of the country called the United States, it follows from the above statement that the "prosperity," of which our political leaders talk so much, is a curse, rather than a blessing to the majority of people, including a majority of the men whose votes placed the present political administration in power.

What better proof do we need of the oft-repeated yet constantly ignored and denied statement that governments exist for the benefit of the rich, the property-owners, and not for the poor, the property-less, the poverty-stricken classes—which latter classes always, under all governments of man by man, constitute the MASSES of population?

* * *

The great masses of people in this country are ASLEEP. They are asleep all their lives. This sleep is none the less real because it is a HYPNOTIC sleep; a sleep induced by the well-known process called "suggestion."

The hypnotizers—that is to say, the governing classes, the privileged few, the professionals, SUGGEST to the non-professionals, the less capable and less greedy masses, that this is a "land of liberty, of equality, of fraternity"—that here every man, even the poorest, has all the rights and privileges, all the opportunities to succeed in life, that any other man possesses, and that if he does not succeed in the race for competence, for comfort, or for wealth even, it is his own fault; not the fault of the government, or of the institutions of the country.

* * *

This suggestion is a LIE so palpable, so monstrous in proportions, that it needs to be constantly repeated. Hence it is one of the very first lessons taught in the nursery, at the parental knee; then in the common school, the Sunday school, the higher schools and colleges; then from the pulpit and political platform, not to mention Fourth of July and other occasions of a socio-politico-religious nature, and last but by no means least by the popular press—the daily, weekly, monthly and quarterly publications of the country—all, ALL, with the rarest exception, join in the combined effort to put to sleep, to hypnotize, the the easily persuaded, the gullible masses and make them believe that "government" means liberty and justice for all and special privileges for none, and that if any are defrauded of their equal right it is not the fault of government as such, but of those who for the time being administer the government, and that all we have to do is to go to the polls and by means of a slip of paper called the ballot, "turn the rascals out and put honest men in their places."

If the masses of voters were not asleep they would know that the voting machine is always "fixed," always "loaded," as dice are loaded. That like lottery schemes, however fair they may seem to the innocent purchaser of tickets, the "bank always wins out," simply because the whole amount of prizes paid out is always much less than the money taken in by the sale of tickets.

* * *

The editorial copied from the "Daily News" gives us additional proof of the hypnotic condition of the masses of the American people. If they were not asleep they would know that prosperity that comes in "bunches," that is, by means of protective tariffs for "infant industries," private ownership and control of public utilities—such as coal mines, petroleum wells, iron mines and their products; the issue and control of circulating medium and of debt-and-tax-paying money—if the masses of people were not asleep they would know that prosperity that comes of a governmental arrangement such as this must necessarily mean power and wealth for the few and slavery and grinding poverty for the many.

* * *

The remedy prescribed by the editor of "The Daily News" reminds us of the advice given to slaveholders fifty years ago, namely that enlightened selfishness should teach them to treat their slaves HUMANELY. In order that the "prosperity" of the rich, the privileged classes, "may endure" they are told to be a little less greedy NOW.

As Shylock asked of the judge—who advised him to be "merciful"—"On what compulsion MUST I? tell me THAT!" so the coal barons answer the editor of the "News" by putting up the price of coal another dollar in midwinter, and the petroleum syndicate answers by advancing the price of Kerosene one cent per gallon in one day, adding another fifty millions to the ir already enormous revenues; then to mollify or prevent popular wrath the head of this syndicate gives one of these fifty millions to the University of Chicago!

* * *

Millionaire Schwab, who got his millions by plain straight robbery of both producer and consumer through "trust" measures—which measures are protected and made possible by the same government that now PROFESSES to be opposed to trusts—Millionaire Schwab agrees with the editor of the "Daily News" in saying that the rich and prosperous should be less selfish, less greedy. From his luxurious winter home in Paris, whither he has gone to escape the cares of business and the importunities of his needy countrymen, Schwab sends, through the the reporter, advice like this:

"Yes, there is pleasure in riches if properly employed. Their use should be altruistic, not selfish. The old teaching that we can do what we please with our own is wrong. Wealth means responsibility; more wealth, more responsibility. The man who helps others judiciously feels better for it. All this reverts to the question of the brotherhood of man."

Millionaire Schwab is president of the Steel Trust, one of the most gigantic and conscienceless of all the robber schemes ever conceived and made possible by the ingenuity of man, and yet he can talk of the "brotherhood of man," and declaim against selfishness.

Talk is cheap; also giving a few thousands or even millions in charity, is cheap, when it helps to make the robbed more willing to allow the robbers to keep and enjoy the bulk of their plunder.

M. HARMAN

The New Abolition.

An imperative demand for a national marriage and divorce law—a uniform FUGITIVE WIFE law—to take the place of the conflicting laws of the various states, on this subject, is the summing up of the most notable symposium on the subject of marriage and divorce ever written or published, so far as I know. For more than two months this symposium has been a leading feature of the editorial columns of the Chicago "Examiner-American," and of the New York "Journal-American."

The last and "summing up" article of this series of articles, or essays, forty-five in all, appeared in the morning edition of the "Examiner-American," Dec. 11. It was written by "Hon." Robert Tayler—the "Honorable" in this case meaning "Congressman," or member of the political body called "the congress of the United States."

Of the writers composing this historic symposium by far the greater number belonging to a single class are priests and clergymen. Fourteen of these are "bishops," one "archbishop," four "reverends," with the affix "D. D." and "L. L. D.;" fifteen are women—only one of whom has a title other than "Mrs."—Rev. Antoinette Brown Blackwell, D. D.; one "general," several "professors"—presidents of colleges, lawyers, etc., etc.

As marriage is either "canonical," that is, a law of the the church, else based on canon law, it is eminently fitting that the clergy should have more to say in regard to what marriage is, and how it should be enforced, than any other class. And as all laws relating to marriage and divorce have been hitherto made by men, and not by women, it would seem fitting that a man, a law-maker, a member of the national congress, should have the last word, the final summing up, of this memorable discussion.

The opening paragraphs of Congressman Tayler's article read thus:

"Through all the eloquence and despair which we find in the interesting series of articles which have appeared in the "Examiner-American" on the question of divorce runs one persistent note—the cry for uniform legislation. My contribution to the discussion will sound no other chord. I shall hope for it and work for it, not in the expectation that upon its accomplishment human nature will change or that men and women will more wisely marry or be more faithful to the marriage vows' But I must assert, and I do insist, that the first and most effective practical step can be taken only by an authoritative definition, universal throughout the country, of what the marriage tie is, and how it can be lawfully broken."

As a lawyer and legislator Mr. Tayler is chiefly concerned in magnifying his office and making it honorable, respected, not only in one state or section of country but throughout the nation. Hence he considers that the "moral and political shame of our civilization here in the United States" consists in the fact that the word "husband" does not mean the same in "New York as in Ohio and Dakota," and that the "issue of a marriage in one state is not lawfully the issue of that marriage in every other state."

Hence Mr. Tayler is an earnest advocate of a Constitutional Amendment permitting the national congress to define what constitutes legal marriage and also what should constitute lawful ground for divorce, or annulment of such marriage.

As to the nature of that proposed national legislation Mr. Tayler clearly indicates what he thinks it should be, when he says:

"The concentration of public sentiment upon the Congressional mind would undoubtedly result in entirely suitable legislation in this regard. Congress has recently passed divorce laws for the District of Columbia, and they are of such quality and character as to satisfy the best sentiment in the country."

As noted elsewhere in this issue the Divorce law enacted for the District of Columbia is substantially the canon law, the church law, which recognizes but one legal cause for divorce, namely, adultery, sometimes also called "infidelity."

By "the best sentiment in the country" Mr. Tayler very evidently means the sentiment of churchmen and church women such as have expressed their opinion in the symposium of which he himself has the distinguished honor of writing the synopsis and the closing word—the morally if not the legally authoritative word.

* * *

Of those who wrote for this symposium on Marriage and Divorce, is one of Lucifer's subscribers, J. W. Kelley, of Marion, Indiana. Because of his iconoclastic treatment of the subject, or for some unexplained reason, Bro. Kelley's article was denied admission to the columns of the "Examiner and American," whereupon it was sent to Lucifer and was published by us in two installments, the last of which appears in this week's issue. When compared with the utterances of the long line of distinguished names whose articles were accepted by the editor of the symposium, that of Bro. Kelley has no need of apology. For logical and manly treatment of a subject that will not down at the bidding of Madame Grundy or of any one else, it is equal to the best, and superior to many.

On one point, however, Lucifer's readers, many of them, will doubtless be inclined to take issue with Friend Kelley, and that is when he says: "Under a true civilization every child would be considered the child of the state," also when he would have the state decide who should be fathers and who should not.

A sufficient answer to this plan, as it seems to me, is to ask, "How or where does 'the state' get its authority to take such paternal control? The state is only a policeman to help the citizens to guard against invasion. If I as a citizen have no right to assume such authority over others I certainly cannot delegate such rights and powers to my servant and agent, the state.

As I see it, state supervision of marriage and the care of children would be a far greater evil than the evils it is intended to alleviate or cure.

M. HARMAN.

THE ARTICLE signed "A Spiritualist" was written by a well-known physician of Chicago, and though somewhat long the importance of the subject and the able manner in which it is handled should cause it to receive more than a casual reading. "Repeal the Comstock Law," is one of burning issues of the hour.

Voltairine de Cleyre Shot.

Word comes from Philadelphia that Voltairine de Cleyre, who is personally known to many of our readers, was shot by a man named Helcher, on Friday last. Unrequited love is believed to have been the cause of the probably fatal wounding of the most distinguished poet of the Anarchist movement of this country. Further particulars of this tragical affair will be given in our next.

VARIOUS VOICES.

J. A. W., Amesbury, Mass.:—Miss Ella M. Hollis, of Groveland, Mass., died Tuesday, Dec. 9. She was a liberal and a noble woman.

John Newman, Ouray, Colo.:—A. Isaak and other critics who think that wages are not compatible with Anarchy should read pages 51-2 and 3 of Lum's "Economics of Anarchy." The following is part: "Remember that the abolition of the wage-system is but the cessation of conditions which confine productive labor to that system, and if hiring labor remains—and there is no reason why it should not, the sum paid must present greater inducements than equal opportunities for self labor [self-employment] presents." It cannot be said that all Anarchists desire to abolish wages.

Carrie A., DesMoines, Iowa:—I am enclosing $1 in renewal of my subscription to Lucifer, and 10 cents for which please send me two or three copies of Lucifer Oct. 9. If you have any of those pink leaflets entitled "Do you know," please send me a few. They gave the legal status of women on several points and were a real eye-opener. I disposed of mine and have always wanted more. Now give me a little credit please. I have read Lucifer for four years at least and with the exception of a very few numbers every one of my Lucifers have passed into the hands of some one else. Possibly considerable thought has been awakened by this method, whether many have become subscribers or not.

D. L., Goshen, Ind.:—Lucifer is indeed a Light-Bearer. Its chief power, it seems to me, is in its effort in giving light on sex. The press and platform should certainly, have the right of free and unlimited discussion in this line. Lucifer does all it can and since I began reading it (about three years ago) I have succeded in learning of Ellis' "Studies in the Psychology of Sex" and of "Psychopathia Sexualis" both of which I have procured and thoroughly examined. In reading these works, references are found to the History of Human Marriage (Westermarck), Chapters on Human Love, (Mortimer) and the Psychology of the Sexual Instinct, (Roux). I endeavored to get these works and sent to the "Truth Seeker," Bradford, England, but was informed that the house publishing them (The University Press, London) had just been raided by the police and all the books destroyed. The "Truth Seeker," however, sent round to a number of firms in England, hoping to get copies for me but failed. If Lucifer knows of any American dealers in this line of literature who would be likely to have copies of the above named works, will it kindly give me addresses?

Volney Abbey, Wathena, Kansas:—"No question is ever settled until it is settled right." More than half a century ago Congress passed the Fugitive Slave law, because such a law had become necessary, to compel people to return the runaway slave. Now we are confronted with the divorce question. Divorce is becoming more common, thanks to increasing intelligence of the people; therefore the same old trinity "god, government and grundy" are clamoring for a national divorce law, knowing well that their marriage system is doomed, as was their other divine institution, human slavery. They prate about the shame and disgrace of divorce when we know that divorce is neither a shame nor disgrace. Several writers in Lucifer have proposed reform in the divorce laws. No mere reform will do. Let us have no temporary makeshift, but let us build for all time. Let us repeal all marriage and divorce laws and leave all men and women free to attend to their own private affairs and then we shall see fewer home quarrels and much less misery; fewer murders and suicides. My next neighbor will tell us that if women were free they would each want twenty men. Well, if so, let them each have twenty men; but my knowledge—gained from many good physicians and by observation, convinces me that most women have too much husband in one man.

I know of a few instances of people being divorced and then becoming good friends. Not long ago I saw a letter from a divorced man who says he and his former wife are now on friendly terms, visit and take meals together. Now let me tell the aforesaid trinity a little secret: Your marriage institution is doomed. It may live for a generation or more, but it is dying. Speed the day when it shall be consigned to oblivion!

J. M. Gilbert, M. D., Homer, Ind. Ter.:—I send you 25 cents for Lucifer for thirteen weeks and "The Prodigal Daughter." I also send 15 cents for forty back numbers. Every now and then I have been receiving sample copies sent out by the editor or some friend, and I have desired the paper ever since the first two or three copies.

I believe in the free discussion of every subject no matter how long stupidity has regarded it in the past as too sacred to be approached or too obscene to be mentioned. Ignorance and stupidity are the cause of prejudice, false modesty, and superstition—the mother of all religions.

I have entertained the thought for some time as expressed in an editorial of the last number of Lucifer: "With those who want political rulership. . . . . I have no quarrel but do not want them to compel me to help them support it. I rebel, and for much the same reasons that I rebel and refuse to be led by the nose by religious fakirs." The government is continually trampling on many of the liberties dear to us, and it is a constant menace to all of them. The Constitution has almost become a dead letter, and we are very insecure. Governments are profitable to those who rule and their special favorites, but to the great majority they are evils. It ought to be plain to any one that government and religion are twin evils.

Again I have asked: In what way does legal or religious ceremonies change the relation between husband and wife? Is it possible that any one can see how mummery makes any difference? I think not. If the relation between lovers is respectable and right after such has been complied with, it is before. Ceremony does not and cannot change it. Love, like belief, cannot be controlled by the will, and he who endeavors to control it by laws is very stupid to say the least. When either husband or wife has lost the love for the other, to force them to continue the relation is legalized prostitution. Radical reform on this line would put an end to prostitution. So I think.

MENTAL SCIENCE AS A GUIDE TO HEALTH, HAPPINESS, AND BUSINESS SUCCESS.

BY ALBERT CHAVANNES.

Chapter Contents: What is Mental Science? What will it do for us? Happiness; Character; Intellectual Character; Physical Character; Heredity and Health; Mind Cures; Holiness Success; The Law of Circumstances; Individuals; Marriage; Parents and Children. Political Organization; Political Economy; Communism and Co-operation, Consolidation and Organization.

Address Albert Chavannes, 308 Fourth Ave. Knoxville, Tenn. Price 10 cents. Stamps taken in payment.

Self Hypnotic Healing.

I have made a late discovery that enables all to induce the hypnotic sleep in themselves instantly, awaken at any desired time and thereby cure all known diseases and bad habits. Anyone can induce this sleep in themselves instantly at first trial, control their dreams, read thoughts of friends and comrades, visit any part of the earth, solve hard questions and problems in the sleep and remember all when awake. This so-called Mental Vision Lesson will be sent to anyone ABSOLUTELY FREE sexually enabling him to do the above without further charge

Prof. R. R. BUTTON, Lincoln, Neb., U. S. A.

Use Pink Purity. It will keep your breath sweet and fresh, and do a score of other useful things. Price 2 cents. Send stamps for descriptive leaflet.

Orofino, Idaho. BROOKS.

REMOVAL NOTICE.

Facilities for properly conducting my ever increasing Mail-Order Department being inadequate in Denver I have permanently located in this suburb of Chicago, and trust my many friends and patrons will continue to favor me with their many kind orders.

Send for prices of Watches, Diamonds, Opals, Silver, Plated and Optical goods, Music boxes, Jewelery, Chains, Clocks, Free-thought and other badges, Ingersoll spoons, and my tract—"Theism in the Crucible"—free. OTTO WETTSTEIN, La Grange, Illinois.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer the Light Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Woman Who Dares

BY URSULA N. GESTEFELD.

A novel, whose heroine seeks to find and realize her own individuality and, having found it, dares to maintain it in the marital relation. It is a carefully written story and meant to show the injustice of the marriage relation as usually regarded, and of the dual standard of morality, tacitly accepted however theoretically opposed. The subject is treated forcefully and directly, yet always tactfully and fairly, and possesses all the strength of moderation combined with just and equable criticism. The story reads more like events in real life than those of romance.

It is seldom that the most vital though most delicate of subjects is treated with such delicacy. The large number of letters from women received after its first publication is evidence that there is room for its heroine in many home.

"Here we have a well written story with a noble purpose. It is a woman's novel, and by that I do not mean that it is intended only for women; on the contrary, it ought to be read by every man in America who has the brain, conscience, and refinement of nature to appreciate its masterly presentation of what is the simple right, nay, more, is the sacred duty of every married woman to demand the absolute right to her own person in wedlock no less than out of wedlock. . . . In the presentation of the vital thought found in these pages, Mrs. Gestefeld has given us a superb piece of work. It is a story of great vitality. The author is a thoughtful and a deeply spiritual woman. With the keen intuitive insight so often met with in profoundly spiritual natures, she has discerned one of the greatest moral crimes of the present."—The Arena.

Size 5 1-4x7 1-2 inches; 388 pages. Beautifully printed on laid paper, bound in green Holliston linen, and stamped in ink with original cover design. Price, $1.25, postpaid. THE GESTEFELD PUBLISHING CO., 178 Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ills. Department LF.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only;" Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem. Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization. The Folly and Cruelty of it All. Price 15c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

A Private Maternity Home

Or Lying-in Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired.

For particulars and terms give description of case, and address.

Suite 61-119 LaSalle St., Chicago Ill. C. S. WOOD, M. D.

489.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

Trial Trip Subscriptions.

For one dollar we will send Lucifer ten weeks to eight different addresses, and to the one sending us the list, any one of the following books:

The Origin of the Family, Private Property and the State. By Frederick Engels, 217 pages, handsomely bound in cloth. Postage, 6 cents.

The Slavery of Our Times. By Leo Tolstoi. With portrait of author, 186 pages. Blue cloth; silver lettering. Postage 8 cents.

Nora: A Doll's House, and Ghosts. The two dramas bound together. Olive cloth; red lettering. 108 pages. Postage 8 cents. This offer will, we hope, induce our friends to extend Lucifer's circulation materially.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author.

The Sex Passion.
Man, the Ungroven.
Woman, the Serf.
Woman in Freedom
Marriage: a Retrospect.
Marriage: a Forecast.
The Free Society.
Some remarks on the early star and sex worships.
Notes—On the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population.

The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. Price, $1.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 466 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.
ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.
AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 90c; paper 15c.
ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.
A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches how to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of all the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $1.75.
A FLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.
A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.
AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.
BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth, $1.
BIBLE TEMPERANCE. H. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Condemned, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.
BORNING BETTER BABIES.—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. H. S. Pools, Jr., M. D. 10c.
CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.
CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 41 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 256 pages. 50c.
CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.
DARWIN, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.
DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. G. Spence. 178 pages. 50c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most gracious theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, cloth and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Scientific Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Crities; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 61 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $3.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Castle Chavannes. 50c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum 10c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 240 pages. 60c. Postage, 5c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law, G. C. Siemens and David Overmyer. 10c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 25c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John H. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished. It was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 318 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HILDA'S HOME. Rose Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 320 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIME; or, Life in Scotland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 37 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Burkle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Voltaire, etc. 50c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. M. Harman. 5c.

JOSHUA'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KARREEA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

KORADINE. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1886, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 25c; paper, 10c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 50c.

LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III. (1890). Cloth, $2.25. Postage, 25c.

MAGNETISM, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSWORK. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Conformity of Slave-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Criticism of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Plural Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Tuberculosis in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, H. H. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Fox of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 15c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsle, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $3.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 50c.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I. The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 50c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 128 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Marietta), Ramblemosse of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case. Issue of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 207 pages. 25c.

THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an acpublic records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Whitlow and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 321 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1, state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1, state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1, cheap edition, 50c.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and asceticism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 25 large pages; twelve copies, 25c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 10c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 25c.

THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1723, quoted by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuit craft and is a plain index to the underhand working of that order against the welfare of individuals and society. 25c.

THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 25c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Telepathy (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Winse). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 25c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $1.50.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Darling. 15c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 32 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 3, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 179 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 50 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VI., No. 51. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, JAN. 1, E. M. 303. [C. E. 1903.] WHOLE No. 950

MUTATION.

Deep is the heart of human kind;
Vain are the thinkers who would find
A perfect symbol for its thought;
Vainly the final word is sought.
There is no line of human creeds
But tells its tale of human needs
Yet still, from age to age they change.
The future to the past is strange,
And the yearnings of each day,
New doubts that stir, new hopes that sway,
Shall be embodied, endlessly,
In creeds to be, and yet to be.—Priscilla Leonard.

Whither Are We Drifting?

[The following brief history of the Federal enactment commonly known as the Comstock postal law, was first published in Lucifer several years ago. Believing this statement of the facts of history and the arguments based thereon to be as timely now as when first published, the article is reproduced this week in the hope that it may help to rouse the sleeping public mind to a sense of the dangers that threaten the real PALLADIUM of human liberty here in the United States—THE FREEDOM OF THE PRESS.

Taken in connection with the report of Anthony Comstock's lecture in Brooklyn, New York, on Sunday, Dec. 7, this article should be widely circulated and carefully read by all who would not themselves be slaves. M. H.]

No law ever enacted has contributed more to bring the whole body of the law into contempt and disrepute than the infamous law which is known as the Comstock Law. No honest prosecution has ever taken place under this law. No case can be pointed to of a conviction under this law which has been honestly prosecuted for an honest purpose. Nor can it be shown that any punishment inflicted under this law has ever had the effect of making the victim any better or the community any purer. This law was passed March 3 1873 by trickery and fraud in the confusion and uproar of the closing hours of the most corrupt Congress ever convened in this country. It was passed without debate between one and two o'clock on Sunday morning, March 2, and signed by the president Monday night, with no thought or deliberation on the part of anybody, amid a vast number of bills of all sorts. One of the individuals interested in pushing this vile law through this debauched Congress was Comstock himself, of whom it is not necessary here to say anything. Another was a theological hypocrite who publicly announced that he believed in deceit. Another was a person who violated the law himself and through his money or personal influence managed to escape prosecution and go scot free. And there were others of morals equally eccentric whose trickery aided in the passage of this law.

It will be well to reprint what some of the leading papers said at that time of the scenes of confusion and debauchery amid which this bill came into existence.

The Washington correspondent of the New York "Herald" says in the issue of March 2:

"The wrangle over the proposed increase of congressional salaries was rather funny today in the House, from the manner of the members, they were so anxious for more pay, but they feared to say so, knowing only too well that Congress just now is not so high in the esteem of the people as to be thought worthy of an increase of pay."

On the same day the same paper says editorially:

"The Credit Mobilier Congress was busy up to a late hour this morning preparatory to giving up a life that goes out in the blackness of infamy tomorrow. . . . Senators. . . . were occupied in voting on appropriation bills the jobbery and robbery of which cannot be discovered in the hurry of the closing hours of legislation and which sometimes remain forever secret from all except the interested parties. In the House of Representatives the bustle and excitement were even greater than in the Senate, and, no doubt, amid the confusion and under the cloak of patriotism and honesty the usual eleventh-hour stealing was accomplished."

And again on March 3:

"What remains of the foul work of this memorable session will probably be finished today."

On March 4 the "Herald's" correspondent says:

"The House was in a noisy, uproarious mood today. . . . the confusion and uproar were never surpassed."

The "Sun" says editorially March 4:

"Is there any corruption which Congress will not justify and approve any infamy which either House will not boldly adopt as its own? And is there any limit to this process of public and official degradation? The indignation of the people alone can afford an adequate solution of this problem."

And again on March 5:

"Within the last one hundred and fifty years there have been more famous legislative bodies than this, but we do not remember one more infamous. There were conscientious gentlemen in the Senate and House, but, prima facie, the case is against the whole of them, and till the close of the present century membership in that Congress will, in the estimation of the general public, throw upon the incumbent the burden of proving that he was not a dishonest man.

"The entire term of this Congress has been characterized by a series of disreputable transactions which have no parallel in our history.

. . . . . .

"This is the Congress which some Macaulay of the next century will describe as more infamous than that Parliament which originated Law's celebrated Mississippi scheme, and more corrupt than those Parliaments which Walpole used to purchase as he bought merino sheep and Flanders mares to stock his estate in Sussex."

The "Tribune" March 4 in an editorial says:

"The whole Congress has been characterized by an unprecedented neglect of the public business in the early stages of the session and confusion at the close.

. . . . . .

"The senate has been obstructive, partisan and unusually corrupt. Considering the relative smallness of its numbers, it has been conspicuously bad in morals."

The "Times" March 3 bears this testimony:

"No one who reads even the comparatively brief reports of the Associated Press can fail to see the haste and confusion which prevail during the closing hours of Congress. It is idle to deny that this condition of things gives rise to many opportunities for fraud and that some of these opportunities are used is only too probable. But if Congress were composed, in both branches, of perfectly immaculate men it would be impossible to avoid great injury to the public interests under the existing method of doing business. The bills which are crowded at the last are precisely those which it is most desirable should be deliberately considered, and the true scope and effect which it is least possible to penetrate by hurried examination."

And again March 5:

"The Forty-Second Congress which finally adjourned at noon yesterday took part during its term in some of the most important parts of our recent history. Public attention is now fixed on the exciting and painful scenes in the midst of which it closed its career."

* * *

And so on throughout the whole range of the press all over the country—not the partisan papers alone that were politically opposed to the Republican party then dominant in Congress, but papers of all grades and shades of political opinion.

The history of those times is too well known to leave a doubt as to the way in which the enactment of the Comstock Law was procured. And having thus gotten their law the filthy gang for whose use it was made violate every principle of honesty and decency and enforce their law to silence arguments which they cannot otherwise answer, to suppress thought, to threaten Science, to pry into the confidences of the mails and to limit liberty.

And now, just a few questions:

Whither are we drifting?

Are the masses of the American people asleep, that they tamely submit to such robbery of their "inalienable rights"?

Where are the "landmarks" of that liberty for the vindication of which the American Republic was founded?

Of what avail are our much lauded "Declaration" and our "National Constitution" when their most vital principles are openly, boastingly, outraged by a semi-religious Association through laws of its own formulating?—laws that make it and its agents the irresponsible censors over public morals?

Where are the safeguards against theologic despotism—from which our forefathers fled—when the citizen is subject to arrest and imprisonment and his property seized and destroyed, without even the form of trial—but merely on the "information" of a spy and blackmailer sent out by the aforesaid semi-religious Association self-styled the "Society for the Prevention of Vice"?

Then, if the case should come to trial, where is the rational ground of hope that justice will be done to the accused when it is remembered that there is absolutely no standard as to what is "vicious," in literature or in art, except the preconceived notions, the prejudices, of the prosecutor, the judge and the jurors? That is to say, when all that is needed to secure conviction is to bring the suit before a judge and a jury whose prejudices are in favor of the prevailing theologic and against the scientific code of morality?

Then, in case the "agent" should make a mistake in selecting his field of operations and the accused should be set free, where is redress to come from for loss of time, loss of property, damage to business,—to say nothing of indignities suffered, resulting often in loss of health, while under arrest and in prison? Against Comstock & Co. there is absolutely no redress! They are no more amenable to the tribunals designed for the protection of the citizen against official (officious) invasion than were their prototypes, the religious Inquisitors of the sixteenth century

Again we ask,

WHITHER ARE WE DRIFTING?

Anthony Comstock Under Fire.

On Sunday, December 7, at a meeting of the Brooklyn Philosophical Association the purest and most virtuous of all men now living in the United States (and when I say "the purest," every intelligent reader of Lucifer will understand that I refer to the saintly Anthony Comstock) apologized for his existence.

He was invited by the Association to lecture on the aims and work of the Society for Prevention of Vice. He accepted the invitation. There he stood, the very image of virtue, and explained to the sinners of greater New York the noble work he is doing for the world.

Look at me, he said. Am I not a good man? I sacrifice everything I have for the protection of your children. Many years ago I came into contact with young men who had been falling like autumn leaves. I found nasty publications in their hands, but there was no law providing punishment for dealers in obscene literature and pictures. I prayed to God for guidance, and he answered my prayer. Of course, he did; what else could he do? With the help of God I succeeded in inducing Congress to pass a bill declaring all obscene matter to be unmailable. I am proud to say that it was I who drafted the original law. But, mind you, I am a perfectly honorable man. I never enter a man's house unless the law gives me the right to do so, and—I am the law. But this is a matter of secondary importance. I believe in fighting the devil at his own door. If I see a mad dog attacking your child, I will first kill the dog and talk afterward, for I must remind you that my only object is to protect your innocent children. Young men and women are in a plastic state; every one of them is a storage battery, and if you put degrading matter in their hands you ruin their lives. Once more I must tell you that after making an arrest, I have nothing more to do with the offender. The judge and jury are then masters of the situation.

Once upon a time I caught a man having nasty plates in his possession, and I snatched them away from him and smashed them with a butcher's cleaver. Was this a violation of the law?

Why, bless your souls, my dear friends, you would have done it yourselves if you had seen the plates. They were so vile that if I were to tell you what they represented you would drop dead on the spot. But alas! the good and virtuous are always slandered. People began to circulate false stories about me, and sent a petition to Congress asking that the law be repealed. The hearing took place. The room was packed with my opponents, and I was alone—a Daniel in the lions' den, as it were. I was alone; but, no! God was with me, and "me and God" have won the case. I spread the facts and the law remained on the books. I have done wonderful things. I have confiscated eighty-five tons of immoral books and pictures—bad stuff that scars the conscience and damns the soul.

Again I repeat that I am not responsible for anything that is going on in the United States, the judge and jury decide the cases; not I. You should know that whatever tends to corrupt society is a breach of peace. The good order of the community depends upon morals, and it is my business, not yours, to define what constitutes morality. Liberty that does not respect the law is treason. I am the law; and therefore if you do not respect me you are traitors.

Do you remember the good and great Judge Benedict, who sent to prison that miserable sinner, D. M. Bennett? He was a dear soul, and is now cited as a leading authority. My duty, friends, is plain. I am a postoffice inspector without compensation. All my witness fees I turn over into the treasury of my society for the protection of your boys and girls. Do you not see how good I am? And yet you are opposed to me! Verily, "I have nourished and brought up children, and they have rebelled against me."

Dear friends, I am a poor man. I have a home, but it is mortgaged. Can you now doubt my honesty? I have the kindest feelings for everybody, even for my opponents, and all I ask of you is to grant me the right to protect your innocent children and to prosecute you whenever I am inclined to do so. Is this asking too much?

A great fuss has been made about a little affair in this city, and I have been charged with hounding a woman to death. What rot! That woman had been arrested in Chicago, Philadelphia, and other cities, and I had nothing to do with those arrests. In New York a prominent business man and some women have complained to me of her vile stuff, and I had her arrested. That is all. Anything bad about it? Why, look at me! Am I capable of doing anything mean? I am seeking to build up noble characters for the church and state.

* * *

So far for the saintly Anthony. The above represents the substance, if not the words, of his "lecture." He was replied to by four eminent Freethinkers—Dr. Moncure D. Conway, Edwin C. Walker, Hugh O. Pentecost, and Henry Rowley. He was requested to read passages from the Bible which Mr. Walker would choose for him; and asked if he would not read them in public or give them to his children, then why did he prosecute poor Mrs. Craddock but let the Bible go through the mail?

Mr. Walker took him to task in regard to the Craddock case and challenged him to produce his witnesses, or stand convicted of slandering the dead. Dr. Conway spoke with great feeling of Mrs. Craddock, and condemned Comstock and his methods severely. Mr. Pentecost admitting the indicted passage in Mrs. Craddock's pamphlet to be "obscene" from the Comstockian point of view, called upon Comstock to suppress Walt Whitman, Shakespeare, the Bible, and other books which were just as "obscene" as Mrs. Craddock's booklet.

Many other suggestions and questions were fired at Comstock, but to no purpose. In his reply he evaded every question, and instead of dealing with the points raised by his critics he read ancient court decisions proving—what? That there was law in existence before he was born, and that he was not responsible for it. The audience became somewhat impatient, and he was asked why he did not prosecute the publishers of the Bible. He felt embarrassed and looked at the floor instead of at the audience. When the cries of "The Bible! The Bible!" became insistent, he murmured, "The Bible needs no defense," and continued his talk about law, and necessity of protecting children.

Mr. Walker asked, "What had the prosecution of Mr. Harman for publishing the Markland letter to do with the protection of children?" No reply. Dr. Conway accused him of using decoy letters, but he explained that he used only test letters—a perfectly honorable and legitimate business! He made no offer to produce his witnesses against Mrs. Craddock, and did not even mention her name in his reply. In short, he proved to the satisfaction of all thinking and fair minded men that he could not and would not defend himself. You might as well talk to a wooden figure as to talk to him, and it seems that all attempt to bring him to reason is a waste of time.

There are people—and some of them are Freethinkers—who consider Comstock an honest man. I will not say that he is dishonest. But why did he evade all questions submitted to him? Where is the courage of his convictions? It was easy enough for him to give a "lecture" and present his side, but an honest man meets every question squarely and fairly, and when we see one adopting Comstock's methods in replying to his critics, we may be justified in having some DOUBTS as to his honesty.

CYRUS W. COOLEDGE.

New York.

SEND US NAMES for samples and trial subscriptions.

Roosevelt and Paine.

The following is a copy of a letter sent to the New York "Evening Journal" by C. Amory Stevens, of New York. Paine's admirers will not let "His Accidency," President Roosevelt, forget his scurrilous characterization of Paine.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL:—Though your issue of last evening presented an impressive list of Mr. Roosevelt's severe and unbecoming criticisms of American citizens who were sufficiently respected and popular to reach high stations, yet even that long list was not complete.

Mr. Roosevelt also is the first historian to describe Thomas Paine as a "filthy little atheist." Thomas Paine was too intelligent not to recognize and respect the supreme and wonderful intelligence that created the Universe—Man. Whether in his day or ours, that creator be described as "God," "Nature" or "First Cause", surely intelligence never believed nor described creation as occuring without any cause. Moreover, it is well known that Thomas Paine was neither "little" nor "filthy" in mind or body. Mr. Roosevelt might with as much propriety, have described Benjamin Franklin, the close friend of Thomas Paine, as a filthy little idiot.

Every intelligent and truth respecting student of American history must regret to know that after a century of advanced civilization a United States official and professor of history could so flagrantly misrepresent the character and seek to belittle the memory of one who did so much for America and Humanity as did Thomas Paine.

The enclosed letter of T. B. Harned of Philadelphia to Jas B. Elliott of the same city, a contribution for the Paine Centennial Celebration, and which I find printed in the "Torch of Reason" of the 27th ult., would enlighten Mr. Roosevelt, or any other one in such sad darkness as to the useful and honored life record of Thomas Paine. Truly yours,

C. AMORY STEVENS.

Free Children.

The question will be asked, How could free children be properly reared and educated in such a society as ours with its prejudice against them and their parents?

I reply that this prejudice is weakening in the great centers of population coincidently with the spread of radical industrial ideas. And the breaking up of old standards in general would be taken advantage of by those who would destroy the marriage tyranny.

But still more could the process be advanced by some kind of national association of those devoted to the reformation. Then persons having free children would be able to render support to one another. The children thus born might be regarded as the children of the association, to be received and assisted wherever they should go. Where there is a union of people with certain ideas the community is much less ardent in assailing them, because it feels the dignity of numbers and of organized purpose. It is less safe to assail an individual backed by a national body than one backed by nothing.

The laws are to be fought and changed until all marriage laws are abolished. This also might be better done by union.

There are undoubtedly great numbers who believe in abolishing marriage and begetting free children. An association formed let us say to establish a permanent fund to help in the proper education of such offspring where the parents could not afford it, would bring many of these people, who are found in all walks of life, to the front.

It is time to face society on this issue more solidly and squarely, and compel it to understand our motives and views The uniform divorce law people and Comstockians should not have the field to themselves. And we cannot overcome them single handed.

MORRISON I. SWIFT.

Philadelphia, Dec. 12 1902.

Forty copies of Lucifer of different dates, only 15 cen

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Sexology—

In its Relation to Vice and Crime, will be the subject of a lecture by the editor of this paper before the Chicago Society of Anthropology, Sunday January 4, 1903, at Hall 13 Masonic Temple, ninth floor, beginning promptly at 3:30 p. m. Readers and friends of Lucifer, living in or near Chicago, are especially requested to be present and take part in the discussion of this vitally important subject. Admission free.

"Sex contains all," says the poet-prophet of realism, Walt Whitman.

A National Fugitive Wife Law.

In last week's Lucifer I quoted the words of Congressman Tayler in his summing up of the symposium on "How to Cure the Divorce Evil—the National Disgrace, etc."—that for many weeks had appeared in the daily issues of the Hearst syndicate of papers,—New York, Chicago and San Francisco.

As stated by Mr. Tayler there was one point on which all, or nearly all, the writers upon this subject were agreed, and that was in demanding national legislation to define what constitutes legal marriage, and also what should constitute legal ground for annulment of the marriage bond.

This movement for a national divorce law I designated as a national FUGITIVE WIFE law,—thus named for the reason that marriage—though made originally by man and for man's convenience—is incomparably more to woman than it is to man.

Man is not, and cannot be, enslaved in marriage as woman can be and is, enslaved.

In most men's lives marriage comes as an incident—if it comes at all—nothing more.

To the average woman who marries, marriage is HER ALL! It includes all else; home, property, business, recreation, children, lover—or lovers—friends, enemies, health or disease, culture or lack of culture, rationality or superstition, freedom or slavery, longevity or premature death, etc., etc.

This is so, inevitably MUST be so, simply because by nature's decree, nature's division of labor, woman is the RACE-BUILDER; the home-maker; and race-reproduction and home-making are the aim, end and object of marriage—for woman.

That national supervision of marriage and divorce would mean more to women than to men is proved by the report that "an official from Washington has been digging through the records of the [Cook] County building and has discovered that during the twelve months ending Dec. 1 the number of divorces granted approached close to 2,000." "Three-fourths of the applicants"—continues the "Magazine" editor of the Chicago "Inter-Ocean"—"are women."

In her symposium article, printed December 10, in the Chicago "Examiner-American," Susan B. Anthony urges that marriage should not be the whole of woman's life, as it is now. "Woman," says Miss A., "whether married or single, must be free to act as her judgment dictates. Marriage must be an incident in her life, as it is in mans, and she must be educated to regard it as such, and not as the chief end and aim."

The most radical of Anarchists could scarcely have put the question of woman's freedom more clearly, more concisely, than to say, "Woman, whether married or single, must be free to act as her judgment dictates."

Can anything be more revolutionary than this?

What would there be left of canon law marriage, statutory marriage, institutional marriage, if woman were always to act as her judgment should dictate?

But it is fair to ask, how much of woman's time and energy would be left for gainful pursuits, for bread-winning pursuits, for works of popular education, for the business of the inventor, the machinist, the navigator, the explorer, etc., after the claims upon her as race-builder and home-maker had been satisfied?

True, there are many women by nature more masculine than feminine—Miss Anthony herself for one, if I read her physical lineaments aright—and for such the work that naturally devolves upon man as man would be suitable, more suitable than race-building or home-making. Mrs. Stanton tells us that while her children were in their minority she devoted herself to them, and when they no longer needed her care she gave her chief energies to public work.

But these instances are clearly exceptional and cannot be successfully followed by the great majority of womankind.

Race building—child-bearing, child-rearing and home-making, will never be mere incidents in woman's life so long as she is WOMAN, and lives a truly normal life.

* * *

In the following paragraph Miss Anthony throws a veritable bomb-shell into the camp of those who call divorce "national disgrace" and who clamor for a national marriage law and for the enforcement of the canon law which makes man the legal head of the family, the legal head of woman.

"DIVORCE IS NOT A NATIONAL DISGRACE. It simply is the result of that injustice of the marriage compact which gives to the husband the legal ownership of the wife's person and services during her whole lifetime. The trouble commences when he asserts his right and she rebels against it. This is usually the beginning of a battle which is unequal from first to last. He has gospel, law and public sentiment on his side; she has nothing but her outraged sense of justice. It may be said that none but a coarse, brutal man would assert this right, but you must remember that a large per cent of men are not sufficiently developed to recognize the wife's ownership of herself. Neither does woman know exactly what she is fighting against. She feels that her individual husband is especially tyrannical, but she does not see that it is the LAW which makes her his subject, his slave, that is responsible for this tyranny."

Here again we see the analogy between chattel slavery and the slavery of marriage, law-made marriage—"the only scrdom now recognized by law," as John Stuart Mill puts it. It was not that all slaveholders were brutal and tyrannical, but that the LAW gave them the right and the power to be such whenever pride, cupidity or passion prompted them to be brutal and tyrannical. And the same of husbands.

* * *

ANOTHER SYMPOSIUM.

Since the close of the first symposium on Divorce and Marriage another on the same subject has been printed in the Hearst journals, called out by the recent European "court scandal" caused by the flight of Princess Louise of Saxe-Coburg, from her home, her husband and children. Of the four writers who have given us their views upon the cause of this highly sensational bit of court news we have room in this issue to notice only the opinion of Mrs. Elizabeth Walling who sums the matter up in these words:

"For the moral effect upon society of the transgression of the Princess Louise society can but thank itself for the cruelty and injustice of its marriage and divorce laws. To continue the delicate relation of love after the sentiment of love has ceased to be is an outrage upon the heart—a sin against the sensibilities. The law which prohibits a husband and wife from dissolving a tie which is joyless, inharmonious with their innate delicate moral sense and repugnant to reason, is a social despotism which breeds shams and hypocrisies from which germinate misery and vice."

If Mrs. Walling had added—breeds wars, breeds murders, suicides, lunacies, idiocies, imbecilities, robberies—the whole endless catalogue of crimes that can be committed upon the now living and especially upon the yet to be born, she would have come nearer telling the harm done by the irrational, the tyrannical and worse than brutal marriage and divorce laws of all nations calling themselves Christian. M. HARMAN.

Charity and the Trusts.

Never before in the history of Chicago has "charity," public, and private, been so generously lavish in its efforts to supply the poor with a bountiful "Christmas dinner" as on the occasion of the midwinter festival for the year 1902, common calendar, or 302 of the Brunonian Era. Prominent among those who acted as almoners to the needy was the Chicago "Examiner-American," which paper collected and distributed about six thousand dollars, and spent the amount in purchase of the traditional "Christmas turkey," cakes, pies, fruit and other accompaniments that would help to make the families of the very poor feel that for one day at least they could dine as well as their rich neighbors.

Many other business firms, also individual donors and charitable associations, etc., etc., vied with each other in the effort to make the poor, the improvident and unfortunate forget their troubles and enjoy, for the time being, the luxury of having enough to eat.

* * *

Now, while it may have a cynical sound the question seems not untimely to ask whether the poor beneficiaries or the rich combinations, "the trusts," profited most by this spectacular giving of money in charity.

Take for instance the item of meat. Turkies, geese, ducks and chickens were plentiful, presumably, on the farm, as in ordinary years. The same of all other kinds of flesh meat. The cost of feed and care of these fowls was not greater during the summer and fall of 1902 than in average years. The farmer, the poultry raiser, received but little more for their fowls, also for pigs, sheep and steers, than in average years.

Why then should the consumer in Chicago be compelled to pay 22 cents per pound for turkeys when the usual price at this season of the year is 10 or 12 cents?

Greater demand may be a part of the answer, that is to say, more people ate turkey, chicken, goose and duck, on last Christmas day in Chicago because of the generous emulation of rich men and rich corporations to out-do each other in supplying everybody with one or more of these fowls for their holiday dinner, but when due allowance is made for this factor in the case it will probably be found that the main cause of high prices of turkeys, and of flesh meat generally, is the inordinate greed of the men composing the MEAT TRUST.

* * *

The following paragraph clipped from the Chicago "Examiner" tells its own story:

Christmas day a poor, tiny baby froze to death in Chicago. Its mother could obtain no coal, owing to its excessive price. She burned all her furniture, piece by piece, to keep it alive. That gone, she gave it all the warmth her poor half starved body could furnish. Imagine her agony as she saw the flickering spark of life slowly go out. The baby died a victim of the rapacity of well-fed men who control the coal market of Chicago.

According to the statements of the dealers and also of the railway officials the blame for the present shortage of bituminous coal in the yards of Chicago, and the great rise in prices, does not rest with them, but rather with the operators of the mines. However this may be there is little room for doubt that here as elsewhere, is getting in its work, compelling the poor to pay about three times the usual winter price for this prime necessity of existence in this city.

THE COAL TRUST—

These are a few only of the illustrations that might be given of the ways in which the "prosperity" of the rich brings about a necessity for alms-giving. That the men who profit by combinations to raise prices should be prominent as contributors to public charities is to be expected. It is part of the scheme by which they expect to be allowed to keep the bulk of their plunder. M. HARMAN.

A Word from Voltairine de Cleyre.

The doctrine of nonresistance, as taught by Leo Tolstoy and others who are called Anarchists, is receiving fresh impetus and illustration from the attitude of Miss de Cleyre and her friends, in Philadelphia and elsewhere.

As stated in last week's Lucifer this well-known apostle of Anarchism was shot Dec. 19, by a man named Helscher. At first it was thought Miss de Cleyre's wounds would prove fatal, but later reports give hope that she will recover.

In accord with her acceptance and championship of the teachings attributed to the Nazarene, to Buddha and others of ancient and modern times, the doctrine of forgiveness of injuries and of overcoming evil with good, Miss de Cleyre declines to prosecute Helscher, but on the contrary will do what she can to shield him from punishment as a malefactor. She will not be a witness against him, but with the help of her friends will raise a fund to hire counsel to defend her assailant when arraigned on the charge of murder, or attempted murder, as the case may be.

Much space has been given to reports of the shooting and its probable consequences, also to a history of the principals in the tragedy, by the daily press of Philadelphia, Miss de Cleyre's home, and other eastern cities. In the Philadelphia "North American" of Dec. 24, appeared the following, as written or dictated by the wounded woman herself:

The boy who, they say, shot me is crazy. Lack of proper food and healthy labor made him so. He ought to be put into an asylum. It would be an outrage against civilization if he were sent to jail for an act which was the product of a diseased brain.

Shortly before I was shot the young man sent me a letter which was pitiful—nothing to eat, no place to sleep, no work. Before that I had not heard from him for two years.

He wanted to write and speak for the cause of Anarchy—individual liberty—but this was impossible, because, added to his lack of education, were the impractical, foolish plans of his unbalanced head. He had good intentions. He wanted to make the world better, but he did not know how to appeal to the brains and hearts of men and women. At best he was only fit to distribute literature for us.

These things discouraged the crazed mind of the boy. He did not know what he was doing. He was simply a lunatic, acting as a man with a fever. I had not seen him for two years. Suddenly, when I was not thinking about him, he appeared in front of me, and, I am told, shot me. I did not recognize him at the time.

I have no resentment toward the man. If society were so constituted as to allow every man, woman and child to lead a normal life there would be no violence in this world. It fills me with horror to think of the brutal acts done in the name of gov-crument. Every act of violence finds its echo in another act of violence. The policeman's club breeds criminals.

Contrary to public understanding, Anarchism means "Peace on earth, good will to men." Acts of violence done in the name of Anarchy are caused by men and women who forget to be philosophers—teachers of the people—because their physical and mental sufferings drive them to desperation.

* * *

In the same issue of the "North American" is told how kind Miss de Cleyre has always been to her mother and sister; that "for years she had regularly sent money saved from her earnings as a teacher to her mother who resides with her sister in a little Michigan town, and how earnestly she had begged that her mother should not be told of what had befallen her. . . . Yesterday they showed the Christmas presents which she had bought the day before she was shot—a handsome mink neck scarf for her mother and gloves and handkerchiefs for her sister. The presents were forwarded last night, with 'Voltairine's best wishes for a merry Christmas to her mother and sister.'"

Such testimony as this should help to counteract the popular belief that Anarchists are fiends incarnate—simply champions of murder and destruction of all that makes for security of life and for safety of the earnings of honest industry and the savings of temperance and frugality.

Those of our readers who may wish to be kept posted in regard to the condition of Miss de Cleyre can address J. B. Elliott, 3515 Wallace St., Philadelphia, or Mary Hanson, 807 Fairmount Ave., same city. M. HARMAN.

Books Received.

Among the noteworthy books received at this office is "History of the French Revolution," by C. L. James, published by Abe Isaac Jr. Handsomely bound, printed on good paper, with good, clear type, this volume is a welcome addition to the many books of permanent value brought out by the radical press during the year that is now closing.

Readers of "Free Society" will remember the serial story that formed a prominent feature of that journal during the year 1901. That story was revised by the author and is now offered to the public in book form, price one dollar. Address the publisher, 331 Walnut St., this city.

Few writers of the present age are so well qualified to write a readable history of the volcanic political and social outburst known as the French Revolution, as is Lucifer's old friend and contributor, C. L. James. Time and health permitting I hope to read once more this ever interesting story, as now told by Bro. James, and to make selections therefrom for Lucifer's columns.

* * *

"RESIST NOT EVIL."

Is the name of a new book by Clarence S. Darrow, one of Chicago's most eminent lawyers, and one of the few lawyers who seems not to have sunk his manhood in order to achieve eminence in his profession. Mr. Darrow was selected by the striking miners in Pennsylvania to plead their cause before the Roosevelt arbitration tribunal, and thus far seems to have acquitted himself in that capacity to the entire satisfaction of his employers.

Among Mr. Darrow's previously published books and pamphlets are the following: "A Persian Pearl and other Essays," price $1.50; "The Rights and Wrongs of Ireland," 10c; "The Woodworker's Conspiracy Case," 10c; "Address at the Grave of John P. Altgeld," 5c; "Crimes and Criminals," 10c; "Realism in Literature and Art," 5c. Besides these he has in press a volume of short stories entitled "Tales from the Courts." These books may be ordered from the publishers, Chas. H. Kerr & Co. of this city, or from Lucifer's office.

"Resist not Evil" is issued by the same publishing house, price 75c.

The following paragraphs from the chapter, "Armies and Navies," will give our readers a fair idea of the style and general trend of sentiment and philosophy of the author:

"The teaching of patriotism and war permeates all society; it reaches to the youngest child and even shapes the character of the unborn babe. It fills the soul with false ambitions, with ignoble desires, and with sordid hopes. Every sentiment for the improvement of men, for human justice, for the uplifting of the poor, is at once stifled by the wild, hoarse shout for blood. The lowest standard of ethics of which a right-thinking man can possibly conceive is taught to the common soldier whose trade is to shoot his fellow man. In youth he may have learned the command, "Thou shalt not kill," but the ruler takes the boy just as he enters manhood and teaches him that his highest duty is to shoot a bullet through his neighbor's heart,—and this unmoved by passion or feeling or hatred, and without the least regard to right or wrong, but simply because his ruler gives the word. It is not the privilege of the common soldier to ask questions, to consider right and wrong, to think of the misery and suffering his act entails upon others innocent of crime. He may be told to point his gun at his neighbor and his friend, even at his brother or father; if so he must obey commands.

Theirs not to reason why,
Theirs but to do and die, represents the code of ethics that governs a soldier's life.

"And yet from men who believe in these ideals, men who sacrifice their right of private judgment in the holiest matter that can weigh upon the conscience and the intellect, the taking of human life,—men who place their lives, their consciences, their destinies, without question or hesitation, into another's keeping, men whose trade is slaughter and whose cunning consists in their ability to kill their fellows,—from such men it is expected to build great cities and rear a noble humanity!

"These teachings lead to destruction and death; the destruction of the body and the destruction of the soul. Even on the plea of physical evolution in the long sweep of time, these men must give way to the patient, peaceful non-resistants, who love their brothers and believe in the sacredness of life. Long ago it was written down that 'He who takes the sword shall perish by the sword.'"

In his preface Mr. Darrow says the book was "inspired by the writings of Tolstoy, who was the first, and in fact the only, author of my acquaintance who ever seemed to place the doctrine of nonresistance on a substantial basis."

As a wholesome corrective of the military spirit now dominant everywhere, in this country and in Europe this book is invaluable, and should be widely circulated and read, especially by the young of both sexes. M. HARMAN

VARIOUS VOICES.

J. Wm. Lloyd, Westfield, N. J.:—Enclosed is one dollar for Lucifer. It improves all the time and is now a sheet to be proud of.

Joseph Mitchell, Grand Rapids, Mich.:—It will soon be a year since I commenced reading Lucifer. It not only helps me to grow nobler in heart, but inspires me to study and learn all I can. Enclosed find $1 for another year's subscription.

E. B. B., Marietta, Ohio:—I enclose $2 to apply on subscription to Lucifer. Would like to do more for Lucifer than just pay for paper; but at present I need help myself. We meat packers are so prosperous that we meat eaters can't stand it much longer—or rather I should say we would-be meat eaters.

J. H. Kallmeyer, Texas:—It will be a delight to receive Lucifer's weekly visits, here where I have come from New Florence, Mo., to better my condition. Here as in my native state I shall hold communion with Lucifer's editors and contributors and this will be some compensation for the severing of ties which are incident to one's taking up his abode in the land of strangers.

J. L. Hicks, Abilene, Tex.:—My subscription to Lucifer has expired, and I write to renew. Find enclosed $1.20, for which send Lucifer one year, Paine's "Age of Reason," and "Thomas Jefferson: His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy." I have thought many times that I would be unable to keep up my subscription to Lucifer, but when the time comes to begin doing without it I can't say Farewell.

Horatio Victor Newcomb, former Louisville and Nashville railroad president, sued for divorce in New York, alleging that his wife refused to say "obey" during marriage service, painted her lips, and often kicked him out of bed.—Exchange.

Forty copies of Lucifer, no two alike, of 1901 will be sent to any address for 15 cents. Nine bundles for $1. We are anxious to place these papers where they will do good. Please let us have your orders soon.

REMOVAL NOTICE.

Facilities for properly conducting my ever increasing Mail-Order Department being inadequate in Denver I have permanently located in this suburb of Chicago, and trust my many friends and patrons will continue to favor me with their many kind orders.

Send for prices of Watches, Diamonds, Opals, Silver, Plated and Optical goods, Music boxes, Jewelery, Chains, Clocks, Freethought and other badges, Ingersoll spoons, and my tract—"Theism in the Crucible"—free. OTTO WETTSTEIN.
La Grange, Illinois.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer the Light Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only." Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem. Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization. The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 10c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

MENTAL SCIENCE AS A GUIDE TO HEALTH, HAPPINESS, AND BUSINESS SUCCESS.

BY ALBERT CHAVANNES.

Chapter Contents: What is Mental Science? What will it do for us? Happiness; Character; Intellectual Character; Physical Character; Heredity and Health; Mind Cures; Business Success; The Law of Circumstances; Individuals; Marriage; Parents and Children; Political Organization; Political Economy; Communism and Co-operation, Colonization and Organization.

Address Albert Chavannes, 308 Fourth Ave. Knoxville, Tenn. Price 10 cents. Stamps taken in payment.

A Private Maternity Home

Or Lying-in Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired.

For particulars and terms give description of case, and address.
C. S. WOOD, M. D.
Suite 69-119 LaSalle St., Chicago Ill.

950.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

To NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

Trial Trip Subscriptions.

For one dollar we will send Lucifer ten weeks to eight different addresses, and to the one sending us the list, any one of the following books:

The Origin of the Family, Private Property and the State. By Frederick Engels, 217 pages, handsomely bound in cloth. Postage, 6 cents.

The Slavery of Our Times. By Leo Tolstoi. With portrait of author, 186 pages. Blue cloth; silver lettering. Postage 8 cents.

Nora: A Doll's House, and Ghosts. The two dramas bound together. Olive cloth; red lettering. 108 pages. Postage 8 cents. This offer will, we hope, induce our friends to extend Lucifer's circulation materially.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author.

The Sex Passion.
Man, the Ungrown.
Woman, the Serf.
Woman in Freedom
Marriage: a Retrospect.
Marriage: a Forecast.
The Free Society.
Some remarks on the early star-and sex worships
Notes—On the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population.

The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. Price, $1.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 25c.

ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent receipts for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $2 H.

A FLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

A TALE OF THE STRASBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strasburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.

BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth, $1.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. R. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Condemned, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES.—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. R. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 31 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 128 pages. 10c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

DARWINS, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Diseases, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books send by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James R. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $3.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 50c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum 10c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian religion has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 260 pages. 40c. Postage, 5c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Remens and David Overmyer. 10c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 25c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Rita Dunbar Kelso. 419 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 428 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 320 pages. Paper, 25c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Scotoland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 87 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Voltaire, and Voltaire. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry H. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mexican. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREEZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

KORADINE. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III. (1899). Cloth, $1.25. Postage, 15c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Apostate. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 416 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The Brain Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Tirbocthicists in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Tradition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, R. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation: with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 15c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Oxford Northcote. 25c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsia, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "two lines," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $3.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kalmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 25c.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 128 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Initiation (Marietta), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sense and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 207 pages. 25c.

THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Witches and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 192 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a radical, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and asceticism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 32 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 10c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 25c.

THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (R. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Gruer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 50c to 25c.

THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1723, quoted by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuit craft and is a plain index to the underhand working of that order against the welfare of individuals and society. 15c.

THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 10c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Telepathy Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Herbert Wilner). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $1.25.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 50c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Darling. 15c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW; a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us come to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us children, of the kindness of lovers and the enrichment of babes." Paper covers; 48 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 1, 1896. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo. 178 pages. 50c.

Address M. HARMAN, 339 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VI., No. 52. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, JAN. 8, E. M. 303 [C. E. 1903.] WHOLE No. 951

NATURE'S DAUGHTER.

She was sitting alone
On a hillside stone,
When I came on her suddenly, all unknown;
But she did not see;
And 'twas joy for me
To pause near a soul of such ecstacy.

For she sang as the birds,
A song without words
Beside the quietly feeding herds;
And she had the air
Of one careless of care;
To whom the whole world shows sweet and fair.

She gazed away
As the idler may,
To the east and the far-off gates of day;
And so it befell
That I knew her spell,
And understood her; regarding her well.

The stain of her eye
With the blue of the sky
Was matched; and the wild-rose nodding nigh
In its scented place,
Reflected the grace
And the delicate hues of her happy face.

Open her look—
Like an open book,
As she turned about in her fresh green nook.
Some bloom she had got
From a daisy plot,
Which she fingered, then scattered about the spot.

Simple her dress;
And each vagrant tress
Of her hair was caught back in carelessness.
Supple and free
She seemed to be,
And lithe in her form as a young willow tree.

And oh, she grew glad!
No thought over-sad,
I mused, her spirit hath ever had.
She is happy and wild;
She is nature's child!
And I looked through my tears at her there, and smiled.

She laughed and she sang
Till the echoes rang;
There was never a sigh, nor a sorrc w's pang,
At one with the hill,
Its rocks and its rill,
She asked for naught, and she had her will

There came a far call;
And she let the flowers fall
And wandered away down a path by a wall.
But below, beyond sight,
Still I heard her delight,
Like the song of a bird that must sing in its flight,

WILLIAM FRANCIS BARNARD.

The condition which high friendship demands, is, ability to do without it.—Emerson.

Husbands vs. Jobs.

Moved by the agonies of those who are striving, at the cost of infinite white paper and barrels of ink, to solve the divorce problem, the United States Government has come nobly to the rescue. The syllogism which it has formulated runs something like this: Only married people get divorced; divorce is an evil; ergo, whatever leads to it should be abolished; go to, we will do what we can to discourage marriage.

With this philanthropic object in view the postmaster-general has published an edict that any woman who marries from this time and forever after must hold her peace and lose her job, and, cleaving to the individual whom she has preferred before the post-office, she must forsake everyone else and cleave to him only. Not for her is the gladsome payroll made out of a Saturday night. Never more will her eyes be gladdened by the sight of an envelope. If she will get married, let it be at her own risk.

The postmaster has even gone a step further than this. He has called for a list of husbands; women who have husbands concealed about their premises are required to bring them to the blessed light of day, and show cause why they should be allowed such a luxury. The man may have been partially dismembered by a railroad wreck; he may be the remains of a number of battles fought during our several wars; he may have broken down in health, or have lost his money, or contracted tuberculosis, and he may be sick and feeble, and heartbroken that the burden of bread-winning has fallen on the shoulders of his wife, but all that makes no difference. He has several alternatives placed before him by the government. He can go off and die, or he can get a divorce, or he can fall back on biblical authority and try Abram's little trick, and say she is his sister. This is always dangerous; it proved so even in the days of Abraham. The invalid husband has no rights that the government feels called on to respect; he may not be able to do anything else, but he can make his wife lose her situation and his children go hungry.

Not long ago a similar order was issued in a Western city in regard to married teachers, and it has always been a question likely to come up at any time. Mr. Payne says he is not opposed to marriage. He goes on the supposition that in every family the man should be the bread winner, and that he is. If the woman works, it is just out of vanity and a desire to have jam for the bread provided by the man, or perhaps from sheer spite, to keep some other woman from getting the place. "Two salaries to one family are too much." Parenthetically, it might be said that when one salary is enough, that may be true, but how many times does the single salary leave a good wide margin for the rainy day? Subtract rent and provisions and clothes and school, shoes and doctors' bills for six from $100 a month, and mark the net deficit. And very few clerks get $100 a month.

Man is a dear, sweet creature, and we couldn't get along without him, but he is the most illogical animal that ever happened. He objects to women in various walks of life, because she does not take the work up with sufficient seriousness, intending to devote her life to it; she is going to doctor people, or practice law, or draw up abstracts, or make designs, or write shorthand only until some man comes along and marries her, when the office that knew her will know her no more. When, on the other hand, she wants to keep on peddling pills, and drawing briefs and so on, she is described as "taking the bread out of the mouth" of some man who might be getting wealthy but for her. Probably it takes some brains to be a clerk in the postoffice, and a good clerk is not to be made in a day; so the ambitious young woman who wants to do her work well takes an interest in it, perfects herself in the details, acts as if it was to be her profession for life. And then she is thrown out bodily because she gets married. Oh, wise old postmaster, how I do honor thee!

There is an erroneous impression that business women are not domestic in their tastes, do not care for "all the comforts of a home," cannot keep house, or boil water without scorching it, and are devotedly fond of boarding-houses. Which is non-sense. A certain married man in this town once described himself as "a thoroughly domesticated animal." When he was through for the day he wanted to go home and nowhere else. The best restaurant in town had no attraction for him; the theatre palled in comparison with a concert by his own fireside. He wanted to leave "down town" and forget about it. That is exactly the sentiment of ninety-nine out of every one hundred women who work. If they can afford a home, it is generally the delight of their lives; into it they put all the enthusiasm which a man gives to whatever hobby he may have—pipes, or music, or study, or athletics. A woman's home, whether it is one room or a palace, is her ready-made, foreordained hobby. There are exceptions to this rule, of course, but they are scarcer than the fleas on a Mexican canine.

It is said that all the people in the world can be divided into three classes of insects, so far as work is concerned. The rarest class belong to the ant tribe. The ant, by the way, has the largest brain compared to its bulk of any living creature. The elephant is an idiot by comparison. The ant people work for themselves and the ant hill; it is said that there are no "poor" ants. It will be readily seen that this is a stage of evolution still far ahead of present-day mankind. The second class of people belong to the grasshoppers, who never would work at all if they could get out of it, and who furnish opportunities for the charitable when winter comes. There are a good many of these. In fact, it is a question whether a very large per cent. of the race would ever do a stroke of work if it wasn't that they are just enough smarter than the grasshopper to know that winter is coming. The last class belong to the bees, the little busy bee that improves each shining hour, making pounds of honey for somebody else to eat. The bee, the mule and the human being are the only animals that have so little sense that they will work themselves to death for some one else. Just remember in this connection that the proverb runs. "Go to the ant, thou sluggard," and not to the bee. All of which goes to teach that as a rule neither men nor women will pike down to a dingy office and sit on a high stool from 8 A. M. until 6 P. M. unless there is some good and sufficient reason for it; wet and dry, year in, year out. No, as a nation we are neither so miserly nor industrious as to account for this devotion to business on any other ground than plain necessity.

Of course, if the United States wants to go into the business of discouraging matrimony, just because it has some 2,000,000 men surplusage, there is no more to be said. If, in pursuance of this plan, it intends to get out any literature—pamphlets like "Marriage—How to Avoid It," or "Evils of Matrimony," or "Dangers of a Double Life," or "Blessed Singleness," then we commend the following very excellent story: It seems that archbishop Ryan was visiting one of his parishioners in a mining district, preparatory to confirming a number of children. Among other questions he asked one nervous little girl what matrimony was, and she answered that it was "a state of terrible torment which those who enter it are compelled to undergo for a time to prepare them for a brighter and better world." "No, no," remonstrated the priest, "that isn't matrimony, that's the definition of purgatory." "Leave her alone," said the archbishop, "maybe she's right. What do you or I know about it?"—Ellis Meredith, in "Denver News."

Science and Intuition.

There are truths that we sense, feel, but can find no words in which to clothe them till scientific research gives us something to lay hold of.

The fact that so long as the church rules sex she rules everything, was declared by this writer nearly twenty years ago, and the proof could not be forthcoming till that other fact of the transmutation of sex desire into religious emotion came to my knowledge. I then saw how it was that the church became the power it is.

Scientific research shows conclusively that the finer elements, or forces, are the strongest. Take for instance water and convert it into steam; so it is demonstrable that sex desire can be changed into religious emotion, that emotion to the desire from which it comes. As steam to water it is an intensified power.

But we find another law that applies here, the threefold law of actor, acted upon and result. The result in this case is sex desire intensified in religious emotion. The actor, or actors are the priesthood; the subject, or those acted upon, furnish the steam—the emotion. That emotion centers on the actor and that which the actor represents, to-wit, Christ crucified, etc.

But sex is life, is vitality, and those who gather that life become strong in magnetic power at the expense of those who furnish this sex life as it is transmuted into strong emotion.

One who hypnotizes or mesmerizes another does not use his own force, his own vitality, but draws to himself the vitality of the subject, and thus holds him by an invisible line, just as truly as though he held him by a visible chain. But the mesmerizer lets go when the experiment is complete. The church never lets go till forced so to do.

The church holds its subjects by the same law, an invisible but real chain, as does the mesmerizer his subjects, but, as before said, the church never lets go.

Enough on this point; there is another great truth in nature that intuitive souls have sensed, one here, another there for over forty years, namely, the possibility of overcoming death, or the dissolution of the physical body. Science is beginning to come upon the same ground.

The "Truth Seeker" New York, dated Nov. 15, 1902, has an article taken from "Harper's Monthly," entitled "The Newest Conceptions of Life." In this article it is stated that physiology's present answer to the old riddle [what is life] is:

"Life is a series of fermentations."

But fermentation is destructive. True, but it is found that there is a reversible process, by which that which has been changed by fermentation can be restored. It is shown "that a constructive fermentation exists."

I cannot quote much without making this article too long but will simply say that through the action of this reversible, or constructive fermentation, starch which has been submitted to fermentation, by taking up water is split into one of the simpler sugars, glucose, but under the reversed or constructive fermentation it becomes starch again, and this is the result of but one of several experimental reversions. The final comment is as follows:

"As the discovery of the constructive ferments gave at last a clue to a complete account of the whole life process, so to ment of bio-chemistry the discovery of reversibility in ferments. tion may in time disclose the reversibility of the life process; the more concrete phrase—the arrest of death, the prevention of old age, the preservation of youth."

Here science brings in sight the possibility of the LAW of what intuitive souls have been declaring for more than a generation, namely, that it is possible to overcome death, but because this triumph over death was seen to be connected with the right use of sex, their intuitions were scouted.

I say intuitions because it was FEELING more than knowledge. Or rather, it was soul knowledge, which as yet the intellect could not grasp.

Still later, a class of thinkers have arisen who do not connect the result with the so much despised sex question, but still claim that we need not die.

Thousands have fallen into line, but can give no logical reason for their faith.

But what are those two processes of fermentation but the eternally united male and female factors of life that everywhere prevail—the destructive fermentation representing the male, and the constructive the female?

Each of these are equally useful, for if the destructive principle did not remove the old, how could the constructive bring in the new, and thus keep up the action called progress?

Yes, both are equally needed, and if their action is balanced, if the feminine is free to gather as fast as the masculine destroys, then life can but continue to hold the form it has taken.

Coming to the human we find here as elsewhere that the feminine is the builder, and by the law of attraction, but when has the feminine had the chance to act freely? The masculine holds the feminine in subjection and the result is death—death because the very atmosphere we breathe lacks the normal development of the feminine element.

Can there be a stronger, a more logical reason as to why woman should be absolutely free from man's domination?

If there is a cause on earth that woman should sustain, should be willing to sacrifice to aid, it is the cause of her own FREEDOM, and all intelligent, right thinking men will sustain her, for the prize is LIFE!

Man joys in being conqueror. Well then, help us to conquer death by giving us that absolute freedom which will enable us to build as fast as time can tear down. We do so now, as far as the perpetuation of the race is concerned, but we are tired of building bodies to be destroyed by death.

Let us be free that death itself may die!

LOIS WAISBROOKER.

Various Reflections.

I am sorry that Celia B. Whitehead, one of the leaders of the Alphite movement, is shocked by my fable called "Mrs. Grundy's Two Boarding Schools." She assumes that I mean to compare "eating jam" with "the use of the organs of human creation," and seems to think such a comparison almost blasphemous. In my opinion the merely physical part of love can very properly be compared with eating, as both are physical appetites. It is true, however, that the misguided efforts of people like Mrs. Grundy and Mrs. Whitehead have given the physical part of love an absurd importance, which it does not naturally possess. A mountain brook is a little thing, but, if you dam it up long enough, it will at last swell to the volume of the Amazon. Some years ago one of the best known freethinkers in America told me that until he was over thirty he had never committed the slightest deviation from perfect physical chastity. Yet he confessed that in his youth he was the most impure of men, because his mind was always filled with unchaste thoughts. If, instead of damming up nature, he had let her take her course, he would not have remembered once a week that there was such a thing as sex. That is why I always call myself a Puritan. Under my system sexuality would be a beautiful little stream flowing gently through the garden of love. Under Mrs. Grundy it has become a roaring torrent, sweeping all before it. Under Mrs. Whitehead it would become another Noah's flood, which would submerge the world.

In No. 946 the editor asks our views as to whether, under free motherhood, many or few men would be employed as fathers. I can hardly doubt that we should follow the example of those who breed all other kinds of animals. Every breeder of race horses, cattle, or any other kind of stock, wants to have the female served by the best available male. By such careful selection all breeds of domestic stocks have in modern times improved by leaps and bounds, while no perceptible change has been seen in any wild animal. If women were free, and well informed about heredity, they would very likely become as careful in the choice of a father as breeders and gardeners now are. It is not, however, to be supposed that all the women in one community would choose the same man. Not only do tastes differ, but men differ in their points of excellence, and a woman's selection would depend on whether she wanted to produce a Saadow or a Shelley. Moreover, every woman of any imagination would want to have several different types of children, and would therefore choose a new man on each occasion.

"Give me the liberty to know, to utter, and to argue freely according to conscience, above all liberties," said Milton. So think Emma Goldman and James P. Morton, and they are much afraid of the awful possibility of the American people losing what freedom of speech they have. Such a thing would not worry me much. I lived in Germany in the last year of the Anti-Socialist Law, which was in force from 1878 to 1890. It prohibited all Socialist speeches and writings. I was anxious to attend some Socialist meetings, but was at first quite nonplussed by the absence of any advertisement. One thing that quickly arrested my attention, however, was the astounding number of public dances, entertainments in beer gardens, gymnastic unions, etc. Before long I realized that these were the agencies by which Socialism was being propagated, and they had the great merit of bringing out the women and children as well as the men. Moreover, Socialism was driven from the public platform into the home, for people were always meeting in one another's houses to discuss it. On Sunday afternoon my Berlin landlord would fill his room with an admiring crowd of women and children, and tell them how "Das Blut muss fliessen, wie die Wasserleitung." ("Blood must flow like the water pipe.") Elections were held in the first and last years of the law. In 1878 the Socialists vote was 437,158; in 1890 it was 1,427,108.

Few people go to meetings, and I doubt if many have their views formed by books. Heart to heart talks and private letters count most. Forbidden books are always greedily read, however. Persecution interferes only with the least useful kinds of propaganda, and stimulates the most effective kinds. The total abolition of free speech would be especially favorable to the sex movement, which is a movement of individual salvation, and needs no organization. Under total prohibition we should have a glorious time spreading the glad tidings by means of typewritten manuscripts, which would be more racy than anything that gets into Lucifer, and would be read by everybody. Now we blow our steam off in Lucifer, and are not allowed to say much after all.

I propose that a deputation of Luciferites should wait on Comstock to see if anything can be done about making the laws stricter. This would be provoking to habitual speakers and writers like Miss Goldman and Mr. Morton, but I hope they will be ready to sacrifice themselves to the common good.

R. B. KERR.

The Knot Tells.

An Irish couple whose married bliss was not without a few "squalls" received a homely lecture from the spiritual adviser regarding their disgraceful quarrels.

His reverence said, "That dog and cat you have agree better than you."

The reply somewhat upset him: "If yer rivirence 'ill to thim tigither, ye'll soon change yer moind?"—Ex.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Sexology—As Related to Poverty, Vice and Crime.

"Sex contains all," says the poet-prophet of realism, of naturalism, of unconventionalism, Walt Whitman, not the irrepressible John Whitman, head center of the Cook County jail.

Well, let us see about this, Bro. Whitman. ALL is a very inclusive term.

Does sex include the coal famine in Chicago?

Does sex include South Clark street and the Stock Yards district, with their squalor, their swarms of grimy, ill-clad, ill-kempt, dwarfed, ill-fed, ill-housed and half-warmed women and children, and their crowds of blear-eyed, beer-and-tobacco-soaked, generally idle, improvident and often criminal men?

Does sex include the Board of Trade Building, with its yelling, howling, stamping, bellowing mob of high class gamblers, gamblers in stocks and bonds, and in the material out of which bread, the "staff of life," is made?

Does sex include "Fifth Avenue," New York, and the elect "400"?—also Cherry Street, same city, where children swarm like rabbits in a warren, each family averaging five or six children, whereas the average in Fifth Avenue is less than one child to the family?

Does sex include President Baer of Reading Railroad, the partner of God in the management of the business affairs of this country?

Does it include the Standard Oil Octopus, with its tentacles reaching to every state and territory in the American Union, and stretching out its greedy arms to Europe and the uttermost parts of the earth, and by thus absorbing natural supply, gaining the power to raise the price of kerosene in less than one year from 7½ cents per gallon to 11½ cents per gallon?

Does it include J. Pierpont Morgan, and the other members of the steel trust, the robber combination that is now appealing to the socialistic conscience of the country by enlarging its organization so as to take in 128,000 of its employes, giving these employes a chance to invest in the stock, thereby putting THEM under the bonds of self-interest to work more faithfully for the complete triumph of the trust—not seeing that they, the small stockholders, thus become more surely the slaves of the vicious system, the JACKALS that provide royal dinners for the lordly barons—the LIONS that compose the inside ring?

Does sex include the East Indian "durbar"—the pageant connected with the proclaiming of Edward Guelph as emperor of famine stricken India, a ceremony costing, it is believed, twice the number of millions of money that were expended upon the coronation ceremonies of the same insignificant royal pauper, in England last year?

Did sex include the ostentatious display of charity in Chicago during holiday week, when tens of thousands of dinners were given to families of the very poor, and to hungry individuals, which dinners consisted, in most cases, of fatted turkey costing 20 cents per pound—or thereabout, or of goose, duck or chicken, with other expensive and luxurious accompaniments, while during the same week a dozen or more children in this city were abandoned to starve or freeze to death?

Had sex anything to do with the recent lynchings in the southern states—the victim in one instance being a woman?

* * *

The answer to all these queries, as I think, must, without hesitation, be an affirmative one.

Take, for instance, the last illustration—the lynching of negroes, generally for the crime of rape, or attempted rape upon the persons of white women. The men accused of this crime were begotten and born in slavery, or their parents were. The relation of master to slave authorized and condoned the crime of rape. The female slave dared not to refuse her master, or the master's friend and boon companion. No slave could testify in court against a white man. Slaves had no rights the superior race were bound to respect. What wonder then that the first generation of negroes born in freedom—or in what they are told is freedom—should exhibit a disposition to even up matters a little?—to pay the debt contracted by the white race in its own coins, or to say, with Shylock, "The villainy you do teach me I will execute?"

During her long stay among the uncivilized negroes of Central Africa, Mrs. French Sheldon tells us she never knew or heard of a case of sexual outrage. This would seem to show that it is their sexual association with the white race that has caused the descendants of negro slaves to commit outrages such as lead to the still greater crime of lynching, by the so-called superior race.

Take, as another illustration, the coal famine in Chicago. Here is a paragraph taken from the Chicago "Examiner" of Saturday morning Jan. 3:

"Some of the people who are shouting for coal these days of famine have been able thus far to bear up under the shortage; but there are others—and these latter are in the majority—to whom the lack of coal means hardship, suffering, and in some cases death. Out on the West Side, in the heart of the Ghetto district, there are hundreds upon hundreds of poor people in this condition. They have money, little enough of it, but they are willing to pay for coal. They cannot get it at any price, they declare."

* * *

The "Tribune" of same date sums the matter up in this way:

"The consumer accuses the mine operator.
The mine operator accuses the railroad.
The railroad accuses the jobber.
The jobber accuses the scalper.
The scalper accuses the retailer.
The retailer accuses the consumer."

The "consumer" who buys more than he needs through fear of continued rise in price, is called the "coal hog," and it is gravely asserted and believed by many that the main cause of the trouble is the unusual hoarding of coal by consumers who are able to do so.

That all of the factors named by the "Tribune" have had a share in producing the unprecedented shortage and consequent high prices of coal in Chicago is probably true, but beneath all of these surface causes lie the more deeply-seated causes, the basic causes, the ethical motives that inspire and regulate human conduct.

Why do not the mine operator, the railroad director, the jobber, the scalper, the consumer—why do not all these have a care for the welfare of OTHERS as well as for their own?

Is it not because of the fact that the prime characteristic of that societary institution from which all others spring—the family—is an EGOISTIC and not an ALTRUISTIC institution?

Is it not because institutional marriage—both canon law and statutory—is built on MONOPOLY as its chief corner stone?

The private ownership of woman by man—ownership of the PERSON of woman by man—and in a modified sense—of man by woman, is not this monopolistic ownership sufficient to account for all the monopolies in business, the narrowly selfish greed everywhere dominant in modern society?

The family is the product of one of the basic instincts, the instinct of race-preservation. The race is preserved and perpetuated by and through the attraction, the appetite, the desire, the differentiation, called SEX. Modern family life is indissolubly connected with marriage. Marriage means monopoly of sex—especially the sex of woman. What more natural then, than that the product of this primary institution, the family, should be like the institution itself, monopolistic?

If the family be built upon the monopolistic principle—the principle of exclusive ownership of persons—especially the exclusive ownership by man—as the head of the family—of the person of woman, the child-builder of the family, what else can we expect than that the progeny resulting from such institution should be monopolistic in tendency, narrowly selfish, greedy in business matters, unsympathetic with or for the sorrows and misfortunes of others?

In like manner, and in still greater degree, the influence of the mother upon the unborn child is towards monopoly of all things desirable in life, because of the fact that she holds the foetal organism in her keeping—in the most intimate of all possible embraces, for the period of nine fateful months, subject, every moment of this time, to the direct moulding influence of every thought, every emotion of the maternal brain and heart. What wonder then that the monopolistic idea, the idea of exclusive ownership of at least one man, should be so ingrained in the warp and woof of the unborn child that through all its after life the grasping, greedy, narrowly selfish, monopolistic idea should be the leading characteristic of the human being thus begotten and thus environed during the most impressible period of mortal life.

The period of lactation also, of nursing, should not be overlooked; the period when the child imbibes the maternal thought and desire "with his mother's milk," to quote a familiar proverb.

That the economic environment of the mother, and father also, during the ante-natal period—the never ending struggle to keep the wolf from the door, will have much to do with creating a "hoggish" man or woman in adult life, is doubtless very true, but as between the two, the more basic influence, the more fundamental, is the more important in accounting for the predominant traits of adult life.

The weight of great names goes far with some people. The subject is much too large for one article in Lucifer. I close for this week by quoting a few paragraphs from Grant Allen, the author of "The Woman Who Did." They are the closing paragraphs of the booklet, "The New Hedonism":

Asceticism surrounds sex with all gross and vulgar images. Hedonism seeks to surround it with all graceful and noble and elevating associations.

The hedonist, therefore, recognizes in the sex-instinct the origin and basis of all that is best and highest within us. He is not ashamed of it, like the hermits who find that uncleanliness is next to godliness, and hold fresh linen an abomination. He is not afraid of it, like the timid moralists who think our instincts and impulses were given us by heaven in order that we might disobey them. He faces facts, and fears no phantoms. His object will always be so to use these functions as not to abuse them, either by enforced abstinence or by acquiescence in a hateful regime of vice, disease and practical slavery for a large body of women. He knows that to be pure is not to be an anchorite, and that chastity means a profound disinclination to give the body where the heart is not given in unison.

Hitherto the evolution of sex relations has all been upward—from tribal promiscuity and "marriage by capture," through polyandry and polygamy, to an imperfect monogamy. Why should we suppose all this is going now to be reversed, and that evolution is going suddenly to change, and to rush us violently down a steep place into the sea in a retrograde direction?

Most people imagine that if we cease to believe a Lie, it will be all "up" with us. The flood-gates will be opened. I have no such craven fear of the Truth or its consequences. I hold rather, with the apostle, that the Truth will make us free—and I do not shrink from freedom.

I do not believe that our existing system of marriage and harlotry—or, ought we not rather to say, of harlotry and marriage?—is a divine institution. No doubt, when any large proportion of us are enlightened hedonists, our sex relations will be remodelled. They would stand remodelling. An evening walk from Charing Cross by Leicester square to Piccadilly circus will serve to show the most abandoned optimist that they are not quite perfect. A system which culminates in the divorce court, the action for breach of promise, seduction, prostitution, infanticide, abortion, desertion, cruelty, husband-poisoning, wife-kicking, contagious disease, suicide, illegitimacy, unnatural vice, the Strand by night, the London dance halls, might surely be bettered by the wit of man.

Hedonism, I believe, may introduce a new system. But hedonists venture to hope that it will not include the selling of self into loveless union for a night or for a lifetime; the bearing of children by a mother to a man she despises or loathes or shrinks from; the production by force, sanctioned by law, of hereditary drunkards, hereditary epileptics, hereditary consumptives, hereditary criminals.

We shall expect in the future a purer and truer relation between father and mother, between parent and child. We shall expect some sanctity to attach to the idea of paternity, some thought and care to be given beforehand to the duties of motherhood. We will not admit that the chance union of two unfit persons, who ought never to have made themselves parents at all, or ought never to have made themselves parents with one another, can be rendered holy and harmless by the hands of a priest extended to bless a bought love, or a bargain of impure marriage.

In one word, for the first time in the history of the race, we shall evolve the totally new idea of responsibility, we shall include the two antithetical, but correlative, duties of a moral abstinence from fatherhood or motherhood on the part of the unfit, and a moral obligation to fatherhood and motherhood on the part of the noblest, the purest, the sanest, the healthiest, the most able among us. We will not doom to forced celibacy half our finest mothers.

If this be a low view of the sexual function, I am content to abide by it. It seems to me, at any rate, a good deal better than the one whose results meet my eye every day in the morning papers.

The above article and extract were made the text for an hour's talk before the Chicago Society of Anthropology, Sunday afternoon, Jan. 4. The hall was well filled. The discussion following the address was animated and interesting, but it is too late for further report this week. M. HARMAN.

MRS. HULDAH L. POTTER LOOMIS will lecture before Chicago Anthropological Society on Sunday, January 11, 3:30 p. m., in Hall 913 Masonic Temple. Subject—Is Astrology the Key to Human Destiny?

Good News From Voltairine de Cleyre.

A letter in Miss de Cleyre's familiar writing was received a few days ago. Though it was not written for publication, we feel justified in quoting from it, as the writer is known and admired and loved by many of our readers. The letter is dated Dec. 31. She says:

"Your kindly letter cheered me in the first days of my recent accident. I have been sitting up for three days now, and hope to go home at the end of the week. Whether any of the bullets may have to be extracted later is a matter for my surgeon to decide. Being shot is a very curious sensation!

"The boy who did it is, and has been, ever since I knew him, weak in the head-piece. I hope you paid no attention to the nonsense which I am told appeared in the papers about love-stuff. Nothing of the kind. He had always a mild, gentle, and generous disposition but troubled with fits of melancholy. And though he used to talk all sorts of nonsense, I never thought he would ever handle weapons of any kind.

"He was brought up just as most of our Russian Jewish boys, and there is nothing in his antecedents to explain his craziness. Nor had he any 'bad habits.' That he is crazy is sure. I wish I could save him from prison or from a State Asylum; but I don't know how I can."

The Philadelphia papers devoted many columns to the affair, and many absurd statements and conjectures were made. Of course it is the business of reporters to make a "good story," and pander to the morbid tastes of the public. Thus the reports relating to the love-sick youth, were to be "taken with a grain of salt."

Jesus told us to forgive those who injure us.

McKinley said, "Do not let them hurt him,"—meaning the mob—but had no word of protest against legally-wreaked vengeance.

Voltairine de Cleyre "true to her principles" (as the Philadelphia press expressed it) philosophically decided that her assailant was mentally irresponsible, and will do what she can to save him from punishment.

William McKinley, the politician; Voltairine de Cleyre, the Anarchist. Which most consistently obeyed Jesus' precept?

L. H.

A Question.

Will someone enlighten me as to the exact belief of a person who professes to be an Anarchist?

It is said that Anarchists want to abolish all law and government.

I do not see how the great mass of the people, as they are at present, can get along peaceably without being governed.

If all persons were intelligent, and well educated, and had no inborn tendencies to crime, but were filled, instead, with the sense of justice, then we would be all right without law and government.

When each and every one of us has reached that condition, law and government will have passed away.

When laws are no longer needed they will go into disuse and out of existence.

We should continually endeavor to make our laws better and at last they will become so good and so mild that we shall not feel their weight or restraint at all.

The first thing to be done for the good of all humankind is the extension to men and women of equal rights and privileges, then we shall all work together in the making of just laws and customs.

The original and radical cause of the present injustice, chaos and corruption of society is religion.

The Bible and the church degrade women, and this degradation of the mothers has produced all the crime and misery of the past and present.

The Christian religion is responsible for all the crime and misery of Christendom.

In order to bring about a radical cure for our sufferings, religion must be undermined and destroyed.

To undermine and destroy the Christian religion it is only necessary to study the Bible and dare to bring to light its inconsistencies, absurdities, untruths and injustice, and study church history and let the workings of religion be known.

When religion is banished, and the mothers are free, and shall have been free long enough to eradicate the effects of religion, then every adult person will be capable of self-government, and then we shall live in peace and happiness without written laws or executive government.

Ellensburg, Wn. MRS. BERTHA MOORE.

Asceticism surrounds sex with all gross and vulgar images; hedonism seeks to surround it with all graceful and noble and elevating associations.—Grant Allen.

Organization is Progressing.

The organization for the purpose of instituting a national modern and fraternal society composed of radical and liberal minded people is rapidly securing headway. Within a month or two we expect to have all the plans perfected.

Encouraging reports have been received by the chairmen from all over the United States and great enthusiasm is shown. "The idea of protecting our people who are promulgating radical ideas, meets with approval everywhere," writes a lady correspondent. This seems to be the universal sentiment.

Several correspondents who have read the call in Lucifer object to joining any organized body; but in our opinion an organized minority can do more than a disorganized majority. We want no members who are opposed to organizations, so let them stay out.

The new organization will copy the best plans of the successful fraternal bodies and add others suitable to our own ideas. In this manner we expect to use the machinery of organization to advance the best interests of the cause. Subordinate lodges or clubs will be established in various cities, and sick and other benefits will be provided.

We desire to give our thanks to the large number of friends who have sent us some splendid plans of organization, constitution and names. We would be further pleased to hear from all others who have suggestions that might aid in the good movement. Many have voluntarily tendered the new Order financial assistance for which we return our thanks. We would be pleased to hear from all who can organize local branches in their town as it is our desire to organize everywhere.

As the incorporation laws of the state of Oregon are very liberal in their construction, we will secure a charter similar to to all other fraternal societies. We propose to have our organization conducted on modern methods so that we may all take pride in the order.

Further suggestions for the name, ritual, constitution and plans for organization, will be thankfully received. Address each chairman who has charge of the subject you are writing about. The conference will reassemble when we have heard from other of the brethren throughout America. Let us hear from you at once.

Organization committee is composed as follows:

RALPH C. CLYDE, Chairman. Chairman of committee on state of order and organization. P. O. Box 308, Portland, Oregon.

MARCUS SUGARMAN, Secretary. Chairman of committee on constitution, Oregon City, Oregon.

ALBERT A. PRICE, Chairman selection of name. P. O. Box 273, Portland, Oregon.

MRS. S. COOPER, Chairman of committee on ritual. 150 Park St., Portland, Oregon.

MRS. M. GENTIS, Vancouven, Washington.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Z. M. P. Shank, Red Oak, Iowa:—I want to say that Lucifer is the best representation of free thought that I have read, and because of your consistent work I still take it. Enclosed find $1 for another year.

J. Burrows, Gibson, Penna.:—Enclosed please find one dollar to apply on my subscription to Lucifer. Wishing you a happy new year, an abundant success in your efforts to educate the people in the most important of all branches of education I remain your friend.

J. Williams, St. Paul. Minn.:—Would you kindly explain the meaning of "Attravist."—I do not find the word in "Webster."

Then, too, noticing in your last issue (Dec. 18) the statement by "Ironicus" (page 385) that "Love is a Law of Life, Marriage a Crime Against It," a friend takes exception to this statement and I have replied that the writer was not wise in the use of the word "marriage" and that he meant licensed or legalized wedlock—and if so should have more clearly stated his meaning, as it is certainly misleading to a casual reader as expressed. Am I right—or did he mean what the words used plainly say?

[The writer of "Views of an Attravist" coined the word He has sent us an essay further explaining the word and his views, but we have not much space to devote to that subject. The "Attravist" believes that man should be in subjection to woman. In our opinion each should be free, independent, self-reliant individuals. Those who wish further information regarding "Attravism" may obtain it by addressing C. C. Carlyle, Moncton, N. B.

I have not asked "Ironicus" what he meant in the sentence referred to, but in my opinion Mr. Williams' interpretation is correct. L. H.]

REMOVAL NOTICE.

Facilities for properly conducting my ever increasing Mail-Order Department being inadequate in Denver I have permanently located in this suburb of Chicago, and trust my many friends and patrons will continue to favor me with their many kind orders.

Send for prices of Watches, Diamonds, Opals, Silver, Plated and Optical goods, Music boxes, Jewelery, Chains, Clocks, Freethought and other badges, Ingersoll spoons, and my tract—"Theism in the Crucible"—free. OTTO WETTSTEIN.
La Grange, Illinois.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer the Light Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of 'For Men Only." Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spelling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem. Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization. The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 10c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

MENTAL SCIENCE AS A GUIDE TO HEALTH, HAPPINESS, AND BUSINESS SUCCESS.

BY ALBERT CHAVANNES.

Chapter Contents: What is Mental Science? What will it do for us? Happiness; Character; Intellectual Character; Physical Character; Heredity and Health; Mind Cures; Business Success; The Law of Circumstances; Individuals; Marriage; Parents and Children; Political Organization; Political Economy. Communism and Co-operation, Colonization and Organization.

Address Albert Chavannes, 309 Fourth Ave. Knoxville, Tenn. Price 10 cents. Stamps taken in payment.

A Private Maternity Home

Or Lying-in Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired.

For particulars and terms give description of case, and address.
Suite 61-119 LaSalle St., Chicago Ill. C. S. WOOD, M. D.

951.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

Trial Trip Subscriptions.

For one dollar we will send Lucifer ten weeks to eight different addresses, and to the one sending us the list, any one of the following books:

The Origin of the Family, Private Property and the State. By Frederick Engels, 217 pages, handsomely bound in cloth. Postage, 6 cents.

The Slavery of Our Times. By Leo Tolstoi. With portrait of author, 186 pages. Blue cloth; silver lettering. Postage 8 cents.

Nora: A Doll's House, and Ghosts. The two dramas bound together. Olive cloth; red lettering. 108 pages. Postage 8 cents. This offer will, we hope, induce our friends to extend Lucifer's circulation materially.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author.

The Sex Passion.
Man, the Ungrown.
Woman, the Serf.
Woman in Freedom
Marriage: a Retrospect.
Marriage: a Forecast.
The Free Society.
Some remarks on the early star and sex worships.
Notes—On the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population.

The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. Price, $1.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE

For Sale by Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 460 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.

ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid diseases than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $2.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

A TALE OF THE STRASBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strasburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.

BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth, $1.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. R. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commanded, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. R. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 31 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 236 pages, 10c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

DARWIN, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 10c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. G. Spencer. 178 pages. 25c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and progress. A book to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and arous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 37 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $3.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Carrie Chavannes. 50c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 10c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian religion has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 360 pages. 40c. Postage, 5c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Remsen and David Overmyer, 10c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 25c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John H. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Rhia Dunbar Kelso. 219 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HILDA'S HOME. Ross Grout. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 436 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Alleman. 320 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Scotland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 37 Freethinkers, including Byron, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Voltaire, etc. Voltaire. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry B. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KARREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

KORADINE. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 31, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III. (1889). Cloth, $1.25. Postage, 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Advent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Victorious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 428 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies. a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love, Its Attraction and Benevolence; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 10c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Privilegeists in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 10c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Trebitsch (E. C. Walker). Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman). The Greatest Sin (an allegory, E. B. Kerr). and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The rationalist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is tactically opposed to religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is tactically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disorganized religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 10c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of free republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward Fitzgerald's interpretation; with original introduction, special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c (attack; with original introduction, special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Oxford Northcote. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sputnik, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $1. Five volumes, plainer binding, $1.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the 82th volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of marvelous finish. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red. Initial letter and first line, brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 50c

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 50c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 128 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Marietta). Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case. With full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 82 pages. 25c.

THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Witches and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pleasers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 321 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the useless and impure things are ordinary and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 96 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 10c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 25c.

THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. S. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.). The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Gunn. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1723, quoted by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuit craft and is a plain index to the underhand working of that order against the welfare of individuals and society. 25c.

THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 10c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Telegt Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Wimel). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 25c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $1.50.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Darling. 15c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 10c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 3, 1896. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The taste of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 375 pages. 50c.

Address M. HARMAN, 550 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VII., No. 1. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, JAN. 15, E. M. 303. [C. E. 1903.] WHOLE NO. 952

Parry and Thrust.

Light is might.

Beauty is soul deep.

Seem what you are.

Hope never has a home.

Shame is modesty's mother.

Patriotism is hate plus a flag.

Unreasoning love is worse than scorn.

The Roborcatic party elects every president.

He who cannot be wrong is hardly ever quite right.

A woman should first be a woman, and then next a mother.

Thought is the seed of rebellion; bravery gathers the harvest.

A criminal at the worst is but an unfortunate instrument of nature.

Too much light blinds the weak, but the sun is pitiless, notwithstanding.

Those who live according to a code should be sold eighteen to the dozen.

Lord Roberts says that the best soldiers do not drink whiskey. No; they drink blood.

The work of the state is to administrate wealth and individuality out of the possession of man.

Dr. Herron is sowing wheat in that field of tares known as Scientific Socialism. He denies Marxian fatalism.

The trusts are making stockholders of their servants in order to more surely fix their holds on the throat of the pubic.

The "New Orleans States" declares that "Negro appointees will be killed." The murderers of innocent black men are not Anarchists.

Love laughed even at jail locksmiths in Alabama, where a young woman effected the escape of her lover. The sheriff was the girl's father.

Illinois Republicans have declared for a candidate for Speaker of the House. Next comes the scramble for the nomination of chief stealer.

A clergyman has declared that Turks are immoral because of "their poetic natures." Anglo Saxons, not being poetical, are therefore very, very moral.

Dr. Lyman Abbott says that he loves his home better than he loves his country. This is rank treason, and should be punished. Such talk is dangerous to the state.

The coal trust laughs at those who propose to take the whip of law and lay it upon its shoulders. The coal trust, or any other trust can buy the law cheap for cash.

Those who oppose sexual freedom oppose all freedom because with sex slavery triumphant the spirit of liberty receives daily, hourly, yes, every minute, a check, a discouraging setback.

Rudyard Kipling is still engaged in breeding bitterness between nations. When poetic art is made to serve the purpose of envy or revenge it is prostituted. Kipling's muse is a harlot.

From a not too comfortable seat on the political fence Chas. Francis Adams declares that both the north and the south were right in the Civil War, and that might settled the conflict. We are a "free people."

I said once, "marriage is love's miscarriage." If J. Williams, my critic, will ponder this he will comprehend my figurative description of marriage as a "crime." Any sexual contract actual or implied, amounts to a marriage in my view.

Archbishop Quigley of the see of Chicago is going to fight State Socialism. Anarchist literature should be dispatched to him at once, for Anarchism possesses the only effective weapons of argument against this slavery masked as liberty.

The impossibility of preventing crime by administering punishment is proved by the number of criminals alone. There would be no one left to do the punishing. Would it not be well to look to the causes of crime instead, and remove these?

IRONICUS.

An Oriental Non-Resistant.

A few weeks before Voltairine de Cleyre was struck down in the street by the bullets from Herman Helscher's revolver, she read in one of her French journals the story of a Chinaman who was shot by a Russian soldier in the streets of a Manchurian village.

The Chinaman refused, when called upon by the commanding general, to identify his assailant. "I forgive him," the Oriental said as he lay on a cot in the military hospital; "you shall not punish him."

This story made a profound impression on the young woman's mind.

"That Chinaman was an anarchist and did not know it,' she said to her friends, "His sentiments, his ideas, are mine. I will translate the story for the benefit of my American friends who cannot understand the French."

TRUE TO HER PRINCIPLES.

And she translated, but scarcely had her work been completed before she herself lay in a Philadelphia hospital suffering from three bullet wounds and the officers of the law standing by the side of her cot asking her to identify the man who had aimed the fatal balls.

"Why, that is my friend," she replied to their inquiries. That is Herman Helscher, my former pupil. I did not see him shoot at me. He is my friend."

This is the story which Miss de Cleyre translated; reprinted as she wrote it in her study and containing traces of her own personal sentiments placed in the mouth of the dying Celestial.

It happened at Kharbin, in Northern Manchuria, in the month of August. The Russians had occupied the city. The frightful events of Blagoveschensk, where, in consequence of the false interpretation of an imperial order, an imbecile general had caused four thousand peaceable Chinese to be drowned, had aroused the ferocious instincts of the Cossack warriors.

MAKE WAR FROM THEIR HEARTS.

"We don't make war for the sake of politics," said a Cossack officer to me over there; "we make it from our hearts, for war's own sake. It is our element."

One evening one of them was amusing himself by interrogating a Chinese trader, who was selling cucumbers in the street. The Chinaman, who did not understand Russian, did not know how to answer, whereupon the Cossack, exasperated at the other's not replying to him, discharged his gun directly into the Chinaman's belly. The Russian fled precipitately and the poor Chinaman was carried to the military hospital.

WISHED TO PUNISH SOLDIER.

This occurrence affected the general disagreeably. With him, indeed, it was a question of gaining over the Chinese by mildness, the government having the intention of annexing the country. Hence he thought to counteract the bad impression which the incident must necessarily have produced on the Chinese by ordering a severe judicial inquiry and punishing the offender in an exemplary manner. The inquiry assumed a highly dramatic character, from the glaring juxtaposition of Chinese morality with European "justice."

To declare the identity of the murderer, the military judge of inquiry went to the hospital to interrogate the wounded man, who was near his death agony. The interpreter was a Russian.

I transcribe as faithfully as possible the Chinese questions and answers.

SAW ASSAILANT CLEARLY.

"Did you see clearly the soldier who shot you?"

"Yes, I saw very clearly, for he was talking to me quite a while before he discharged his gun."

"In case we should show you a great number of soldiers, would you be able to recognize him among them?"

"Undoubtedly. But I do not wish to denounce him."

"What! you don't wish to designate him? Why not?"

The Chinaman, already a wan specter, opened wide eyes in which a strange flame seemed to sparkle. He raised himself and extended his hand.

"You, a Russian, mighty and learned, you do not know? You do not understand? I will tell you. Very soon, I am going to die; I know it, I feel it. But I want to die tranquil, at peace with the universe. That is why, before quitting this existing, I wish to forgive him. I do not wish to cause more suffering. We must reason, why cause two to perish if it is possible that I, alone should die?"

DENOUNCED HIS QUESTIONER.

"But, if you do not denounce him, we might make a mistake and cause an innocent man to expiate the crime committed against you."

"Is it so?" exclaimed the dying man; and by a superhuman effort he sprang up with a gesture of truly majestic grandeur. "You are going to institute a tribunal to accuse, judge, condemn, although I do not want it! O infamy, crime, ferocity! You are going to assassinate, you to whom no one has done any wrong, because something has been done to me? By what right? It is my affair, mine! I have not invoked your power to avenge me. He has killed me, I forgive him. It lies with me. If I do not want it, you have no part to play. I forgive. It is no longer for you to judge."

THE EUROPEAN ARGUMENT.

The Russian functionaries stood aghast. Their brains, accustomed to dwelling upon the paltry principles of the Occidental idea of justice, were not prepared to receive such a stroke. There was silence. At last one of them recovered the thread of his disconcerted logic, and insinuated:

"But if we do not punish him, he may again do evil to others."

"No, no," cried the Chinaman, more and more excited, "you are wrong. If you punish him, he will become exasperated and sin again through ill temper. If I forgive him, he will not again do evil to anyone. He will not do it again, because he will have been forgiven!"

CONFRONTED WITH SOLDIERS.

All the same, the examining judge confronted a certain number of soldiers with the dying Chinese. Among them also was he upon whom, from the beginning, the gravest suspicion had fallen. The Chinaman let them all pass by, repeating simply, "No—no—no—"

At last came the inculpated one. Immediately an intense emotion was reflected in the dolorous features of the victim. The Chinese looked at him a long time in the midst of a profound silence. After some minutes he asked the judge: "What will they do to him if I denounce him?"

"He will be sentenced to hard labor for life."

"I will denounce no one. In the first place, I would be in error; it is not he. And, aside from all other considerations, I wish to forgive that I may punish usefully and die tranquil."

JUDGE BECAME DESPERATE.

The examining judge, desperate at the turn the affair was taking, said to him, in an insolently official tone: "You must denounce. It is my will. It is your duty. You are rebelling against the action of law and of justice."

"Be still, and do not speak to me of duty. What my duty is you cannot know; it is my personal affair. If it is your duty to hunt out a guilty man restored to innocence by my forgiveness, that you may wreak upon him a vengeance which does not concern you, that is your affair. I will have nothing to do with such abominations. And I tell you, if among the soldiers you have shown to me, there had been the guilty one, I would still say 'no, he was not there,' and if, in spite of me, you have him whom you believe to be guilty, judged and sentenced, I declare you ten times guilty, against him and against me. You will be a criminal. I forgive."

"I FORGIVE"—HIS LAST WORDS.

The Chinaman who had spoken trembling with emotion and accompanying his supreme words with convulsive gestures, the last before death, fell back and fainted.

"I forgive"—that was his last word. He never recovered consciousness; an hour later he was dead.

Even the hardened souls of the Cossack officers were profoundly moved by the spectacle of this majestic death. Once again the divine thought of Buddha had conquered the blind and sanguinary Themis. Asia, incarnated in the murdered body of the Chinese peasant, humiliated Europe, proud of her culture; and there are four hundred million peasants over there.

I saw the Cossacks weep. The inquiry was abandoned. And never since have we heard of Russian violence in Kharbin. —Philadelphia North American.

Slavery In and Out of Legal Marriage.

The editor of Lucifer in a recent editorial asserts that marriage always means slavery for woman, but not for man.

I presume he means legal marriage, and even then I believe his assertion is too sweeping. True, legal marriage may, and perhaps generally does, enslave the woman, but not always, as is proved in numerous cases besides that of John Ruskin. There is a large and constantly increasing number of broad-minded men who take pride in giving their wives the utmost freedom in marriage and practically say to them "I do not want you to feel that there is any necessity for you to live with me a day longer than it is your wish to do so. Let your affection for me be the only tie. If you feel that you can be happier with another man and wish to be released from the marriage contract I will assist you in securing that release."

I recall one case which was printed in the newspapers a few years ago where a millionaire—I think his name was Higgins—released his wife and gave her a great part of his fortune because she loved and wanted to marry another man. Of course such cases are the exception, but they are growing more numerous daily, and I believe the example of Ruskin did much to suggest such acts of justice to conscientious and fair-minded husbands. In such cases marriage is a mere legal form, of no binding effect except in legal matters, such as the legitimacy of children and the inheritance of estates. Granting that there are such cases, marriage then is not always slavery for the woman.

But the legal tie is not all that is required to make a slave of a man or woman in marriage. There is the ages old idea of ownership which frequently is as strongly assertive in so-called "free marriages" as in those sanctioned by the law. And this idea of ownership is not the exclusive characteristic of the man. Fully as often, if not oftener, it is offensively manifested by the woman. This is not surprising when the fact of woman's economic dependence on man is considered. In such cases she feels that she will lose her means of sustenance if her sex mate should abandon her. But even among women who are self-supporting—yes even among those who practically support the whole family including the "man of the house"—you will generally find that feeling of ownership of the man and resentment if he show attention to a woman whom she believes he considers more attractive. Perhaps in such a case she feels that, so long as she works hard to buy him clothes, cigars and beer, she is paying a good price for him and is justified in her feeling of ownership.

Yet there are still other cases, to my personal knowledge where both the woman and the man are economically independent, where either would be financially as well off without the other, but nevertheless the idea of ownership is there, like a fly in the ointment, to mar their happiness.

In such a case, either in legal or free marriage, there is always the relation of owner and owned. I recall a case of that kind in which the man is an old-time contributor to Lucifer. He said to me recently:

"My wife can do just as she pleases, but if she goes with any other man she has got to leave me," with the accent on the "got." That man's first (legal) wife secured a divorce from him on the ground of his alleged intimacy with one of her friends. Yet, to hear him tell it, his first wife made a slave of him. Of course he has no idea that he is making a slave of his second (legal) wife.

"But," he might answer, "she and I have made an agreement that each will be exclusively true to the other so long as we live together. That certainly is a free contract and is merely the condition on which we agree to live together."

What stronger tie is involved in legal marriage?

Another instance I now recall is where a woman is not necessarily dependent on the man, although he does support her, clothe her and actually pay her for her household labor more than he would pay a housekeeper. (Incidentally I might inquire how many married men pay their wives as much as they would pay a housekeeper for the same work.) Her parents are well-to-do and she would not suffer any financial loss worthy of consideration if she should return to them. The man allows her the utmost freedom. It happens, however, that she cares little for the society of any other man except him. She is an excellent housekeeper, is as affectionate as most women are, but she is unhappy if he does not give her all or nearly all the time he has outside of his regular business hours. He is not in love with any other woman, so far as I know—and he has given me much of his confidence—but he does like the society of women. In order for him to find congenial society outside of his own residence it occasionally is necessary for him to lie or practice deception, things which his soul abhors and which would not be necessary if she felt the same towards him as she did before they assumed the relation of husband and wife. Few girls before marriage ask or expect their beaux to tell where they pass every evening when they are not calling on their sweethearts. Girls who do ask such questions are likely to make tiresome wives. Yet even those who do not before marriage are almost certain to think that it is their "right" to ask and have truthful answers to such queries after marriage. This is true whether it be a legal marriage or a mere agreement to live together. In either case such a woman will feel that the man "belongs" to her. In such a case, I ask, is it the woman or the man who is the slave?

The tie of affection is much stronger than the legal tie. Also it can be, and too often is, far more tyrannous.

I cite these cases because I think they prove that the abolition of legal marriage is not a cure for the enslavement of woman—at least not an instantaneous cure. And also to prove that the tyranny depends more on the natures of the persons involved than on the conditions imposed by law or by agreement. Personally I regard legal marriage as a relic of barbarism. If it must be tolerated it should at least be made dissoluble by mutual consent.

But the root of tyranny lies much deeper than mere legal sanction. The notion of ownership of the sex mate is older than man and exists even among animals of many species. It probably is beneficial to those animals among which it prevails, or it would not have persisted through so many countless centuries of evolution. But, like the nipples on a man's breast, such feelings of ownership are no longer beneficial in any way to the progress of evolution. They are mere reminders of what we once were. To tolerate such feelings, if it be possible to suppress them, is as absurd as it would be for a man to boast of the fact that he could suckle a child from his own breast. There are men who can do so; I believe teratologists call them gynecomasts, meaning a man with a woman's breast, but such a creature is regarded as a monstrosity, a reversion to a primitive type.

The feeling of ownership of another person is also, if not a reversion to a past type, at least a useless and even pernicious persistence of such a type. But, as I have written this to insist, that feeling exists in spite of law, not because of it.

JAY CAMERON.

Thomas Paine Celebration at Whitewater, Wis.

The Morris Pratt Institute and Spiritualist Church of Whitewater, Wis. have agreed that the 29th day of January shall be celebrated as a regular holiday. It was on that day in the year 1737 that the great man Thomas Paine was born.

This man who did more than all others to give us our freedom, and the country a republic, has been reviled, traduced and slandered more than any other man born within the last five hundred years.

The Morris Pratt Institute and Spiritualist Church unite in inviting their neighbors and all others who love Truth, Justice and Freedom, to come to the Morris Pratt Institute Building Thursday, January 2, and assist in celebrating the one hundred and sixty-sixth anniversary of the birth of that great man, Thomas Paine.

The first session of this celebration will be held in the Spiritualist Temple, Morris Pratt Building, at 2:30 P. M. The second session will begin at exactly 7:45 in the evening.

PROGRAM:

1. Music.
2. Reading: Thomas Paine's Poem, "Liberty Tree." Miss Agnes Chaffee.
3. Brief remarks by Prof. A. I. Weaver, and Mrs. Mattie Hull.
4. Reply to the late T. DeWitt Talmage's attack on the character of Thomas Paine, by Rev. Moses Hull.
5. Remarks by Rev. W. J. Erwood.
6. Closing song.

EVENING SESSION:

1. Singing.
2. Original Poem by Mrs. Mattie E. Hull.
3. Thomas Paine, His Life and Works, by M. Florence Johnson.
4. Recitation—"The Author-Hero Thomas Paine," by Miss Amelia Pfenning.
5. Comparison of the lives of Thomas Paine and John Wesley, by Rev. Moses Hull.
6. Reading, Thomas Paine's Interview with St. Peter, M. Florence Johnson.
7. Closing Song.

N. B. Any part of this program is subject to change as the exigencies of the case may require.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Close of Volume and Beginning of Year.

With last week's issue volume six, third series, of Lucifer came to a close, and, near the beginning of a new calendar year we begin a new volume.

Looking back over the events of year three hundred and two, of the scientific era, the Brunonian Era, we see many things to encourage us to greater diligence in future, notwithstanding the fact that most of the things necessary to physical life, health and comfort have greatly increased in cost.

During the year last past we have sent out tens of thousands of sample copies and distributed much other literature free of charge to those willing to distribute the same, hoping that whether returns tangible should materialize or not, the seed thus sown would bear fruit at some time and place in future.

One of the evidences that our persistent sowing of seed has not been in vain is the greatly increased attention that has been given by the large daily papers, also the popular magazines of the country to questions relating to Marriage and Divorce, as for instance, the symposium on Divorce printed in the Hearst syndicate of daily papers, followed by many other ably written articles by leaders of current thought.

Mrs. Elizabeth Walling, Susan B. Anthony, Ella Wheeler Wilcox, and others of national reputation have given utterance to ideas so revolutionary in regard to these basic questions that they would seem to mark the beginning of a new ethical era—an era of sexual science, of rationalism as opposed to superstition in sex morals, such as the so-called civilized world has never yet known.

Slowly but surely the demand for lectures on subjects pertaining to sex and the reproduction of a better race of human beings, is growing. At the weekly meetings of the Chicago Society of Anthropology, for instance, it is a noteworthy fact that the largest audiences are called out by the announcement that Sexology, race-improvement, race-culture, etc., are to be the subjects of discussion. Not long since the writer of these lines received an invitation from the librarian of the University of Chicago to address the Ethical Culture Club of that capitalistic and strait laced educational institution. The invitation was accepted and the day set, but a postponement was requested by the librarian on account of class examinations.

WHAT OF THE FUTURE?

Yes, what of the future? While we have much to encourage us to persevere, we must not forget the difficulties yet to be overcome. First of all is the ever-present FINANCIAL PROBLEM. How and where to get the dollars, the dimes and the pennies to pay weekly and monthly bills, is the ever recurring question. With coal at famine prices, and other necessaries climbing up the scale, we feel and know that without co-operative aid from all who are interested in the much misunderstood and constantly misrepresented struggle for free, intelligent and responsible parenthood our paper—our publishing house—after nearly a quarter of a century of varying fortunes must succumb to the inevitable.

As often said before we ask no DONATIONS. While many other radical publications, colleges, libraries and other educational institutions, are asking and receiving thousands and even millions of dollars as free gifts, we ask only that those who believe Lucifer's work to be a vitally important educational propaganda, will do what they can to extend our subscription list, and to circulate our books and pamphlets.

ALL CAN DO A LITTLE; some can do MUCH. We have little faith in "special inducements." Our paper and books are well worth the price we ask for them. Why should publishers and bookdealers be expected continually to reduce their prices while nearly everything they must buy is constantly advancing in price? However, to satisfy such good friends as Brother Cook —" See Various Voices," we purpose to make out a list of books and pamphlets that will be given to every new subscriber to Lucifer. Meantime we hope to receive many new names to swell the subscription list for the incoming year, and to receive renewals from all whose time has expired, or is about to expire; also to receive many orders for books and pamphlets, from friends both old and new.

Winter is the time for reading,—for retrospection, for introspection, and nothing promotes these very useful mental exercises so much as do well selected books and papers.

What Lucifer is Here For.

So often are we asked what are the specific objects of our paper and pamphlet publications that, in addition to the brief synopsis printed each week at the head of the editorial page, the following is herewith given as a somewhat enlarged or more elaborated statement:

The failure of Peace Congresses, and of Moral and Religious Suasion, to prevent war;

The failure of law and gospel, the failure of threats and penalties of all kinds—including prisons and scaffolds—to prevent crime or its increase;

The failure of education, religious and secular, supplemented by anti-vice societies and laws, to prevent vice;

The failure of political parties, of labor unions, of economic clubs, of co-operative combinations, etc., etc., the utter failure of all these agencies to prevent poverty and to secure to the worker the just reward for his labor, or to secure for him a chance to sell his labor at any price—all these failures indicate with reasonable certainty that a radical and fatal defect exists somewhere in the philosophy or the methods of the reformers.

Looking for causes of failure the conviction is growing in the minds of many thinkers that the reformers have been too superficial in their work; that they have been trying to remove effects without looking for their chief producing causes. As when R. G. Ingersoll says,—see his lecture "What is Religion:"

"You cannot reform people with tracts and talk. You cannot reform people with preach and creed. . . . These weapons of reform are substantially useless. . . Religion is helpless. Law can punish but it can neither reform criminals nor prevent crime. Charity itself becomes an unconscious promoter of crime. . . . There is but one hope. Ignorance, poverty and vice must stop populating the world. This cannot be done by moral suasion. This cannot be done by religion or by law, by priest or by hangman. This cannot be done by force, physical or moral.

"To accomplish this there is but one way. Science must make woman the owner, the mistress of herself. Science, the only savior of mankind, must put it in the power of woman to decide for herself whether she will or will not become a mother. This is the solution of the whole question.

"I look forward to the time when men and women by reason of their knowledge of consequences, by reason of the morality born of intelligence, will refuse to perpetuate disease and pain will refuse to fill the world with failures."

Lucifer recognizes it as an incontrovertible if not self-evident truth that the institutions of any people or nation—the law, the customs, the religions and the morals, of any people—are as good and as bad as the people themselves,—as the people who make and who endure or submit to said laws, customs or institutions. It seems then a self-evident proposition that to obtain better laws, better customs, better religious creeds and better standards of morals, better conduct of life, it is first necessary to have better people. How then to get better people, would seem to be the "previous question."

Another of the recognized thinkers of the age—if not of the ages—Gerald Massey, gives the answer to this question in these words:

"We must begin in the creatory if we would benefit the race and woman must rescue herself and consciously assume all responsibility of maternity on behalf of the children. No woman has any right to part with the absolute control of her own person."

And still another whose name is a household word in all English speaking lands, Helen H. Gardiner, in her paper on "The Moral Responsibility of Women in Heredity," says:

"She [woman] has no right to transmit a nature and a character that is subservient, subject, inefficient, undeveloped—in short a slavish character, which is blindly obedient or blindly rebellious and is therefore set, as in a time lock, to prey or to be preyed upon by a society in the future! If woman is not brave enough to demand and to obtain absolute personal liberty of action, equality of status and entire control of her great and race-endowing function of maternity, she has no right to dare to stamp upon a child and to curse a race with the descendants of a servile, a dwarfed, a time and master serving character."

Replies to Critics.

RESTRAINMENT VS. GOVERNMENT.

In "Free Society," Chicago, Dec. 28, 1902, appears the following paragraph signed, C. L. James:

"Before Friend Simpson writes another article to prove that Anarchism affords scope for organization to 'restrain' 'invasive' individuals, I hope he will read Moses Harman's reply to Emma Goldman in Lucifer Vol. VI., No. 49. Mr. Harman says: 'When certain citizens of Kansas complained that I had sent to them an immoral document, namely Lucifer, containing a plainly worded account of and protest against marital outrage, if the property selected arbiters had decided that the complaint was valid and that I had no legal or moral right to harrow up the feelings of my subscribers and patrons by such recitals, then it would have been competent for such arbitration board to assess damages in dollars and cents . . . . and I would have been enjoined not to send any more such literature to the plaintiffs in the case. Failure to obey the injunctions, the awards, of boards of arbitration, would, I presume, be punished under freedom, by the boycott, by loss of social standing, and by loss of financial patronage on the part of all who subscribe to or support the principal of arbitration.' Anarchists, and some who are not Anarchists, have been in the habit of considering Mr. Harman's persecution a singularly gross outrage. But he appears to take a very different view of it himself. 'Properly selected arbiters' are defined in another part of his article as 'arbiters selected by the disputants themselves.' Now a jury consists of citizens, whose names are fortuitously drawn from the poll-list, subject to a great many arbitrary challenges for cause. It is difficult to see how, in practise, we could get nearer selection by the disputants themselves than this. There must be a limit somewhere, or a disputant who knew himself to be wrong would never allow a trial. Mr. Harman's case, therefore, appears to have been tried in much the way he would desire; and if 'all who subscribe to or support the principle of arbitration' had agreed to boycott him for disregarding the injunctions of the board of arbitrators, as he certainly did, his situation would be much worse than it is. It was the support of those who accept the principle, or think they do, for probably most of them vaguely perceive that it works nothing but governmental tyranny in practise, which enabled him to keep up his paper not withstanding a sentence which, tho' severe, was far milder than the one he himself proposes. R. B. Kerr, a well-known reader of and contributor to Lucifer, said, not very long since, in that admirable journal of sexual reform, that he approved of Anarchistic literature, because humorists are few and ought to be encouraged. If he gets his ideas of Anarchistic theory from such portions of Lucifer as that here cited, his grounds of approbation are well put."

I have quoted the entire reference to myself by Bro. James, so that readers of Lucifer can compare what I really did say in whole No. 948, with the "comment" of a man who is commonly considered good authority as a teacher of Anarchism.

To point out a few only of the mistakes of my critic I will say that instead of looking upon the action of my persecutors in Kansas as right and proper I referred, in my reply to Miss Goldman, to what I considered a parallel case, namely, that of the wolf against the lamb, and said that if the arbitrators chosen by plaintiff and defendant "should decide that the charge [of defiling the water by the lamb] was sustained by the facts, even though the water ran from the wolf towards the lamb, then the wolf would gain his suit and the lamb be restrained from repeating a like offense in future."

This illustration was given to show that in my own case, also in that of Mrs. Craddock, a properly selected board of arbitration would be as little likely to decide against the defendants as a similarly chosen board would be to decide against the lamb, in the case related by Æsop; but that if the arbiters SHOULD so decide, our appeal under freedom would be to the common sense of mankind instead of to a court appointed and supported by politics and militarism.

It is said that IRONY is never appreciated by a Scotchman until it is driven into his head with a club. Is James a Scotchman?

As to juries: To maintain that there is any similarity between the method of selecting a jury, under "government" and the selection of arbitrators under freedom, reminds us that once upon a time a logician proved that a chestnut horse and a horsechestnut are one and the same!

Whatever may be the THEORY in regard to juries we all know that they are NOT usually composed of "citizens drawn fortuitously from the poll list." Take the case of the men accused of Anarchism and hanged as Anarchists in Chicago.

The bailiff who summoned men to act as jurors to try the Anarchists said, "I know what I am about, and those men will HANG, as sure as fate."

Theory and practice are seldom found working together in the business affairs of this world and especially in politics. Juries are an essential part of politics.

Of all our irrational superstitions, handed down from ignorant and brutish ancestry, our present jury system is one of the most absurd and irrational. The theory is that a man charged with crime should be tried by a "jury of his peers"—equals—and that to prevent partiality or favoritism the jurors —SWEARERS, should be selected by "lot"—"fortuitously," and that when qualified by oath—that is, sworn on the "word of God," on their belief in rewards and punishments in a future life,—then, when enclosed within the sacred walls of the "jury room" these men drawn by chance from the ignorant, the superstitious and more or less criminally inclined masses, become, all of a sudden, "good men and true!" dowered with wisdom, honesty and impartiality so far beyond such qualifications in the average citizen that questions involving the life, the death, the liberty or life-long imprisonment, the home, the family—all the earthly hopes, of the accused, can be safely entrusted in their care and keeping.

Such is the theory, but in PRACTICE the jury—as in my own case and that of Mrs. Craddock—is used by the judge simply as a convenient cats-paw, or scape-goat, to carry the odium that might otherwise attach to his own arbitrary unjust and tyrannical rulings.

To show that I was talking not of government but of freedom I said, "the principle of arbitration as against government by authority of officials backed by professional butchers and cut-throats—the standing armies and navies of the world."

Apparently it did not suit the purpose of Bro. James to quote my argument against government and in favor of restrainment by voluntary associations of those "who do not wish to be invaded—assaulted, robbed or murdered." Evidently it suited his purpose better to misquote a few disconnected sentences and, by removing them from their "setting" convict me of advocating government-of-man-by-man under a new name.

The object of my reply to Miss Goldman was to show the difference between government and restrainment; that by etymology they are radically antagonistic; that the first means to "steer a ship; to order, to manage, to conduct;" while the second means to "bind, to stop, to stay."

Government is essentially AGGRESSIVE, INVASIVE, while restrainment is essentially DEFENSIVE; it means to stop, to stay, to LIMIT aggression; and yet Miss Goldman, and apparently C. L. James would have us believe that the two words mean one and the same thing.

One of James's misquotations is when he substitutes italics for Roman in the word "legal," as though to fix upon me the charge of endorsing LEGALITY, or statutory law. As before said I was then supposing a non-supposable case, simply for illustration. I seldom use the word legal, except for the purpose of showing the absurdity of the idea represented by it. Sometimes using it to represent what Blackstone calls "natural law"—but even when thus used I regard it a misnomer. There are no natural laws. Laws are wholly of man's making,—and unmaking!

* * *

SLAVERY IN MARRIAGE.

Jay Cameron's criticism voices so nearly my own views upon marriage, legal and otherwise, that I prefer to say but little at this time. The utterance to which he takes exception is the following—as he himself informed me—taken from the editorial entitled "A National Fugitive Wife Law," in Lucifer No. 950.

"Man is not, and cannot be, enslaved in marriage as woman can be, and is, enslaved. In most men's lives marriage comes as an incident—if it comes at all—nothing more. To the average woman who marries, marriage is HER ALL!"

Having taken so much time and space with the first of these "replies to critics" I can only say that the chief advantage of FREE, or of "contract," marriage over the 'legal" brand, is in the fact that it is much easier to obtain RELEASE from the former "tie" than from the latter, when the tie becomes a fetter that galls and enslaves.

In either case it is the bondage to our own preconceived ideas of what marriage is, or should be, that is hardest to break. No slavery is so complete and hopeless as that imposed upon us by our own mental superstitions.

M. HARMAN.

Marriage and Monopoly.

In last Lucifer the subject of the leading editorial was "Sexology—As Related to Poverty, Vice and Crime." The central object of that article was to show that the basis of ALL monopoly in our present-day economic and commercial institutions, our industrial and capitalistic institutions, is the FAMILY—the monopoly of sex through institutional MARRIAGE.

This editorial was made the text of a lecture on Sunday, Jan. 4, at the Masonic Temple, Chicago, before an exceptionally intelligent and attentive audience of both sexes, the chairman—or chairwoman—of this occasion being Dr. Juliet H. Severance, of this city, who had delivered a lecture in the same hall on "Marriage," only two weeks previous.

The interest manifested by the hearers, on both these occasions, the applause with which the most radical utterances were received, go far to show that Sex—and Marriage which means the legal control of sex—is receiving at the present moment more serious thought than it has perhaps ever received before by the thoughtful, the cultured, the really philanthropic and the really philosophic people of this city and country.

As I see it, the most effective education on any line of thought is obtained through the medium of the press, the daily, the weekly and monthly publications of the country, supplemented by cheap pamphlet literature. Impressed with this thought I am disposed to ask our readers whether they could not use, among their neighbors and acquaintances, a small pamphlet whose object is to show that the worst of all monopolies, the parent of all other monopolies that now oppress mankind is which means monopoly of the creative principle, by which monopoly woman, the creator of new human beings is denied the right of control and ownership of her creative powers and functions.

THE MONOPOLY OF SEX—

The type from which was printed the article entitled "Sexology—As Related to Poverty, Vice and Crime" is still standing in our office. Before it is "killed"—as the printers say, we wish to ask how many pamphlets, or booklets, on the subject named could or would be taken by each of Lucifer's readers and helpers, at ten cents per copy, or five cents each by the dozen or hundred. The article now standing in type would be used as the introduction to the pamphlet, which would probably comprise forty or fifty pages.

Please let us know soon whether such pamphlet is desired, so that we can decide whether to hold the type for that purpose or not. M. HARMAN.

ASTROLOGY AS A KEY TO HUMAN DESTINY, will be the subject of an address by Mrs. Hulda Loomis, before the Chicago Society of Anthropology, Sunday, January 18, 913 Masonic Temple, at 3:30 p. m.

CHICAGO PHILOSOPHICAL SOCIETY meets every Sunday evening at eight o'clock, at 72 Adams street. Good speakers. Free discussions.

VARIOUS VOICES.

J. A. Wilson, Phila., Pa.:—Voltairin de Cleyre left hospital yesterday [Jan. 2] Coming on as nicely as possible. Her wonderful nerve has been talk of the city.

Cassius V. Cook, Wadsworth, Nev.:—For the enclosed $2 please send Lucifer for the coming year to my address and to a new friend. If every subscriber could find a new friend for Lucifer each year, much might be accomplished for the principles of equal freedom that the paper advocates. I have observed no special offer that I could hold out as an inducement in soliciting subscriptions to the Light-Bearer—except its usually unappreciated merit. But I presume that you will send a copy of "The Prodigal Daughter" to a yearly subscriber, though it is offered only with 25 cents subscriptions. Put the premium on the $1 subscription, too, so prospective subscribers won't be too well satisfied with the 25 cent deal alone.

A. E. Clark, Hecla, So. Dak.:—Another year has rolled into the past, and the time arrives for me to again carry out the wish of my departed and appreciated mother. So I send you herewith $6 for use of the $100 set aside for your benefit. I will add $3 to place to my credit on subscription to Lucifer. The year has been very prosperous in this part of the country; crops were abundant and of good quality; real estate increasing in value. Trusting that you are enjoying the good vibrations that are set afloat so generously at this season of the year, I am as ever your friend.

[Mrs. Priscilla Clark, to whom reference is made, was a warm friend of this paper and its publishers, and helped us in many ways during her lifetime. In her will she requested that the income from $100 should be given to Lucifer each year, a request which has been faithfully complied with by her son. "Aunt Priscilla" was known and loved by many of Lucifer's readers.]

Ed Armand, New York:—I am glad to have the opportunity of extending my best of wishes for your work, you, Lillian and the baby. Happy New Year may it be for you and yours. Hope you and your work may be with us for many returns of good wishes. Of all the liberal papers I get none whose work is so planted on solid rock. It is so hard to get even liberal people to take stock in the ideas and work that I feel sometimes like giving up, but how can one ever turn back after just a little serious and liberal thought. I read your paper, pass it to others, get it back and then mail it and remail it and have a promise that it is passed on after out of my care. I would gladly pay for others' subscriptions were I sure they'd read it. My way, I am sure many read it, and some of it is bound to stick even if it does take a long, long time. I can't do much but I can help hold up your hands. I am not given to hero-worship but would give one dollar for a good photo of you.

I do not wish to treat friendships daintily, but with roughest courage. When they are real they are not glass threads nor frost work, but the solidest thing we know.—Emerson.

REMOVAL NOTICE.

Facilities for properly conducting my ever increasing Mail-Order Department being inadequate in Denver I have permanently located in this suburb of Chicago, and trust my many friends and patrons will continue to favor me with their many kind orders.

Send for prices of Watches, Diamonds, Opals, Silver, Plated and Optical goods, Music boxes, Jewelery, Chains, Clocks, Freethought and other badges, Ingersoll spoons, and my tract—"Theism in the Crucible"—free. OTTO WETTSTEIN.
La Grange, Illinois.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer the Light Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only," Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spelling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem, Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization. The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 10c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

MENTAL SCIENCE AS A GUIDE TO HEALTH, HAPPINESS, AND BUSINESS SUCCESS.

BY ALBERT CHAVANNES.

Chapter Contents: What is Mental Science? What will it do for us? Happiness; Character; Intellectual Character; Physical Character; Heredity and Health; Mind Cures; Business Success; The Law of Circumstances; Individuals; Marriage; Parents and Children; Political Organization; Political Economy. Communism and Co-operation, Colonization and Organization.

Address Albert Chavannes, 308 Fourth Ave., Knoxville, Tenn. Price 10 cents. Stamps taken in payment.

A Private Maternity Home

Or Lying-in Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired.

For particulars and terms give description of case, and address.
Suite 61-119 Lafaile St., Chicago Ill. C. S. WOOD, M. D.

951.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

Trial Trip Subscriptions.

For one dollar we will send Lucifer ten weeks to eight different addresses, and to the one sending us the list, any one of the following books:

The Origin of the Family, Private Property and the State By Frederick Engels, 217 pages, handsomely bound in cloth. Postage, 6 cents.

The Slavery of Our Times. By Leo Tolstoi. With portrait of author, 186 pages. Blue cloth; silver lettering. Postage 8 cents.

Nora: A Doll's House, and Ghosts. The two dramas bound together. Olive cloth; red lettering. 108 pages. Postage 8 cents. This offer will, we hope, induce our friends to extend Lucifer's circulation materially.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who notes a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author.

The Sex Passion.
Man, the Ungroven.
Woman, the Serf.
Woman in Freedom.
Marriage: a Retrospect.
Marriage: a Forecast.
The Free Society.
Some remarks on the early star and sex worships.
Notes—On the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population.

The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. Price, $1.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE

For Sale by Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 480 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 75c; paper 15c.

ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 18 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $1.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. H. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. H. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.

BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth, $1.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. H. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close references to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. H. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 10c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 31 portraits of delegates, including Debs, B. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 192 pages, 10c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

DARWIN, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. G. Spence. 178 pages. 50c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, cloth and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 37 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $3.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 50c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A study of the industrial type. Dyer D. Lum. 10c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and combating the claims made by churchmen that the Christian religion has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 260 pages. 40c. Postage, 5c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Remens and David Overmyer. 10c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 25c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John H. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 218 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HILDA'S HOME. Rose Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 428 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Coleman. 320 pages. Paper, 25c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Scotsland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 37 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Bockle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Voltaire, and Voltaire. 10c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

KORADINE. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III. (1889). Cloth, $1.25. Postage, 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 40c; paper, 15c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyrannies; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Holding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Tuberculosis in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Tradition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, H. H. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disoriented religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation: with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 15c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Spookis, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "iron time," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $3.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 350 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 50c.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 60 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Marietta), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 367 pages. 50c.

THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Witches and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 221 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediaeval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are soilingly and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 16 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. $1.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 10c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 25c.

THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1761, quoted by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuit craft and is a plain index to the underhand working of that order against the welfare of individuals and society. 15c.

THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 10c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Yelept Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Winne). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 25c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $2.25.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Darling. 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet of rare value. Every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 10c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us come to be ashamed of what makes us man, of circling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 15c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 5, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERSIGNED. An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal man and woman will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 170 pages. 50c.

Address M. HARMAN, 880 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VII., No. 2. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, JAN. 22, E. M. 303. [C. E. 1903.] WHOLE No. 953

Looking On the Sierras.

Eternal winter lives on that far height,
Immortal summer fills this vale below;
But those vast peaks of pure unstained snow
Look down where lush flowers bloom and birds delight,
And rich fruits ripen sweet through summer's might,
Their solemn presence harmonising so
With these in gracious contrast. Gaze; and know
That man is ever noblest in man's sight
When, midst those acts familiar, fair, and good—
The flowers of fellowship shown day by day,
He still maintains his strength, his hardihood
Of life, and keeps his individual way
Austerely; through the grandeur of his blood
Scorning to basely rule or to obey.

WILLIAM FRANCIS BARNARD.

Parry and Thrust.

Wanted: Men!

Coal is a king.

Hate only hate.

We are free—to die.

Baer is still brain mischief.

Put not your trust in trusts.

The plutocrat cannot bribe death.

It is a coal day when we get warm.

Pruriency is the mother of prudery.

At our best we have great faith in man.

A zero temperature threatens with revolution.

Politics is a game with one rule: you must cheat.

With no one to condemn, moralists would not be happy.

Wages have been largely raised. Now watch prices rise.

It is what you are which counts, not what you might be.

What opportunity has love in a struggle over mere crusts?

The truth sometimes gets lost in an overwhelming mass of lies.

He who is afraid of death is also very likely to be afraid of life.

Wives are the tribute which abnormal sexuality pays into the coffers of slavery.

Any wrongs which may be done under perfect liberty are but the late fruits of tyranny.

Porto Rico has learned that patriotism in Americans means the exploitation of Porto Ricans.

In China a runaway wife is tortured to death if captured; in America she is advertised to death.

The clergy are at swords points over the coal strike. In their war may they destroy themselves.

John D. Rockeyfeller is trying to fool his god; but stolen wealth is not returned by building universities.

Those who stop coal trains and help themselves in their need are unconscious Anarchists. Would that they knew themselves!

The chances of re election are slipping away from Roosevelt, but he dare not move for fear of the other horn of a dilemma.

If liberty wears dirty garments, remember that these are the only ones which authority will allow her to don. Otherwise men might love her.

Darrow's new book laughs thrice loud at its author in his pitiful attempt to pour a little purity into the putrid pool of political action.

If Christ died for men, how many men have died for Christ; died to give the teachings of Christ a testimony and to win the world for their master! And now—

What poor marksmen they are who shoot at kings nowadays. Are you not beginning to surmise that the attacks upon these friends of God are mock attacks, well paid for?

Interested persons are making distinctions between the way in which Carnegie got his wealth and the way of Rockefeller. 'Twere flattery to either to call him a common thief.

The fugitive mayor of Minneapolis is reported to be very ill, and broken in spirit. With his official friends in prison the mayor must feel, and rightly, that politics has gone wrong.

Liberty has many "friends" who can blow hot or cold, according to the social temperature; but those whom she loves, while they may seem foolish to the calculating, know the joy of real manhood.

Americans listen unwillingly to the tales of cruel murders done by their noble soldiers. The reports of English atrocities in the Transvaal they gloated over. And this, this is patriotism, is it?

IRONCUS.

The Passing Ideal and the Coming Ideal.

The problem that we have to solve in the Twentieth Century is not grasped by believers in the Puritan ideal of exclusive love.

It is not a theory only but an observed fact that an increasing number of persons are not satisfied with such comforts in sex relations as are supplied by Puritan marriage and by the seldom-named institution which supplements it. Moreover, these malcontents are noticeably high in character and ability, in self-control and altruism.

Many of our men and women suffer much from a sex system that was made in the past and is unsuited to the present; and some of the best suffer most. I will describe one class of these only out of many.

It has been my good fortune to know several men, belonging to four different sections of the English-speaking race, who were endowed with a nature the most joyous and radiant, the most expansive and responsive that it is possible to imagine.

Such men are always loved; their manners are instinct with chivalry and all-inclusive kindliness; the lowliest in the household wait upon them with a joy that lends a glory even to servitude. Few will deny that these men are varietists by nature. Such a man lives in a genial atmosphere, and perhaps suffers less than many of us when denied access to the sacred fire. Yet it usually happens that he loves some one woman passionately above others. As, however, he is usually not a philosopher who can invent a new ideal for himself, he keeps within the law as he finds it. But his self-repression is too costly, both to himself and all concerned. Towards one woman only does such a man show an irritation of nerves which he tries with evident effort to conceal by kind words; and that one is the woman to whom he is tied and to whom he keeps "true" according to his lights.

The only man of this type I have known whose manners to his wife are a wholly pleasant memory had thought out and lived up to a new ideal.

Trace the history of the Puritan ideal.

Exclusive sex possession in marriage is a marked characteristic of the most primitive races of men, and also of the manlike apes. The facts collected by Westermarck in his "History of Human Marriage" point to monogamy being the prevailing form of marriage in the rudest human tribes. If the course of evolution were towards exclusivism away from varietism, we should find promiscuity flourishing in the lowest races and in the primitive ages of human history.

Exclusive monogamy is no doubt based on jealousy, an instinct which has played a great part all over the animal world in developing fighting power, inducing combats by which the weaker males were weeded out or given a back place. The exclusivists who uphold duelling, as I have known some do, can certainly claim long descent.

That exclusive love should have been exalted into such a high virtue appears to result from (1) the belief, probably correct, that Puritan marriage among primitive peoples favors rapid increase of progeny, a very important consideration in the militant stage of society; (2) the satisfaction that Puritan marriage affords to the simpler feelings of primitive human nature; and (3) the dignity accruing to numerous persons in more complex conditions of society, who, being capable of only the simplest form of love, are enabled to label their deficiencies "virtue," and to insist that more gifted persons are "sensual."

In the ages preceding our own, it was true enough that children in plenty were as arrows in the hand of a giant. But the military era is passing away. We do not now need "food for powder." We now want quality not quantity in the reproduction of the species. The bonds of exclusive love which condemn so many men and women unnecessarily to sterility, especially in the sections of society where there is highest and most various development of character, cause serious loss to the race.

I see no reason to doubt that home partnership will continue to be usually between persons of opposite sex. I do not fear that such unions, when successful, (as even under present unfavorable circumstances they sometimes are), will cease to be the most unalloyed form of happiness known to mortals.

No amount of the physiological knowledge that Dr. Foote, Dr. Greer, or any other generous-minded doctor would give us (short of risk of imprisonment to himself), or that the whole medical profession will gladly give us in the future, when it will not be made their interest to mystify us, could help us in the choice of such a partner, though it may greatly help us in other ways. Adaptation can only be tested by experiment.

The "marriage of true minds" cannot be made dependent on bodily adaptation. We must face the fact that in highly developed races, character and temperament are so various that bodily and mental adaptation to another can often not be found in the same individual.

The problem presented by so deep-seated a feeling as jealousy cannot be ignored; but the sting of jealousy will be almost gone when society does not mete out praise to the furiously jealous and the pity which is akin to contempt to the mildly jealous and the deceived. The believers in a jealous god are continually promoting strife, but the worshippers of love will certainly learn how to disarm jealousy.

The change that is ahead of us will not bring such an alteration in the social customs or daily life as is often supposed. But it involves an improvement in the character and heredity of the race that I believe is not foreseen even by most Lucifer pioneers, except the greatest of all, Moses Harman.

The moral ideal that we are coming into means at first a recognition of such varietism in love as exists, and its expression in rational ways. It means the overthrow of all priestly superstitions about "sin" in any amatory acts as such. And it means in the future an attention to the science of heredity as applied to human life which will bring about by far the most important change in human history.

DORA FORSTER.

"Marital Unrest."

[Reference has been made in these columns to Mrs. Elizabeth Bacon Walling as a writer upon Marriage and Divorce. In the New York "Evening Journal" of Dec. 29, 1902 appears a three-column article from her pen upon the subject of "Marital Unrest," from which a few paragraphs are selected for Lucifer's readers who will doubtless be able to draw therefrom their own conclusions, or inferences, as to the value of an institution that our leaders, in church and state, constantly tell us is of divine or superhuman origin:]

I was "flower girl" at my cousin Eugenie's wedding, and therefore took the most absorbing interest in the bridal preparations. I was so impressed with the wonderful gowns and jewels and presents that came in every express, and the letters from her fiance in every mail, which she wore upon her heart by day and slept upon, under her pillow by night, that, forgetting to be afraid of "the dark" and the "goblins" I lay awake at nights not seeing how ever I could wait till I was big enough to "get married," like Cousin Eugenie.

"What a perfectly frightful thing it must be to have to die an old maid," said Eugenie to her most intimate friend, Alice Moore, as they sat on the side of Eugenie's bed, "holding hands," the night before the wedding.

"Infinitely worse than marrying a man one cannot love, I should think," said Alice Moore.

"Do you hear that, Rosalind?" confided I to my most intimate doll-friend, in my crib over in the alcove. "We've got to get married or we'll die frightful old maids."

CHANGE OF A YEAR.

The next year, when I went to spend the Christmas holidays with Cousin Eugenie, my juvenile enthusiasm for the institution of matrimony suffered its first depression. There was Eugenie throwing into the waste-basket the letters of "Cousin Jack," who wrote from California every now and then to say he was "all right," along with notes from her tailor and piano tuner.

And when Cousin Jack came home, they kissed each other in a way that reminded me of how I felt when I kissed Miss Prudence Jones, a client of papa's, whom I always kissed because I had to.

If Eugenie wanted to go to the theater, Jack was sure to go to his club, and if Jack wanted Eugenie to take a walk, either she had shoes on that "hurt her feet," or Vincent Lee who was forever coming—was coming to dinner; and there would not be time to "do her hair over again." Once, when they quarreled, and Eugenie said she wished she had accepted General Lee, and Jack said he wished so more fervently than did she, I said:

"Cousin Eugenie, why on earth do you and cousin Jack live together?"

"Because we are married and have to," snapped Eugenie, loud enough for Jack to hear out in the smoking room.

"Then get the preacher to unmarry you," said I.

LEARNED OF DIVORCES.

And then when I began to read and observe, I found there was "Marital Unrest" everywhere. The home, society, the newspapers, the courts, history and biography, were full of it. It formed the plots of many novels and of most dramas.

Men fought duels; women abandoned their babes, renounced thrones, surrendered their honor, disgraced their families, went to jail and were put to death because of it. Even the Bible was not free from it—neither the Old Testament nor the New. It formed not infrequently the theme for the discourse of the minister, who preached eloquently against it, without seeming to get at any very practical way out of it.

But the pathos and tragedy of all this married unhappiness, and the cruelty and injustice of our divorce laws, I realized most keenly when I became a minister's wife; when I saw marriage among all sorts and conditions; when restless man and lonely woman bared their hearts to me, bitter and despairing over the wretchedness and hopelessness of it all.

* * *

There came the convict's child. They had "moved all the way down from Booblitzville, so folks wouldn't know we've got a pop in jail." But for all their pains, the blight of "pop's" awful offence had tracked them, and now the little girls at the public school "wouldn't play with her." It was only a tear-stained little midge, in an old brown sunbonnet and a faded calico pinafore, but the grief was very real.

THE PATHOS OF IT ALL.

"And now," added the child, "we're all workin' in the match factory—Andy and Ruthy and me and mom—all of us, 'cept the baby and little 'Rastus, the hunchback, an' savin' up, so mom can buy a divorce in Dakoty, an' we wont be Tim Bolliver's folks no more."

* * *

There came the joyless coal baron's bride, willing to surrender fortune, prestige, salons, jewels, homage, for the man she had loved. She had been only a struggling little elocutionist in a remote little Jersey town, whose primitive customs and October melancholies, whose commonplaces, Sabbath stillnesses, and tolling church bells palled upon her; and where waiting five years for Herbert, whose verse, "though not without merit, was unavailable," had driven her to a rash thing. But she would give back all "for a year of love with Herbert."

* * *

Frantic and outraged, came the pitiable young husband, bound until death to a woman whom he took to wife in good faith, but whose character he learned too late, and for whom his love has now turned to hatred.

* * *

Smarting and shivering in the gray winter dawn came the wan, miserable wife, Bill Blizzard's wife, beaten and deserted in pregnancy, without medicine or food.

* * *

And poor, work-weary, patient Vashti Buzby, the "drunkard's wife!" Slave to an idea. Vashti Buzby had gone on bearing children, to whom she could give in fulness neither welcome, food, raiment, instruction, opportunity nor even a happy heredity, just because, away back in the unknown, untried past she had promised the sober, capable, enamored Steve Buzby that was "to love and obey, from this day forward, for better for worse, through every change of condition, till death do us part.'

ADDED TO WORLD'S MISERY.

She had gone on adding to the world's sum of human wretchedness, by birth and need, struggle and suffering, discontent and despair, just because she had said she would; the Church said she must and the State said she should. When the inflammatory rheumatism which Vashti Buzby took while shucking corn in the November sleet to save the hire of a man towards the yearly taxes, worked its insidious way through her system until it settled around her heart, she gave up all thought of hoes and plows and shovels and rakes and skillets and churns and mortgages and taxes, and they laid her beside "Steve Buzby" in his drunkard's grave under the old magnolia tree in the old Buzby burying-ground.

Then it was that Rosemary had married Silas Peterson. Silas had been seeing Rosemary home from prayer meetings and sociables and taking her to Fourth of July celebrations and the annual county fair for three years before he won Rosemary's promise to marry him. She loved Silas, but somehow she did not feel toward him exactly as she fancied she should toward a lover.

But Silas had been good to her. He had prepared her to take her examination for the third grade school certificate, and had recommended her as teacher at the East End primary.

And then, there were Tildy and Debby to be considered, yet too young to earn anything, and little Job, who came home from the factory, paler and thinner, each day, from the sugar-dust sickness.

And so the next year, when the school committee decided that the East End primary would do better with a man at its head, and they elected Dan Grimes, the ale brewer's son, as its master, she married Silas Peterson out of sheer helplessness and desperation, only vaguely conscious that she was entering into the most binding and most exacting of all relationships, upon no more powerful, more sovereign sentiment, than friendship, gratitude and tender sympathy.

* * *

They were all disappointed, joyless, dissatisfied, loveless and lonely. The court would grant a "separation," but they were entitled to more. They wanted liberty, love and happiness, their inalienable right.

"Out of Print" Pamphlets Free! Don't Overlook This.

One of Lucifer's friends has a small stock of "out of print" pamphlets which he wishes to give away. He also wants to aid Lucifer. He therefore offers to give, as long as the supply lasts, one each of the following named pamphlets to any one ordering books or subscriptions of us to the amount of fifty cents. That is, the purchaser gets what he orders, and in addition five pamphlets for which he is not asked to pay even the postage. This offer applies equally to old and new subscribers. These are the pamphlets:

In Behalf of Personal Liberty. A Letter from Julian Hawthorne on the Heywood Case. Also a Statement by M. Harman in regard to the prosecutions against Lucifer in Kansas several years ago.

United States vs. Heywood. Why the defendant should be released. Ed. W. Chamberlain's Letter to President Harrison, written Feb. 14, 1901. Also Judge Carpenter's charge to the jury in the same case.

A Good Man Sent to Prison. A Powerful Protest and Plea by Hugh O. Pentecost. This was called forth by the sentence of Moses Harman to a long term in the penitentiary for publishing a plainly-worded denunciation of a case of outrage upon a wife by her husband—a crime legalized by conventional marriage. "Woman's fight for freedom is on;" said Mr. Pentecost. "He who is not with her is against her, but until women themselves shall become more generally awakened to the situation, and brave enough to speak out on it, the man who values his comfort and freedom more than right and reform may more safely take the risks of a trial for a nameless assault than of exposing in print and by mail the outrage of it."

Oration Commemorating the 151st Anniversary of the Birth of Thomas Paine, Author-Hero of the Revolution, Delivered at the seventh celebration of the Chicago Secular Union, Jan. 30, 1888, by President E. A. Stevens. Of this oration S. P. Putman wrote: "It is one of the best ever penned. . . It has historic imagination and what I call juice. . . . . It gives the heart of the matter, is vigorous and to the point. It gives pictures of Paine and not merely a record."

An Appeal to the Women of America in Behalf of Liberty and Justice to and for the Prosecuted and Persecuted Defenders of the Wives and Mothers of our Land. By C. L. James.

The supply of some of these pamphlets is small. "First come, first served," remember.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Paine Memorial.

Sunday Feb. 1, Dr. Juliet H. Severance will deliver an address before the Chicago Philosophical Society, in honor of the memory of Thomas Paine,—"Author-hero of the American Revolution"—at 72 Adams St., beginning at 8 o'clock p. m. Seats free; all invited.

The Coal Problem

Will be the subject of a joint discussion, Sunday January 25, between representative speakers of four different classes of reformers: The Single Taxers, the State Socialists, the Communist Anarchists and the Individualist Anarchists. Fifteen minutes will be allowed to each of these speakers—followed by general discussion by the audience. Meeting will open promptly at 8 p. m., at 72 Adams St., under the management of the Chicago Philosophical Society. Seats free.

Replies to Critics.

REGULATION OF SEX.

At the close of the weekly meeting of the Chicago Society of Anthropology, Sunday, Jan. 4, one of the official leaders of that society, Mr. Vogeler, said to me, as the audience was dispersing:

"I wanted to ask you a question, but time for adjournment shut me off—a question which I feel sure you cannot answer. It is this: As far back as human history goes there has always been regulation of sex—regulation of race-reproduction. Now, if this regulation should suddenly cease, what would follow?—would not the result be disastrous?"

Regarding this question, as one very pertinent to the subject of the lecture—"Sexology in its Relation to Poverty, Vice and Crime."—I promised Mr. Vogeler to write out a reply to his questions, and believing that others are equally interested in the matter, I will try, in as few words as possible, to make answer in this week's Lucifer.

Yes, I recognize the fact that from time immemorial there has been regulation, or at least attempted regulation, of sex and of reproduction or of parenthood, by self-constituted regulators—priests, legislators, judges, magistrates—that is, there has been regulation of the fountain of life by those who sought to control or govern the masses in their own interest.

Some years ago I read in the "Kansas Catholic," published at Leavenworth, Kan., a statement of the duties of the priest. Among other duties was that of deciding for the young females of his flock, which of them should marry and become mothers, and which should devote themselves to the service of the church; that is, which should lead celibate lives, in nunneries, which should be celibate "Sisters of Mercy," etc.

Not only the Roman Catholic but all other religious organizations have assumed and now assume the right and power to regulate, to a greater or less extent, the sex-life, the reproductive functions of their communicants and through their influence over the civil institution called the state, they have sought to control, also, the sex-life of others besides their own membership.

* * *

Admitting the fact of regulation of sex, in all the past, by church and state authority, that is, by authority of those who have claimed the right to control the acts of others—generally by appeals to superstitious fear of an alleged divine ruler of the universe whose agents or mouth-pieces both priests and civil rulers have claimed to be—admitting the universality of such regulation the question naturally arises as to whether such universality PROVES anything as to the necessity, or the usefulness even, of such control, such regulation.

Let us see. I well remember the time when regulation of religious belief was almost universal in this country as well as in all countries of the world, and when a neighbor of mine was denied his civil right to testify in court, in a very important case, because of his non-belief in the popular creeds respecting "God," future punishment, etc., I accepted the ruling as right and proper, believing, with the great majority, that a belief in future rewards and punishments is essential to morality, and therefore essential to good citizenship.

With Brother Vogeler I, too, once believed that a moral cataclysm would result if church state regulation of marriage should no longer prevail—just as surely as I then believed a moral cataclysm would result from the prevalence of disbelief in the existence of a partial, jealous, vengeful God, an omnipresent and nearly omnipotent devil, and a "lake that burneth with fire and brimstone forever and ever."

Time was when belief in "witchcraft" was well nigh universal; when even "reformed" theologians such as John Wesley said that to disbelieve in the existence of witches was to deny the Bible, and when so good and humane a judge as Sir Mathew Hale gave his official sanction to the then prevalent superstition, and who, if I mistake not, sentenced old women to be burned at the stake for the alleged offense of "bewitching" their neighbors, or killing their domestic animals by "spells" and "enchantments," through collusion with the arch-fiend, "His Satanic Majesty."

Brother Vogeler will probably admit that the cause of morality in human relations has not greatly suffered from the almost universal decline of the belief in witches, nor from the equally prevalent decline of faith in the existence of an "angry god," a malignant and semi-omnipotent devil and a never-ending hell. If he lives long enough to see the day foretold by such prophets as Dora Forster—see her article in this week's Lucifer, entitled, "The Passing Ideal and the Coming Ideal"—also the time very broadly hinted at by Mrs. Walling in her paper partly reproduced from the N.Y. "Journal," he will probably be willing to admit that the popular fear, shared apparently by himself, that the decline of regulation of sex by church-state authority is no more to be feared than was the decline of regulation of religious belief, a century ago, or the decline and fall of the equally rational and humane belief in witchcraft by our very enlightened and progressive ancestors of a few generations ago.

* * *

The following paragraphs were put in type for last week's issue but were crowded out:

VACCINATION ONCE MORE.

In Lucifer 940—Oct. 23, 1902—under the head "Heart to Heart Talks with Critics," C. L. James has this to say;

"For the third time—which is lucky—I now inquire whether the editor's proposal (Aug. 28) that his 'Heart to Heart Talks' should be on the plan or plane of equality,' (italics his), agreed with 'monopolizing' (his own expression) three whole pages of Lucifer for the purpose of asking me, by name, a series of questions, which if I did not answer, it would naturally be inferred I could not or dared not, and then refusing me the space I am taking here for a reply?"

Of all the contributors to Lucifer's columns there is none so difficult to please as is our Anarchistic friend C. L. James. His complaints of bad treatment by us are so numerous and generally so ill-founded that I think it a waste of valuable space and time,—not to mention temper, to reply to them. If our readers care to look at the matters complained of in the lines last quoted, the issue of Lucifer August 28 of last year will be sent to such applicants as will send a few stamps to pay for time and mailing. The evidence furnished by that number shows that instead of "three whole pages I devoted less than three columns to a discussion of the vaccination question, the only matter in that long editorial that had reference to anything Bro. James had said. This unusually long article was written largely because of his own persistent challenges—his repeated demand for FACTS, for "statistics," to show the folly and wickedness of vaccination. This could not be well done in a few lines.

As to the words "equality" and "monopoly:" If by the argument based thereon my critic means that I, as editor and publisher of Lucifer should grant to every correspondent as much space in the paper as I myself occupy, regardless of the question of cost of publication, then his ideas of EQUITY must be original with himself. Evidently he forgets that while Lucifer's platform is one of the FREEST it costs money, time and labor to publish even a small weekly paper.

The "equality" advocated by me in the "Heart to Heart Talks" mentioned, is not equality of SPACE in Lucifer but simply equality of right to speak honest thought, in accord with the EQUITIES, the COST of such public utterance. I was combatting the "Shepherd-and-Flock" idea, the "pulpit-and pew" idea, the teacher-and-pupil idea, that seemed to be advocated and practicalized by Editor Hubbard of the "Philistine," and said, "I am not a pastor, not a shepherd or goatherd, nor do my readers sustain the relation to me of sheep, of goats, of kine, of geese, or any other kind of gregarious quadruped or biped to their master or owner." To have my meaning perverted in the way it has been done by our chronic fault-finder is not a little provoking.

As to "refusing space" for reply I meet this charge with a simple DENIAL. I did not so refuse. I was not in office at the time spoken of, and the officer editor explained her reasons for suppressing or returning said reply.

Besides the all-sufficient reason that Bro. James has for many years asked for much more space than belonged to him, by any fair construction of right or justice, there is this additional reason, namely, his STYLE, or manner of treating those who differ from him in opinion. In the same paragraph from which I have quoted the opening lines he says: "If the Montreal asses are more asinine than I had supposed possible," etc. While our constant aim is to permit all correspondents to say their say in their own way we much prefer that they should treat their opponents CIVILLY, courteously, and not in the arrogant, dogmatic, bigoted, self-conceited manner that seems natural to, or at least very much cultivated by, our "middle-of-the-road" Anarchistic friend.

I have delayed answering the criticisms last referred to largely because of my aversion to occupying Lucifer's limited space with what has the appearance of personal controversy, and partly because of the apparent FUTILITY of arguing the vaccination question with a man whose mind seems so thoroughly made up that nothing from the other side can possibly have any weight with him. Bro. James, if not a Scotchman born and bred, illustrates the saying of Dr. McCosh, President of Princeton college, when he said, "Of all men it is needful that the Scotchman begin RIGHT, for if once wrong he is ETERNALLY wrong!"

A well-known physician of this city, referring to my last long argument on the vaccination question, wrote me: "The trouble with C. L. James is that, like the Irishman's turtle, he never knows when he is DEAD!"

And this is why I prefer not to continue this, or any other discussion with a man who delights in gladiatorial contests, or trials of dialectical skill, with little regard, apparently, for anything except personal victory. M. H.

Coal Famine in Chicago.

Of recent developments in that department of ethics called economics and commercialism, in that part of the English-speaking world called the United States of America, none have attracted more attention than has the shortage in the supply of coal, and the high prices demanded by dealers therein, causing suffering and death among the poor in cities and large towns, such as has never before been known since coal took the place of wood as fuel in this country.

For some weeks the big Chicago dailies have been largely filled with reports of the privation and suffering from this source, and with accounts relating to efforts made by the charitably inclined, towards relieving the suffering, and also the efforts made to ascertain who it is or what it is that has caused the shortage and the phenomenally high prices.

More than ten thousand dollars have been contributed to what is called the "Mayor's Fund," and spent in relieving the immediate wants of those who are too poor to buy coal at present prices. The Chicago "Examiner-American" has collected several thousand dollars for this purpose, and has shipped two or three train loads of coal from Southern Illinois to the city and caused it to be distributed to the freezing and famishing inhabitants—for in many cases the lack of food is felt quite as severely as the lack of coal.

As brief statement of the present situation I clip the following from "The Inter-Ocean's" summary regarding the coal-and-food famine now prevailing in this opulent Christian city:

"Despite the rise in temperature many cases of extreme suffering among the poor of Chicago attributable to the coal famine were called to the attention of charitable organizations and the police yesterday. Persons whose pride has restrained them from making their destitution known, the police say, are breaking down under the long strain and are asking for assistance. The persons who are now asking for help are in the most desperate circumstances, said Si Mayor, secretary of police, as he sorted a stack of several hundred reports of destitution. We have already today assisted over 200 cases. The applications for fuel are decreasing somewhat, but the list of those suffering from hunger is increasing if anything."

From the same summary it appears that county officials can get coal at last year's prices, or even at a lower price:

"While the private citizen, the manufacturer, and the large consumer of coal are paying between two and three times the amount they paid last year for coal, William McLaren, county superintendent of public service, yesterday issued a statement showing that the county is not spending so much for coal as last year."

The explanation of this unexpected difference in favor of Cook county would seem to be competition among large dealers in coal to secure the advantage, the prestige, of supplying the county institutions with fuel. It is not because of previous contract, since the fact is notorious that contractors have uniformly refused to fill contracts made before the late unprecedented rise in prices.

Comment seems useless in a case like this. M. H.

Socialism and Individualism.

I think that R. B. Kerr, in his article entitled "An Unconscious Socialist," is entirely too optimistic as to the degree of change of opinions which has taken place in the Socialistic ranks. I have no doubt that the more intelligent of the leaders of Socialism recognize the need of making large concessions to Individualism, but I do not believe that they represent Socialism any more than the Unitarians represent orthodox Christianity.

I judge so from what I read in Socialistic literature, and from conversations with such socialists as I come in contact with. As to literature, the last book I read is Le Regime Socialiste, by Renard, one of the leaders of Socialism in France. While M. Renard recognizes the need of respecting individuality in politics, his economic program is destructive of all economic individuality, and after reading my book, "In Brighter Climes," where I represent exactly the ideas expressed in my former article, he wrote me that it was good enough as far as it went, but that it did not go far enough. And as to my Socialistic friends, I have yet to find one who realizes that the orthodox Socialistic program will in any way curtail personal liberty.

A short explanation of what will be the social institutions towards which we are unconsciously tending, will help your readers to clearly understand my position, and the motives which guide me in my reform work.

I think that in a century or two—more or less—society will have abolished private capitalism, and replaced it by public ownership of the enterprises which require large capital; the nation, states and cities each taking charge of those enterprises which they are severally best qualified to manage. This transfer from the private capitalist to the public, will come in answer to a demand for better economic organization.

But concurrently with this transfer, there will be a demand for more individual independence, which will find its best expression by the organization of communities founded upon the individualistic plan. Within these communities, the sex ownership of the present marriage could not exist, and there would be no enforcement of rules, as a condition of their success will be, that each individual shall have attained that degree of development where he can be allowed to be a law unto himself, without endangering the welfare of the community.

In these communities, some of the dreams of the orthodox Socialists will be realized. There will be no wages, no money, no rent, no profit, no inheritance, no widowhood, no orphans, for in them the communistic motto: "From each according to his ability, to all according to their needs," will find its full expression. And in these same communities, some of the dreams of the Philosophical Anarchists will be realized. They will be purely voluntary associations, from which any one can secede whenever they choose; there will be the largest amount of personal independence for each individual, all being trusted to engage in such work as may be needed, selecting that which each feels he is best qualified to do, there will be no enforced family ties, the whole community being a large family, giving full play to a wide range of attractions.

Besides helping the realization of social desires, these communities will offer other special advantages, such as economy in protection, favorable conditions of distribution, special facilities for the bringing up of children, taking care of the sick and promoting social enjoyments.

On account of the advantages, I feel confident that such communities will eventually be organized, but I also believe that many trials will be made, and many years will pass before they can be a success, because, unlike most reformers, I do not believe that any advance in social progress can be made until a sufficient number of persons have attained the needed development of character. The material for successful communism does not exist at this time, and I claim that the best reform work is done, not by preaching new social doctrines, but by teaching the individuals what is the improvement of character they need, before they can have better social institutions.

ALBERT CHAVANNES.

VARIOUS VOICES.

J. V. Carter, Durant, I. T.:—I enclose $1.00 on my subscription and 25 cents for which please send Lucifer to my sister. I want to say that "Karezza" is truly worth its weight in gold. Please direct me to some one of whom I can learn all about Home, Wash.

Laura H. Earle, Phila., Pa.:—I thought No. 945 a particularly good one—what Mr. Harman has to say on the present drift of our country toward imperialism being the sort of thing that is much needed, as is also what he says about the detestable Comstock and his detestable society.

Thomas J. Mullen:—If you have not already seen the enclosed statements by Mrs. Walling you will find them interesting. The fact that the article was written by the wife of a clergyman should lend eccouragement to all who are engaged in publishing Lucifer. It shows that the good work is being helped by those without the pale of the influence wielded by Lucifer. To me it proves that the work carried on by Lucifer is all right, because others differently environed are teaching the same truths.

Chas. L. Gorvan, Home, Wash:—Why is it that some people who come here can hardly wait until they are landed from our float before they indite some laudatory words about us and send them to Lucifer or some other paper, for publication, and before they have been here three months regret having penned them? It seems to me they ought to wait until they have been here some time, and have become well acquainted with the people, before they either praise or criticise them. It was refreshing to have one (I. J. Lason) come here and criticise us, even though he had been with us but such a short time; but I don't think he had time to investigate the causes that led up to the acts which he criticised—merely acts of self-defense. Friends, stay with us awhile at least before you either praise or criticise the people of Home. Such gush as some people indulge in before they have been here more than a day is not pleasing to me nor to others. Home is the best place I have ever lived in, and I have been here five years. Notwithstanding our persecutions the Home village continues to grow in every way. If some who visited us several years ago were to drop in now they would see a great difference in the appearance of the place.

Celia B. Whitehead, Denver, Colo.:—R. B. Kerr says he is sorry I was shocked at his fable of Mrs. Grundy. Let him be more sorry. I was not shocked but worse—nauseated.

He intimates that I read something into his fable that was not there when he says "she assumes that I mean to compare 'eating jam' with 'the use of the organs of human creation.'"

Let me quote a few sentences and see whether they can possibly be "assumed" to mean anything else than what I "assumed" they meant: "The pleasure which more than all others shocked Mrs. Grundy was that of eating jam." "In private she often admitted that the jam rule was only suitable for girls, and she had no objection to the boys having jam if it were not too openly licensed." Read the fable clear through, Mr. Kerr, and admit like a man that your meaning is so plain that "a wayfaring man though a fool could not err therein." I do not like to be accused of "assuming" things. Nor do I consider it "blasphemous" to compare the use of the sexual organs to eating; but there are ways and ways of talking about eating and about sexual connection. Some are delicate, serious and beautiful, and some are simply disgusting.

Mr. Kerr would have "Nature take her course." If one has the nature of a cat and would bring offspring into the world with no thought or care as to the consequence I think some other part of nature—reason, for instance—should take its course. And please notice, here, that nothing can possibly be more contrary to "nature's taking her course" than preventives of conception.

"If women were free" . . . they would "choose a new man for each occasion" on which they desired to become mothers. It seems to me possible, even extremely probable, that the men who would make the best fathers would object to being "chosen" in that way. The sort of man who inquired for "the tooth brush that belongs to the boat" might not. (I beg the reader's pardon for treating the subject in so indelicate a manner, but I found it impossible to touch Mr. Kerr's ideas in any other way.)

Lastly, I am not now and never have been an Alphite, though persistently called that in Dr. Foote's "Health Monthly" for which I used to write.

I wish Mr. Kerr would kindly explain his "system" under which "sexuality would be a beautiful little stream flowing through the garden of love." That sounds quite pretty. I would have surplus sexuality in man transmuted into fraternal love, of which there is a crying need.

REMOVAL NOTICE.

Facilities for properly conducting my ever increasing Mail-Order Department being inadequate in Denver I have permanently located in this suburb of Chicago, and trust my many friends and patrons will continue to favor me with their many kind orders.

Send for prices of Watches, Diamonds, Opals, Silver, Plated and Optical goods, Music boxes, Jewelery, Chains, Clocks, Freethought and other badges, Ingersoll spoons, and my tract—"Theism in the Crucible"—free. OTTO WETTSTEIN.
La Grange, Illinois.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer the Light Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only." Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem. Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization. The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 15c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

MENTAL SCIENCE AS A GUIDE TO HEALTH, HAPPINESS, AND BUSINESS SUCCESS.

BY ALBERT CHAVANNES.

Chapter Contents: What is Mental Science? What will it do for us? Happiness; Character; Intellectual Character; Physical Character; Heredity and Health; Mind Cures; Business Success; The Law of Circumstances; Individuals; Marriage; Parents and Children; Political Organization; Political Economy. Communism and Co-operation, Colonization and Organization.

Address Albert Chavannes, 38 Fourth Ave. Knoxville, Tenn. Price 10 cents. Stamps taken in payment.

A Private Maternity Home

Or Lying-in Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired.

For particulars and terms give description of case, and address.

Suite 63-119 LaSalle St., Chicago Ill. C. S. Weed, M. D.

THE SAND CURE.

Five years ago Prof. William Windsor, LL. B., Ph. D., the world's most eminent phrenologist discovered the Sand Cure for Indigestion and Constipation.

This is no medicine but Nature's remedy. It is not to be taken. Only a half minute to give you. It is not water cure; just as easy to take. Over a half million people have been cured by this wonderful remedy in the past five years. A full explanation of the Sand Cure and how to use it (with) any one (can) do (so) (it) to his own case) is given in the January number of

The Natural Life,

a monthly magazine edited by Professor Windsor and devoted to teaching Natural Living, Viscology, Delineation of Character, Rube-ism and Health Culture.

Professor Windsor

will send a free copy of the number containing the directions for using the Sand Cure to all readers of this paper sending twenty-five cents for a three months trial subscription to The Natural Life

Address Windsor Publishing Co., 8 Oliver Street, Room 703, Boston, Mass.

BUSHELS OF READING. For ten cents we will ask 10 publishers to send samples to you for twenty cents each. International Subscription Agency, Lawrence, Kansas, Desk 5.

953.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

Trial Trip Subscriptions.

For one dollar we will send Lucifer ten weeks to eight different addresses, and to the one sending us the list, any one of the following books:

The Origin of the Family, Private Property and the State By Frederick Engels, 217 pages, handsomely bound in cloth. Postage, 6 cents.

The Slavery of Our Times. By Leo Tolstoi. With portrait of author, 186 pages. Blue cloth; silver lettering. Postage 8 cents.

Nora: A Doll's House, and Ghosts. The two dramas bound together. Olive cloth; red lettering. 108 pages. Postage 8 cents. This offer will, we hope, induce our friends to extend Lucifer's circulation materially.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author.

The Sex Passion.
Man, the Ungrown.
Woman, the Serf.
Woman in Freedom
Marriage: a Retrospect.
Marriage: a Forecast.
The Free Society.
Some remarks on the early year and sex worships.
Notes—On the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population.

The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. Price, $1.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE

For Sale by Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 460 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 75c; paper 15c.

ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $2.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolidge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.

BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth, 25c.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Condemned, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BOUNDING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 61 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 608 pages, 10c, cloth. Price, $1.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

DARWIN, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. G. Spence. 178 pages. 50c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DIGGING FOR RED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James H. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 47 chapters, 1,367 pages and a 2-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A sad Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum 10c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian religion has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 360 pages. 40c. Postage, 5c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, H. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Semens and David Overmyer. 25c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 15c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John B. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance that reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 139 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HILDA'S HOME. Rose Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 428 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Alfreman. 192 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 37 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Lessing, Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Voltney, and Voltaire. 10c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

KORADINE. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1886, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III. (1889). Cloth, $1.25. Postage, 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 50c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 418 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 40c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 50c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. H. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Its Parasites, a Cynicism; Whom Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Phillips Parish Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 10c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Phillip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 10c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 5c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Tranxition (H. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory), R. B. Kerr, and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in compact form. H. H. Walker, 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, an advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 15c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "two line," presentation edition. $1. Five volumes, plainer binding, $1.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of necklace finish. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. $1.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Hierolness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 50c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Marietta), Reminiscences of Berrie Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 287 pages. $1.

THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Witches and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 191 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are really and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 96 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 10c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is it expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 25c.

THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. H. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon edsework. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1723, quoted by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuit craft and is a plain index to the underhand working of that order against the welfare of individuals and society. 15c.

THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 10c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Social Sexual Action (Ernest Winse). 10c.

THE WORKS OF TURNR. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $2.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Dering. 10c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 10c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 32 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 4, 1896. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Press," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. "It is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it." A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 25c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 128 pages. 50c.

Address M. HARMAN, 240 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VII., No. 3. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, JAN. 29, E. M. 304 [C. E. 1903.] WHOLE No 954

Parry and Thrust.

Dare to live.

Hypocrisy is death.

No man kills through love.

Freedom is only for the strong.

Love forgives all of its losses.

Newspapers must be liars to live.

Saviors are sought only by the weak.

Marriage means that love's power is doubted.

A pessimist is one who dips his bread in gall.

An optimist is one who takes life sugar coated.

He who painted "The Vampire" should paint "The Tiger."

Religion is for those who can sin and keep up appearances.

Love comes to man as a blessing; ignorance turns it to a curse.

To count ears instead of votes would prove that the masses are asses.

Cranks are men who supply the oil with which the lamp of truth is kept burning.

Cupid shoots arrows maybe, but whoever saw him with a smoking revolver in his hand?

Ladies who blush in looking at nude pictures could save themselves by wearing smoked glasses.

All creative acts are equally clean and beautiful; the impurity which you see is all in your eye.

The state began in aggression, developed in aggression, and is aggression today. "Can the leopard change his spots?"

Russell Sage advises young men to buy real estate. Most of them could not afford to buy even seven by four feet.

King Edward is leaving England for a time. But let him go where he will, he cannot escape from his unsavory self even for a moment.

Men and women who think that they do right through the presence of police and the fear of jails should alone be made to pay for these.

American womanhood does not want Apostle Smoot in the Senate. American womanhood is quite willing that some men should dishonor themselves by entering the Senate.

Those who possess the earth may talk complaisantly about buying labor as they buy iron or coal, but iron and coal will never turn on them and say no.

The traction thieves are at it again in Chicago, and we may expect another Allen bill. Those who are willing to ride like crowded cattle must accept every yoke.

The indicted coal barons are already retaliating in threats to prosecute the Manufacturer's Association. While these two juggle the thing called law—three cheers for the state!

How great a fuss the police make over the occasional conventional murder. Thus it is that people hardly dare to go to bed at night. The police need their jobs, but they do not arrest Morgan.

In Newark, New Jersey, the courts are trying an alleged witch. When a woman can be arrested and tried on the charge of witchcraft the courts must be hard up for work. Why not try themselves?

They are trying to make a hero of John Mitchell. Every man who is acclaimed as a hero either becomes a tyrant or loses his place in public estimation. Keep clean of thrones, John Mitchell.

Mascagni goes back to Italy with a proper disgust for a nation which will tolerate a trust at the throat of art. The distinguished musician should remember that when they ask here "how much is that man worth?" they speak in terms of cash.

Massachusetts refuses to recognize a Dakota divorce. How now? is a thing which is right here very wrong a thousand miles away? Is "morality" geographical? Soon people will not know when it is proper to be shocked!

Is it worse to be a Mormon than to support prostitution? Is it worse to be a Mormon, than to persuade woman to deceive their husbands? Is it worse to be a Mormon than to be the keeper of a mistress or a harem? Is it worse to be a Mormon than to be a respectable citizen or a senator?

IRONICUS.

Is Woman a Responsible Being?

There are nations still in existence where women are denied the possession of a soul; but these nations are not civilized nations, yet I am not sure that either Germans or Englishmen really admit that women are beings possessed of a mind.

I have constantly heard Englishmen of "the good old school" say: "If a man steals my horse, my dog my poultry I have him arrested and he gets a few months' imprisonment if he steals my wife he remains at large, unmolested. Yet, is not my wife my most valuable property?" And that good Englishman is absolutely persuaded that his argument is unanswerable.

The other day, in a German paper, I read the following exquisitely delicious remark: "We have a treaty of extradition with Switzerland. If the man Giron had stolen the least valuable horse of the Crown Prince of Saxony we could have had him arrested in Geneva and returned to us; but as he stole only the wife of that Prince, the mother of his children, we can do nothing."

From all this we are bound to conclude that, in the eyes of many Germans and Englishmen, a woman is like a horse or any other animal, a thing, a "brute of no understanding," a being without a mind. In my ignorance I thought that when women left their husbands to follow other men they were, rightly or wrongly, using their own minds, acting on their own responsibility, and on their good or bad judgment.

will be. Yet nothing else could be expected, in a great majority of cases, than love turned to hate. The marriage couch is the grave of love, for the simple reason that the lovers have not been instructed on this point, and in their ignorance they destroy their ardent love and mutual attraction for each other, and turn them to hate and repugnance.

If I am at all qualified to judge in these matters I would say that it is not always excessive indulgence in the sex act that causes repugnance to develop, but the constant contact of the persons. This, I take it is the main cause for the death of love, and main cause of the desire of both to be released from the now galling marriage bonds.

If the young were properly instructed in sex matters so that they understood fully the powers and functions of their being, and learned in time the great benefit which would result from restraining their sensuous desires, there would no doubt be hundreds who would go through life together, reasonably happy and content with each other, where there are dozens now. It should also be thoroughly impressed upon the youth of both sexes, but upon the male sex in particular, that there is no prostitution except where the sex act is indulged without reciprocal love, and that such indulgence is a crime against nature.

Another cause for divorce is the double standard of morals which is still recognized for men and women. The man may browse around as he likes and indulge his animal propensities to his sensual heart's content, but his wife though capable of loving more than one man, with a pure love, dare not indulge her desires, for once even, unless she is willing to take the chance of being found out and forever thereafter barred from "respectable society." A single misstep so-called, for the woman, whether single or married seals her doom, so far as her standing in society is concerned, but the man may take ever so many missteps and even boast of it, yet his social standing is not affected thereby. All this impresses the woman with the idea that she is looked upon by men as inferior to them, and that she must be held in subjection, which naturally enough increases her resentment, her rebellion.

The main cause of opposition to divorce laws seems to be the laxness of these laws. Opponents of divorce would force people to live together, whether possible to do so or not. Som of them are even advocating the establishment of the whippin post for the purpose of flogging wife deserters, just as if such cruelty would revive and rehabilitate a love long since dead and passed beyond all hope of resurrection.

No matter how stringent divorce laws may be made, those who can no longer live together will separate, even if one or both of the parties be obliged to leave the state or country, and if such separation and desertion should be made an extraditable offense it would no doubt have the effect of increasing the number of suicides and murders.

Do away with legalized monogamic marriage and allow men and women to make their own marriage contracts, with power to rescind on proper notice, and the problem will be solved.

C. H. WESSELER.

Ouray, Colo, Jan. 17th, 1903.

An Answer.

I profess to be an Anarchist.

I think I can enlighten Mrs. Bertha Moore as to the exact belief of a person who professes to be an Anarchist.

It is true that Anarchists want to abolish all law and government.

Mrs. Moore does not see how the great mass of people, as they are at present, can get along peaceably without being governed. Does she think they get along very peaceably with being governed? If she does, she is uncommonly optimistic. If she thinks there may be room for improvement in that respect, then it becomes a pertinent question whether government promotes peace or discord. Anarchists think government promotes discord. Those who think government promotes peace, have never given anything worthy to be called a reason for thinking so. They have simply been accustomed to take it for granted. Those who think government promotes discord, are ready to give reasons for thinking so.

In other words, I thought that they were thinking beings. When a man steals a horse he takes him by the mane, or the mouth, and pulls him away with him. He does not say to the animal: "I like you; I will treat you better than your master; will you come with me?" He steals him, as he would an inanimate thing.

When a man asks a woman to elope with him he says to her: "I love you, I know you love me; leave your husband, who makes you unhappy, and come with me, who will make you happy." She reflects, and, through feelings of despair, of love, of passion, she yields and answers: "Yes, I will."

Now, her resolution may be most reprehensible, her conduct immoral; she may be a fool, anything you like; but she is not carried off by force; she acts of her own accord and free will, and is, I imagine, prepared to meet the consequences of her actions.

I have heard an English magistrate say to a man whose wife was accused of disorderly conduct: "You should look after your wife better than you do, and in future I will make you responsible for what she does. To-day, I will impose a fine of ten shillings. If you pay it I will set her free."

Now, this argument would be fairly good if the accused had been a dog. I should understand a magistrate saying to a man: "Your dog is a nuisance and a source of danger to your neighbors; if he causes any more damage, if I hear again that he has killed your neighbor's cat, eaten his poultry or bitten his children, I will hold you responsible, and make you pay the damages, plus some compensation." But a wife! inasmuch as, mind you, when a woman has committed a murder in England it is she that is hanged, not her husband.

I believe that women are quite prepared to accept the responsibility of their actions. The emancipation of women should be an accomplished fact by the declaration that she can do evil as well as good. And I am sure that if she wants credit for whatever good she does, she is also ready to accept the consequences of the mischief, to herself or to others, which she may make.—Max O'Rell, in Chicago American.

Cause and Cure of Married Misery.

The question of Marriage and Divorce seems now to be up for final discussion and solution, as was the chattel slave question, in this country, during the twenty years prior to its final settlement, by the abolishment of the institution.

Although at that time the fugitive slave law and Dred Scott decision had the appearance of more effectually intrenching the "divine institution," they were really its dying kick. So also, in all probability, shall we see a National Divorce Law passed within the next few years which will satisfy its adherents that nothing more is needed to forever establish the divine institution of Christian marriage through "holy wedlock." The institution, however, is doomed, and if not totally abolished will be so modified that nothing of its present binding and grinding force will be left.

There seems to be some diversity of opinion as to the principal cause, or causes, of divorce, among the opponents as well as its advocates. Susan B. Anthony, for instance, says: "The trouble commences when he asserts his right and she rebels against it. This is usually the beginning of a battle which is unequal from the first to last. He has gospel, law and public sentiment on his side; she has nothing but her outraged sense of justice." This statement no doubt contains a great deal of truth, but let us see whether this really is the beginning of the trouble that usually ends with the woman's defeat. As long as the magnetic force of the male and the electric force of the female are still unimpaired they continue to attract, the two towards each other, and there is no assertion of rights and no rebellion, but as soon as these forces are neutralized, and the two made one by the marriage ceremony begin to repel each other, then the domineering of the man and the rebellion of the woman begin.

And how do these forces become neutralized? It is by constant contact and cohabitation. Always sleeping in the same bed, and never once suspecting what the result of such habit

There are two principal forms of discord—foreign and domestic. It can scarcely be disputed that almost all war and quarreling among nations is made by governments.

There is absolutely no statistical or other evidence to show that domestic discord is made any less by law and government. A few attempts to show any such thing—as when in England, some years ago, the flogging acts were said to have diminished crime,—soon proved fallacious. The best penological writers—Wines, Drahms, Havelock Ellis, e. g., acknowledge, with remarkable frankness, that neither humane discipline nor severe works any permanent decrease in crime.

What statistics, taken for a few successive decades, really do show is as follows:

1. The annual amount of each and all crime fluctuates, like that of rain, snow, or thunder.

2. Similarly, the average of annual amounts in each country is extremely constant.

3. Even the degree of deviation from the average is more regular than for most physical phenomena. Suicide might be supposed one of the most capricious among crimes. But, when Buckle wrote his History of Civilization, the suicide average, for a year, in London, had long been known as 240; and the actual rate circled about this fixed center, at the almost exact radius of 26—from 266, maximum, in the panic year 1846, to 213 in 1849; nay, the very weapons used were more predictable than the number of hail storms or unusually cold days.

4. By slow degrees, great changes occur. But law does not seem to have any connection with them. The modern Italian character, it has been remarked, almost exactly reverses the ancient Roman. We explain this by remarking that natural selection must, in each generation, for centuries, have thinned out the typical specimens of so pugnacious a people as the Romans.

5. The causes of minor fluctuations are less obvious. They are clearly very different from what might be guessed. Thus suicide is more common in hot weather than cold, indicating a connection with "midsummer madness" rather than with suffering. Yet madness is not, as charitable juries would have it, at all proved by suicide. Disappointment in love very often leads to self-destruction, never to insanity.

6. Among great standing causes of crime, one is penal law. The penologists, especially since Degeneracy began to be scientifically studied, are singularly unanimous in agreeing that while the number of Born, and Historical criminals proper, can only be affected by slow processes of evolution, Occasional and Impulsive criminals, are made virtually habitual by punishment alone.

As to Christianity, it certainly is not responsible for degradation of women, which reaches a lower point than anywhere else in countries where Christianity was never preached. All forms of ignorance and superstition co-operate to hinder the slow advance of civilization—none more energetically than government worship.

C. L. JAMES.

Some Home Matters.

EDITOR LUCIFER:—As you say you wish to hear from the "Storm Center," and as Comrade Morton is busy in our school, teaching the young idea not to shoot I will volunteer a few items. First of all, there is no storm here now. A friend wonders about "Discontent," and seems to think I am the most irrepressible one here. Not so. I have but one line to go on, and cannot stand still; the others have many lines of work, families to support, land to clear, roads to make, and other public work to do.

For years "Discontent" was published under great disadvantages, those engaged in the direct work, got only their board, going from house to house a week at a place for that. The small receipts sometimes hardly paid for paper and postage. The printing was done by hand, two men of the group who did the publishing, running the press two pages at a time, so that twice a week men who worked hard at other things, would leave their needed work for this labor of love; sometimes one couple and sometimes another, but the printing must be done no matter what or who else suffered, and when the list increased during the pending of the trials, I have known the comrades, after a long, hard days' work, run the press till nearly midnight.

There is plenty of other work being done, public work that does not pay in dollars and cents. Within the year there has been a pile driver built, a floating walk 465 feet long to where the boat lands, roads have been opened and partly worked, and now they are putting up a hall 62x60 and two stories high, the lower story for school room and printing office, and the upper floor for lectures, dancing, exhibitions, etc. Please remember that we have only about a hundred people here, men, women and children, and that all this work is voluntary. Some of our number who have lots are not here yet, some are away at work to get the means to build on and improve their lots.

Among the recent arrivals are Olivia Freelove Shepherd and her friend Fannie Spaulding, Mr. Lason, Col. and Mrs. Rucker, Professor Thompson, and a family from Salem, Ohio, named Smith, who have built their house, but are away at work to get other things needed, before coming to stay.

Last, but not least, Laura Smith Wood, with her not yet four year old boy.

LOIS WAISBROOKER.

"Out of Print" Pamphlets Free! Don't Overlook This.

One of Lucifer's friends has a small stock of "out of print" pamphlets which he wishes to give away. He also wants to aid Lucifer. He therefore offers to give, as long as the supply lasts, one each of the following named pamphlets to any one ordering books or subscriptions of us to the amount of fifty cents. That is, the purchaser gets what he orders, and in addition five pamphlets for which he is not asked to pay even the postage. This offer applies equally to old and new subscribers. These are the pamphlets:

In Behalf of Personal Liberty. A Letter from Julian Hawthorne on the Heywood Case. Also a Statement by M. Harman in regard to the prosecutions against Lucifer in Kansas several years ago.

United States vs. Heywood. Why the defendant should be released. Ed. W. Chamberlain's Letter to President Harrison, written Feb. 14, 1901. Also Judge Carpenter's charge to the jury in the same case.

A Good Man Sent to Prison. A Powerful Protest and Plea by Hugh O. Pentecost. This was called forth by the sentence of Moses Harman to a long term in the penitentiary for publishing a plainly-worded denunciation of a case of outrage upon a wife by her husband—a crime legalized by conventional marriage. "Woman's fight for freedom is on;" said Mr. Pentecost. "He who is not with her is against her, but until women themselves shall become more generally awakened to the situation, and brave enough to speak out on it, the man who values his comfort and freedom more than right and reform may more safely take the risks of a trial for a nameless assault than of exposing in print and by mail the outrage of it."

Oration Commemorating the 151st Anniversary of the Birth of Thomas Paine, Author-Hero of the Revolution, Delivered at the seventh celebration of the Chicago Secular Union, Jan. 30, 1888, by President E. A. Stevens. Of this oration S. P. Putman wrote: "It is one of the best ever penned. . . It has historic imagination and what I call juice. . . . . It gives the heart of the matter, is vigorous and to the point. It gives pictures of Paine and not merely a record."

An Appeal to the Women of America in Behalf of Liberty and Justice to and for the Prosecuted and Persecuted Defenders of the Wives and Mothers of our Land. By C. L. James.

The supply of some of these pamphlets is small. "First come, first served," remember.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Concentration.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox, one of the poet-prophets of our time, tells us:

" There's lack of greatness in this generation—
And why? Because no more man centers on one thought.
We know this truth and yet we heed it not:
The secret of success is CONCENTRATION!

For many years Lucifer's editor and leading contributors have been concentrating their reformatory efforts upon the theme that seems to them most primary, fundamental, and therefore most necessary to be first attended to. We have argued that it is quite useless, and often worse than useless, to attempt to remove secondary and superficial causes while the basic cause of trouble remains unmolested and in full force.

Take the popular methods of removing poverty, vice and crime, by works of charity, by preaching, by punishments, such as fines, jails, penitentiaries, hangings. While all these remedies are tried, with constantly increasing zeal and cost in time, labor and money, the sum total of poverty, vice and crime is also increasing in still greater ratio.

In Chicago, for instance, we are taking much credit to ourselves for keeping alive thousands of families, and now the mayor and city council have passed an ordinance to set apart $25,000 of the people's money to establish a municipal "coal yard," from which coal is to be dispensed at cost to those able to pay, and FREE to those who can not pay. The natural result of this plan will be to increase the number of those who will report themselves unable to pay. Naturally, logically, these people having once accepted charity will be less averse to taking their places permanently in the pauper class. More and still more readily will they argue that the rich, having robbed them of their money and their opportunities to be self-supporting, should now support them through municipal bounty, much as the recipients of "pensions" look upon the aid they receive from "government" as their rightful DUES.

And thus year by year, the proportion of adults who have fallen by the way and have become a public charge, will increase, and in the same ratio will also increase the self-approbation of the coal barons, the manipulators of the Food-Trust and all other trusts, because of the fact that through taxation they will be obliged to support, out of their personal profits, so large an army of dependent paupers.

So much for the effect of charity, municipal and otherwise, upon those now living. What of its effect upon the UNBORN?

I need not say that this latter view of the case is incomparably the more disheartening; incomparably the more terrible.

If the "city fathers" and all charitably inclined citizens were to turn a deaf ear to the calls for help, a large proportion of the very poor would either die outright else become inmates of hospitals, poor farms, etc., and thus be prevented from reproducing their kind. As it is, charity will keep sufficient vitality in the bodies of these unfortunates, these more or less improvident and incapable adults, to enable them to reproduce a new crop of mental, moral and physical imbeciles—a new crop of such as never should be born—a crop of the "born tired," born without desire to live, except it be to wreak vengeance upon the class or classes who, or which, by prenatal instinct they feel to be their hereditary enemies.

If not born with hate and revenge in their hearts sufficient to make them fore-doomed criminals, that is, criminals in the eyes of the present capitalistic rulers, they are born fore-doomed SLAVES, voting slaves and fighting slaves, with too little reasoning power, and too little energy to make effective and intelligent fighters for better conditions, better systems of economics, politics or ethical equities in general.

To such human material as this the public school is a curse, because inculcating government-worship, called "patriotism," which means obedience to capitalism.

For such the Sunday school and orthodox church teachings are simply cords and chains to make perpetual their slavery, mental, moral and physical.

Hence also the almost superhuman efforts of church-state leaders to keep down discussions of the basic principles on which rest the State, the church, marriage and divorce, especially the last two, since it is the CONTROL OF SEX through marriage that makes it possible to control the PRODUCT of SEX—the new generation of human beings.

* * *

While "concentration" is absolutely necessary to success in any line of human endeavor, it seems to have also its disadvantages, its perils. Often and often, when trying to arouse the dormant public conscience to a just sense of the importance of free and responsible motherhood, as the most necessary factor in the problem of how to cure the evils of our present social order—or lack of order—I have been sharply criticised for my devotion to what my friends call my "hobby."

A few weeks ago, for example, Mr. Odelius, secretary of the "Chicago Society of Anthropology," took me to task for what he considered an exaggerated presentation of the evils of conventional marriage—of enslaved motherhood, unwelcome motherhood, as stated in my address before that Society on "Sexology as Related to Poverty, Vice and Crime." Such criticisms convince me that their authors have never yet had their attention directed to this subject as mine has been directed, and that the popular apathy in regard to this class of subjects makes it all the more necessary that some one should concentrate his efforts upon this line of reform, and, like Garrison when advocating another unpopular reform, say to all critics, whether friends or foes:

"I will not equivocate; I will not excuse; I will not recede a single inch, and I WILL BE HEARD!"

* * *

To show that others as well as myself have seen the necessity of concentration upon this line of reform I ask particular attention to the articles in this issue entitled the "Fall of Nations through Marriage," and "The Cause and Cure of Married Misery."

Brief replies to, or comments upon, the plans proposed by Friends Swift and Wesseler will be welcome to Lucifer's pages

M. HARMAN.

Paine Memorial.

Sunday Feb. 1, Dr. Juliet H. Severance will deliver an address before the Chicago Philosophical Society, in honor of the memory of Thomas Paine,—"Author-hero of the American Revolution"—at 72 Adams St., beginning at 8 o'clock p. m. Seats free; all invited.

A Veteran in Need.

Among the old-time helpers of Lucifer and its radical work, honorable mention should, on all suitable occasions, be made of Abner J. Pope. Not only as helper of Lucifer and of other radical reform journals but also of many worthy and needy individuals, few men of equal means have made a better record.

Bro. Pope is now a member of the colony of Liberalists who are trying to solve social and economic problems at the place called Home, Washington. He is eighty years old—forescore years YOUNG, as Dr. J. Rhodes Buchanan used to say, but though still young and active his strength is not equal to the task of clearing his two acres of ground and putting them in condition for planting to fruit trees and vines. Lucifer has helped him to build a house and in other ways, and now if all who have been recipients of his bounty in the past would do half as much to balance their account as Lucifer has done, there would be no need of asking aid from any one else.

This statement is made without authority from Bro. Pope himself, and without suggestion from any one, but learning the facts of the case from one who knows, we give them publicity, in the hope and belief that the friends of Lucifer will not allow this life-long worker in all good reforms to suffer from lack of a little co-operative aid, in his declining years.

Contributions can be sent direct to Bro. Pope, at Home, Wash., or to this office. All sums, down to a few postage stamps, intended to help our worthy and needy friend, will be promptly acknowledged by us, and also by the recipient himself.

The Fall of Nations Through Marriage.

At first view the thought of nations falling because of the marriage system will seem strained. This idea is the very opposite of that built into our moral and political treatises, where we learn that the family is the ground-work and preserver of the state. Yet on the contrary, the family is one of the present causes for the disintegration of states and nations.

The family is the only "honorable" mode for children to reach the world; children are necessary to keep up nations and races; the family is becoming objectionable and distasteful to increasingly large numbers; these people avoid the family and therefore have no children. Hence the population falls off, and the nation gradually dies from within. France is so dying. It is said that England has about reached the stationary point. We only keep our population up and increasing by foreign arrivals, with the result of rapidly diluting American blood into something else. Probably this dilution is good, for the only great thing American blood ever did was to throw off British sovereignty in the Eighteenth Century, and since then it has steadily succumbed to the lowest European ideals until the climax of the unspeakably degrading Philippine war. We are now as a nation a mob of such weaklings that we have lost self-government, having given the most wretched of men, greedy ward politicians called statesmen, the business of nominating and electing our public officers in their committee rooms, and of making all our laws for us. Eighty millions of this characterless mob of ours have fallen at the feet of a few piratical robbers, who by trusts and every form of legalized chicanery have reduced the great multitude to a cowardice and slavery beyond belief.

Now the few fighters against this degeneration are radicals. They are barred from any kind of commercial success by so fighting the iniquitous tyrants. How are they to have children? Another element, which I may call the next best, does not fight, but recognizes that men can not have principle and succeed. Hence they limit the number of their children, preferring not to bring innocent beings into this fierce hell of social struggle. Two classes are left to mainly people the country: the most selfish and coarse, and the ignorant and raw. What will be the nature of the American people after a period of this reproduction (1) by the worst and (2) the rawest?

If there were not the grievous stigma upon free children a counter movement might grow up. The first two elements of population, the radicals and the thoughtful next-best, might begin to produce offspring from a perception of their duty to do so. Hope for the future lies just here. The absurd prejudice against non-marriage born children being removed, the truly better elements would begin to have their proper quota of births. The tendency would be for these to increase just as that of the other class, the selfish and coarse, is to decrease. The blood of the nation would gradually change in character through this process, a higher type replacing the lower type. Through the increment of intelligent births a vital force toward a right revolution of the world would be supplied.

A Free Association Society, a non-Marriage Society, or call it by what name you will, is the great need. I know people who do not believe in marriage but who drift into it because they have no encouragement to form a union without it. Others on the contrary do not yield and have no children. It is clear that if anything considerable is to be accomplished in the ways suggested there must be associative action. If plain tendencies go on in civilized nations it may be that the sense of world obligation will before long have to be called in to keep the population of the Aryan or Western world even stationary. If it falls off seriously the Chinese and other Eastern races will submerge and swallow up the West. This sense of duty will appeal to the better rather than the worse type. Why should it not be made use of now to introduce a potent factor in social revolution? Why should the high-minded radicals be celibates, as the more spiritual types of Europe (priests and monks), and the more intellectual (scholars and fellows of universities) were, earlier, leaving the brute and bloody warrior class to people the earth?

MORRISON I. SWIFT.

"The Little Rift" From the Other Side.

EDITOR LUCIFER:—My attention was called to an article by Jay Cameron in Lucifer No. 952 by the misrepresentation be made of the wife of his friend. Since you know Mr. Cameron and his friend, and do not know his friend's wife, in justice to her I feel called upon to say a few words.

Mr. Cameron accuses the wife of his friend of wanting all of her husband's time when not at work. He accuses her of not wanting him to visit other women. If Mr Cameron possessed less conceit or felt his own importance less surely he would not be so blinded as to the facts. Mr. Cameron's friend and his friend's wife breakfast at 6:45 o'clock. She does not eat again until he returns from the office. He is supposed to leave the office at 4 o'clock. At 4:40 his wife begins to prepare supper. It seldom takes her more than three quarters of an hour to get it ready. Not having eaten anything since breakfast, she is hungry. The supper spoiling and her hunger increasing, she is naturally in an unpleasant frame of mind when he returns if it is after 6 o'clock, and it is her hunger that causes to ask her why he is so late, and not that she is so exceedingly desirous of having him by her side or afraid he is paying his respects to some other woman.

Mr. Cameron's friend's wife is almost a stranger in Chicago. She can count on her fingers all the people she knows and still have fingers left. If she happens to ask her husband about some women she has met or of whom she has heard, it does not indicate that she is jealous or is worrying in fear that he is spending his time with that woman when not at home.

JEANNETTE FORD.

With all due respect to Sister Jeannette, I would suggest that my friend's wife eat oftener if hunger causes her domestic jars.

JAY CAMERON.

Jay Cameron's friend's wife never feels hunger until time to prepare supper. She wouldn't sin against her stomach by eating when not hungry. Perhaps her husband's stomach would be in a healthier condition if he would do likewise.

J. FORD.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Eau Claire, Wis., C. L. James:—Since that eminent physician who thinks I don't know when I am dead, has neglected giving me his name and address, please inform him that if ever I find a hasty trip to Canada convenient I shall have use for his mortuary certificate—but not till then.

S. J. L., Newburg, N. Y.:—Was very sorry to read of Ida Craddock's end. Do you have her first edition of "Right Marital Living?" I would like very much to read it, as it is, I believe, on the same line as Karezza, Magnetation, and Zugassent's Discovery, which books are the most valued in my library. My wife and I cling close to these ideas and believe them right, Mr. Comstock's views to the contrary notwithstanding. The joy of living is in following these sentiments. Am glad the Comstock laws do not control all the literature of this kind.

Sadie A. Magoon, Home, Wash.:—I have lived at Home nearly a year and a half, and learned for the first time, through Lucifer, that one of our comrades had whipped a child with a board, another shook a boy for misplacing a boat, while another forced children to obey through superior physical strength. If this is true, the least I can say, is, I am astonished. So far as I have observed the children are left too free.

I do not wish it to be understood that I do not believe in freedom, for that would be untrue. I do however think children should not be so free that they disregard the freedom, rights, and property of others. I have seen nothing really malicious in our boys; and our girls, let me assure you, are as near perfection as it is possible for girls to be. Our boys are less so, because in my opinion not sufficiently restrained. It may be they are taught, but a little restraint is necessary. "Boys full of physical strength and life must let off steam," says one. Certainly; yet why more than girls?

I find too many Anarchists, and outside of Home, who think children must be free. By free, they mean to do as they choose. I cannot think they should be allowed that amount of freedom until they have at least first learned to always try in every possible manner to make every bird, fowl, animal, child and adult happy, instead of unhappy. If they neither can, or will learn this lesson I think they should not be permitted to mingle with them until they do. Whipping brutalizes, scoldings are nearly as bad, but while so young and immature, they need the kind, but firmly guiding, or restraining hand of those who love them, and know what is best for them.

Our Home is as near an Eden as any place on earth can be at present. If fate compelled me to live elsewhere I would be very unhappy.

D. L., Gosben, Ind.:—My subscription to "Lucifer" expires with No. 960 and I herewith enclose $1 for its renewal. Let us hear more of sex. Of course any observer will see that a frank discussion must, as yet, be done very cautiously. It might, even then, not be met with general approval and the motives of the writer might be called in question, while among those for whom the work was intended it might be met with indifference. To my mind, the case of the late Ida C. Craddock is a very plain one illustrative of the fierce conflict now being waged in the minds of humanity, between the superstitious race-beliefs handed down from generation to generation for ages, and the more rational teachings of science. But such men as Comstock and his kind should not be too severely judged for attempting to suppress sex knowledge, as they have undoubtedly not developed to a plane where they can see that knowledge in this line would result in the betterment of the race. They seem to have the great majority of the people on their side. They are perhaps ruled by public opinion, and it may reasonably be presumed that they must evolve to a higher point before we can expect them to change their views. Shall we conclude that it was the same class that poisoned Socrates? that crucified the carpenter of Nazareth? that compelled Galileo to confess that the earth does not move? that gibbeted Quakers? Shall the seeing be compelled to follow the blind?

I have been so fortunate as to obtain both of Mrs. Craddock's booklets and am astonished that there is anyone who could pronounce her writings vile or obscene. Some of it may not be scientific but her motives cannot be questioned. She pleads for the unborn and it is a pity that the assiduous and careful study and discussion of sex and its laws must be so hampered by ignorant, meddling brains, as a better knowledge of it, both as regards the rearing of children and the begetting of offspring, is surely conducive to the highest good of the human race. But whatever may be the motives of these "guards of humanity," it is high time that every thinker should think aloud and compare notes. The number of investigators and thinkers which are springing up so rapidly in this line, is a hopeful sign. But theories are not truths because they are new. Humanity surely needs, must and will have, sooner or later, a more accurate knowledge of this matter than it has at the present. No one can deny that before much can be done toward the prevention or cure of the wrong use of sex, whether found in the asylum, the brothel or the home, a great deal more must be known of the nature of sex than is now known. Very slow, in fact, inexcusably slow, has investigation been in this line, which, of course, can be explained in no other way than in the fact that the minds of the people are and always have been, "over-ridden, or even over-shadowed, by the ideas emerging from a supernaturalistic philosophy." If people are blinded by preconceived ideas, they will generally investigate no longer and so the truth will remain hid.

Concerning the many other reforms advocated in "Lucifer," I am not so much interested, as I consider the sex problem paramount, and would emphasize emphatically the old saying, "Let there be light;" not because the anthropomorphic God of tradition said so, but because it is the demand of the hour.

The Chicago Society of Anthropology

meets every Sunday at 3:30 P. M., hall 913 Masonic Temple. Seats and discussions free. The subject for Feb. 1st is Law and Morals.

Humanity which in the midst of its own great suffering will stop to organize societies for the protection of birds, dogs, and other animals, should have a nursing bottle.

The hedonist recognizes in the sex-instinct the origin and basis of all that is best and highest within us. He is not ashamed of it, like the hermits who find that uncleanliness is next to godliness, and hold fresh linen an abomination.—Grant Allen.

Forty copies of Lucifer, no two alike, of 1902 will be sent to any address for 15 cents. Nine bundles for $1. We are anxious to place these papers where they will do good. Please let us have your orders soon.

Horace Greeley once said: "Here is a woman who does not know how to keep house, but can do something else very well. Let us organize a system of living that will enable those who have no taste for cooking, or no aptitude that way, to find occupation in other branches of industry."

A Private Maternity Home

Or Lying-in Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired.

For particulars and terms give description of case, and address.

Suite 83-119 LaSalle St., Chicago Ill. C. S. Woon, M. D.

Agents Wanted To sell the Toltec Dandruff Cure and the Toltec Hair Dressing (restores natural color). Are clear and perfect. Liberal commission. Write for circulars. Address: The Toltec Remedies Co., Box 1267 Denver Colo.

REMOVAL NOTICE.

Facilities for properly conducting my ever increasing Mail-Order Department being inadequate in Denver I have permanently located in this suburb of Chicago, and trust my many friends and patrons will continue to favor me with their many kind orders.

Send for prices of Watches, Diamonds, Opals, Silver, Plated and Optical goods, Music boxes, Jewelery, Chains, Clocks, Freethought and other badges, Ingersoll spoons, and my tract—"Theism in the Crucible"—free. OTTO WETTSTEIN.
La Grange, Illinois.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer the Light Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Slavery of Our Times.

With Portrait of the Gifted Author, and Introduction by the Translator, Aylmer Maude.

CHAPTER TITLES,

I., Goods Porters Who Work Thirty-seven Hours: II., Society's Indifference While Men Perish; III., Justification of the Existing Position of Sciences; IV., The Assertion of Economic Science that Rural Laborers Must Enter the Factory System; V. Why Learned Economists Assert what is False; VI., Bankruptcy of the Socialist Ideal; VII., Culture or Freedom? VIII., Slavery Exists Among Us; IX., What is Slavery? X., Laws Concerning Taxes, Land and Property; XI., Laws the Cause of Slavery; XII., The Essence of Legislation Is Organized Violence; XIII., What Are Governments? Is it Possible to Exist Without Governments? XIV., How Can Governments Be Abolished? XV., What Should Each Man Do? An Afterword.

Well printed on heavy paper. Substantially bound. 186 pages. Price, 65 cents.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN O. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of 'For Men Only." Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem, Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization. The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 10c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

VACCINATION A CRIME.

With Comments on Other Sanitary Superstitions.

BY FELIX L. OSWALD, M. D.

"Vaccination spreads diseases; vaccination impairs the organic functions; vaccination encourages reliance on worthless remedies: vaccination spreads small-pox; compulsory vaccination furnishes dangerous legal precedents."

With illustrations of diseases frequently resulting from vaccination. 192 pages. Price 10 cents. For sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St. Chicago.

MENTAL SCIENCE AS A GUIDE TO HEALTH, HAPPINESS, AND BUSINESS SUCCESS.

BY ALBERT CHAVANNES.

Chapter Contents: What is Mental Science? What will it do for us? Happiness; Character; Intellectual Character; Physical Character; Heredity and Health; Mind Cures; Business Success; The Law of Circumstances; Individuals; Marriage; Parents and Children. Political Organization; Political Economy. Communism and Co-operation. Colonization and Organization.

Address Albert Chavannes, 326 Fourth Ave. Knoxville, Tenn. Price 10 cents. Stamps taken in payment.

954.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

To New Subscribers: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

Trial Trip Subscriptions.

For one dollar we will send Lucifer ten weeks to eight different addresses, and to the one sending us the list, any one of the following books:

The Origin of the Family, Private Property and the State By Frederick Engels, 217 pages, handsomely bound in cloth. Postage, 6 cents.

The Slavery of Our Times. By Leo Tolstoi. With portrait of author, 186 pages. Blue cloth; silver lettering. Postage 8 cents.

Nora: A Doll's House, and Ghosts. The two dramas bound together. Olive cloth; red lettering. 108 pages. Postage 8 cents. This offer will, we hope, induce our friends to extend Lucifer's circulation materially.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

Tals is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author.

The Sex Passion.
Man, the Ungrown.
Woman, the Serf.
Woman in Freedom
Marriage: a Retrospect.
Marriage: a Forecast.
The Free Society.
Some remarks on the early star and sex worships.
Notes—On the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population.

The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. Price, $1.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 25c.

ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifry is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $1.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

A TALE OF THE STHARSBURG GEESE. B. R. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strasburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (B. R. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.

BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth, $1.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Condemned, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES.—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 21 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 128 pages, 25c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 25c.

DARWIN, THE. (A Novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, THE; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. G. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and sculpting, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, gold and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of the Human Family; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James H. Alexander. Over 60 illustrations, 37 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $3.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian religion has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 360 pages. 40c. Postage, 5c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and George Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 25c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 328 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 250 pages. Paper, 60c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 97 Freethinkers, including Byron, Burke, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Volney, and Voltaire. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mexican. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

KAREEZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

KORADINE. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 31, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III, (1890). Cloth, $1.25. Postage, 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll; Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 418 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal: The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Fossil Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Phillip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Gerwald Dawson. 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, R. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelievers or disenrolled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c, paper, 25c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction, special cover; latest version. Paper, 15c, all in one volume, $1.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsta, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $1. Five volumes, plainer binding, $1.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red. Initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 50c.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 128 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Marietta), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Status and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 207 pages. 50c.

THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Witches and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "To all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and asceticism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 32 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 10c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 10c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 25c.

THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. R. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon edumation. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1725, quoted by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuit craft and is a plain index to the underhand working of that order against the welfare of individuals and society. 15c.

THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 10c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Telegt Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Wilson). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $1.25.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Dorling. 15c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 10c.

VITAL MAGNETISM. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 3, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Amos. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which confronted the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor, a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo. 172 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VII., NO. 4. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, FEB. 5, E. M. 305. [C. E. 1903.] WHOLE NO. 955

Courage, Free Heart.

Courage, free heart, amidst the battle here;
Ever its winter season hath the year.
Courage, free heart, and press on without fear;
At last the flowered springtime will appear.
Courage, free heart!

Courage, free heart, and fail not in the fight;
The day is struggling in the bonds of night.
Courage, free heart, and dare all in thy might;
The hours are counted that shall bring the light.
Courage, free heart!

Courage, free heart, and let deed follow deed;
Slow is the increase of the long-sown seed.
Courage, free heart, and no forebodings heed;
The harvest days will come and give their meed;
Courage, free heart!

Courage, free heart, and think not of the pain;
The winds and waves have strength upon the main.
Courage, free heart; treat danger with disdain;
The ship at last shall its safe harbor gain.
Courage, free heart!

Courage, free heart, and be thou true and strong;
The things are many that would work thee wrong.
Courage free heart, and meet thy foes in throng;
For thou shalt win and sing the victor's song.
Courage, free heart!

—William Francis Barnard.

Parry and Thrust.

Your source is sex.

The heart has no code.

Love, if you would live.

The body is a work of art.

Passion is a normal appetite.

Shame is no evidence of decency.

Flesh and spirit are rightly a unit.

A license to love is a license to enslave.

Purity could go naked and be unashamed.

Ignorance will not serve as a basis for life.

He who hates the flesh will have a starved soul.

Man does not know himself until he has known woman.

Woman's life is veiled until she has deeply loved man.

With every child that is born a new world begins to exist.

The lowest of thoughts is to think slightingly of motherhood.

Love in freedom is the assumption by love of its inalienable rights.

Marriage is a tax which love pays to existing economic conditions.

No healthful adult human being should be "dependent" upon another one.

Those who are ashamed of sex should be ashamed that they draw their breath.

It is the lies about sex, not the truth, which encourage impurity in a child.

Through sexual love humanity realizes its unity with the cosmos, and becomes divine.

When law meets love and would rule it, then nature either weeps or laughs over the folly of law.

The state degrades love by trying to make it a purchasable quantity; the price being the price of a license.

Many of the greatest men of history were born out of wedlock. Are we then to conclude that nature is an Anarchist?

There is just one way in which to solve the divorce problem, and that way is the way of freedom in sex association.

Clean your own mind first; get out of it every thought that reflects unfavorably upon sex. Then you can talk to your child.

When love comes to two a voluntary loyalty begins to develop between them. Do not transgress this with your impertinent regulations.

Nature has no purpose, nor did she "intend" anything, through love unions; but all the same, in the love relation we feel at one with her.

To control reproduction is to largely control life. The church would control life, so it set itself to control love and reproduction.

One of the surest means of turning the heart of the world toward freedom is to appeal to individuals through their experience of legalized love.

A woman cannot be stolen from a man, for the very good reason that a man cannot own a woman. No one but a cur would accept money for the "alienation" of affections.

Social and economic conditions cause prostitution, and then authority, which works to perpetuate social and economic conditions, pretends to oppose prostitution. The fraud is transparent.

A love that would not last under freedom certainly will not last under coercion. The enforced yielding of the person is not the free yielding which love delights in and anticipates.

The whole subject of sex is so hidden under a mass of that foulness known as "indecency" that it is a wonder woman is not revolted at the thought of kissing the fruitage of love, her own child.

The literature of sex is yet to be written. When play, poem, novel, and essay may frankly speak of love, hiding nothing, then will unknown grandeurs come into our minds and new delights into our hearts.

Liberty is all that is needed to remove every true sex evil; rape, servitude, unwilling motherhood, prostitution, disease, the crimes of jealousy, and all the rest. These are all slavery, or its fruits.

The causes of our vile thoughts about clean things may have been this or that; what we know is that the state, the church, the school, and the domestic circle are breeders of poison, the poison of unclean ideas.

Woman and man are incomplete till love completes them; let love be free: woman and man are incomplete until sex is seen to be pure; let knowledge be free: woman and man are incomplete till procreation is free; let us take our freedom, in this as in all things. Let us be free. IRONICUS.

Love's Coming of Age.

Nothing is permanent under the sun. That is a truth which modern society is fast learning under the rod, or that rigid disciplinarian, social evolution. No one understands this as thoroughly as the men and women who are looking toward a better and nobler order of society. Yet while they are perfectly convinced that social institutions must change with the transformation of the economic basis that produced them, even these enlightened few generally except one institution from this rule—the sex relation. They have been told so long that our modern marriage is a divine institution, and the reactionary defenders of the old order are so quick to raise the cry of free love at the least attempt to touch this subject that it is a delicate and difficult task to bring this vital question even before the less prejudiced elements of modern society.

Still evolution is as active in this field as in any other. It places us before new problems and forces us to face them as best we may. Shall we turn our backs on them in the hope of avoiding them and leave them to our children unprepared and full of grave mistakes? Or shall we do our share toward their solution?

We know today that human society passed through a long course of development, comprising the work of uncounted generations and stretching over thousands of years. Our written history alone covers more than four thousand years. It shows us that the three main stages of human development produced three different forms of sex relations. During savagery it was group marriage. Then followed barbarism with the pairing family. And finally civilization came in and brought along monogamy. This last institution arose through the concentration of wealth in the hands of individual men, and the desire to leave this wealth to the children of each individual man to the exclusion of all others. Since monogamy was caused by a certain social system, will it disappear with the abolition of this system? And what will take its place?

Here the defenders of the present system begin to scent danger and raise their frightened voices in fruitless protest. Fruitless, because they can not stop social evolution, hence cannot stop the evolution of sexual relations. If they would muster up the courage to look these matters squarely in the face, they would speedily discover that there is not the least cause for alarm.

The abolition of the capitalist system means the emancipation of women from the economic supremacy of men. It is this economic dependence which has degraded so many women and forced to sell themselves into married slavery or open prostitution. Once this dependence is abolished, will women continue to remain the sexual slaves of men? If the testimony of history counts for anything then we have every reason to believe that the economic emancipation of women will tend more strongly to make men truly monogamous than to make women inclined to indiscriminate intercourse.

We are now in a critical period of social evolution. Where is the mind strong and pure enough to present this question so that every man and woman, every boy and girl, can study it with pleasure and profit? Such a mind has spoken in Edward Carpenter's splendid book, "Love's Coming of Age." The delicate subject is treated with such admirable restraint and with such penetrating clearness that even the most exacting propriety can not find any objection in the reasoning and conclusions. Read it and spread its message far and wide. You can get it from M. Harman 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill., for $1.00.

B. U.

Driving One's Self.

If Mrs. Towne had never written anything else, I would be thankful to her for writing in her book the phrase: "I had learned the lesson of not driving myself." The reason I am thankful to her is because I have been looking for just such a phrase to express one of the most common mistakes made by women.

Men are driven by circumstances; women drive themselves. Every man who has his way to make in the world has to adapt his steps to the pace set by competition, but the women who keep house—and they are the great majority—can set their own pace and can as they please go fast or slow.

I have been fighting this battle for nearly twenty years. Every time a woman of my acquaintance complained in my hearing of too much work, or of lack of time to rest, or read or for any other enjoyment she coveted, I have promptly remarked to her that if she wanted to she could have all the time she desired, and was as promptly met by the cutting rejoinder that I knew not what I was talking about.

Thereupon we would join issue, as the lawyers would say and I was easily defeated so long as we dealt in generalities, but whenever I could finally come to particulars, and discuss the details of their work, they would always be forced to acknowledge that they did a lot of things which were really not necessary, and which in no way added to their happiness or that of their family.

In time past I used to believe that such an acknowledgment would be followed by a change in their conduct; that women who complained of lack of time, and acknowledged that much of their work could be dispensed with, would surely put two and two together, and leave off some of their unnecessary work.

But slowly I found that the real reason for this self driving of women is their lack of independence of character; that few of them are strong enough to resist the influence of acquired habits and of adverse public opinion, so as to live according to the dictates of their best judgment. And I found further more that lack of independence, and not lack of knowledge, is the real cause of the slow march of social improvement.

Independence of character is the first condition of progress, and it is because the philosophy of Mental Science alone lays great stress upon the need of independence of character, and teaches how it can be increased, that I expect great things from it.

[The foregoing is taken from "New Thoughts," a series of pamphlets devoted to the study of mental science, and published by Albert Chavnnes. It is issued quarterly at $1.00 a year. Address Albert Chewannes, 308 Fourth Ave., Knoxville, Tenn.]

The Fatherhood Question.

I am glad to see by her reply to R. B. Kerr that Celia B. Whitehead recognizes that the "men who would make the best fathers would object to be chosen in that way"—the man "who by the fitness of his age," etc., would be quite unworthy, in spite of other advantages, if he did not exercise rational discrimination in respect to the claims of woman, not only as to her social and physical fitness, and as to his own freedom from legal or other claims, arising from previous paternity, but also in respect to the probability or certainty that the service she asks of him may be so effective as to call for no repetition.

We are told that when Moses brought down the tables of "the law" to the camp of the Israelites, he found a people "naked to their shame," and worshiping an object they had imaged for themselves—an ideal of blood-thirsty lunatics who imagined that the genius who presides over conception might be influenced by the sight of blood, or the stench of burning flesh. Their practice was a monogamic sodomy. They did not know how to reproduce their kind except as the result of lustful blundering. Nor was it to the interest of races whose very existence, perhaps, depended upon their physical and mental superiority, to be taught better.

The object of Nature in the lower animal forms, is to breed from the best, and by selecting the most favorable conditions to approach perfection in the organic being. But in man, her most important product, Nature's object seems to be to breed out the lunatic from the remnants of a species, that by some cosmic mischance, has been moulded by an environment to which it was not adapted. To this end every form of sexual relationship known to mankind during historic periods, has contributed—by reducing the vital influence of the male to the single function of giving life to the "seed of the woman"—the conservative element in preserving the existing status of the human species.

The evolution of all other species than the human having been the result of the creative transmission of acquired qualities by the males, only those have had a chance to procreate their kind who had been made strong by experience. But of man the qualities that have given him sexual dominion in the past have been those that are characteristic only of the beast of prey gone mad. The child has at least the advantage of being born sane; whatever it may afterward become as the result of unnatural environment.

T. U. A.

Woman's Source of Power.

This is the title of a small pamphlet written and published by Lois Waisbrooker, at Home, Washington. Among the characteristic mottoes selected by the author are these:

"The last enemy to be destroyed is death."

Love is always the Builder.

Love is the Divine Creator.

Love in Freedom will Redeem the World.

The following paragraphs selected at random, will give the reader a fairly good idea of the author's style and drift:

Go with me, please, to a photographer and tell him you want your likeness. He will first take a piece of glass of the required size and pour upon it a liquid solution which flows evenly over the surface and hardens in the atmosphere. He then takes it into the dark room and immerses it in a solution of nitrate of silver. He takes it into the dark room for the same reason that potatoes are planted in the ground; the needed chemical action cannot be had in the light, and the silver in solution combines with the chemicals in the coating of the plate making it exceedingly sensitive.

The meaning of sensitive is well understood and yet an illustration will not be out of place. The atmosphere moves in waves. Hold up your hand and you do not feel them, but uncover the nerve of a tooth and then see! The air-waves make no impression upon the hand but they cut right into the nerve of the tooth causing intense pain. The nerve is sensitive; the hand is not.

The plate remains in the silver bath until so sensitised that the atmospheric waves will make an impression upon it. In the mean time, you take the desired position and when ready, the sensitised plate is so handled that no light can reach it but that which, in striking your person, is thrown back upon the lens of the camera and passing through it, reaches the prepared plate, thus making the impression of your face and form upon it.

Had not that plate been chemically sensitized there would have been no impression, but the work is not yet complete. The impression must be fixed, made permanent, so the slide to the little box which holds the plate and which has been withdrawn to admit the light from the lens, is closed and taken back into the dark room. Here it goes through a process called developing, bringing out, for though the impression has been made it does not yet show any more than the character of a child shows at birth.

Presently the artist comes out and says: "You will have to sit again, this impression is spoiled."

"Why, what's the matter?"

"There is a fly upon your nose."

"Yes, one lit there just as you uncovered the lens, but could you not develop the picture without it?"

"No, whatever comes within range of the lens will show," is the reply.

Now for the application. Have you never heard the remark: "As nervous as a woman?" Men say this in contempt of what they consider evidence of our weakness. The remark is evidence not only of their ignorance but of ours. Did woman generally realize the use that her more sensitive nerves serve in the economy of nature, man would soon learn.

A woman's nerves sustain a similar relation to the child in the womb that the lens does to the sensitised plate in the camera box; they are to receive and transmit impressions, and whatever is thus stamped upon the child in embyro is very likely to come out in life's developing process.

This nerve-sensitiveness is a mighty power for good or evil. When understood and righty used, it will become the motor power through which the race will evolve to higher conditions.

This is the power that the free woman will hold for good; not only by giving the world better children, but through the soul-love atmosphere generated from the finer forces of sex, she will bless all within the radius of her sphere.

"As nervous as a woman." If man only understood the wonderful power for good wrapped up in her sensitive nerves he would make different conditions for her than now.

A letter addressed to the author, as above, enclosing ten cents, will secure a copy of this the latest production of Mrs. Waisbrooker's pen. M. H.

Health Maxims.

As health of body and of mind is the most important of all earthly blessings, an occasional reminder of some of the most necessary of rules for securing and retaining it is certainly commendable. We find the following very excellent summary at the close of an article on "Vegetarianism" in the December "Conservator," Philadelphia:

Keep warm and "keep cool."
Keep dry.
Seek the sun.
Breathe free air.
Eat moderately of plain, wholesome food that agrees with you; if cooked, well-cooked; if raw, ripe.
Let stimulants alone.
Work hard, think large and sleep at night.
Love everything, fear nothing, follow your ideal.
If sick, fast, rest, balance your circulation, believe and wait.
Keep square with your own self-respect.
Be honest with your own soul.
For the rest—exercise, exercise, exercise.

J. William Lloyd.

ERRATUM. In last week's issue the columns on second page were transposed.

WILLIAM FRANCIS BARNARD will deliver an address on "Man and His Works," before the Philosophical Society, 72 Adams St., on Sunday, Feb. 8. Free discussion. Free admission.

Forty copies of Lucifer, no two alike, of 1902 will be sent to any address for 15 cents. Nine bundles for $1. We are anxious to place these papers where they will do good. Please let us have your orders soon.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Socialism and Anarchism.

On being asked to renew subscription to Lucifer a trial subscriber writes us:

"I am in perfect sympathy with Lucifer's views on Marriage and Women, but am a Socialist and therefore not in accord with your paper when it promulgates Anarchistic doctrine and misquotes Socialism. It is plain that you do not understand the subject or you would not so misquote it, and being an Anarchist you could not study it from an unprejudiced viewpoint. When you get ready to cut out Anarchy I may see fit to subscribe again. Very truly yours on the woman question,

S. V. PACKARD."

Will Brother Packard kindly state where the misquotations are to be found? I do not label myself either a Socialist or an Anarchist because I claim to be both, just as I claim to be both Egoist and Altruist; both Individualist and Collectivist, or, more correctly speaking, a co-operative Individualist.

As I see it, one chief cause of trouble and misunderstanding between Socialists and Anarchists, so-called, is that they magnify their differences and minimize the points upon which they are substantially agreed. For myself I can very conscientiously say that I try to look upon all sides without prejudice and give to each its full meed of honor. It is largely because of the prejudice that exists against the names Anarchism, Individualism, Egoism, etc., on the one hand, and Socialism, Communism, Altruism, etc., on the other, that I prefer not to be called by any name that signifies a particular creed, sect, party or cult. I find good in them all, and the main objection I have to any is the tendency to narrowness, to bigotry, to arrogance, to exclusiveness and intolerance. I read, so far as time and means will allow, the books and papers of them all, and go to hear the leading speakers of them all.

POT VERSUS KETTLE.

In the editorial section of "Harper's Weekly" for the week ending Jan. 24 is found this paragraph:

"There is danger that, in Utah at least, Apostle Smoot is going to be loved for the enemies he has made. The President openly opposes his candidacy for the Senate, and when a President meddles in State concerns, and takes sides against a candidate for an elective office, he usually makes votes for the man he opposes. States are jealous of interference from Washington, and properly so, and though there is no politics in the President's objection to Smoot, and though most of us heartily sympathize with it, it seems more likely to help the apostle than to hurt him. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union is also down on Smoot. It objects to him as a Mormon leader. It objects to all Mormons who are, were, or hope to be, polygamists. We all do. We object heartily to polygamy, and like it no better for being allied with Mormonism. We had rather that if a man is to have an assortment of wives, he shall have them in spite of his religion, than in accordance with it. They say Smoot is not a practising polygamist, but merely a high ruler of the church that has disgraced the country as far as it could with its degraded habits, and which still has polygamy up its sleeve and plays it when it dares. If Utah sends him to the Senate, no reason appears as yet why he should not take his seat. To be sure, he represents Mormonism, impure and dubious, but that does not affect his right to sit in Congress if he is chosen. We have to tolerate Mormonism while it lasts, though there is nothing in the Constitution to hinder our holding our noses while we do it. Perhaps it may be for the best, in the long-run, that the Mormons should send an apostle to Washington. It calls attention to them and stimulates public disgust with their institutions. They have thriven on ignorance, obscurity, and sensuality. Attention—the irritated attention—of decent and enlightened people is the last thing that will profit them."

* * *

The above is perhaps as fair a statement as has hitherto been written in behalf of those who would exclude the Mormon apostle from the American House of Lords, commonly called the U. S. Senate. I have heard the Mormons preach and pray, and find very little difference between their modes of worship and those of the average and popular Christian sects. The main objection to the Mormons seems to be that they stick more closely to the teachings of the Christian Bible than do their opponents. They believe in the Abrahamic doctrine of plurality of wives, and Abraham was the "Father of the Faithful," according to Saint Paul.

They also believe in and try to follow the example of David—the "man after God's own heart," and the example of his royal son Solomon, though I never heard of a Mormon Elder who kept a harem of one thousand women. They also believe in the Bible doctrine of Communism, and practice the same to a much greater extent than do the older sects calling themselves Christian.

Yes, the Mormons believe in and practice polygamy, or plurality of wives, as did these exemplars ("ensamples" as Paul called them) in ancient or Bible times, and are honest enough to say so; but, so far as I know, their polygamous doctrines and practice are not made compulsory. A man may be a monogamist in theory and practice, and still be a good Christian; that is, a good member of the Mormon church.

How is it among Christians of the Roosevelt and W.C.T.U. variety?

A man or woman in the United States or in England may believe in polygamy or in polyandry, that is, in plural marriages, but if they honestly attempt to put their doctrines into practice they subject themselves to legal prosecution and imprisonment as malefactors.

The logical consequence is defeat of natural selection; suppression of healthful attractions or desires; hypocrisies everywhere; honesty in marital life the rare exception; the double standard of sex-morality everywhere; seductions common; bastardy frequent; child abandonment in every town and city; prostitution of body and soul both within and without the marriage pale.

On the other hand, if the testimony of the "Gentiles" themselves are to be believed, most if not all of these evils were practically unknown in Mormondom previous to the attempts of the U. S. government to enforce modern Christian standards of marital morality in Utah.

* * *

The editor of "Harper's Weekly" says: "We all object to polygamy. . . . We had rather that if a man is to have an assortment of wives he shall have them in spite of his religion than in accordance with it." If these words mean anything they must mean that this editor and those who agree with him prefer that a polygamist should be a hypocrite, a coward and a sneak in his associations with women, than that he should be an honest man, a brave man, and treat the women honestly and honorably with whom he lives in the conjugal relation—the sexual relation, whether for one hour, one night or longer.

That most men are pluralists, in practice at least, at some time in their lives will be admitted by all who have had opportunities to know the facts, and if they give assent in word, to what they know to be the demands of civil law and of religious standards in this the most important of all human relations while in their practice they violate the legal and religious codes, what can we expect but a reign of hypocrisy and deception in every department of social life, and of public or business affairs?

* * *

Except for the benefit of new readers I need not add that in thus defending the Mormons against their brother and sister Christians, I do NOT defend polygamy as such, nor any of the peculiar tenets of the "Latter Day Saints." Polygamy is a form of marriage. Marriage is a social, a socialistic, institution. As an institution marriage is either "sacramental"—that is, religious, or civil, that is, secular or belonging to the State. In either case the marriage institution is opposed to what is known as Anarchism. Anarchists are individualists, and believe that all laws regulating the private affairs of women and men are invasive, meddlesome, tyrannical and despotic, and would be much more "honored in the breach than in the observance."

As to whether the opponents or friends of the Mormons have most need to hold their noses when ventilating the results of honest polygamy on the one hand and those of dishonest polygamy and state enforced monogamy on the other, there is certainly much room for difference of opinion.

Anarchists very naturally look upon this comparison of merits and demerits of the two systems as a case of "pot calling kettle black." Both are black enough from the standpoint of him who believes in minding one's own business and allowing all others to do the same.

* * *

In estimating the comparative evils of state-enforced monogamy and legalized but not compulsory polygamy there are several things to be considered. First, that enforced monogamy leads to two extremes, namely, sex starvation, with its long train of neurasthenic and other diseases, its suicides and premature deaths, on the one hand, and on the other, sex-abuse through EXCESS, resulting in satiety, disgust, hatred, disease, suicides, murders, and premature death of its victims—mainly women, and—worst of all, saddest of all, in a debased heredity, a viciously or criminally inclined endowment, for the children born under this regime of sex-abuse from a husband who has no other means of satisfying the cravings of abnormal sex passion, an inappeasable sex appetite.

Second. Voluntary yet legalized polygamy gives to every woman a fighting chance to be elected to matrimonial honors—or dishonors, as the case may be, and therefore to the possible participation in the honors and pleasures of motherhood.

The cure for the evils of marriage—both monogamous and polygamous, is FREEDOM.

M. HARMAN.

Secession Under Socialism—Woman and Socialism.

It seems to be fairly well established that the Socialists of today not only advocate the self-government of the group, but are perfectly ready to allow individual secession. The recent partial canvass of leaders in the movement instituted by J. William Lloyd confirms this view, and I have little doubt that a complete canvass would demonstrate that State Socialism finds advocacy as an ideal only in a certain wing of the Democratic party.

Under capitalistic rule, the right of secession would naturally seem highly desirable, and yet, as a matter of fact, very few in America at least, have even attempted to secede, the vast majority of Anarchists, Socialists, and the like preferring to bear with the evils of private ownership and capitalistic government, rather than seek comparative liberty in colonies or in places remote from the advantages that are to be obtained only through membership in society. The choice is offered, but most of us, be we Socialists or Anarchists, prefer to stay with our fellows rather than seek liberty in isolation. Some of us make a god of liberty, but we do not like to worship alone.

Thus, whether Anarchists or Socialists, we have concluded to stay with capitalism that we may abolish it, rather than depart from it and leave it to what may then befall. It is this action, taken despite the extreme evils of capitalism, that is responsible for the fact that Socialists as a rule have paid but little attention to the question of possible secession from the co-operative commonwealth. Socialists believe that the abolition of the private ownership of capital will mean more freedom, not less; and so believing, they are justified in assuming that the right of individual secession, now rarely availed of, will then be a matter of even less practical importance. Today we have scarcely a suggestion of majority rule outside the New England town meeting and clubs and organizations of various kinds (all voluntary gatherings); but with the introduction of majority rule in economic affairs, together with the moral power given the minority or minorities through the initiative, referendum and proportional representation, we shall have taken a very long step away from the irresponsible despotism of the capitalist and his political puppets. That with this added liberty there would be an increased tendency toward individual secession, it is not reasonable to suppose. I refer mainly to "individual" secession for the reason that the right of the group to do as it pleases is virtually admitted by the Socialists of the world.

There is nothing more certain than that the Socialist party of the United States is an aggregation of persons held together by purely voluntary ties. All of these persons agree upon a number of points, and substantially agree upon a number of other points. They are unanimous in agreeing that the existing private ownership of capital is an invasion of their (and everybody's) rights. They are practically unanimous in the idea that this continual invasion of their rights is carried on by force, and is to be resisted. They maintain that those who profit by private ownership are actually, and those who defend the system, morally, responsible for nine tenths of the ignorance, crime, slavery and suffering that exists. They claim that they are justified in driving back their invaders at the earliest opportunity by the means that seems to them the most practicable (the ballot) and in assuring for themselves the results of their own toil. Socialists are not non-resistants; neither are they invaders; they simply demand the products of their labor and the tools with which to work. And this has been termed "the coming slavery!" If Socialism be slavery, what word expresses capitalism?

While it is true that under Socialism the individual may secede (in other words, refuse to work) from the organization or group, the point usually overlooked by those who think they will want to secede is that those who will not do their share of the work cannot have a share of the combined product of the organization or group from which they secede. In other words, they cannot withdraw from the duties of society without forfeiting the comforts and conveniences of society. And this fact, in my opinion, then as now, will operate against any desire to secede. It will be easier to stay by, and endeavor to correct objectionable features by an appeal to the moral sense of the community.

Some of the opponents of Socialism upon the ground of abridged liberties may profit by a general application of Benj. R. Tucker's remark in the January issue of "Liberty," to the effect that the capitalists and clergy shrieking for the liberty of the "scab" to work, while technically right, are but stealing the livery of heaven to serve the devil in.

While I believe thoroughly in the work of Lucifer—and in addition think that but few papers in the English language are edited as fairly—nevertheless, it seems to me that there can be no true sex freedom without the absolute economic independence of the individual, and that this is largely impossible under the competitive system. Men and women may have the ideal of freedom, but they can attain to it only in a very limited degree until Socialism gives them the fruits of their own labor.

I think that a census of the radical women of the United States would show that a majority of them are in ill-health, dependent upon others, or in receipt of an income derived from investments that renders work unnecessary. In other words, very few of them are wholly self-supporting; a larger number are partly self-supporting, or have been partly or wholly self-supporting at some time during their lives.

The reason for this is simply that the life-struggle is too hard. The remedy is Socialism. ALEX. E. WIGHT.

Wellesley Hills, Mass.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Bolton Hall, New York:—Glad to hear from Ironicus (Lucifer Jan. 22) that "Wages have been largely raised—now watch prices rise." We still have to look forward here for a great rise of wages but we do look back for the rise of prices.

L. L.—Chicago:—Thousands of copies of last week's Lucifer ought to be distributed. Such articles as those from Morrison I. Swift and C.H. Wesseler are alone worth a year's subscription to your increasingly valuable journal. To the despotisms of marriage, and to ignorance of and disregard of sex laws—more than to all else, is due the coming cataclysm of our civilization.

J. E. Johnson, Vale, Ore.:—I have been a Freethinker since the seventies,—about the time D. M. Bennett moved the "Truth Seeker" from Paris, Ill., to New York City; but it is only within the past five years that I have become a disciple of the principles for which Lucifer stands, and I wish to say that now Lucifer is the most appreciated of all the papers that come to me—and I take lots of them.

Mrs. L., Ga.:—Enclosed find $1 for which please send me Lucifer. Also please give me the benefit of any premium you are offering. I have not seen a copy of your paper since in 1901 when you sent me samples. I have read them often with interest. You do not know how my mind has suffered during the past few years because I have been prevented from enjoying the light and warmth your blessed Lucifer brings. My desire for information has overpowered me and is causing me to thus subscribe without my husband's knowledge or consent. He forbade my taking it in the past, but I feel it should be my privilege to read something in which I am deeply interested. No subjects are nearer my heart than those you discuss.

Mrs. M. B., N. Y. City:—I always enjoy Lucifer very much and never more than when I read the article called "Slavery In and Out of Legal Marriage." Jay Cameron is a well-balanced man, and I only wish I could know a few such in my pilgrimage through life. That article is very fine, just and true, and you are the one to appreciate it. Those of you who are by nature gallant towards women, and have witnessed the cruel deeds done to them under sanction of the law may have failed to observe how selfish and tyrannical they can sometimes be in their treatment of the opposite sex. I myself have seen as many slaves among men as among women in my time, but it has not been always so. In past ages there is no question but that the slavery was all on one side, until the so-called weaker sex got recognition and consideration. The cause has been ably explained in Mr. Cameron's article, and whether or not marriage as an institution is ever abolished, slavery in the sex relation will continue more or less so long as human nature lasts.

C. P. Hunt, Chicago:—It seems strange that any one who understands the conditions of liberty should assert that any terms that lovers freely make can be as tyrannical as legal bonds, no matter how exclusive those terms may be. Tyranny is always from without. If we confuse it with any condition that arises from voluntary contract, we lose ourselves in confusion. If free love can be tyrannical then tyranny can exist under anarchism, and surely anarchists will deny this.

Those who make liberty a god expect too much, as all do who worship gods. If my journey leads to a river I may have to swim or return, as I may decide, according to the importance of my mission. My limitation is thus natural necessity, but there is no tyranny. Just so when the will of another thwarts my wishes. I may expect to form a contract with another, but find we cannot agree on terms. I am limited by the natural necessity to choose, but not by the despotic will of the other. Liberty can never be more than a means, just as time, opportunity, energy, will and matter are means which we use to gain our objects. Tyranny arises only when despotism opposes the will. Therefore, if my terms seem despotic to my associate, I am myself not despotic if I permit him to freely withdraw.

"Out of Print" Pamphlets Free! Don't Overlook This.

One of Lucifer's friends has a small stock of "out of print" pamphlets which he wishes to give away. He also wants to aid Lucifer. He therefore offers to give, as long as the supply lasts, one each of the following named pamphlets to any one ordering books or subscriptions of us to the amount of fifty cents. That is, the purchaser gets what he orders, and in addition five pamphlets for which he is not asked to pay even the postage. This offer applies equally to old and new subscribers. These are the pamphlets:

In Behalf of Personal Liberty. A Letter from Julian Hawthorne on the Heywood Case. Also a Statement by M. Harman in regard to the prosecutions against Lucifer in Kansas several years ago.

United States vs. Heywood. Why the defendant should be released. Ed. W. Chamberlain's Letter to President Harrison, written Feb. 14, 1901. Also Judge Carpenter's charge to the jury in the same case.

A Good Man Sent to Prison. A Powerful Protest and Plea by Hugh O. Pentecost. This was called forth by the sentence of Moses Harman to a long term in the penitentiary for publishing a plainly-worded denunciation of a case of outrage upon a wife by her husband—a crime legalized by conventional marriage. "Woman's fight for freedom is on;" said Mr. Pentecost. "He who is not with her is against her, but until women themselves shall become more generally awakened to the situation, and brave enough to speak out on it, the man who values his comfort and freedom more than right and reform may more safely take the risks of a trial for a nameless assault than of exposing in print and by mail the outrage of it."

Oration Commemorating the 151st Anniversary of the Birth of Thomas Paine, Author-Hero of the Revolution, Delivered at the seventh celebration of the Chicago Secular Union Jan. 30, 1888, by President E. A. Stevens. Of this oration S. P. Putman wrote: "It is one of the best ever penned. . . . It has historic imagination and what I call juice. . . . . It gives the heart of the matter, is vigorous and to the point. It gives pictures of Paine and not merely a record."

An Appeal to the Women of America in Behalf of Liberty and Justice to and for the Prosecuted and Persecuted Defenders of the Wives and Mothers of our Land. By C. L. James.

The supply of some of these pamphlets is small. "First come, first served," remember.

A Private Maternity Home

Or Lying-in Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired.

For particulars and terms give description of case, and address.

Suite 63-119 LaSalle St., Chicago Ill. C. S. WOOD, M. D.

Agents Wanted To sell the Toltec Dandruff Cure and the Toltec Hair Dressing (restores natural color). Are clean and perfect. Liberal commission. Write for circulars. Address: The Toltec Remedies Co., Box 1307 Denver Colo.

REMOVAL NOTICE.

Facilities for properly conducting my ever increasing Mail-Order Department being inadequate in Denver I have permanently located in this suburb of Chicago, and trust my many friends and patrons will continue to favor me with their many kind orders.

Send for prices of Watches, Diamonds, Opals, Silver, Plated and Optical goods, Music boxes, Jewelery, Chains, Clocks, Freethought and other badges, Ingersoll spoons, and my tract—"Theism in the Crucible"—free. OTTO WETTSTEIN.
La Grange, Illinois.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer the Light Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Slavery of Our Times.

With Portrait of the Gifted Author, and Introduction by the Translator, Aylmer Maude.

CHAPTER TITLES,

I., Goods Porters Who Work Thirty-Seven Hours; II., Society's Indifference While Men Perish; III., Justification of the Existing Position of Sciences; IV., The Assertion of Economic Science that Rural Laborers Must Enter the Factory System; V. Why Learned Economists Assert what is False; VI., Bankruptcy of the Socialist Ideal; VII., Culture or Freedom? VIII., Slavery Exists Among Us: IX., What Is Slavery? X., Laws Concerning Taxes, Land and Property; XI., Laws the Cause of Slavery; XII., The Essence of Legislation Is Organized Violence; XIII., What Are Governments? Is It Possible to Exist Without Governments? XIV., How Can Governments Be Bollished? XV., What Should Each Man Do? An Afterword.

Well printed on heavy paper. Substantially bound. 186 pages. Price, 65 cents.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only." Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem. Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization. The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 10c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

VACCINATION A CRIME.

With Comments on Other Sanitary Superstitions.

BY FELIX L. OSWALD, M. D.

"Vaccination spreads diseases; vaccination impairs the organic functions; vaccination encourages reliance on worthless remedies; vaccination spreads small-pox; compulsory vaccination furnishes dangerous legal precedents."

With illustrations of diseases frequently resulting from vaccination. 100 pages. Price 10 cents. For sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St. Chicago.

MENTAL SCIENCE AS A GUIDE TO HEALTH, HAPPINESS, AND BUSINESS SUCCESS.

BY ALBERT CHAVANNES.

Chapter Contents: What is Mental Science? What will it do for us? Happiness; Character; Intellectual Character; Physical Character; Heredity and Health; Mind Cures; Business Success; The Law of Circumstances; Individuals; Marriage; Parents and Children; Political Organization; Political Economy, Communism and Co-operation, Colonization and Organization.

Address Albert Chavannes, 308 Fourth Ave. Knoxville, Tenn. Price 10 Cents. Stamps taken in payment.

955.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

Trial Trip Subscriptions.

For one dollar we will send Lucifer ten weeks to eight different addresses, and to the one sending us the list, any one of the following books:

The Origin of the Family, Private Property and the State. By Frederick Engels, 217 pages, handsomely bound in cloth. Postage, 6 cents.

The Slavery of Our Times. By Leo Tolstoi. With portrait of author, 186 pages. Blue cloth; silver lettering. Postage 8 cents.

Nora: A Doll's House, and Ghosts. The two dramas bound together. Olive cloth; red lettering. 108 pages. Postage 8 cents. This offer will, we hope, induce our friends to extend Lucifer's circulation materially.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author.

The Sex Passion.
Man, the Ungrown.
Woman, the Serf.
Woman in Freedom
Marriage: a Retrospect.
Marriage: a Forecast.
The Free Society.
Some remarks on the early star and sex worships.
Notes—On the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population.

The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. Price, $1.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 460 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.
ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.
AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.
ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.
A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as nature's cures. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $1.75.
A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.
A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.
AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to autoinvasive self-hood. 5c.
BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth, $1.
BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commanded. Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.
BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 50c.
CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.
CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 31 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 320 pages, 50c.
CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.
DARWIN, THE. (A Novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.
DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, THE; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. G. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, cloth and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 37 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $3.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 10c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Individual Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian religion has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 380 pages. 40c. Postage, 5c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and George Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 25c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 119 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 476 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 320 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Scotland. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 37 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Volney, and Voltaire. 10c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

KORADINE. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1892, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 25c; paper, 10c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III. (1890). Cloth, $1.25. Postage, 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix: Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 428 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 30c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 10c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 10c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (H. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, H. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelievers or disorganized religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in compact form. H. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 60c; paper, 30c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's inimitable translation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsia, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. H. B. Foote, Jr. Five volumes in "red line" presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $2.50—all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Wolmondt type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and each upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers boards, brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 50c.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 50c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Marsette), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 307 pages. 50c.

THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Witches and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 321 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old asceticism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are ceilbacy and asceticism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the free and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 96 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 15c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 10c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 50c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. H. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. H. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1723, quoted by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuit craft and is a plain index to the underhand working of that order against the welfare of individuals and society. 25c.

THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 10c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Telegt Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Hermet Wynne). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $1.50.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Durting. 15c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 48 large pages. 25c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 3, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 15c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the east and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo. 172 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 550 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VII., No. 5. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, FEB. 12, E. M. 305. [C. E. 1903.] WHOLE No. 956

Mute Opinion.

I traversed a dominion
Whose spokesmen spoke out strong
Their purpose and opinion
Through pulpit, press, and song.
I scarce had means to note there
A large-eyed few, and dumb,
Who thought not as those thought there
That stirred the heat and hum.

When, grown a Shade, beholding
That land a lifetime trode,
To learn if its unfolding
Fulfilled its clamored code,
I saw, in web unbroken,
Its history outwrought
Not as the loud had spoken
But as the mute had thought.

—Thomas Hardy.

Parry and Thrust.

Love is trust.

Smut is after Smoot.

Truth offers no bribes.

Can impurity discern the pure?

Liberty is a means and not an end.

Evil makes disguise seem a fine art.

Is a "love-child" inferior to a hate-child?

Who puts love before liberty is only a slave?

The daring of today is the complaisancy of tomorrow.

Those who marry thus admit that love is not to be trusted.

Mayor Harrison wants to run again. May he never, never stop.

A celibate old woman is no fit mentor for a young girl's heart.

No woman can be "ruined" by a man; public opinion does the ruining.

Match-making mammas rarely, if ever, succeed in setting hearts on fire.

Vermont has given up prohibition; thus admitting that her laws do not work.

Conspiracy has been proved against the western coal barons. Let the law take—a back seat.

With divorce increasing in every direction, the "moralists" want new laws. Do laws wear out, then?

Mark Hanna would like to be president. So, doubtless, would Bill the burglar, and Hank the hold-up.

Bolton Hall tells me that wages have not risen in the east. Oh, it is some compensation to have Morgan.

The "Chicago American" interviews pugilists nearly every day; the off days are given to moralistic cant.

Cecil Rhodes once told W. T. Stead that in a hundred years some Jew would own this planet. Cecil worked for that Jew.

Theodore is showing us that there are many different degrees of strenuousness, running all the way from supineness to asininity.

A woman writer is advocating quality as against quantity in respect to children. Anthony Comstock, start your filth machine!

The slavery of the Negroes was not abolished by passing a constitutional amendment, and white slavery would do well to remember this.

State Socialism means to take the old methods to win the old powers, and then, by increasing the numbers of spoilsmen, to fool the same old people all the time.

The workmen of England are drunk with sports; thinking more of horse racing than of the interests of labor. The workmen of America are drunk with national conceit.

Venezuela is having a hard time between her different creditors. Has she learned yet that states only keep promises when it will pay ten million per cent upon a small investment?

More bachelors than married men suicide. This is probably because marriage, in the long run, deprives us even of that delusive glamor with which suicide surrounds itself in the mind of man.

Lamsdorff, the Russian minister of foreign affairs is an especially silent diplomat. We may be sure that neither fear nor self-disgust make this man silent. The carnivora hunt in silence.

When the consort of Edward grows jealous, or becomes disgusted with her consort's notorious sensuality, she can refuse to be seen with him in public. Is it easy to endure his presence in private?

Prof. Simon Newcomb is interested in Mars as a habitable planet. At the present rate of development, if things do not take a turn for the better, the Earth may soon be studied as an uninhabitable planet.

Journals for women are generally so vacuous and backboneless that they attain large circulations with ease. Their watery editorials, stories, and special articles are horribly proper, and suit woman as she is made. IRONICUS.

"Poor woman! And are you a widow?"

"Worse than a widow, ma'am. Me 'usband's livin', an' I have to support him."

To the patience of Job a whole book is devoted;
To that of his wife not an instance is noted.
Though heaven forbid that her griefs we should probe,
To the rest of her troubles she also had Job.

—Life.

Before the Tribunal.

R. B. Kerr's amusing little fable of the two boarding schools has been called up for a reprimand. In the nature of the illustration there can be no parallel, no true comparison, but the absurdity of the Grundian anti-natural restrictions, double standard and general hypocrisy, is suggested.

Yet Celia B. Whitehead is shocked—nay, "nauseated." And why? Ridicule is a proper mode of attack. At the worst, Kerr can only be accused of flippancy. Is flippancy then so heinous a sin when referring to sex? Surely Celia B. Whitehead must have gone through life with her eyes and ears closed or she would be in a state of chronic nauseation.

If one had the gift of clairvoyance and could look into the minds of the grocery boy, the messenger boy and the little newsboy, and those nice fellows on the academy ball-team—there is no end to the list—could one observe their mental processes and note their attitude toward woman and the sexual relations, R. B. Kerr's little boys, wickedly but deliciously eating jam on the sly, might seem very mild and harmless.

How much better would it be, think you, if one could peer beneath the fluffy pompadours of the kitchen maid and the telephone girl, and the pretty dry-goods sales-girls?

These foolish boys and girls! Ignorance, irresponsibility, levity, and genuine nastiness, too, though I am inclined to think you find that in its worst form among the "unco-guid." A husband of this class after marital enjoyment remarked to his wife—"Horrid thing to do, when you think of it, isn't it?" He was much outraged and abused when the woman who, though a wife, had some self-respect, left his bed and refused him further exercise of his "rights."

Well! He was father of a half-dozen of those boys and girls—what can one expect of them? Rationalism is the only cure, and where do you find it?

And now, Celia B. Whitehead, I call you before the tribunal. You have laid claim to fine ideals and pure judgments, but what of your own attitude? It is true you begged pardon for your indelicacy, but "indelicacy" does not cover the offense. Do you know—and very sternly I ask it,—do you know what you have said?

"It seems to me . . . . extremely probable that the men who would make the best fathers would object to being 'chosen' in that way." In what way? The proposition was that free women, desiring to bear superior children, would choose different fathers for them. Mind you, here is no question of mere pleasure, no motives of mere sensual gratification, but a question of bringing into the world fine children of varying types. What right-thinking man could fail to be honored by such recognition of his worth?

But to what do you compare him? To "the man who inquired for the tooth-brush that belongs to the boat"! A toilet article used for the removal of decomposing matter is required by common cleanliness, even with no knowledge of hygiene, to be reserved for private personal use. To do otherwise is filthy. I ask you, and I will ask it quietly though I am hot with indignation,—where is the illustration? How does this "touch Kerr's ideas"? What is the connection between this man on the boat and one who would be willing to have a child by a woman who had borne a child to some other man, or who might do so at some future time? Would you pass the same judgment on a man who marries a widow with children? If not, why not? Does the marriage tie have a cleansing effect, and shall we say this man is a little less offensive, say like the man who uses a family comb and brush?

Sister, I arraign you before the tribunal of purity, and I accuse you of being yet swayed by that ancient superstition, the nastiness of the sexual functions. Finicism is not purity. Verily there are ways and ways of thinking about sex. Some are natural, rational and pure; "some are simply disgusting."

ADELINE CHAMPNEY.

What Is Lucifer Here For?

In No. 952 the editor asks and attempts to answer this question; and his conclusion and summing up is that woman must be mistress of herself, and that Lucifer is here to push the good thing along.

But does woman desire this?

With rare exceptions I think not.

Woman by nature is a dependent; always seeking advice and support.

She is a conservative. Old customs, castes and distinctions, so far as they affect her friends, family or sex, fill her soul with rapture. The new woman is an anomaly, the jest of men and therefore the horror of women.

For long ages past, in all countries, the mates of women have been selected for them by others than themselves, and with the full approval of the women. It is so now, and as a matter of fact she does not wish to change the good old plan. She likes it because it is old, and because it relieves her of responsibility.

Woman, man's best friend, like his other best friend, the dog, is a creature of devotion. Above all things she desires to be true to him, the concept of being true to herself never for one instant finds lodgment in her mind. You might as well undertake to move the everlasting hills with a lever as to lift her out of this position. This doctrine, taught in all the sacred books, enunciated by all ancient laws framed and enforced by man in every clime and time, has become part and parcel of our common nature and dominates us one and all.

A recognition of these facts should show to Lucifer the hopelessness of its struggle. Women are satisfied with the sexual situation; things are just about as they would have them.

Not in the line of marriage reform can Lucifer ever hope successfully to answer the question, What is it here for?

Obstacles mountain high are in the way, and I say with sadness but I believe with truth, that the reformer has a rougher road to travel along this than any other line.

Inasmuch, then, as the female portion of humanity has never asked for nor made a move to obtain that which Lucifer so strenuously urges, and as the male half opposes it more or less, the query which the editor makes—"What is Lucifer here for?" is highly proper and eminently pertinent.

LUCY REDHEFFER.

REPLY.

On seeing the name attached to this communication the reader will naturally ask, "Is this a real name, or a pseudonym?" If the latter, "Why should such a name be chosen?"

After reading the article over two or three times I strongly incline to the belief that the name is part of the argument, the whole drift of which is to show that woman is morally irresponsible; that she desires nothing better than to be relieved of responsibility, especially in the realm of sex and reproduction. That she is satisfied with the position accorded to her by the priests of church and state, notably by the Hebrew Decalogue, that is, the position of a chattel—catalogued with oxen and asses! A HEIFER is a feminine ox, created, born and bred, for man's use and convenience, not for her own use, pleasure or development—not supposed to have any rights her owner is bound to respect. She is not supposed to know enough to choose a sex-mate, and therefore her master "breeds" her to or with the "male cow" that suits his own ideas of beauty, use or profit.

Here we have the type of woman, the woman of history, the woman of today, and because such is her nature Sister Lucy argues that it is a hopeless task for Lucifer to attempt to arouse in her mind a desire for self-ownership, self-control, especially in realms of sex and reproduction.

Yes, "Woman, like man's other best friend, is a creature of devotion"—devotion to husband, to God and to the priest as God's representative. To be true to these is woman's highest ambition. To be true to HERSELF "never for one instant finds lodgment in her mind." To be true to her child—as part of herself—in the highest and truest sense, is a concept to which she is till a stranger, else she would demand the right to choose the father of her child, not once and for a lifetime, or for all her possible children, but the right to reconsider her choice, the right to repudiate her first choice, not once, but at all times. She would also demand, if true to herself and child, that all other conditions be made the best possible for the best prenatal life of her child; also for the best possible care and training after its birth—as conditions precedent to entering upon the intimate association that may lead to reproduction of the race.

Yes, yes, some of us have found it very true that the "reformer has a rougher road to travel along this than any other line." But this fact does not discourage us. If, as some one has expressed it, we can secure the earnest approval and hearty co-operation of one thousand readers, and at the same time meet with the bitter and unrelenting opposition of all others, THIS will be reward enough for all we have suffered in the past or may suffer in the future. M. H.

Liberals, Be Consistent.

In so far as my personal views are concerned I am not in favor of celebrating feast days, fast days, Sundays or birthdays, yet, if we cannot remember grand, loyal-hearted martyrs for freedom and progress in any other way, why, let us have more of them! The one redeeming feature is, that public attention is called to our aims and object.

To celebrate the 29th of Jan. as the birthday of one of our greatest, most fearless and tireless workers for the emancipation of humankind from inhuman slaveries, without, at the same time celebrating the 17th of April—Mary Wollstonecraft's natal day,—is gross injustice. I do not disparage Thomas Paine's efforts nor works, but if we must have hero worship, let us have a little she-ro worship to even things up a wee bit! Be consistent. Mary Wollstonecraft has never been accorded her rightful place in American literature of independence. A woman of giant intellect, indomitable will and energy, an ever-active student of all that hindered the development of the race, she had no equal one hundred years ago. Her scathing answers to Burke were printed as the "Vindication of the Rights of Man," before Thomas Paine gave his book to the world. But the latter was the most forceful and commanded greater attention. It is in "The Vindication of the Rights of Women" that Mary Wollstonecraft has made a record for all time.

She was mercilessly censured, roasted, toasted and denounced by all the civilized or uncivilized world. It was an unheard-of, audacious thing for a woman to presume to declare any rights for her sex, especially in England at that time, but Mary wrote for the coming centuries and her "Rights of Women" might well become a text book for this century. One excerpt I give. When speaking of the frail, sickly girls of fashionable society, she says:

"I am fully persuaded that we should hear of none of these infantine airs, if girls were allowed to take sufficient exercise and were not confined in close rooms till their muscles are relaxed and their digestion destroyed. If fear in girls was treated in the same manner as cowardice in boys, we should quickly see more dignified women. It is true they could not be called the sweet flowers that smile in the walk of man, but they would be far more respectable members of society, and discharge the important duties of life by the light of their own reason. 'Educate women like men' says Rousseau, 'and the more they resemble our sex the less power will they have over us.' This is just the very point I aim at. I do not wish them to have power over men, but over themselves."

Mary knew from bitter experience the numerous obstacles in the way of women being treated as "rational human beings." She did not attribute this "to cases of masculine tyranny nor feminine incompetency but to the fundamental misconception of the relation of the sexes."

This was one of the dynamite bombs, this "lone defenseless woman" threw into the lion's den, and no wonder it caused a terrific eruption, nor are the rumblings stilled yet, and the women of the world especially owe Mary Wollstonecraft-Godwin their everlasting gratitude for her brave, helpful, unceasing efforts for their emancipation, as well as the race. Her life on earth was short,—only thirty-eight years,—and she was destined to leave it, when her long starved affectional nature had found one who reciprocated her love. Mr. W. Godwin "was the best man in the world" she said, only a short time before the death angels took her. What woman in the United States today can be said to take her place? Read her books and answer.

Let us give "honor to whom honor is due"
As the long list of martyrs pass in review.

FLORA W. FOX.

The Regulation of Sex—a Reply.

In No. 953 the editor of Lucifer does me the honor of making answer to an interrogation put under circumstances as related; inasmuch, however, as he took no notes and others were endeavoring to secure his attention at the same time, it is quite excusable if he failed to remember the exact import of my words. Here is what I said, as nearly as I can now recall:

"As far back as history goes or our historical eye can penetrate, the intercourse between the sexes has always been regulated. Now, in view of the nature of men as they actually are, if all such regulations were absolutely abolished, would not the inevitable consequence be wholesale rape or wholesale venal prostitution? And if so, is not woman to that extent protected even if such a system implies a certain measure of what some call "legalized rape" and "prostitution in marriage"?

And now, in elucidation of my meaning I will say that my mind's eye went farther back than the time when the priesthood and the state demanded the regulation of the relations between the sexes. Long before the rise of the two institutions named and before monogamy or "legal" marriage was heard of, there prevailed a seeming freedom in the sex relations equivalent to promiscuity; nevertheless, the tribes developed and imposed upon their members a variety of systems of marriage relations even though there was no other authority than public opinion. I cannot, for lack of space, go into details here, but any one interested may get the facts and theories referred to in a nutshell in a little book recently published (and sold by Mr. Harman) entitled "The Origin of the Family," by Engels. At that period of development there was no "family" nor property, and men and women had a comparatively wide range of choice;* still, there were limits that could not be overstepped with impunity. Such forms of "group marriages" are still in vogue among some savages of the present day.

In the above light, I hope the good editor of Lucifer may find time and space to revise his reply, since the one given does not fit the case, and I, certainly, do not accept the proposition that the State declares the marriage institution "divine," for the State is in distinct conflict with the clergy and bases its demand on strictly social grounds. I also deny in toto the oft-repeated assertion that marriage was instituted by the priesthood for selfish purposes, for a study of this problem shows us how the regulation of the sexual relation was the result of slow development, predicated upon social necessity, and the priesthood later on took hold of existing conditions and translated them into formal laws, thereby making out of an instinctive institution one consciously recognized and less likely to change.

That I am in favor of liberalizing marriage and divorce laws, the editor is aware, but I also am one of the vast majority who hold the State to be a social necessity and who recognize that the permanence of the State is based upon the monogamous family, aye, that the very future of civilization is wrapped up in this institution—imperfect though it be,—as there is nothing perfect in this world.

ADOLF G. VOGELER.

---

*Dora Forster (Lucifer No. 953) may modify her opinion on the origin of monogamy after a careful perusal of Engels' monograph named above. And, by the way, does she not theorize violently about that awkward monster jealousy?

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Cardinal Gibbons on Divorce.

The morning issue of the Chicago "Examiner-American" contains, for its first page leader, a double-headed report of a sermon in Baltimore by "his eminence" Cardinal Gibbons, one of the very highest of the Roman Catholic dignitaries in this country. The subject of this sermon was "Christ, the Only Enduring Name in History, and the Only True Reformer of Society."

The "Examiner-American" quotes the following as the more significant and noteworthy of the Cardinal's sermon:

"Christ is the only living force that can regenerate society. He is the only genuine social reformer. The nation is sick, and the malady is all the more dangerous because the patient is unconscious of the disease.

"If Christianity is the highest type of civilization—and who can deny it?—then is it not true that we are retrograding instead of advancing in certain lines?

"There is a barbarism more dense than the barbarism of the savage tribes of the forest. For the children of the forest, taught by the god of nature, adore the Great Spirit.

"I speak of a barbarism which eliminates God and an overruling Providence from the moral government of the world, which takes no account of a life to come and of the responsibilities attached to it.

"There is a social scourge more blighting and more destructive of family life than Mormonism. It is the fearful increase in the number of divorce mills throughout the United States.

"These mills, like the mills of the gods, are slowly, but surely, grinding the domestic altars of the nation.

"Husband and wife are separated on the most flimsy pretexts, and, as if the different states of the Union were not sufficiently accommodating in this respect, South Dakota has the unenviable distinction of granting a divorce for the mere asking on the sole condition of a brief sojourn within her borders.

"I can conceive no scene more pathetic, no appeals more touching to our sympathies, than the contemplation of a child emerging into the years of discretion, seeing her father and mother estranged from one other.

"Her little heart is yearning for love. She longs to embrace both parents, but she finds that she cannot give her affection to one without exciting the resentment or displeasure of the other.

"Oh, thou who art, cast a ray of Thy divine light upon our beloved country, that the spiritual and moral growth of the nation may keep pace with its material prosperity. Teach us to realize the fact that saving knowledge consists in knowing and worshipping Thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom Thou has sent."

Can we wonder that there is a wide-spread agitation for national divorce laws, national regulation of marriage, when utterances such as the above are given prominence in the leading daily papers? The Roman Catholic church is the only organization that is constant, consistent and persistent in its demand for the denial, abolition, of divorce, and for the sacramental view of marriage—indissoluble monogamic marriage—as the only basis or standard of morality in the sex-relations of women and men. The various Protestant churches recognize this fact and with few exceptions they approach if not adopt the Roman Catholic view, as the highest and best. Even Spiritualists, and many who call themselves Liberals and Freethinkers align themselves with the army of reaction upon this question, and will doubtless be found voting for national regulation of marriage and divorce, when it comes to a final or decisive struggle between freedom and slavery, between personal self-government in this the most important of human relations, on the one hand, and church-state control on the other.

M. H.

Marriage the Church's Stronghold.

Robert G. Ingersoll—name loved and honored by Libertarians everywhere,—when asked why he did not speak for the workers, for the ill-paid toilers, the wage-slaves, in field, factory, mine and mill, his answer was substantially this:

"First. The average wage-worker deserves all the bad treatment he gets. For the most part the wage-earners are willing slaves, ignorant and stupid, not worth saving.

"Second. To enter the field of economic reform would seriously interfere with the main purpose of my life, which is the overthrow of religious superstition. If I can drive a dagger to the heart of that old harlot, the church, I shall have contributed my share to the world's redemption."

* * *

At the time of making this answer Col. Ingersoll seems to have believed that the only way to destroy theologic superstition is by direct attack; by logical argument; by the keen shafts of sarcasm and ridicule; by the arguments drawn from physical science and plain common sense.

That these modes of attack and these weapons have their value, their place, in the warfare against church superstition will doubtless be admitted by all, but that they are the only, or the best methods and weapons, is an open question. If we are to judge by his last public lecture, even this master of ridicule and of logical argument saw the need of something else, before the close of his extraordinary career as an iconoclast.

In his last public lecture, his address before the Free Religious Association of Boston, answering his own question as to "What is Religion"? Robert G. Ingersoll, the world renowned Agnostic, and champion of Freethought, seemed to reconstruct his line of assault upon the strongholds of theologic superstition. One of those who heard this address, delivered while in full possession of the ripened powers of this intellectual giant, tells us he prefaced his new departure in words like these:

"I am now about to say what I have long wanted to say, but have not said. It is this:"—Then proceeding he gave utterance to language that cannot be construed to mean other than the most pronounced blasphemy against the main support of the power of the church—canon law marriage:

"For thousands of years men and women have been trying to reform the world. They have created gods and devils, heavens and hells; they have written sacred books, performed miracles, built cathedrals and dungeons; they have crowned and uncrowned kings and queens; they have tortured and imprisoned, flayed alive and burned; they have preached and prayed; they have tried promises and threats; they have coaxed and persuaded; they have preached and taught, and in countless ways have endeavored to make people honest, temperate, industrious, and virtuous; they have built hospitals and asylums, universities and schools, and seem to have done their very best to make mankind better and happier, and yet they have not succeeded.

"Why have the reformers failed? I will tell them why.

"Ignorance, poverty and vice are populating the world. The gutter is a nursery. People unable even to support themselves fill the tenements, the huts, and hovels with children. They depend on the Lord, on luck and charity. They are not intelligent enough to think about consequences or to feel responsibility. At the same time they do not want children, because a child is a curse, a curse to them and to itself. The babe is not welcome, because it is a burden. These unwelcome children fill the jails and prisons, the asylums and hospitals, and they crowd the scaffolds. A few are rescued by chance or charity, but the great majority are failures. They become vicious, ferocious. They live by fraud and violence, and bequeath their vices to their children.

"Against this inundation of vice the forces of reform are helpless, and charity itself becomes an unconscious promoter of crime. . . . . .

"Why should men and women have children that they cannot take care of, children that are burdens and curses? Why? Because they have more passion than intelligence, more passion than conscience, more passion than reason.

"You cannot reform these people with tracts and talk. You cannot reform these people with preach and creed. Passion is, and always has been, deaf. These weapons of reform are substantially useless. Criminals, tramps, beggars, and failures are increasing every day. The prisons, jails, poorhouses, and asylums are crowded. Religion is helpless. Law can punish, but it can neither reform criminals nor prevent crime. The tide of vice is rising. The war that is now being waged against the forces of evil is as hopeless as the battle of the fireflies against the darkness of night.

"There is but one hope. Ignorance, poverty, and vice must stop populating the world. This cannot be done by moral suasion. This cannot be done by talk or example. This cannot be done by religion or by law, by priest or hangman. This cannot be done by force, physical or moral. To accomplish this there is but one way. Science must make woman the owner, the mistress of herself. Science, the only possible savior of mankind, must put it in the power of woman to decide for herself whether she will or will not become a mother.

"This is the solution of the whole question. This frees woman. The babes that are then born will be welcome. They will be clasped by glad hands to happy breasts. They will fill homes with light and joy."

In part Col. Ingersoll has answered his own questions, but only in part. In answer to the question, "Why should men and women have children they cannot take care of?" he says, "Because they have more passion than intelligence, more passion than conscience, more passion than reason."

But is it not true that conscience itself, the religious conscience, the conscience developed from early childhood onward, the conscience built up by the teachings of priest and parson, of parent and Sunday School teacher, the conscience directly based upon "God's Holy Word," the "Divine Law" that says to women, "Wives submit yourselves to your own husbands as unto the Lord," "The head of the woman is the man," etc., etc.—is it not true that this religious conscience in the mind of woman is a chief factor in bringing children into the world that their parents cannot provide for?

Yes, it is very true, no doubt, that man's redundant passion is responsible for much of the evil pointed out by Col. Ingersoll, but it should be remembered that it is within the marriage pale, the marriage code which is supposed to have the divine sanction, that woman submits to unwelcome and unwise motherhood, not outside of marriage—with rare exceptions.

But if man's ungoverned passion is mainly responsible for overproduction as to number of children, how is it as to QUALITY?

Is it not the LACK of passion, especially on the part of the mother, more than anything else that is responsible for the poor quality of offspring?

In her "Poems of Passion" Ella Wheeler is a better philosopher than is Robert G. Ingersoll. Also in her prose writings when she says, "Every great genius was born of a great passion, and the reason there are so few great geniuses is that there are so few great passions."

* * *

But if the great Agnostic orator has failed in his diagnosis of the evils caused by unwise and irresponsible parenthood he has made amends in his proposed remedy. This remedy is "Science must make woman the owner, the mistress of herself . . . . must put it in the power of woman to decide for herself whether she will or will not become a mother."

Here we have, potentially, if not fully expressed, the union of Liberty, Love and Wisdom, and this trinity incarnated in woman gives the remedy for redundant and invasive passion on the part of man. If woman is "mistress of herself," and if she is wise, that is, instructed by "Science," and if influenced by desire to do the best possible for her unborn child—it may safely be assumed that all sane and normally developed women would so desire since motherhood is conceded to be woman's strongest passion—then all children would be "welcome," and "ignorance, poverty and vice would cease to populate the world."

* * *

A priest of the Order of Jesus—a Jesuit—wrote a book entitled "Mistakes of Ingersoll." It is now in order that a supplement to that book be written, showing that the greatest of all the mistakes of Ingersoll is his demand that woman should be mistress of herself. When a generation of human beings shall be born of really free mothers the occupation of the priest will be gone, because no longer needed. Children born of really free, self-reliant, intelligent, self-responsible mothers will not need to be born again, will not need a "go-between" in shape of priest to tell them what to do to be saved. They will know enough to be their own saviors, their own priests, their own rulers or kings.

M. HARMAN.

The Regulation of Sex.

In answer to Adolf G. Vogeler's rejoinder to what I said in a recent issue on the subject of the regulation of sex, I will ask our readers to refer to what was said in No. 953. As some may have no copy of that number I will here quote my exact words:

"As far back as human history goes there has always been regulation of sex—regulation of race-reproduction. Now if this regulation should suddenly cease, what would follow?—would not the result be disastrous?"

Now compare this condensed statement of the question at issue with Mr. Vogeler's own written version of the matter in this week's Lucifer, and I think our readers will see that I did not misrepresent him.

I am glad, however, to have him re-state his original question as this re-statement is more full and clear than was my own abbreviation of the same, and because upon the right adjustment of the questions involved in church state regulation of sex and reproduction depends, in great measure, the future development and progress, the future weal or woe of the human race.

Mr. Vogeler tells us that he is in favor of liberalizing marriage and divorce. If he really means this he is in favor of their total abolition, since both marriage and divorce, as now enforced, are the denial of liberty, the negation and death of liberty. As Burke said of artificial government, "the thing, the thing itself is the abuse." State and church regulation of the most intimate and strictly personal of all the human relations is the most pronounced and most inexcusable and baneful of all the usurpations and invasions of those two allied or twin forms of despotism; their very existence depends upon the usurped right to regulate sex and reproduction, hence we should not be in the least surprised at the persistence with which the champions of both church and state oppose freedom in the domain of sex, the realm of reproduction.

The hour for closing our forms for this week having arrived I shall be obliged to postpone my reply to the main points of Bro. Vogeler's rejoinder till next issue, contenting myself for this time by saying that I quite agree with the statement that the "permanence of the State"—the despotic, invasive, political machine as we now have it, or as it HAS US?—"is based upon the monogamic family"—the church-state regulation of sex and reproduction, and that "the very future of civilization [our present falsely called civilization] is wrapped up in this institution"—this ancient, this venerable relic of barbarism, this "only form of serfdom now authorized by law." M. H.

Where Does Free Competition Exist?

My friend Alex E. Wight talks of what "is largely impossible under the competitive system." He seems to have sources of information unknown to the rest of us. Probably he is the one man living or dead whose eyes have beheld a "competitive system." We do not know what would be possible under such a system. We reason from what is to what may be. So far as we have had free competition, the results have been good, but we have had so little free competition! When land is no longer held out of use for speculation, when credit is free, when trade is free, when production is free, then and not before we shall see on a broad field what competition can or cannot do for the world. If Mr. Wight reads "Liberty," as appears, he should not need this primary knowledge. EDWIN C. WALKER.

The Chicago Society of Anthropology

Meets every Sunday at 3:30 P. M., Hall 913, Masonic Temple. Seats and discussions free. The subject on Feb. 15 will be Municipal Ownership and the Traction Question. Lawyer Wilcox will be the first speaker.

The Chicago Philosophical Society

Meets at 72 Adams St., Sundays at 8 P. M. Lucy Parsons will deliver the opening address next Sunday evening.

The Great Coal Strike and Its Lessons.

A symposium of articles by Prof. Frank Parsons Ernest H. Crosby, Bolton Hall, Eltweed Pomeroy and Geo. Fred Williams, occupy the first twenty-five pages of the "Arena" for January 1903. The prominence achieved by these men as writers of advanced thought on economic lines will doubtless cause all who are earnestly studying the coal problem—a problem that still seems as far from solution as ever—to want to see what such eminent thinkers and writers have to say upon this terribly important economic question.

Other articles of general interest in this number are "Fundamental Fraternal Movements of the Present," by B. O. Flower, (founder of the "Arena,") including views upon Socialism as taught by Robert Owen, Fourier, St. Simon, Marx and Lasalle, and others; the Single Tax as championed by Henry George and his followers; Voluntary Co-operation—the Rochdale movement and many like attempts to unite the producers and consumers of wealth in mutually helpful associations; all these receive careful attention from a writer whose name and fame are familiar to all our readers.

Send 25 cents to the Alliance Pub. Co., New York City, for No. 1 of Vol. XXIX. of the old but ever new and up-to-date "Arena," or send $2.50 for a year of twelve numbers. For $3 Lucifer and the Arena one year will be sent.

VARIOUS VOICES.

F. S. Montgomery, Shepard, O.:—I heartily endorse what J. E. Johnson says in last Lucifer. I appreciate Lucifer more than any other paper, and I take lots of them.

Miss M. S. J., Skowhegan, Me.:—Today, by accident, a copy of Lucifer came to my notice. The subjects it treats of interest me very much; they seem to so clearly express my own thought although I have never before had the opportunity presented to read anything on this line. I enclose $1 for which please send Lucifer to me for a year and any premium which you are giving.

W. W. Carter, Kalispell, Mont.:—Inclosed find $1 for which I wish to take advantage of your friend's (I should say our friend's) offer of the five "Out of Print" Pamphlets along with a copy of "Love's Coming of Age" by Edward Carpenter. I would like to say something worthy the praise justly due Lucifer and its publishers but in making the attempt in a few words I find my thought settles back to the old expression of many friends of you and the paper, "It grows better all the time," watch for its coming as a most welcome guest.

C. C. Carlyle, Moncton, N. B.:—I notice in your issue of Jan. 5 an inquiry from I. Williams St. Paul and your answer. Please permit me a word of explanation, although I know your space is well filled. No, the word attravist is not in Webster but will be found in the next edition of the Standard Dictionary, as it has been now used several times in the course of trials in both England and Canada. I am not aware that it has been so used in the courts of the Great Republic, but it will come there in time. The writer did not coin the word, although it may be that he was one of the first who gave expression to the idea therein expressed. The use of the word came in this way: The writer was speaking to some friends on this matter and pointing out that the first mode of legal union was of the form we now call attravist. After some time spent in elucidating the idea he asked Prof. Fowler, famed for his skill on these subjects, for a word to correctly express the idea. It seems to me, said the learned Professor, that the idea you have given us may be expressed by the formation of a new word, Attravism. Oh, how nice, said one lady; it would convert the most inveterate bachelor to be called by such a nice name. The others agreed with her and the word was sprung into being. The idea expressed is that of going back to something good in life that was lost, and it is the opposite of attravism. The attravist believes that while the spheres of commerce, government, both in war and peace, and the control of the great industries of the world are the arenas in which man appears to the best advantage, that in the home life the woman should be queen. That all pertaining to the making of love and choosing of a mate, and the raising of the children should be entirely under the control of the sex whose work is most intimately connected with the propagation of the race. In all pertaining to this part of life the man should be absolutely subject to the woman. The reason is so plain to those who have thought on the subject that it is surprising that it is not at once accepted. The efforts of those who hold this view are now being directed toward obtaining a recognition of the right of the man to promise to obey his wife. No one can of course prevent him doing so when the ceremony is actually performed, but we want authority to embody it in contract. The writer will be pleased to furnish further information.

Who are YOU at Washington who presume to declare ME the enemy of ANYBODY, or to declare any nation MY enemy?

However great you may be, I altogether deny your authority to sow enmity and hatred in my soul.

I refuse to accept your ready-made enemies; and, if I did accept them, I should feel bound to love them. And, loving them, would you have me to caress them with bombshells and bayonets?

When I want enemies I reserve the right to manufacture them for myself.

If I am ever scoundrel enough to wish to kill, I will do my own killing on my own account, and not hide myself behind your license.

Before God your commissions and warrants and enlistment rolls, relieving men of conscience and independence and manhood, are not worth the paper they are written on.

Away with all your superstitions of a statecraft worse than priestcraft!

Hypnotize fools and cowards if you will, but for my part I choose to be a man.—Ernest Crosby in Swords and Plowshares.

A Private Maternity Home

Or Lying-in Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired.

For particulars and terms give description of case, and address.

Suite 65-119 LaSalle St., Chicago Ill. C. S. WOOD, M. D.

REMOVAL NOTICE.

Facilities for properly conducting my ever increasing Mail-Order Department being inadequate in Denver I have permanently located in this suburb of Chicago, and trust my many friends and patrons will continue to favor me with their many kind orders.

Send for prices of Watches, Diamonds, Opals, Silver, Plated and Optical goods, Music boxes, Jewelery, Chains, Clocks, Freethought and other badges, Ingersoll spoons, and my tract—"Theism in the Crucible"—free. OTTO WETTSTEIN.

La Grange, Illinois.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer the Light Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Slavery of Our Times.

With Portrait of the Gifted Author, and Introduction by the Translator, Aylmer Maude.

CHAPTER TITLES,

I., Goods Porters Who Work Thirty-Seven Hours; II., Society's Indifference While Men Perish; III., Justification of the Existing Position of Sciences; IV., The Assertion of Economic Science that Rural Laborers Must Enter the Factory System; V., Why Learned Economists Assert what is False; VI., Bankrupts of th Socialist Ideal; VII., Culture or Freedom? VIII., Slavery Exists Among Us; IX., What Is Slavery? X., Laws Concerning Taxes, Land and Property; XI., Laws the Cause of Slavery; XII., The Essence of Legislation is Organized Violence; XIII., What Are Governments? Is it Possible to Exist Without Governments? XIV., How Can Governments Be Polished? XV., What Should Each Man Do? An Afterword.

Well printed on heavy paper. Substantially bound. 186 pages. Price, 65 cents.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only;" Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem. Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization. The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 10c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

VACCINATION A CRIME.

With Comments on Other Sanitary Superstitions.

BY FELIX L. OSWALD, M. D.

"Vaccination spreads diseases; vaccination impairs the organic functions; vaccination encourages reliance on worthless remedies; vaccination spreads small-pox; compulsory vaccination furnishes dangerous legal precedents."

With illustrations of diseases frequently resulting from vaccination. 198 pages. Price 10 cents. For sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St. Chicago.

MENTAL SCIENCE AS A GUIDE TO HEALTH, HAPPINESS, AND BUSINESS SUCCESS.

BY ALBERT CHAVANNES.

Chapter Contents: What is Mental Science? What will it do for us? Happiness; Character; Intellectual Character; Physical Character; Heredity and Health; Mind Cures; Business Success; The Law of Circumstances; Individuals; Marriage; Parents and Children; Political Organization; Political Economy. Communism and Co-operation, Colonization and Organization.

Address Albert Chavannes, 338 Fourth Ave. Knoxville, Tenn. Price 10 cents. Stamps taken in payment.

955.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

Trial Trip Subscriptions.

For one dollar we will send Lucifer ten weeks to eight different addresses, and to the one sending us the list, any one of the following books:

The Origin of the Family, Private Property and the State. By Frederick Engels, 217 pages, handsomely bound in cloth. Postage, 6 cents.

The Slavery of Our Times. By Leo Tolstoi. With portrait of author, 186 pages. Blue cloth; silver lettering. Postage 8 cents.

Nora: A Doll's House, and Ghosts. The two dramas bound together. Olive cloth; red lettering. 108 pages. Postage 8 cents. This offer will, we hope, induce our friends to extend Lucifer's circulation materially.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author.

The Sex Passion.
Man, the Ungrown.
Woman, the Serf.
Woman in Freedom
Marriage: a Retrospect.
Marriage: a Forecast.
The Free Society.
Some remarks on the early star and sex worships.
Notes—On the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population.

The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. Price, $1.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 480 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's (famous Inaugural) Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.

ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $1.75.

A FLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

A TALE OF THE STRASBURG GEESE. B. R. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strasburg Geese (C. W. Coolidge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola). 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.

BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth, $1.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. H. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 10c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, THE; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DARWIN, THE. (A Novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 81 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 626 pages. 50c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A, B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James R. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 47 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 5-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $3.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 10c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian religion has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 280 pages. 60c. Postage, 5c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and George Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 15c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 313 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 320 pages. Paper, 25c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Scotland. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 97 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Volney, and Voltaire. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

KORADINE. A story for young and old. Extra vibrant cloth. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III. (1890). Cloth, $1.25. Postage, 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A Look (Four) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 62 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORBIDITY SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and What They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman. What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love; Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 25c.

PRIENDLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker). Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman). The Greatest Sin (an allegory, R. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelievers or discredited religionists. The narrative of opposite superstitions and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 40c; paper, 25c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 25c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 15c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Spoosie, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $2.50 all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 350 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of oatmeal tint. Initial letters, ornamentle and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. $1.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Marietta), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sense and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 307 pages. 25c.

THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Witches and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 50c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "To all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 261 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old asceticism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the wholesome and impure things are celibacy and asceticism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 96 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 10c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 60c.

THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution. Its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1723, quoted by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuit craft and is a plain index to the underhand working of that order against the welfare of individuals and society. 15c.

THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 10c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Telegu Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Wynne). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 25c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $2.25.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Darling. 15c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 10c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW; a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper cover; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on April 3, 1898. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo. 172 pages. 50c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VII., No. 6. CHICAGO ILLINOIS, FEB. 19, E. M. 305. [C. E. 1903.] WHOLE No. 957

My Purpose.

I hear it charged against me that I sought to destroy institutions;
But really I am neither for nor against institutions,
(What indeed have I in common with them, or what with the destruction of them?)
Only I will establish in the Manahatta and in every city of these States, inland and seaboard,
And in the fields and woods, and above every keel, little or large, that dents the water,
Without edifices, or rules, or trustees, or any argument,
The Institution of the Dear Love of Comrades.

—Walt Whitman.

Moral Education of the Young.

Among modern writers upon the regulation of human conduct none is more often quoted than is Herbert Spencer. Now that there is a call for light from Lucifer's readers upon the matter of the right education of children, the following selection from Spencer's popular treatise entitled "Education—Intellectual, Moral and Physical," is here reproduced as being replete with helpful suggestions. M. H.

—

Do not expect from a child any great amount of moral goodness. During early years every civilized man passes through that phase of character exhibited by the barbarous race from which he is descended. As the child's features—flat nose, forward-opening nostrils, large lips, wide-apart eyes, absent frontal sinus, etc.—resemble for a time those of the savage, so, too, do his instincts. Hence the tendencies to cruelty, to thieving, to lying, so general among children—tendencies which, even without the aid of discipline, will become more or less modified just as the features do. The popular idea that children are "innocent," while it may be true in so far as it refers to evil knowledge, is totally false in so far as it refers to evil impulses, as half an hour's observation in the nursery will prove to any one. Boys when left to themselves, as at a public school, treat each other far more brutally than men do; and were they left to themselves at an earlier age their brutality would be still more conspicuous.

Not only is it unwise to set up a high standard for juvenile good conduct, but it is even unwise to use very urgent incitements to such good conduct. Already most people recognize the detrimental results of intellectual precocity; but there remains to be recognized the truth that there is a moral precocity which is also detrimental. Our higher moral faculties, like our higher intellectual ones, are comparatively complex. By consequence they are both comparatively late in their evolution. And with the one as with other, a very early activity produced by stimulation will be at the expense of the future character. Hence the not uncommon fact that those who during childhood were instanced as models of juvenile goodness, by and by undergo some disastrous and seemingly inexplicable change and end by being not above but below par; while relatively exemplary men are often the issue of a childhood by no means so promising.

Be content, therefore, with moderate measures and moderate results. Constantly bear in mind the fact that a higher morality, like a higher intelligence, must be reached by a slow growth; and you will then have more patience with those imperfections of nature which your child hourly displays. You will be less prone to that constant scolding, and threatening, and forbidding, by which many parents induce a chronic domestic irritation, in the foolish hope that they will thus make their children what they should be.

This comparatively liberal form of domestic government, which does not seek despotically to regulate all the details of a child's conduct, necessarily results from the system for which we have been contending. Satisfy yourself with seeing that your child always suffers the natural consequences of his actions, and you will avoid that excess of control in which so many parents err. Leave him wherever you can to the discipline of experience, and you will so save him from that hothouse virtue which overregulation produces in yielding natures, or that demoralizing antagonism which it produces in independent ones.

By aiming in all cases to administer the natural reactions to your child's actions, you will put an advantageous check upon your own temper. The method of moral education pursued by many, we fear by most, parents, is little else than that of venting their anger in the way that first suggests itself. The slaps, and rough shakings, and sharp words, with which a mother commonly visits her offspring's small offenses (many of them not offenses considered intrinsically,) are very generally but the manifestations of her own ill-controlled feelings—result much more from the promptings of those feelings than from a wish to benefit the offenders. While they are injurious to her own character, these ebullitions tend, by alienating her children and by decreasing their respect for her, to diminish her influence over them. But by pausing in each case of transgression to consider what is the natural consequence, and how that natural consequence may best be brought home to the transgressor, some little time is necessarily obtained for the mastery of yourself; the mere blind anger first aroused in you settles down into a less vehement feeling, and one not so likely to mislead you.

Do not, however, seek to behave as an utterly passionless instrument. Remember that besides the natural consequences of your child's conduct which the working of things tends to bring round on him, your own approbation or disapprobation is also a natural consequence, and one of the ordained agencies for guiding him. The error which we have been combating is that of substituting parental displeasure and its artificial penalties, for the penalties which nature has established. But while it should not be substituted for these natural penalties, it by no means follows that it should not, in some form, accompany them. The secondary kind of punishment should not usurp the place of the primary kind; but, in moderation, it may rightly supplement the primary kind. Such amount of disapproval, or sorrow, or indignation, as you feel, should be expressed in words or manner or otherwise; subject, of course, to the approval of your judgment. The degree and kind of feeling produced in you will necessarily depend upon your own character, and it is therefore useless to say it should be this or that. All that can be recommended is, that you should aim to modify the feeling into that which you believe ought to be entertained. Beware, however, of the two extremes; not only in respect of the intensity, but in respect of the duration of your displeasure. On the one hand, anxiously avoid that weak impulsiveness, so general among mothers, which scolds and forgives almost in the same breath. On the other hand, do not unduly continue to show estrangement of feeling lest you accustom your child to do without your friendship and so lose your influence over him. The moral reactions called forth from you by your child's actions, you should as much as possible assimilate to those which you conceive would be called forth from a parent of perfect nature.

Comment on "The Fall of Nations Through Marriage."

If we agree for the sake of a starting point that the rearing of children in freedom is the true method, as it is surely the final goal of the free people, we then come to the question, How is this good work to be carried on under the poverty characteristic of the radical and in the face of the persecuting mob?

It seems clear that the antagonism of the mob is not to be overcome by organizing societies openly defying the laws. A non-marriage society, by whatever name, might be a successful device for those who desire a propaganda of agitation and martyrdom, but those who would devote themselves to the difficult work of rearing children in freedom in the face of the enemy must spare themselves unnecessary dangers and conflicts. Their need and the need of the average radical is not for militant organization, but fellowship and sympathy in the way of living. This they find in that informal, unorganized but free people scattered over the country who feel their kinship with each other, are seeking to know and cultivate each other, and who thus form a spiritual brotherhood and sisterhood which by sympathetic approval and practice gives encouragement and moral support to free sex expression, free unions and free parentage. Every large city has its group or groups of free people, and scattered liberals keep in touch by correspondence and through Lucifer. Their method as a rule is not to openly denounce the laws regulating marriage, but to avoid giving any public recognition of the right of society to dictate the relations of the sexes. They are not generally conspicuous assailants of religion, but content themselves with refusing all social and financial support to the church—that embodiment of the spirit of sex slavery. This indirect method of warfare is the only one possible to the great number of radicals who cannot afford to come out into open conflict with social institutions. Perseverance along these lines, strengthening the fellowship and developing this "world within the world" to which we belong will do more than formal organization to promote parentage in freedom.

But poverty—how shall the radical rear children in poverty? He belongs as a rule to that increasing class whose intellectual and other tastes far outrun their pocketbook. Few children are born to these people. It is the careless poor, and the sordid prospering middle class who have their quivers full. Now while the radical cannot change his class, he can change his environment. He can step out of the enslaving and impoverishing wage-life of the city into the cumulative, ever-growing life of the country where child-raising is practicable. He cannot go by himself, it is true; it must be done by associated effort. Home Colony shows the way. Where will you find an equal number of free men and women with so many children? The very general shrinking from colonizing is childish and pathetic. It is like the helplessness of that foreign population which crowds our cities in fearful poverty and can hardly be induced to live in the country in comparative comfort. A radical living alone in barren city rooms, confessing his loneliness, will yet object to the "isolation" of colony life. He is respectfully referred to Home Colony. Do the people there complain of being lonely and cut off from "the advantages of membership in society"? Another radical who works ten hours a day for aboss objects to the drudgery and hardships working for herself and loved ones in a colony. Can it be that hot and cold water in the house, the enticements of shopping in department stores, and the glamor of the theater, are more powerful with us than our love of Freedom? Shades of the Pilgrims! how can such as we hope to stamp our image and superscription on the generations to come!

All radicals are not poor; not all desire parentage; many have found their life work in the city, and are happy in it; many are tied up so close that they cannot do otherwise than stand fast and hold on just as they are; but besides all these are many who are tired of slaving for the landlord and the trusts and who would do well for themselves and the cause to consider the question of colonizing. And there is need just now of a colony in the east like that at Home in Washington. JAMES HAWORTH.

641 Arch St., Philadelphia.

Brief Comments.

Whether I ought to write any more for Lucifer, after being told, in print, that I want more space than my share, that I talk for victory not truth, and that the editor wants no more discussion with me upon any subject, is—a conundrum. Probably no one else would. I would not, certainly, for any other paper. Nevertheless, the invitation at the end of the editorial page (No. 954) seems to include me; and I feel so much interest in the subject that I will act, at least once more, like myself, which means unlike any one else. Perhaps I have only failed to see a joke.

Morrison I. Swift is unquestionably right in his theory that nations, as such, frequently cease to exist through that decline of marriage which comes with advancing civilization. The Romans died out in that way. The ancient publicists appear to have been unanimous in thinking that each civilized race must in its turn, give place to barbarians on account of "the inroads of luxury," whereof this unwillingness to marry was a recognized symptom. The remedies of exhorting civilized people to have children, encouraging them to do so, nay, offering bounties even for illegitimate children, were all tried, under the Roman Empire, without success. It must be acknowledged, however, that Constantine, who extended the exemptions of a married citizen to one keeping "a concubine for the sake of issue," knew nothing about what we understand by free love. There may however, be some hope in Mr. Swift's suggestion. If it should fail, we have this to console us, that the civilized nations, in dying out, have always bequeathed their ideas to the barbarians who succeeded them. Among such ideas of ours, unknown to the ancients) are the Malthusian theory, and our notions of women's rights. I do not see that our foreign elements linger more than a generation or so behind us in adopting these.

C. H. Wesseler is also beyond question right in saying that the main cause of conjugal infelicity is just simply the reaction of exhausted sensuality; and that the whole marriage system—the practice of always sleeping together; the prohibition of varieties, "split beans," happiness completed by union; legalism; the double standard; the Procrustean rule for every case; the damnable doctrine of "the marriage debt"; the double damned beastliness of recommending domestic life as a safe outlet for lust; and all the rest of it; appears invented by the fiends who preside over sexual vice, upon the express principle of facilitating such exhaustion and its results. The remedy must go deeper than reform or abolition of existing institutions, desirable as that is, if for no other reason than for this that we can not expect such reform or abolition without a change in people's private habits. Good sex literature, such as Diana, Tokology, now than anything else.

D. L. is right in thinking that Ida Craddock, even if her theories were not scientific, has probably broken ground nearer the true citadel of sin than anyone else. But I am sure he is quite mistaken in thinking Comstock or any of Comstock's gang an honest persecutor, who must be dealt with as such. Any publisher who wants to make money out of valuable books which attempted suppression has so well advertised, can arrange to do so as easily as the "Police Gazette" does, in the same well-known manner. As to the morality of doing so, it is just like paying ransom to a pirate. It would be absurd, as Macaulay says, to talk about corrupting the pirate's virtue. He has power to exact blackmail, and that is all there is of it.

From what Sadie A. Magoon says, I should fear children at Home are addicted to going into the water before they can swim. That's almost as dangerous as being vaccinated. Lots of them get drowned that way. But in one case, as in the other, there is a mitigating circumstance. Unless they go into the water first, they never will be able to swim.

The first paragraphic article on the last page of Lucifer (same number referred to above) is a solid chunk of wisdom. Let us hope all readers interested in organization "for the protection of birds, dogs, and other animals" will either get nursing bottles or cease to need them.

In my answer to Bertha Moore about Anarchism, for "Hivtorical criminals" read "Habitual criminals."

C. L. JAMES.

Of Child and Marriage.

I have a question for thee alone, my brother:

Thou art young and wishest for child and marriage. But I ask thee: Art thou the man who darest to wish for a child?

Art thou the victorious one, the self-subduer, thecommander of thy senses, the master of thy virtues? Thus I ask thee.

Or, in thy wish, doth there speak the animal or necessity? Or solitude? Or discord with thyself?

I would that thy victory and freedom were longing for a child. Thou shalt build living monuments unto thy victory and liberation.

Thou shalt build beyond thyself. But first thou shalt be built thyself square in body and soul.

Thou shalt not only propagate thyself but propagate thyself upwards. Therefore the garden of marriage may help thee?

Thou shalt create a higher body, a prime motor, a wheel of self-rolling—thou shalt create a creator.

Marriage: thus I call the will of two to create that one which is more than they who created it. I call marriage reverence unto each other as unto those who will such a will.

Let this be the significance and the truth of thy marriage. But that which the much-too-many call marriage, those superfluous—alas, what call I that?

Alas! that soul's poverty of two! Alas! that soul's dirt of two! Alas! that miserable ease of two.

Marriage they call that; and they say marriage is made in heaven.

Well, I like it not, that heaven of the superfluous! Nay, I like them not, those animals caught in heavenly nets!

Far from me also be the god who cometh halting to bless what he did not join together.

Laugh not at such marriages! What child hath no reason to weep over its parents!

Worthy and ripe for the significance of earth appeared this man unto me, but when I saw his wife earth seemed unto me a madhouse.

Yea, I wish the earth would tremble in convulsions whenever a saint and a goose couple.

This one went out for truths like a hero and at last he secured a little dressed-up lie. He called it his marriage.

That one was reserved in intercourse and chose fastidiously. But suddenly he forever spoiled his company: he calleth this his marriage.

A third one looked for a servant with an angel's virtues. But suddenly he became the servant of a woman, and now it would be well if in consequence he became an angel.

I found all buyers careful, having cunning eyes. But even the most cunning one buyeth his wife in a sack.

Many short follies—that is what you call love. And your marriage maketh an end of many short follies—being one long stupidity.

Your love unto woman, and woman's love unto man: alas! would it were sympathy with suffering and veiled Gods! But generally two animals find each other out.

But even your best love is but an enraptured parable and a painful heat. It is a torch that is to beacon you unto higher ways.

One day ye shall love beyond yourselves! If so, first learn how to love. And hence ye have had to drink the bitter cup of your love.

Bitterness is in the cup even of the best love: thus it bringeth longing for beyond-man: thus it bringeth thirst unto thee, the creator!

Thirst unto the creator, an arrow and longing for beyond-man; say, my brother, is that thy will unto marriage?

Holy I call such a will and such a marriage.

Thus spake Zarathustra. —Nietzsche.

Anarchy for Children.

I was much interested in the letter of Sadie A. Magoon, of Home, Wash., in Lucifer No. 954. The right course to pursue in the government and training of children is an issue that has weighed heavily upon me for years. Having eight children, ranging in age from seven to twenty years, and having been for several years past a student of Lucifer's doctrine, no one will wonder that I am interested in the question of child government.

Sadie Magoon says that "whipping brutalizes, and scoldings are nearly as bad." All the advocates of race improvement will perhaps readily grant this, but when she contends strongly for "restraint," and urges that childhood freedom be abridged, the question arises, How is this restraint to be effected? The "kind, but firmly guiding hand" is the hand to be laid upon the child, but we all know that the child sometimes refuses to recognize the superiority of such a hand, and then what? To state the question differently, how can there be restraint without law—and how can there be law without penalty? The penalties inflicted upon children for infractions of parental laws are generally whippings and scoldings, and when we leave the whippings and scoldings out of consideration, what becomes of the "restraint"? Government implies physical force. As Clarence Darrow tells us, it is "based on violence." A ballot without a bullet back of it would be shorn of its strength. The element of authority would be lacking, and it would be merely the expression of an opinion. So would be the parental mandate without the penalty in view. In saying to the child, "Study your lesson," the parent not only expresses a wish, but issues a command. However lovingly the wish may be expressed, we all know that the study of the lesson is sometimes very distasteful to the child; so much so that the parent's wish is entirely disregarded. Still, the study of the lesson is essential to the child's good, and when the expression of the parent's wish fails to produce the proper effect, the next resort is the command; and a command without a penalty—a whipping—to back it up is nothing more than the expression of a wish.

All true reformers want to see society reach that state of perfection in which there will be no government, no mandates and edicts and decrees, no such thing as one person or set of persons ruling over others, but how can we expect it as long as children are brought up under the rod, and how can they, in all cases, be restrained and checked in the courses that would lead them to harm, without the rod of physical punishment?

I believe that a great deal of good might be accomplished by a general exchange of ideas and opinions through the columns of Lucifer on this basic subject. Let us have light on the question of child government. J. L. HICKS.

Abilene, Tex.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Bible Morals vs. Freedom in Love.

In the correspondence columns of the old "Boston Traveler," dated Feb. 4 is found a letter signed Henry Smith, in which the writer gives his version of the attempt by Herman Helscher to kill Voltairine de Cleyre a few weeks ago in Philadelphia. The last paragraph of the letter reads thus:

"Upon her discharge from the hospital she [Miss de Cleyre] refused to swear, saying, 'I am an Atheist and will not prosecute him.' One paper stated that she lectured in several cities upon 'Tom Paine.' If she had remained faithful to her vows in the convent and young Helscher had abided by the teachings of his synagogue, two lives would have been saved and both have become useful members of society. Once forsake the Bible, progress is fast from free thought to free love—then Anarchy. Think, my friends, what would become of the poor children under free love. I should like some of the disciples of Tom Paine to answer."

Same issue of the "Traveler"—it must have traveled round all sorts of subjects since it started, seventy-nine years ago—heads its editorial columns thus: "Are We All Brutes?" And then proceeds at some length to tell of the worse than brutal, worse than savage, treatment of the man McQuade, who was "lynched" at Albany, N. Y., a few weeks ago and tortured in ways that would shame the Southern negro-burners; in fact, would put to shame the most barbarous savages of whom history gives any account, all because McQuade's wife had been sent to a hospital to get treatment for a "scalp wound received presumably in a family brawl."

Quoting from a Southern contemporary, the "Traveler" takes his medicine in this fashion:

"In the early days after the advent of the white man, and after the white man had begun killing and robbing the Indians, these children of the forest retaliated and introduced the torture at the stake, but no torture that was ever inflicted equalled in savagery the torture inflicted on McQuade by supposedly civilized people and in the capital of the leading state of this nation. Our Northern contemporaries can leave the South to its sins for awhile while looking at home for objects of censure."

Moralizing over this terrible indictment, the editorial concludes in these words.

"Such crimes, whether South or North, should not be condoned by mistaken public sentiment. Nor should it make any difference whether the victim be black or white. Our civilization hugs close to the borders of barbarism, as such instances as this most abundantly prove. We have our pigeon shoots, our dog fights, our cock fights. Our honored President finds relaxation from his strenuous life in strolling off into the forests and killing something. An honored ex-President finds the greatest delight and relief from the restraints of civilization in secluding himself from his fellows and killing something. To be one of the four hundred our American girls must learn to shoot and kill at least a squirrel or a beautiful fawn. The millenium is not yet."

* * *

My object in making these quotations, as will doubtless be readily inferred by our readers, is to make the "Traveler's" editor stop the mouth of his correspondent, Henry Smith.

I do not need to ask if the men who committed the unspeakable outrage upon the man accused but not convicted of assault upon his wife, were the product of the abhorred free unions or whether they came of legalized, respectable monogamous marriage.

I do not need to ask if Theodore Roosevelt and Grover Cleveland, whose greatest pleasure seems to consist in killing for the sake of killing, were born inside or outside of legalized and Christian wedlock. Neither is it necessary to ask about the way in which the young ladies of the elect Four Hundred made their entrance into the world, to whose penchant for killing innocent birds and quadrupeds allusion is made by the "Traveler."

Neither do I need to inquire concerning the early education of the lynchers, North and South, nor of the early training of Teddy the Strenuous and Grover the Fat, nor of the education of the refined sportswomen who, to be fashionable, must shoot innocent "squirrels or fawns"—no need to inquire whether any of these had been subjected to the demoralizing influence of an "atheistic kindergarten" or "infidel" college, or whether they had read Paine's "Age of Reason."

But we all know that Bible classes, Bible catechisms and Sunday schools in which the Christian and Jewish Bible is the main source or standard of religious knowledge and of moral science are now so nearly universal that none can escape their influence, whether high born or low, rich or poor, plebeian or aristocrat—not to mention the much lauded public free schools, in many of which the same collection of ancient myths and fables is made a textbook, and in all of which schools reverence for these myths and fables is inculcated as the fountain source of all morality.

What, then, in few words, is the Bible code of morals, the code that Henry Smith and all professing Christians would have us to live and die by, and to eschew the morality taught by Thomas Paine in his "Age of Reason"?

From infancy onward I have been a careful reader of this ancient collection now revered as the "Word of God"—but whose many writers made no such claim—the collection commonly called THE BOOK (from the Greek words HO BIBLOS, meaning "the book"), as though there were no other book in the world—and I find its most essential and characteristic doctrine to be that of BANKRUPT ATONEMENT!—the doctrine that a man may escape the payment of his just debts by pleading inability to pay and by putting the burden of payment upon some one else.

This doctrine seems to have arisen in the anthropomorphic idea that the maker and ruler of the earth and heavens was simply a big man, with a man's unreasoning passions—love, hate, revenge, etc. That when man the creature fails in his duty to his creator and ruler he must either die himself or cause some one else to die in his stead.

Hence the origin of bloody sacrifice. Many of the ancient tribes and nations were in the habit of offering the lives of human beings as sacrifices to their gods; kings or chiefs would offer their eldest sons as such sacrifice. The ancient Hebrews substituted lambs and kids—the "firstlings of the flock, without spot or blemish," also bulls and heifers—but that they sometimes offered up human sacrifices is proved by such instances as Jephthah and his daughter, and Abraham and his son Isaac.

The Christian part of this ancient collection of myths, fables and semi-historic stories, substitutes the bloody sacrifice of the "First-born son of God" for the sacrifice of lambs, kids, rams, bulls, etc., etc., though just why the son of Mary and the "Holy Ghost" should be called the FIRST-BORN of God is not clear. But the important fact is that in the Christian system of ethics and of religion a man—a god-man, a HYBRID, so to speak—takes the place of quadrupeds and birds as sacrificial offering in the scheme of atonement for the moral debts due from man the creature to God the creator.

The chief writer of the books, letters and manuscripts comprised in what is called the "New Testament" is one Saul of Tarsus, a city of Asia Minor—called Paul, or Saint Paul. Jesus, the hero of the Christian scheme, or cult, himself wrote nothing; neither did he authorize any one to write his personal history or to make a record of his teachings, his miracles, so-called, or of his claim to be the bloody sacrifice most acceptable to the Jewish god, to appease his insane wrath against his ignorant and erring children.

Paul's writings, or those attributed to him, are full of this blood-atonement business, as when he says, Hebrews, ix., 13-22: "For if the blood of bulls and of goats and the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh; how much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God. . . . . Without shedding of blood is no remission," etc., etc. See the whole chapter and book, also most of the books of the New Testament. Jesus himself is made to say, Matt., xii., 31-32: "All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men, but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men . . . . neither in this world, nether in the world to come."

This phrase, "blasphemy against the Holy Ghost," is commonly interpreted to mean refusal to accept the blood atonement, the bankrupt atonement, of Jesus as the only means of escaping the wrath of "a sin-avenging God."

* * *

Now then—to close this article, already too long—what can we reasonably expect of a nation or people who accept this blood-atonement principle, this bankrupt atonement, as its basis of human ethics, what but just the state of things we now see?

Why should we feel surprise at the frequency of worse than brutal torturings of helpless victims, North and South?

Why should we wonder at the worse than savage greed of the coal mine operators, the railroad trusts, the coal dealers' trust, through whose united manipulations thousands of innocent people perish by slow asphyxiation in rooms from which the vital air is excluded because of the necessity of keeping out the cold?—to say nothing of the slow starvation consequent upon the doubling or trebling the cost of coal to the poor, who must buy their daily supplies of coal by the pail or basketful?

What wonder that legalized bankruptcy, to avoid payment of just debts, is so common that statisticians agree that ninety-seven per cent of our merchants fail LEGALLY at some time in their business careers?

What wonder that hypocrisy, deception, fraud, gambling schemes, "get-rich-quick" schemes, etc., etc., are so universal and so popular, when the whole Christian scheme is built upon the plan that promises forgiveness for all sins, all crimes and misdemeanors except—except the one crime of UNBELIEF in its scheme of blood-atonement?

Jesus is reported to have said, "Think not that I am come to send peace on earth; I am not come to send peace but a sword. . . . A man's foes shall be they of his own household." In accord with these utterances I need not remind our readers that the history of Christian nations is mainly a history of wars of aggression, of conquest, of robberies and murders by wholesale.

In next issue I will try to show what the logical result would be if the doctrines inculcated in Paine's Age of Reason should be generally accepted as the basis of human ethics, also of religious belief. Meanwhile our readers are requested to accept the challenge of Henry Smith by sending short letters to the Boston "Traveler" in answer to the question as to what would become of the children born of free mothers. M. H.

The Chicago Society of Anthropology

Meets every Sunday at 3:30 P. M., Hall 913, Masonic Temple. Seats and discussions free. On Feb. 22 Oscar L. Triggs of the University of Chicago will lecture on municipal ownership and kindred topics.

Brief Mention.

To answer the question in regard to building and operating transcontinental railways without a general government would require more time and space than can be spared this week. Will try to give attention to this problem soon.

* * *

The questions of J. L. Hicks in regard to the right education of children are of such general interest that short letters for publication in Lucifer will be welcome. Give us results of personal experience and observation, as much as possible.

* * *

When Brother James can reply to critics without descending to the language of insult and of personal abuse, when his style is respectful and tolerant of the honest opinions of others, and less dogmatic and self-assertive than it often has been, and when he asks for no more space in Lucifer than is equitable and just to others, then he will have less occasion for such complaints as those contained in first paragraph of his article found on another page. Our aim is to treat all justly, fairly and courteously, and self-justice demands that we require the same treatment from our correspondents. M. H.

Birth-Rate, the Church, and Billionaires.

The falling off of the American-born population to which I have called attention is not to be taken lightly. A writer in the "Nineteenth Century" has gathered some statistics on the subject. According to the census in 1900 the population of Massachusetts was 2,805,346. Of these, 1,743,720 were of foreign birth or parentage. Comparing this with the relative population of 1890 reveals that the alien has increased four times as fast as the native. In no New England state are Americans in a majority. A study of families shows that in earlier days they commonly numbered from ten to twelve; the second, third, and fourth generation after that contained but seven or eight; the fifth generation had four and five; the sixth, three or less. As far back as 1851, Dr. Jesse Pickering concluded that there was no natural increase in the strictly American population.

Thus America stands with France as a decadent country. For we live not by natural increase but upon our immigrants. And the same law of decrease of families holds of immigrants after they have been here beyond the second generation. The only hope of keeping up the population as things are is to maintain a steady influx of foreigners. A certain part of those who come are the very lowest, the slag of criminal industrial conditions in Europe.

The progressive deterioration of the American breed is what may be looked for as a consequence.

Hence we must inquire the causes of the falling native birth rate.

The chief one is the billionaire absorption of the wealth. Common people cannot live and bring up families decently. National resources go not into rearing children and making them fine, but into the luxuries and waste of the rich. The ruin of the nation may result. It will result if this process is not stopped and reversed.

The deterioration of the United States race for the pleasure of the few great wealth wasters returns no compensation to the people or to humanity. These rich are not improved, but are themselves depraved and degraded by the luxury and waste permitted them. All is summed up in saying, the American race walks to its decay in order to give a handful of wealth-debauchees vast means to ruin themselves. The extract of American blood is not fine art, rare literature, high thoughts, noble character, but Rakes. A few infinitely worse than worthless rich rakes. All the toil and industry and deprivation and suffering and lack of education and early broken health of the multitude goes on to manufacture and pamper a class of human Stomachs, who destroy their creators.

The abolition of billionaires is mankind's most vital problem if it desires to survive. It means the abolition out of human society for all time of the scrdid rich who vampire on the rest.

A revolution for this purpose is the most needed event for all civilized society.

In company with this, if the human race is to survive and improve, must go the abolition of Marriage and the Church. Marriage is destructive and preventive of choice parenthood. The church impedes every effort toward race-improvement on intelligent physical lines. In its true essence the church is a Financial Corporation. It gives easy work and fine feeding to an immense preacher class. Preaching is not much more laborious than cutting coupons. It is thoroughly a luxury pursuit; it is play, with money and respectability attached. The sinecurists who conduct it are naturally men for the most part rather incapable of large ideas, and they desperately fight every attempt to change the old regime of ideas, lest it should undermine their pampered ease and influence.

It is a classic observation that the clergy are nearly always on the wrong side. Now they are with the billionaires yoked in the same team with the political economists, who resemble them in many ways.

To the clergy it makes no difference what kind of a thing is born, if it is born in wedlock. Anything vile and beastly that comes out of a womb is the work of god if an ecclesiastical incantation had been sung by a preacher over the producers of it. And the finest specimen of human being that could be produced by the highest parentage and selection would be anathema to these salaried functionaries if they had not murmured a benediction on Nature's choice.

This explains why there is little chance of race improvement while Church opinions are regarded at all.

The highest morality is the procreation of perfect human beings. Church and state ceremonies have no relation whatever to this high problem. For modern times this principle is superior in validity to any of the so-called revelations of the past, for instance the ten commandments, or the ideas attributed to Jesus. Bearing magnificent children and rearing them magnificently will be the conscious method by which humanity will spring forward after the great revolution of Anarchist-Socialism by which men are to be freed from the huge burden of supporting rich paupers.

MORRISON I. SWIFT.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Tom Swinburn, Charleston, W. Va.:—In renewing my subscription to Lucifer for another year, I want to save time by taking this opportunity to ask a question that often presents itself, with many others. It is this: If we had Anarchy, absence of law and government, as I understand, would you have a transcontinental railway, and if so, how would it be kept up and run? An answer to this would answer a thousand other questions.

H. E. S., Baker City, Ore.:—Find herewith order for books. What I wanted in my previous order was to obtain the reasons for believing that people require variety. I believe, with the phrenologists, that persons making a scientific marriage—temperaments different but mental faculties harmonious—getting their real complement, or affinity, have in one person all the variety required; that it is impossible for a varietist to experience that deep love felt by one who has one affinity and only one. I have been unable to get any pamphlets that gave any good reasons for variety.

Mrs. E. D. L., Yuma, Ariz.:—I think Lucifer is doing just as needed a work as it ever was, which is great for one small paper. Although personally I never was a free lover, I have come into a better understanding of life and love through reading Lucifer. I have come to definite conclusions on many points that used to be in doubt in my own mind, therefore I have closed some subjects as having come to final knowledge. We (my family and self) often send for books and pamphlets we see advertised in Lucifer and the paper is read and passed around if we find those intelligent enough to appreciate it. I enclose a small contribution and wish you the greatest success and stand ready to further that success.

F. Cambersey, Chicago:—The statement made by you in "Free Society" as to what some people would do [fight and kill their fellow human beings] "rather than sit down to the enjoyment of a good dinner," shows only too sound judgment of human nature as it is. I am always telling the Anarchs that they reason from wrong premises, that is, from the assumption that man if not governed would be a perfectly sinless being. I have begged in vain for a little space to knock out C. L. James' "Vindication of Anarchy." Would be pleased to receive those Lucifers you offer to send free to applicants.

Volney Abbey, Wathena, Kas.:—I send $1 to apply on subscription. When will your autobiography be completed? I paid for a copy nearly two years ago. Well, I suppose it will come in time. I expect to read Lucifer as long as I live; so here's success to you.

[Work on the autobiography proceeds but slowly, owing to poor health and the unceasing demands of other work upon my time and strength. Under more favorable conditions the book could be got ready for the press in a very short time. If any friend does not want to wait for the book the money paid will be returned, else credited on subscription to Lucifer, or credited on bill for any other books on our list. M. H.

The Chicago Philosophical Society

Meets at 72 Adams St., Sundays at 8 P. M. Mrs. Warren Springer will deliver an address on The New Way next Sunday evening.

In Praise of Prosperity.

They raised his salary two ago last May,
The said increase amounting to thirty cents a day.
Since then they've raised the prices
Of carrots and of beets,
Of flour and of meats,
Of corn and coal and fruits,
Of babies' little boots,
Of potatoes, milk and cheese,
Of the product of the bees,
Of hats and socks and coats,
Of all that sinks or floats.
He's paying out the money that he saved before his raise;
But prosperity's upon us, and his heart is full of praise.
—Chicago Post.

CAPTAIN JINKS, HERO

BY ERNEST CROSBY.

It is a merciless satire on war and militarism in which the parallel between savagery and soldiery is unerringly drawn. It is a biting burlesque on the various forms of cheap hero-worship. It holds up to withering scorn every important feature of militarism.

Among the accompaniments and results of war exploited and satirized, are blazing at "East Point," the war whoops of the yellow journals, the savagery of war, the Schley-Sampson controversy, civilizing the heathen savage, looting in China, pension abuses, the capture of Aguinaldo, the Peace Conference, army mismanagement, occulatory attacks by goosey girls, etc.

With 25 Irresistible Drawings by Dan Beard. 12mo, Cloth, Handsome Covers 400 pages. Price $1.50

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

A Private Maternity Home

Or Lying-in Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to cases that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired.

For particulars and terms give description of case, and address.

Suite 63, 119 LaSalle St., Chicago Ill. C. S. WOOD, M. D.

Agents Wanted To sell the Toltec Dandruff Cure and the Toltec Hair Dressing (restores natural color). Are clean and perfect. Liberal commission. Write for circulars. Address: The Toltec Remedies Co., Box 1307 Denver Colo.

REMOVAL NOTICE.

Facilities for properly conducting my ever increasing Mail-Order Department being inadequate in Denver I have permanently located in this suburb of Chicago, and trust my many friends and patrons will continue to favor me with their many kind orders.

Send for prices of Watches, Diamonds, Opals, Silver, Plated and Optical goods, Music boxes, Jewelery, Chains, Clocks, Freethought and other badges, Ingersoll spoons, and my tract—"Theism in the Crucible"—free. OTTO WETTSTEIN.
La Grange, Illinois.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer the Light Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Slavery of Our Times.

With Portrait of the Gifted Author, and Introduction by the Translator, Aylmer Maude.

CHAPTER TITLES,

I., Goods Porters Who Work Thirty-seven Hours; II., Society's Indifference While Men Perish; III., Justification of the Existing Position of Sciences; IV., The Assertion of Economic Science that Rural Laborers Must Enter the Factory System; V, Why Learned Economists Assert what is False; VI., Bankrupts of th Socialist Ideal; VII., Culture or Freedom? VIII., Slavery Exists Among Us; IX., What is Slavery? X., Laws Concerning Taxes, Land and Property; XI., Laws the Cause of Slavery; XII., The Essence of Legislation Is Organized Violence; XIII., What Are Governments? Is it Possible to Exist Without Governments? XIV., How Can Governments Be Abolished? XV., What Should Each Man Do? An Afterword.

Well printed on heavy paper. Substantially bound. 186 pages. Price, 65 cents.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man: The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only," Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spolling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem. Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization. The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 10c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

VACCINATION A CRIME.

With Comments on Other Sanitary Superstitions.

BY FELIX L. OSWALD, M. D.

"Vaccination spreads diseases; vaccination impairs the organic functions; vaccination encourages reliance on worthless remedies; vaccination spreads small-pox; compulsory vaccination furnishes dangerous legal precedents."

With illustrations of diseases frequently resulting from vaccination. 128 pages. Price 10 cents. For sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St. Chicago.

MENTAL SCIENCE AS A GUIDE TO HEALTH, HAPPINESS, AND BUSINESS SUCCESS.

BY ALBERT CHAVANNES.

Chapter Contents: What is Mental Science? What will it do for us? Happiness; Character; Intellectual Character; Physical Character; Heredity and Health; Mind Cures; Business Success; The Law of Circumstances; Individuals; Marriage; Parents and Children Political Organization; Politics; Economy; Communism and Co-operation, Consolidation and Organization.

Address Albert Chavannes, 808 Fourth Ave. Knoxville, Tenn. Price 50 cents. Stamps taken in payment.

957.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

To NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

Trial Trip Subscriptions.

For one dollar we will send Lucifer ten weeks to eight different addresses, and to the one sending us the list, any one of the following books:

The Origin of the Family, Private Property and the State. By Frederick Engels, 217 pages, handsomely bound in cloth. Postage, 6 cents.

The Slavery of Our Times. By Leo Tolstoi. With portrait of author, 186 pages. Blue cloth; silver lettering. Postage 8 cents.

Nora: A Doll's House, and Ghosts. The two dramas bound together. Olive cloth; red lettering. 108 pages. Postage 8 cents. This offer will, we hope, induce our friends to extend Lucifer's circulation materially.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author.

The Sex Passion.
Man, the Ungrown.
Woman, the Serf.
Woman in Freedom
Marriage: a Retrospect.
Marriage: a Forecast.
The Free Society.
Some remarks on the early star and sex worships.
Notes—On the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population.

The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. Price, $1.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 466 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 75c; paper 25c.

ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $1.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

A TALE OF THE STRASBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strasburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.

BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth, $1.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Condemned, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, THE; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 174 pages. 25c.

DARWIN, THE. (A Novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 81 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 626 pages. 50c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—Freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.50, $1.00 and 50c.

DIGGING FOR RED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 Illustrations, 21 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $3.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A. and Castle Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian religion has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and shewing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 280 pages. 40c. Postage, 5c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and George Bartelin, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 25c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John H. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than real reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 119 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.00 to $1.

HILDA'S HOME. Rose Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 474 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 320 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socialand. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 97 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Heckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Volney, and Voltaire. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 15c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

KORADINE. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1886, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c. address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 25c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III. (1890). Cloth, $1.25. Postage, 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Convention of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A Look (For) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 418 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 50c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. H. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuance of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies. a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What Is she? What will she be? The Scale Hiding Shekels Not Taken; Mistaken; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Phillip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 10c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, H. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disorganized religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretations, with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $2.50 all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 200 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 50c.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Mariette), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 327 pages. 25c.

THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Witches and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old asceticism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and asceticism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 32 large pages; twelve copies, 25c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 10c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (H. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 15c.

THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1723, quoted by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuit craft and is a plain index to the underhand working of that order against the welfare of individuals and society. 15c.

THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 10c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Telepathy (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Winse). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 15c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $2.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Darling. 15c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 10c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 25c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 3, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by this great Freethinker. 5c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 15c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor: a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo. 172 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VII., No. 7. CHICAGO ILLINOIS, FEB. 26, E. M. 305. [C. E. 1903.] WHOLE No. 958

Parry and Thrust.

Is sex a sin?

Variety is life.

Words are not acts.

Trusts are betrayals.

Woman's rights; to be free.

Jealousy is a malady of love.

Public opinion is lack of opinion.

The greatest of failures; "success."

Voting is one of the worst of vices.

We are "free" to choose our taskmasters.

Hope's lamp often gives but a dim light.

Superiority is often an assumption of authority.

May the unwritten law never get into writing!

Divorce is a compromise with an impertinence.

The only faith worth having is faith in yourself.

It is not love to only love another's love of you.

Darrow has gone to Springfield to try the mud baths.

Scandal-mongering is the dissipation of the virtuous.

Love asks for little in return; yet, unfed, love perishes.

The coal commission will now consider ways of letting down easy.

Wisdom and love are not boon companions; but folly is not immortal.

The dream of today is the reality of tomorrow; but what a long dream!

Captain Streeter is in prison, Maria is dead, and the strong are vindicated.

It is good that every woman is not a "lady." If only every "lady" were a woman!

Every new movement suffers from clinging to an old morality: virtue is vulnerable.

Theodore agonizes over the standstill of our population. Tell him that the rich hate children and that the poor cannot afford them.

State Socialism has created the Salvation Army of reform: the good State will care for us.

Judge Horton says that a grand juror took a thousand dollar bribe. No one is surprised at that.

Cuba has given two coaling stations for the use of American murder ships. 'Tis the beginning of the end.

With priests and metaphysicians to do our thinking, and with the State to handle our affairs, we are happy.

The morality of today was the crime of our not far-distant ancestry. What will some of the crime of today become?

Rockefeller recently enriched himself in one day in the sum of eight million dollars. Does he ever gamble with his god?

Free love is abhorred most by those who fear that once it were accepted as an ideal no opportunity would be offered to enslave.

It is better to entrust our daughters with freedom than to deprive them of initiative and then await the approach of the inevitable spoiler.

The newspapers have not yet finished lying about the Princess Louise, who must serve to give the public its daily feed of scandal and suffering.

The poor in Glasgow are sleeping six in a bed in order to keep from freezing; and yet hardly any man in Scotland dares stay "awa fra the kirk" on Sunday. The poor await heaven.

Maud Gonne says that the Irish will revolt soon; the revolt will not be against tyranny though, or rather it will only be against British tyranny. Poor Ireland!

Susan B. Anthony celebrated her eighty-third birthday recently. Eighty-three years have taught this earnest woman one thing at least: it takes time to move fools and knaves.

Many a will-o'-the-wisp is attracting attention nowadays, and thousands are chasing illusions through the dark. As for striving for the right to live—but why should men want to really live?

King Edward owns many race horses, as well as forty million people in Britain alone; he makes a profit out of the race horses by caring for them and makes a profit out of the people by not caring for them.

The government of England proves to have been the aggressor in the Venezuelan matter. It is generally the stronger that aggresses in this world. The American government has its eyes open for an opportunity too.

IRONICUS.

Shall Nature Take Her Course?

In No. 953 Celia B. Whitehead says: "Mr. Kerr would have 'Nature take her course.' . . . . And please notice, here, that nothing can possibly be more contrary to 'Nature's taking her course' than preventives of conception."

I never laid it down as a general principle that nature should be allowed to take her course, for I am well aware that progress is continually putting some of our natural instincts out of date, and making them pernicious instead of beneficial. Such, for instance, are the fighting and hunting instincts, which were once necessary to the very existence of the race, and therefore stroag in many people. Now, however, these instincts are no longer needed, and, being a cause of much misery, they should be repressed and gradually weeded out.

With the sexual instinct it is different. This instinct also is stronger than it need now be, inasmuch at the human race is no longer decimated by war, famine, and plague, to anything like the same extent as formerly. Among our ancestors extreme prolificness was necessary to the continued existence of the family and tribe, and was therefore the highest of virtues. Now, it is a nuisance. We still have the instinct that leads to it, however, and it is simply a question of convenience and happiness what to do with it. Unlike the fighting and hunting instincts, sex is not a source of misery; on the contrary, it affords perhaps more happiness than any other instinct. It is therefore a good instinct to keep, and not one to be weeded out at all. In none of the cases I have named can we blindly follow nature. But while in the case of the fighting and hunting instincts we must eradicate the instinct altogether, in the case of sex we must keep the instinct and simply prevent its natural results. By so doing we get an admirable source of happiness without unpleasant consequences.

If we never used an organ except for the function it was first evolved to perform, life would be a very dull affair. Darwin has tanght us that every one of our organs evolved and survived because it was useful in the struggle for existence. That is to say, the original function of every organ we have was to aid us either in finding and catching food, or in escaping from enemies and other dangers, or in propagating and nourishing the young. Are these the only functions for which we now use our organs? Certainly not. Instead of only using our eyes to see if somebody is coming to kill us, or to scan the horizon for deer and buffaloes, we look at pictures and statues, and revel in the beauties of nature. We desecrate our ears by listening to music. We abuse our intellects by playing games and acquiring knowledge. We climb mountains and run races for fun. Even the lower animals have acquired these dreadful habits, and sometimes we see a kitten expending in playing with its own tail the energy which nature gave it to use in catching mice.

Mrs. Whitehead will thus see what I mean by letting nature take her course I do not propose that every organ shall always be used for the exact function for which it was evolved; on the contrary I believe that some should never be so used. But because the struggle with our environment has become less severe, and no longer needs all our energies, I do not propose that we should not expend our energies at all. Let us expend our surplus energy in whatever way will give us most pleasure. Art, music, literature, science, brotherly love, are good ways for those who like them; but there is no reason why any of them should be exalted above sex.

Mrs. Whitehead further says: "I wish Mr. Kerr would kindly explain his 'system' under which 'sexuality would be a beautiful little stream flowing gently through the garden of love.'" My system is expressed in one word—freedom. I believe that liberty is the mother of temperance, as repression is the mother of excess. In my opinion sexual excess is due mainly to two causes. The first is the extreme concealment of the human body, which arouses an unhealthy curiosity, and makes the occasional uncovering of the body, in whole or in part, more exciting than it would otherwise be. Every child should be accustomed from earliest childhood to the sight of the nude human body, male and female. The second great cause of excess is that sex is forbidden, and therefore more enticing. "Stolen waters are sweet, and bread eaten in secret is pleasant." Abolish these two great causes of vice and sexual excess will soon be as rare as gluttony. Of course, when I use the word "excess," I mean the expenditure of more energy on sex than health and strength admit of. So long as this limit is not exceeded there is no excess, and sex is an unmixed good if agreeable to both parties. Neither has excess anything to do with the number of persons on whom sexual energy is spent. A man who eats only one dish may be a glutton, and one who partakes of a number may yet be the mort temperate of men.

R. B. KERR.

Are Women Satisfied With Existing Conditions?

Since childhood my work has been with women and for women, and in all my fifty-five years of life I have found but one who answered to the description of woman given by Lucy Redheffer in Lucifer of Feb. 12. And I believe had I known that one woman better I would have found her real self disagreeing with that outward expression.

Lucy calls Lucifer's work a hopeless struggle. I have only to look into the depths of my own woman's nature to know how great, how glorious, how hopeful a work Lucifer has chosen and I have found my own to be parallel with that of hundreds of other women with whom I have been associated. I found some developed to a greater degree, some less, but all seeking for better things on account of the hope within them that seemed like a sure promise of realization some time, somewhere.

If Lucy thinks "women are satisfied with the sexual situation" she judges from the "outward appearance," and in the Bible we read that we are not to judge from the outward appearance but from the heart. I know from Lucy's own words that she cannot draw women to her who long for some one to whom they can open their hearts and pour out the pent-up emotions of years. They cannot tell to her the wrongs and injustice that they feel have been heaped upon them and their children for years.

One who has awakened to the possibilities of woman's nature could never make this statement of Lucy's: "Woman by nature is a dependent." Well, most women are awakened out of that "depednent" nature very suddenly after marriage. Every one of them must wonder what that dependent nature was given her for when she finds that she is the one on whom the whole household depends—even the man of it, who told her she could always lean on him, is lopping over and leaning on her and if things go wrong (in his opinion) he takes up the Adam complaint against the woman.

Lucy may not depend upon the Bible for her statement "Woman by nature is a dependent." In fact I am sure she does not, for the teaching therein on this point is the direct opposite of Lucy's assertion. It plainly states that the order of creation was from the lowest to the highest and that woman came last and thus expresses the highest. It also states that she was to be man's help meet and it is evident that she could not be a help unless endowed with higher qualifications than the one she was to help. This Adam recognized by eating the fruit when she gave it to him for he told the Lord, when questioned regarding it, that the woman gave it to him and he did eat, as if he was expected to be led by her. Then in the account of the punishment, her punishment was to have her will subject to man's. If by nature she was a dependent it would have been no punishment. At the same time the promise was made of one who would come and restore all things and Christ is recognized as that one, so for nineteen hundred years woman has been restored to the place in nature which is just the place in which she finds herself now—the one on whom all else is depending. According to the Bible account the woman and the Lord had all to do with the coming of Christ, and to woman it was first given to go out and proclaim a risen Christ.

To help women to recognize her true place by creation is what Luciter is doing, and do you think there is anything hopeless in that task? Of all work, Lucifer's work has in it the promise of the best returns.

This morning I took Lucy's article to Mrs. L. F. Morehouse to read. She is a college graduate and a prominent worker in the local, district and State W. C. T. U.—and has been ever since their organization. She has been a delegate many times to the national conventions and is an active member of the Woman's Club here. She read the article and declared it a comp lete mis fit in her world of women, and her world numbers them by the hundred.

I have written this to you, Moses Harman, because in your "reply" a little wavering from the usual stroy, assuring statements; and you express the thought of being satisfied if you have the hearty co-operation of one thousand. O, no! Do not be satisfied with that when in truth you have the whole womanhood and motherhood of the race. You think it is slow coming into manifestation, but no man can understand the outlook to a woman when she realizes that the state government, the national government, all church government and the teaching of ages are all holding her down. No man was ever so imposed upon. But never you mind! As fast as each one recognizes her true place in creation she will toss the whole weight off as if it was but a feather.

With many wishes for your success and contentment, and a continued faith in your work.

MRS. RIA B. BRUCE.

Turn On the Searchlight.

Among the many evidences that an ethical upheaval is now in progress, and that, as never before, the old standards of moral rectitude are being subjected to the white light of scientific investigation and research, is the fact that in nearly all the large daily papers, even the most conservative, Marriage and Divorce is one of the most frequent subjects of discussion, both editorially and by correspondents.

In the "Chicago Chronicle" for Feb. 14, editorial page, is found a letter signed Hulda L. Potter Loomis, in reply to a correspondent signing him- or herself "L. Z.," who in a previous issue had contended for the orthodox and conventional view of the sacredness of marriage and the sinfulness of divorce. To give our readers an idea of what is now being done by members of the National Press-Writers' Association the letter of Mrs. Loomis is herewith reproduced in Lucifer:

If the letter of "L. Z." on the subject of marriage and divorce was intended as a reply to a letter in a former issue of the "Chronicle" signed Harriet M. Closz, the writer thereof will have to make another attempt, and in his next perhaps he will kindly inform your anxious readers where they may read the story of the marriage service which he claims was performed by "the Creator in paradise" and also on what particular occasion "Jesus the Redeemer" established it as a sacrament.

I have read the Garden of Eden story in the Bible many times and have thus far failed to discover that at the time Adam and Eve set up housekeeping either God or the serpent, who are the only beings spoken of as being present, issued a marriage license with either celestial or mundane seal upon it or presented them with a marriage certificate to guard against any possibility of scandal among their future neighbors. According to the Bible God simply created the woman out of one of Adam's ribs and "brought her to him. He dikn't even ask Adam: "Wilt thou have this woman to be thy wedded wife?" He did not so much as tell Adam she was his wife. He let Adam give her a name, just as he let him give names to the animals. So Adam said: "She shall be called woman, because she was taken out of man," and he is also credited with the saying that has been erroneously ascribed to God: "Therefore shall a man leave his father and mother and shall cleave unto his wife, and they shall be one flesh."

There is no record of Eve's dissenting from the arrangement, which she might reasonably have done had there been any other men there to compare old Adam's pusillanimous and cowardly spirit with, and she recognized the fact, doubtless, that it was a case of "Hobson's choice." It was Adam or nothing, and she set an example which many of her poor, weak sisters have been following ever since, and took what she could get. But we are left to guess upon the question as to the number of years she lived with him, for while the Bible tells us that after the murder of Abel by his brother Cain, Eve had another son, whom she called Seth, and "the days that Adam lived were 930 years, and he died," there is no record of Eve's death or that she lived with Adam until he died. Thus your correspondent is much too previous in his criticism of Mrs. Closz, who appears to know what she is talking about or writing about when she charges the wrongs of the establishment of the present marriage system to ecclesiasticism, which is the direct cause of world wide unhappiness and its logical, ultimate result, divorce.

To grant divorce to those whom it has bound together in chains that gall and chafe their wearers is the only reparation the state can make for its alliance in such matters with the church or, more properly speaking, ecclesiasticism. The wide-spread rebellion of women against this tyrannical combination is one of the most significant indications of the times and augurs a fuller and brighter future in the emancipation of woman from the slavery of institutional marriage than any other that we know of. The "divorce problem" will not be settled until it is settled right, and woman has now reached a point where her achievements in other directions will give her the courage and ability to settle this question for herself without the aid of either priest or justice.

And although "L. Z." affirms that "the question of divorce as well as religion is not left to the ministers or the people to decide, but was settled by the Creator in paradise, he has not proved his case and the whole text of his communication is a mass of words and sentences that form no argument that would appeal to common sense or reason.

"Out of Print" Pamphlets Free! Don't Overlook This.

One of Lucifer's friends has a small stock of "out of print" pamphlets which he wishes to give away. He also wants to aid Lucifer. He therefore offers to give, as long as the supply lasts, one each of the following named pamphlets to any one ordering books or subscriptions of us to the amount of fifty cents. That is, the purchaser gets what he orders, and in addition five pamphlets for which he is not asked to pay even the postage. This offer applies equally to old and new subscribers. These are the pamphlets:

In Behalf of Personal Liberty. A Letter from Julian Hawthorne on the Heywood Case. Also a Statement by M. Harman in regard to the prosecutions against Lucifer in Kansas several years ago.

United States vs. Heywood. Why the defendant should be released. Ed. W. Chamberlain's Letter to President Harrison, written Feb. 14, 1901. Also Judge Carpenter's charge to the jury in the same case.

A Good Man Sent to Prison. A Powerful Protest and Plea by Hugh O. Pentecost. This was called forth by the sentence of Moses Harman to a long term in the penitentiary for publishing a plainly-worded denunciation of a case of outrage upon a wife by her husband—a crime legalized by conventional marriage. "Woman's fight for freedom is on;" said Mr. Pentecost. "He who is not with her is against her, but until women themselves shall become more generally awakened to the situation, and brave enough to speak out on it, the man who values his comfort and freedom more than right and reform may more safely take the risks of a trial for a nameless assault than of exposing in print and by mail the outrage of it."

Oration Commemorating the 151st Anniversary of the Birth of Thomas Paine, Author-Hero of the Revolution. Delivered at the seventh celebration of the Chicago Secular Union, Jan. 30, 1888, by President E. A. Stevens. Of this oration S. P. Putman wrote: "It is one of the best ever penned. . . . It has historic imagination and what I call juice. . . . . It gives the heart of the matter, is vigorous and to the point. It gives pictures of Paine and not merely a record."

An Appeal to the Women of America in Behalf of Liberty and Justice to and for the Prosecuted and Persecuted Defenders of the Wives and Mothers of our Land. By C. L. James.

The supply of some of these pamphlets is small. "First ome, first served," remember.

Need of Organization.

These are days of organized effort, and to effect anything permanent even we "individualists" must unite and associate. I believe that not only must we "agitate and educate," but we must bring children into the world to hand on the liberty and advantages we are gaining for them. Free children must be born of free mothers and the stigma attached to such ideas must be lived down and gradually subdued. But people have to get used to things and changed conditions. Solitary efforts of single couples, even if they have the moral courage of conviction and economic freedom to teach and act in accordance with such opinions, is extremely difficult. Lodges, clubs or churches, or whatever you like to call them, should be formed all over the country, regular meetings held, our literature circulated and occasional lectures or series of lectures should be given. A lecturer from a distance might be engaged and offered hospitality in the home of one of the members during his stay, and those interested in hearing him invited, while he discussed before the audience sexual and social problems and economic questions. After the meetings five-minute speeches might pe encouraged. All this would help enlighten members who are very ignorant upon these topics and make for true freedom and improvement of life and higher ideals of living.

E. A.

Bunker Hill, Ill.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Restrainment vs. Government—A Review.

"Free Society—a Periodical of Anarchist Thought, Work and Literature," published every Sunday in Chicago, is one of Lucifer's valued exchanges. Its issue for Feb. 21 is called Whole No. 402, consequently it is no ephemeral or "mushroom" enterprise. As it claims to be "Formerly the Firebrand," I infer that it numbers its issues from the first number of the paper of that name, which periodical was begun by Henry Addis and J. H. Morris, a dozen or more years ago, in Portland, Oregon, and who, as will be remembered by many of our readers, suffered persecution and prosecution for their championship of freedom of speech and of press.

My object in this notice is not to give a history of the evolution of "Free Society" from small beginnings, but chiefly to refer to the fact that a few weeks ago I asked for and was accorded space in the successor of "The Firebrand" for a short article on the subject of "Restrainment vs. Government," which article reads as follows:

"The question as to what would or should follow the abolition of the present regime commonly called the State, or the capitalistic State, is one that is now engaging the attention of political reformers of all grades and shades of opinion. Some of these who call themselves 'Socialists,' 'Social Democrats' or 'State Socialists,' would, by voting, capture the present machinery of government, including what are called the 'trusts'—the railways, the telegraph lines, the telephones, mines of coal and other useful minerals; the factories, packing-houses, warehouses, banking institutions, farms, orchards, grazing lands, etc., etc., and have these all operated by 'the government' for the benefit of the whole people instead of the comparative few—as now.

"Another class of reformers equally honest and earnest, sometimes termed Anarchists, call the scheme thus briefly outlined 'paternal government,' and will have none of it, but advocate instead simply the removal of ALL government—all man-made laws that limit or control individual action, leaving it to the natural sense of justice and to the influence of human sympathy—that is, care for others, to keep people from robbing and murdering each other.

"To my thinking this latter plan is all right—in theory, and as between the two schemes I much prefer the second, but is there not a more practical way than either, and one that would appeal to the common sense of those who fear any and all radical changes in government affairs?

"We all admit that children and insane people should be cared for and restrained from injuring themselves and others until they have learned enough to govern their own acts and to respect the rights of others.

"If we were all born as SANE, and as nearly perfect as to type, as are the beasts and birds in a state of nature, there would be little need of compulsory restraint upon the actions of any one; but unfortunately, as we all know, under the meddling interference of invasive government, government by priests and by political bosses called judges, legislators, etc., most of us have been deprived of our natural right to be well born, our right to be born sane, born with a sound mind in a sound body. Some of us, for instance, are born kleptomaniacs; some are born with homicidal proclivities so strong that we would rather fight and kill our fellow human beings, any day, than to sit down to the enjoyment of a good dinner. Few of us are born sufficiently sane, that at some period of our lives we do not need compulsory restraint to keep us from seriously hurting ourselves or our friends and neighbors.

"For these reasons, and to bridge over the interregnum that must necessarily follow the abolishment of outside government—government of man by man, on the one hand, and real self-government on the other—the period that will be needed by free motherhood, free and consciously responsible motherhood, in order to supply the world with a race of truly sane, really self-reliant and self-governing human beings, during this interregnum we shall need, as I very honestly think, co-operative associations of individuals, strictly voluntary associations, that would rightfully be called "the Restrainment," or perhaps "Defendment," to take the place of our present plutocratic governments, our invasive and tyrannical monarchic, aristocratic, democratic-republican governments.

"In 'Free Society,' Dec. 28, 1902, appeared comments by C. L. James, upon an article of mine previously printed in Lucifer, which article was written in reply to Emma Goldman's strictures upon my advocacy of "Restrainment" as a substitute for the thing now technically called the government. In that article I showed that both from etymology and from rational usage the two words were radically different, and should not be confounded one with the other. The comments of Mr. James were so unfair, his quotations so partial and unjust, that I hereby ask the readers of 'Free Society' to allow me to give them, in my own language, a fair statement of what I have been teaching for many years upon this very important question. Free of charge I will send to all applicants one or two copies of Lucifer containing replies to James and others on the question of what should follow the abolition of the State—big S—as we now have it, or as it has us!"

—

In the same issue of "Free Society," "Interloper"—who seems to be the editor—has this to say:

"Brother Harman's article, 'Restrainment vs. Government,' shows that he has not read to advantage the discussion between Mr. Simpson and C. L. James: which puts the latter in the position of having to repeat all that has been said by him on the subject recently."

The next issue of "Free Society," under the head of "The Question of Restraint," tells its readers:

"Our readers undoubtedly look for a rejoinder from C. L. James, regarding the question of 'Restrainment vs. Government,' which was broached by our friend M. Harman in 'Free Society' last week. But Comrade James refrains, and the following paragraph, quoted from a private letter, gives one of the reasons why he does not care to discuss the question at present:

"'It will come out sufficiently during my Vindication (Ch. V.) that I believe restraint of abnormal individuals may be at once reduced to a minimum—and that this minimum would require no organization for the purpose, inasmuch as all the criminals whom there is any need to restrain are admitted by all—even themselves—to need it. On the other hand my whole treatise is to show (inductively) that such organizations are formed only to benefit the projectors. The pons asinorum of Anarchism is that people don't take the trouble to exercise authority for nothing, but always propose encroachment at the end; so that authority is the only kind of "invasion" we all need to resist any more than all surely shall."

—

The reputation of C. L. James for historic knowledge and for logical clearness is considered first class by his many friends and admirers—of whom I desire to be reckoned as one—but even the "divine Homer nods" sometimes, as in the above quotation. To me at least it appears simply amazing that any one acquainted with the facts of history and of every-day life should say, "All the criminals whom there is any need to restrain are admitted by all—even themselves—to need it."

How is it with Pierpont Morgan, President Baer and the robber trusts generally. Do THEY admit themselves to be criminals, in need of restraint?

How about the invaders of personal right on all lines, governmental, moralistic, religious—the Roosevelts, the Judge Garys, the Comstocks, the Czars, the Kaisers, the Popes of Rome, and all who in the name of God, of government and of puritan morality would fine, imprison and kill their fellow human beings?

Then what of the born homicidal maniacs, like Jesse Pomeroy, and thousands like unto him? Also monomaniacs of all kinds? Do they admit they are insane and need to be restrained?

While it may be true that I am one of the "asses" of which Brother James so often speaks—one of those Anarchists who need the pons asinorum (bridge of asses) to help them to safely cross the river that divides government from the "land of freedom"—I confess myself so very stupid as not to be able to see the matter in that light. If I were contending for any kind of government except self-government by and of the individual woman and man, then the charge would be more reasonable. For more than twenty years I have taken ground against all governments of force and authority, contending for liberty with responsibility in all matters of religion, of politics and of sex ethics.

The next paragraph after the one just quoted, signed "Interloper," seems to be inserted to clinch the logic of Brother James. He says:

"Freethinkers who are so anxious to retain government for the prevention of crime do not seem to coincide with Ingersoll when he says: 'It is safe to say that governments have committed far more crimes than they have prevented.' Was Ingersoll wrong, friends?"

Does "Interloper" know the meaning of NON-SEQUITUR?—"It does not follow." Ingersoll was a consistent and life-long governmentalist on political lines. It was easy and logical in him to denounce RELIGIOUS government. He did not claim to be an Anarchist.

These two issues of "Free Society" from which I have quoted remind me forcibly of Goldsmith's pedant, who protested against being required to furnish "arguments and intellects" also for his opponents. It may be that I need to be told what the English language means; also what Anarchism or liberty means. But then again it may turn out that my opponents are quite as SOPHOMORIC in their methods of argument as I myself am. I claim not to know it all; but desire to be reckoned simply as a LEARNER, an investigatur, an inquirer after truth. M. H.

T. U. A. Again.

In the article by our correspondent, T. A. U., printed a few weeks ago, I made a few changes of the text, in the interest of clearness as I thought, but which changes were not approved by the writer. Believing with Wendell Phillips that to get the whole of truth we must hear all sides of all questions, Brother T. U. A. is herewith given the use of Lucifer's platform to say his say in his own way. M. H.

—

THE FATHERHOOD QUESTION.

In response to your candid and generous admission that by the alterations you have made in a recent paper, printed over the initials T. U. A., you may have done it injustice; I will gladly take advantage of your offer of space to make corrections and will begin by saying that I do not regret the incident, as it has given a clear indication of what points require more particular elucidation.

My object has been to demonstrate that by a rational interpretation of the phenomena of sexual reproduction, every prospective mother has the right, in the interest of her child, to demand the creative service of the most suitable man in the community, on certain conditions, the most important of which is, that by compliance the man shall make himself liable to no legal or social penalties. Nature, itself, imposes none.

The intention of my first paragraph was to define what conditions are essential to the personal fitness, that at any particular moment makes the personal claim of "any woman" valid. You have left out the "any" which limits the "discrimination" to the particular claim made.

This matter of physical fitness is the critical point on which the whole theory and practice of paternal selection rests. It is a point that every stripe of politician and moralist have done their utmost to confound by attaching to the duties of maternity the licentiousness of a prostitute. In fact, as far as it has been possible during the whole of the historic period, their sanction has been refused to any maternity unless the other function has been conceded as well. In this conspiracy the modern scientist has combined, by searching all nature with a microscope, to discover some sanction for placing this combination under the protection of the dictum, "What God has joined together let no man put asunder." No saying has done better service for the devil than "To the pure all things are pure." The truth is: To the ignorant, chastity and lewdness are alike; while to the "pure," i. e., the knowing, nothing is pure that does not respond to the one ideal.

There is an infallible test that will decide the status of any sexual action. What effect has it upon the interests of posterity and upon the social development of mankind? In this function no condition is neutral; all are either good or evil.

Under primordial conditions this "fitness" must have been a result equally of the natural development of the human species as of all others, with which it is a result of the disinclination of the female to submit to the embrace of the male, except at a time when conception is certain; and from toe inability of the male to either suggest or compel an undesired service. Under absolutely natural conditions, the sexual jealousy of the males would prevent their toleration, far more their mutual assistance, of any attempted violation of a solitary female; while the natural gregariousness of the females would render them absolutely unassailable, even by seduction. The probabilities are far greater that the first conception of the virgin would result from a forcible holding to contact by a group of older matrons.

I did not wish to limit the application of my second paragraph to "the camp of the Israelites," but to extend it to "the whole world, the wilderness of sin." Perhaps my meaning would have been clearer if I had written "naked to their shame" in exposing the defective physical development resulting from the practice of "monogamic sodomy." The ordinary sense in which the word "monogamy" is used is to indicate one wife "only," but the root idea of the word is, to get a woman "alone," a necessary preliminary to monogamic uses. The word is vocal to the whole field of sexual prostitution. The historic testimony to the practice of the vice of pederasty should, in an unprejudiced mind, produce conviction that in the past the males had not, as at present, free access to the females.

It is this commerce "dishonoring their own bodies between themselves," to which St. Paul alludes as a vice more disastrous in its results than the other—in the obvious filth of which men receive "in themselves" that "recompense of their error that is meet," while by the other the evil results are inflicted upon the whole race. The "error" is one of ignorance, into which no races but the brutal or innately unobservant of Nature could have fallen. Beasts of prey, whose sole interest in herbivorous animals is to destroy them, might fail in the observance and imitation of vital actions that are necessary to the natural en joyment and perfect developement of the organs of generation, in which conditions these species obviously excel. Failing this, nothing remains to the inhuman savage but sexual rivalry carried to the excess of murder. This is a development that must soon automatically correct itself by destroying the older and more vicious males and leaving their function to the immature, under the dominating control of a sex which, individually weak, is when united unassailable. Any race of savages must have made immense progress toward humanization before the males would even think of a loving contact with a fellow, that but for the dominance of monogamic ideals, might be the purest form of affection of which organic consciousness is capable.

If we make a study of the respective development of beasts of prey and herbivorous animals, we may observe that while the young of the former expend most energy in games that insure them the strength and agility to seize their prey; and refresh themselves by long intervals of profound slumber, the others give theirs to exercises by which they may escape, and a great part of their period of rest is devoted to the muscular development of the organs of generation; nor do they appear to require the profound unconsciousness of sleep that is so necessary to the carnivora.

T. U. A.

Easy Divorce.

Judging from reading the comparatively few copies of the Chicago "Chronicle" seen at this office since the publication in that paper of Hulda Potter Loomis' article on Marriage and Divorce—reproduced this week in Lucifer—that article must have been a veritable bomb-shell in the camp of conventional moralists in regard to sex and marriage. Of the half-dozen or more replies to Hulda's exceptionally fine answer to L. Z.'s article in a previous issue of the "Chronicle," I select the following as a fair sample of the kind of argument used by her opponents:

"I hope and believe that the views expressed by Hulda L. Potter Loomis in defending divorce and attacking the Bible will find no indorsement among the serious-minded majority of the American people. The Bible, even if it be regarded only from a literary and philosophic point of view, is far greater than any human speck upon this horizon of eternity, and no scoffer can ever shatter the divine intuitions so beautifully expressed in that holy work. As for divorce, instead of extending its powers let the wretched couples who in this mercenary, godless age lightly approach the sacred rite of marriage without due consideration of its sanctity and responsibility be justly punished when they tire of each other, as they so often do, richly deserving the hell which their levity and thoughtlessness has brought upon them. To relax our divorce laws is to invite a return to savage polygamy; it is to bring a curse upon the helpless offspring of those divorced and to destroy that bedrock of a nation's morality—the home.

HERBERT O. HOLDERNESS.

The morality and logic of Herbert O. Holderness is in line with the teachings of the Christian and Jewish Bible. He wants hell, everlasting hell, for those who find that through no fault of their own they can no longer love a conjugal mate, and who wish to reorganize their home, their family relations, and who refuse to add imbeciles and criminals to the population.

"A return to savage polygamy" means return to the morality of David, "the man of God's own heart," the morality of Abraham "the father of the faithful," and of Solomon "the wisest of men." Bible morality gives man the right to divorce his wife without asking leave of any one, but the wife must not divorce her husband for any cause whatsoever, and if she deserts her husband for any cause and chooses another man she must be stoned to death.

Yes, the "home"—founded on Bible morality—is the 'bedrock of the nation's morality," which means plutocratic rule by The few and despotism, slavery and exploitation for the many No wonder Roosevelt the patrician plutocrat wants the poor to marry and raise large families of children for the use of the rich. Without a perennial supply of half-starved, poorly-endowed and criminally-inclined subjects the ruling classes would soon find their occupation gone.

Rationalists and libertarians are willing that both monogamists and polygamists should choose their mates and regulate their own lives in their own way, so long as they do not seek to compel others to adopt THEIR standards of what is pure, healthful and happifying in the realm of sex and reproduction.

M. H.

VARIOUS VOICES.

R. B. Kerr, Phoenix, B. C.:—I am glad to see that the American Socialist movement is getting permeated with the right sort of people. Burgess of Tacoma ran for Congress in the recent election. Strout is business manager of the "New Time," Spokane. Mrs. Commander is a regular writer for the "Coming Nation." I am always coming across good Lucifer names in the Socialist press.

Ralph C. Clyde, Box 308, Portland, Ore.:—Enclosed you will find a list of seven subscribers with money order to pay for same. Your bright little paper interested them very much and after I gave them sample copies they begged me to send for Lucifer. If all the other subscribers would send sample copies to their friends it would be but a short time until your subscription list would be tripled over and over again. We out here in Oregon consider you are doing noble work and we all want you to feel that your efforts to raise humanity are appreciated. Your every effort to overcome the various obstacles in the way of publishing a sincere publication as Lucifer has proved itself to be, earns our sincere admiration and respect. You may expect another list of subscribers shortly. Please send sample copies to the names enclosed.

Laura H. Earle, New York:—I am much interested in observing the difference of atmosphere here and in Philadelphia: among our own people, I mean. Much to my amazement, I find the women in New York less active—in speaking—than with us. Perle Falkenstein's home is becoming quite a headquarters for the "Philadelphia colony," as we call it; thanks to her truly Anarchistic hospitality. It is a home for us all. We have had two intensely interesting talks from E. C. Walker (at meetings of Manhattan Liberal Club) on Comstockism, with valuable discussion afterward. What a power of direct expression Walker has! How his absolute honesty impresses itself on its hearers!

A Philadelphian, accustomed to the rough parry and thrust controversies of the Ladies' Liberal League and the Fellowship for Ethical Research—both in their graves now—is struck by the grave dignity of discussion in the Manhattan Club. We wonder if the mild-mannered President of this Club could metaphorically wipe the floor up with a speaker whose spirit or logic displeased him—as our dear friend Traubel used to do when he was chairman of the Fellowship. Those were unruly, but breezy nights, dear to the memory.

The Chicago Philosophical Society

Meets at 72 Adams St., Sundays at 8 P. M. Seats and discussion free.

The Chicago Society of Anthropology

Meets every Sunday at 3:30 P. M., Hall 913, Masonic Temple. Seats and discussions free. On Feb. 29 Adolf G. Vogeler will lecture on War and Women.

A Private Maternity Home

Or Lying-in Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired.

For particulars and terms give description of case, and address.

Suite 63-119 LaSalle St., Chicago Ill. C. S. WOOD, M. D.

Agents Wanted To sell the Toltec Dandruff Cure and the Toltec Hair Dressing (restores natural color). Are clean and perfect. Liberal commission. Write for circulars. Address:

The Toltec Remedies Co., Box 1307 Denver Colo.

REMOVAL NOTICE.

Pacilities for properly conducting my ever increasing Mail-Order Department being inadequate in Denver I have permanently located in this suburb of Chicago, and trust my many friends and patrons will continue to favor me with their many kind orders.

Send for prices of Watches, Diamonds, Opals, Silver, Plated and Optical goods, Music boxes, Jewelery, Chains, Clocks, Freethought and other badges, Ingersoll spoons, and my tract—"Theism in the Crucible"—free. OTTO WETTSTEIN.

La Grange, Illinois.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer the Light Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Slavery of Our Times.

With Portrait of the Gifted Author, and Introduction by the Translator, Aylmer Maude.

CHAPTER TITLES,

I., Goods Porters Who Work Thirty-Seven Hours; II., Society's Indifference While Men Perish; III., Justification of the Existing Position of Sciences; IV., The Assertion of Economic Science that Rural Laborers Must Enter the Factory System; V. Why Learned Economists Assert what is False; VI., Bankruptcy of th Socialist Ideal; VII., Culture or Freedom? VIII., Slavery Exists Among Us: IX., What is Slavery? X., Laws Concerning Taxes, Land and Property; XI., Laws the Cause of Slavery; XII., The Essence of Legislation Is Organized Violence; XIII., What Are Governments? Is it Possible to Exist Without Governments? XIV., How Can Governments Be bollshed? XV., What Should Each Man Do? An Afterword.

Well printed on heavy paper. Substantially bound. 186 pages Price, 65 cents.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man: The Recognition of Facts; Folly of 'For Men Only," Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem, Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH AN APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization. The Folly and Cruelty of it All. Price 15c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

VACCINATION A CRIME.

With Comments on Other Sanitary Superstitions.

BY FELIX L. OSWALD, M. D.

"Vaccination spreads diseases; vaccination impairs the organic functions; vaccination encourages reliance on worthless remedies; vaccination spreads small-pox; compulsory vaccination furnishes dangerous legal precedents." With Illustrations of diseases frequently resulting from vaccination. 128 pages. Price 10 cents. For sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St. Chicago.

MENTAL SCIENCE AS A GUIDE TO HEALTH, HAPPINESS, AND BUSINESS SUCCESS.

BY ALBERT CHAVANNES.

Chapter Contents: What is Mental Science? What will it do for us? Happiness; Character; Intellectual Character; Physical Character; Heredity and Environment; Mind Cures; Business Success; The Law of Circumstances; Individuals; Marriage; Parents and Children Political Organization; Political Economy. Communism and Co-operation, Colonization and Organization. Address Albert Chavannes, 806 Fourth Ave. Knoxville, Tenn. Price 50 cents Stamps taken in payment.

955.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

Trial Trip Subscriptions.

For one dollar we will send Lucifer ten weeks to eight different addresses, and to the one sending us the list, any one of the following books:

The Origin of the Family, Private Property and the State By Frederick Engels, 217 pages, handsomely bound in cloth. Postage, 6 cents.

The Slavery of Our Times. By Leo Tolstoi. With portrait of author, 186 pages. Blue cloth; silver lettering. Postage 8 cents.

Nora: A Doll's House, and Ghosts. The two dramas bound together. Olive cloth; red lettering. 108 pages. Postage 8 cents. This offer will, we hope, induce our friends to extend Lucifer's circulation materially.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author.

The Sex Passion.
Man, the Ungrown.
Woman, the Serf.
Woman in Freedom
Marriage: a Retrospect.
Marriage: a Forecast.
The Free Society.
Some remarks on the early star and sex worships.
Notes—On the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population.

The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. Price, $1.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 75c; paper 15c.

ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth the weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $1.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

A TALE OF THE STRASBURG GEESE. B. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strasburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to noninvasive self-hood. 5c.

BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth, $1.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close references to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. H. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, THE; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 page. 25c.

DARWINS, THE (A Novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 31 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 624 page. 50c.

DAWS-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $3.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 10c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian religion has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and shoving how the last opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 380 pages. 40c. Postage, 5c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and George Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 25c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Ruth Dunbar Kelso. 419 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HILDA'S HOME. Ross Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one women's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 192 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socialand. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 37 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Voltaire, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Volney, and Voltaire. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry B. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mavdian. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREEZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

KORADINE. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1892, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III. (1890). Cloth, $1.25. Postage, 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 30c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Variables; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 10c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 25c.

PRUDENTIAL CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, E. H. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelievers or disorganized religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretations; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. By E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $3.50; all in one volume, $3.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 50c.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 50c.

TALES ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Mariette), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 307 pages. 25c.

THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Witches and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 181 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as we have freed themselves from mediæval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and asceticm; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper cover; 91 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 10c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 10c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 10c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. E. H. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon edumcation. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1723, quoted by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuit craft and is a plain index to the underhand working of that order against the welfare of individuals and society. 15c.

THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 10c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Telepathy (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Wilms). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $1.25.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Darling. 15c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW; a Primer of Sexual Rationalism, Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of circling arms of babes." Paper covers; 43 large pages. 15c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 1, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor; a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo. 172 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VII., No. 8. CHICAGO ILLINOIS, MARCH 4, E. M. 303. [C. E. 1903.] WHOLE No. 959

Entre Nous.

Men cherish kings and other things
They have no earthly need for;
They think it nice to pay the price;
'Tis red tape that they bleed for.

Most men are fools, and many schools
Of learning help them stay so;
A little sense would save expense,
But don't you dare to say so!

—Lucien V. Rule, in The Comrade.

Jealousy and Violent Theorizing.

The place in animal evolution of sexual jealousy is called in question by Mr. Adolf G. Vogeler, in No. 956, as if it were a new theory. Yet Darwin's statement of it ("Origin of Species," Chapter IV., Natural Selection), has never been refuted, and I believe never controverted.

According to this accepted theory, the males who were willing and able to fight and overcome their rivals, that is, the jealously pugnacious, were most successful in leaving numerous offspring; and thus through countless generations in each successive type, from fishes and even lower animals up to anthropoid apes, the heredity of jealousy has been handed on.

Those apes who are man's nearest animal relations are found with fully developed family life, including the husband ape, equipped with jealousy to defend his marital position; therefore, presumably man's ape-like ancestors had also developed the family. (See Darwin's "Descent of Man" Chapter XX.)

Now, if we accept the views of Bachofen, McLennan, Lubbock and Morgan, whose theories on early man Engels adopted, and who were generally accredited at the time Engels wrote, in 1894, we have to believe that at this stage, when man developed from his ape-like ancestors, the powerful instinct of jealousy was temporarily so much in abeyance, and also family life so entirely discontinued and superseded as to permit of a period of tribal promiscuity, though both jealousy and the family are found universal later on.

The more credible theory is that of Sir Henry Maine, and many more recent sociologists, that the family was the original unit of society, that the tribe developed as an agglomeration of families, and that there never was a time of general tribal promiscuity.

Of course we must all admit with Darwin that "the manner of development of the marriage tie is an obscure subject"; but it is certainly no violent assumption that marriage is fundamentally connected with jealousy.

Thus I must be exonerated from the charge of "violent theorizing." And I would like to pass that charge on to our friend "Lucy Redheffer" (or "Lucifer reader," is it? or "Lucifer fed her"?), who states the heifer view of woman's position—but I read "he" in the signature, in spite of its feminine form.

Few movements for emancipation, perhaps none, have ever been so powerfully forwarded by members of the enslaved class themselves as that for the emancipation of women. And who ever knew a progressive woman who did not enjoy the friendship of many noble-minded men? As to the less than commonplace man who exercises his not very refined wit on the creature of his imagination whom he supposes he should name "the new woman," he will, judging by his present position, only be remembered in less than a century as a somewhat pathetic joke.

The concessions made to women in the last half century, and always being extended, are too numerous to describe. The right to education, to paid work, the right of married women to own property, to be the guardians of their own children, the right of political franchises, all these, and more, in America and in British countries are due to the generosity of intelligent men, but certainly most due to the initial demands of women. Does Mr. Redheffer doubt that women will obtain the right to her own person as she has obtained the right to think, work and vote? What place in his imaginative history does he give to the increasing demand for divorce, in which both the friends and the enemies of bond-marriage alike see a loosening of the bonds? He ought to know that thousands of the best men and women in civilized countries hold with John Stuart Mill that "The law of servitude in marriage is a monstrous contradiction of all the principles of the modern world and to all the experience through which those principles have been slowly and painfully worked out."

DORA FORSTER.

A Fable.

A Hermit lived in the forest, and the animals were not afraid of him. He and the wild animals used to talk together and they understood one another. Once the Hermit lay down under a tree, and a Raven, a Dove, a Stag and a Snake came to the same place to sleep. The animals began to reason why evil should exist in the world.

The Raven said: "It is all owing to hunger that there is evil in the world. When we have as much as we wish to eat, we sit ourselves on the bough and caw, and everything is good and gay and we are in every respect well off; but some other day we are famished and everything is quite the opposite, so that we can can see the brightness in God's world and we feel full of unrest; we fly about from place to place, and there is no rest for us. And even if we see some meat afar off, then it becomes still worse, for if we fly down to get it, either sticks and stones are thrown at us or wolves and dogs chase us, and we are absolutely destroyed. How much trouble comes upon us from hunger! All evil is caused by it."

The Dove said: "In my opinion, evil does not arise from hunger, but it all comes from love. If we only lived alone we should have little trouble. Wretchedness shared makes one doubly wretched, and so we always live in pairs. And if we love our mates there is no peace for us at all. We are always thinking 'Has she had enough to eat?' 'Is she warm?' And when our mate is away from us anywhere then we are wholly lost; we cannot help worrying all the time, 'If only the hawk does not carry her off, or men make away with her.' And we ourselves fly off in pursuit of her, and perhaps find the poor thing either in the hawk's claws or in the snare. And if our mate is lost, then there is no more comfort for us. We cannot eat, we cannot drink; we can only fly about and mourn. How many of us have perished in this way! No; evil comes not from hunger, but from love."

The Snake said: "No; evil arises neither from hunger nor from love, but from ill-temper. If we lived peacefully we should not do so much harm; everything would be delightful for us. But now if anything is done to us we fall into a rage, and then there is nothing gentle about us; we only think how we can avenge the wrong on some one. We lose control of ourselves and hiss, and try to bite some one. We would not have pity on any one; we would bite our own father and mother! It seems as if we would eat our own selves. The moment we begin to lose our temper we are undone. All the evil in the world arises from ill-temper."

The Stag said: "No; not from ill-temper, and not from love, and not from hunger arises all the evil that is in the world, but evil arises from fear. If it were possible for us to live without fear, all would be well with us. We are swift-footed and have great strength. With our antlers we can defend ourselves from little animals, and we can run from the large ones. But it is impossible to escape fear. If it is only the twigs creaking in the forest, or the leaves rustling, we are all of a tremble with fear, our heart beats, we instinctively start to run, and fly with all our might. Another time a hare runs by or a bird flutters or a dry twig crackles, and we think it is a wild beast, and in running away we really run into danger. And again, we are running from a dog and we come upon a man. Oftentimes we are frightened and start to flee, we don't know whither, and we fall over a precipice and perish. And we have to sleep with one eye open, with one ear alert, and we are always in alarm. There is no peace. All evil comes from fear."

Then the Hermit said: "Not from hunger, not from love, nor from ill-temper, nor fear comes all our troubles; but all the evil that is in the world is due to our different natures. Hence come hunger, love, ill temper and fear."

—After Leo Tolstoi, by R. Goodheart.

All By Request.

What I have to say in reply to J. L. hicks' inquiries about Anarchistic education, will be altogether from personal observation and experience. I was not what I now call an Anarchist, even when the youngest of my children was born. But I was moving in that direction. I was an Individualist, who believed in "restraint for the prevention of invasion alone," and was gradually getting on to the idea that the distinction between that and government is not definable. My eldest child is the only one (of three) whom I ever "corrected," ever compelled to learn a lesson, or ever "restrained" from anything not actually suicidal. And all I regret is that that one was not brought up exactly like the others. But I see no reason to regret the result with any of them: and, what is more, other people see none either. The world and his wife used to be perfectly agreed that my principles would spoil any other children. But they have got through referring to mine by way of illustration. It must by no means be inferred that I left my children to get their education as they could. Two maxims determined my conduct, both of which entirely reverse the world's and his wife's. The world and wife are, or were not long since, decided that a child owed everything to those who had given it existence. My first maxim is that those who take the responsibility of giving life to a child owe everything to it. And the other is like thereunto—instead of making the child study you—as do all the world and his wife—you should study the child. You have there an original, an unique, a new character, genius, mission, which it is your business, and should be your pleasure and instruction, to aid in normally developing. This only is education—educo, to bring forth, or, in modern phrase, evolve. To restrain is not to educate. There are some rare cases in which it may be necessary; but as a matter of system, it should be left to Flathead Indians, Chinese duennas and manufacturers of monsters for mendicancy. It is not evolving but disfiguring, to set up a lifeless model, and force a living growing organism into the likeness of this dead idol. Perhaps I show my Scotch descent again, by failing to see that J. L. Hicks was only poking fun at Sadie Magoon when he inquired how she proposed to restrain without punishing. If so, my obtuseness needs an apology for intruding on his wit. Herbert Spencer shows very well, in the passage cited from his Education, that the restraining instinct is the tyrannical instinct—the mischievous element in government. It is natural and proper that superior information, experience, etc., should guide. No man, said Socrates, disputes the authority of a doctor in sickness, or a captain at sea. It is true he was not acquainted with anti-vaccinators. But had they existed then, he could have added a simple amendment—"or, if any one thinks he can do better than the doctor, why, in the absence of restrainment—he may try."

Much of Lucifer's space may perhaps be saved by inviting Tom Swinburn to ask himself how railroads have been constructed and are kept up and "run," across the continent of Europe, which is divided among several jealous and unfriendly governments. If such things can be done in spite of many governments, why not in absence of any?

"To create a creator"—that indeed should be the end of propagating and teaching. It by no means follows that love of the sexes has no other end. But if so, then to realize both, love and propagation must be severed formally.

If Henry Smith reads the Bible, he knows St. Paul said "Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things." The sectarian spirit reverses this maxim, as it does the other (very numerous) good things in the Bible. In those from whom we differ, it exhorts us, if there be any sin, and if there be any shame, to think of that. And because its nature is to divide humanity into constantly diminishing aggregates of hostility, it becomes a carrion eater, finding (or making) filth wherever it turns its eyes. I do not like that way of contemplating human affairs so well as the one St. Paul recommended. It is too like the damned in Dante's "Malebolge"; who, though none of them could deny that he had hideous sores and deformities, could always boast of ability to make the other fellow's out uglier. Therefore I wont remind Henry that the black ravishers, and the negro-burners, and the Albany wife-beater and Whitecaps, and Grover the Gross, and Ted the Terrified, were all probably legitimate sons of Christian parents. They are "things to thank God on"—and to forget; however that was. But does he see nothing of good report in Voltairine's zeal to save poor foolish Helscher from the barbarous legal consequences of that degeneracy from which he was not preserved by the law, the gospel, the synagogue, or legitimacy? It would seem Mr. Smith does not see that. Poor devil!

Readers of Lucifer will remember that I have always counselled strongly against renewing those attempts at communistic life in a rural district whose abundant trial and failure during the forties may be read in Noyes' History of American Socialism. The city is the place for hopeful experiments in that direction—just because it is the place where you can have, not only "hot and cold water in the house, shopping in the department stores, and the theater," but Freedom. I hesitated to say anything, during the last year, which could operate to discourage our comrades at Home. But since James Haworth refers to them, he surely should remember they have been persecuted, as I always foresaw such a colony would be as soon as it obtained a particle of success. In Chicago, the very existence and location of a community, as such, would be unknown; and if any of the members attempted active propaganda, it is as individuals only they could get into trouble, while they would have all the advantage of community support.

Before begging any more for a little space to knock out my "Vindication of Anarchism," F. Cambersey is advised to wait until I get through setting it in. I dare say "Free Society" will give him a little space then; and I am quite sure I will not give him the amusement of a controversy before. My reason, familiar to the editor, and to readers of "Free Society" who have been such longer than since 1898, is that my "Vindication" has anticipated, and answered, every objection now known to me, which I strongly suspect includes all which can be made. Space would only be wasted in publishing before the "Vindication" appears, a criticism or a reply to a criticism, which begins by saying Anarchists reason from the assumption that man, if not governed, would be perfectly sinless. It is to be regretted Mr. Cambersey should be always telling Anarchists that. Because, of course, the Anarchists know he is mistaken.

When I can reply to critics without descending to the language of insult and abuse, I shall not call the other fellows asses, and then squeal at having the epithet neatly turned. When my style is respectful and tolerant of the honest opinions of others, I shall not say the whole medical profession, and the Census Bureau, are in a conspiracy to deceive the public. When I am less dogmatic, I will not appeal to statistics without having any; and, when less self-assertive, I will not practice medicine without a medical education. When I ask for no more space than is equitable and just to others, I will not think a square too much for a reply to three columns of personal inquiries. And then, it seems, my communications on any subject will be welcome. But then I never did any one of all those things, as it is. Does the editor perhaps know of any contributor who did?

C. L. James.

A College of Sex.

It may seem bold to predict that before many years there will be in this country a College of Sex. However, we shall have such an institution from necessity. On the question of sex our doctors have been a parcel of superstitious incompetents, and most of them are so still. They know nearly nothing worth knowing about sexual hygiene, in man or woman, never having discovered that sex is above all other things fundamental and requires study. A few old books, filled with gossip and guesses, comprised their information until very recently, when some real study began abroad and has made itself slightly felt here.

But the majority of doctors are as ignorant about it as ever and the public is all in the dark. Consequently we have every kind of abuse. We have the unlimited propagation of idiocy. England begins to fear that the entire nation will become tainted with insanity because the restraints on procreation are so small. A writer states that in 1884 the registered number of lunatics in England was 36,763; in 1884 it was 76,765; in 1901 it was 110,713. Lunacy is there prolific at the rate of 5,000 increase annually. They are asking how long it will be before all will be lunatics.

Habitual drunkards, consumptives, syphilitics, and all types of degenerates are also permitted to bring their kind freely into the world, to suffer themselves and injure all. Such acts should be regarded as crimes, and be prevented. Society has a right to say that incapables shall not be spawned upon it. In a comparatively short time by strictness in this regard these types could be removed from the human breed, and be replaced by healthy individuals.

It will undoubtedly come to this, that if persons in this condition do not voluntarily abstain from giving life to children whom they are certain to curse with their blight, they will be forced by society to do so, even if it requires life confinement or solation to a certain degree to accomplish it. Lunatics are of course incapable of self-control, and here all tainted persons should be strictly prevented. Consumptives shorten their lives nculxbe tsiyncourse, which requires physical vigor that it may be performed without injury. If the preventive checks were taught to all so that those who ought not to have children might still have a proper degree of sexual life, a long step would be taken toward solving the problem of badly-born children. Women would protect themselves if they knew how and were taught that they should do so. This is one of the questions to be carefully considered by a sex college.

Another is, How much sexual intercourse should people indulge? There is the most fantastic uncertainty about this, the books, medical and pseudo-medical—and in fact they are about all pseudo—guess all sorts of guesses. Some say, only when children are wanted. Others declare that all sexual communion is a positive loss to the physical vitality, and that it shortens life. Still others reply that it is a necessity of the normal being, it should be regularly performed, and it lengthens life.

Who can tell us? Who has ever made a scientific, an intelligent study of it? It would require large data, and sometimes difficult to obtain. Nevertheless even the ordinary doctor's books are overloaded with relevant material, and it could be multiplied if the doctors were trained.

Look at the sexual quacks who batten on the ignorant because the sufferers do not know where to find the wise.

Into these and a multitude of related subjects a college of sex would make a deep and patient investigation, giving the sexual phenomena a place of at least as much importance in the world as a pain in the stomach. The neglect of this field will be considered by our descendants as one of our many titles to shame. We shall be dead, however, and only the suffering we have caused will live after us.

Morrison I. Swift.

William E. Curtis continues to collect curious epitaphs. Among the number which a friend sent him is the following, which the friend found in a churchyard near Plymouth:

Here lies a poor woman
Who always was tired;
Who lived in a house
Where help was not hired,
Her last words on earth were:
"Dear friends, I am going
Where washing ain't done,
Nor sweeping, nor sewing;
But everything there is
Exact to my wishes,
For when they don't eat
There's no washing the dishes.
I'll be where loud anthems
Will always be ringing;
But, having no voice,
I'll get clear of the singing.
Don't mourn for me now,
Don't mourn for me never;
I'm going to do nothing
For ever and ever.

—Troy Press.

Clubbing With the Arena.

For many years "The Arena" and Lucifer were sent to subscribers for the clubbing rate of five dollars, or the price of the "Arena" alone. Now they are offered for two dollars and fifty cents—the yearly price of the "Arena" alone. All who remember the place in journalism held by the "Arena" under the editorship of B. O. Flower, will be glad to know that he once more holds a chief place on its editorial staff, and that with him are associated Charles Brodie Patterson and John Emery McLean, both well known as leaders of advanced thought.

The March "Arena" contains many inviting articles, such as "The Passing of Church Influence," by Duane Mowry; "Law and Human Progress," by Chief Justice Walter Clark; "Giuseppe Mazzina," by B. O. Flower; "The Initiative and Referendum," by W. S. U'Ren; "Rights of Children," by Carrie L. Grout; "Topics of the Times" (editorial), B. O. Flower, etc.

There is only one thing worse than the desire to command, and that is the will to obey.—Professor Clifford.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Brief Mention.

Prominent among the articles that make this week's Lucifer an exceptionally good one is 'A College of Sex," by Morrison Swift. How many thinkers have yet discovered that "sex is above all other things fundamental and requires study"? We have millions of money spent yearly on colleges that teach science and art, but none to teach how to be well born, by a proper understanding of the uses, the forces of sex.

Another very interesting article is that of Dora Forster in reply to Adolf G. Vogeler and Lucy Redheffer. Dora is too keen-sighted to be imposed upon by masculine wit at the expense of the "new woman"—which of course means the TRUE woman.

C. L. James is sui generis—none like him—as he says of himself. His article for this week was in type and the proof not seen by me until too late for comment. Next week, the weather clerk and other overruling powers permitting, a few of his points will receive attention. M. H.

The following paragraphs from a letter written by James F. Morton, of Home, Wash., will be of interest to Lucifer's readers. We congratulate our friends on the revival of their paper, and heartily wish them success. It is to be hoped that there will be enough calls for Mr. Morton to enable him to make an eastern trip in the near future. He is a logical, forceful, earnest, and convincing speaker.

"Please announce in Lucifer that 'The Demonstrator,' as a successor to 'Discontent,' will appear regularly as a weekly paper, containing the news of Home, and discussion of social questions. The first issue will be out March 4. Kindly request any former subscribers to "Discontent" to send immediate notice of any change of address.

I should make an eastern visit this summer, if I could find any way of meeting the expenses of the trip. There are many important reasons which make me wish to see Boston, New York and Chicago again, at as early an opportunity as possible. I like the Pacific Coast as a place of residence, but am anxious to revisit the east before long.

A Question of Veracity.

Under date February 21, 1903, the "Truth Seeker," New York City, prints the following on its editorial page, first column:

"Mr. Moses Harman says that Colonel Ingersoll was once asked why he did not speak for 'the workers, for the ill-paid toilers, the wage-slaves, in field, factory, mine, and mill,' his answer was that 'the average wage worker deserves all the ill-treatment he gets,' and that 'for the most part the wage-earners are willing slaves, ignorant and stupid, not worth saving.'

Mr. Harman does not say where or when Colonel Ingersoll said this, and that he ever said it, or used any language which can fairly be construed to mean it, we do not believe. In 1881, in his lay sermon before the Secular Union Congress in Chickering hall, this city, he said: 'There is something wrong in a government where those who do the most have the least. There is something wrong when honesty wears a rag and rascality a robe. I cannot do much, but I can at least sympathize with those who suffer. . . . Great wealth is the mother of crime. On the other hand are the abject poor. And let me ask tonight: Is the world to forever remain as it was when Lear made his prayer? Is it ever to remain as it is now? I hope not. Are there always to be millions whose lips are white with famine? Is the withered palm to be always extended, imploring from the heart of respectable charity, alms? . . . My sympathies are with the poor. My sympathies are with the workingmen of the United States. . . . "But," some say, "those workingmen are dangerous." I deny it. We are all in their power. They run all the cars. Our lives are in their hands almost every day. They are working in all our homes. They do the labor of this world. We are all at their mercy, and yet they do not commit more crimes, according to their number, than the rich. Remember that. . . . While I live I am going to do what little I can to help my fellow-men who have not been as fortunate as I have been. I shall talk on their side. I shall vote on their side. . . . I shall do what I can to hasten the day when this land shall be covered with homes, and when by countless firesides shall sit the happy and loving families of the world.'

"Colonel Ingersoll believed that no man should own land who did not use it, and he believed that if the workingmen could be home owners they would be better off and more independent. He was not an Anarchist, nor a Socialist, nor a Communist, but an Individualist. He wanted every workingman to own a home, and he thought such homes should be exempt from taxation, so that they could not be lost. That he ever thought or said that the wage-earner is so stupid that he is not worth saving we do not believe. It is up to Mr. Harman to prove what he writes.

REPLY.

Once upon a time a certain American showman became so famous that foreigners were in the habit of addressing him simply as "Barnum, United States of America"—the inference being that everybody in the United States was supposed to know in what particular city or town he was to be found at any given time. Such is the legend.

Until seeing the editorial just quoted I was not aware that, in fame, I am a second Barnum! Nor that it is a matter of any particular concern to the friends and admirers of the late Robert G. Ingersoll whether the individual known in mortal life as Moses Harman speaks well or ill of the great Agnostic orator.

Since, however, my opinions and statements are considered of sufficient importance to cause a column of the presumably valuable space of the "Truth Seeker" to be devoted to refuting a brief statement of mine in regard to certain alleged utterances of Robert G. Ingersoll, I will try to explain and defend my act, premising, to begin, that it would have been much more satisfactory and, as I think, more manly, to come out from behind the breastworks and tell me plainly who my accuser is. The editorial "we," the impersonal we, may mean much or little. It would mean more if the paper would give the name of its responsible editor. The "Truth Seeker" was founded by D. M. Bennett, a man whose moral courage did not fail him when threatened by the agents of the American Inquisition. Why should his successors hide their identity behind a "company," or behind that company's agent? Would not the name of the responsible editor, or at least the name of each individual writer, be more in accord with the gospel of Individualism, to the defense of which gospel, or cult, the "Truth Seeker" seems to be mainly devoted?

But whoever the writer of that particular editorial may be—whether man, woman or child—the challenge to furnish the proof of what I said in a recent Lucifer shall not go unheeded. On seeing the "Truth Seeker's" challenge, I wrote to a well known labor leader of this city, inclosing a copy of the article complained of, and this is his reply:

"In the fall of 1887, District Assembly 49, Knights of Labor, New York City, appointed a committee and authorized it to organize a delegation of representative men to go to Illinois and intercede with its governor for the lives of the condemned Anarchists. Two members of the committee waited on the Colonel and requested that he be one of the delegation. We went all over the situation and, as the conference was about to close, he turned to me and asked several pointed questions. I answered frankly. He then laid his hand on my shoulder and said: 'Quinn, the workingman may be worth living and dying for a couple of million years from now, but the dirty —— —— are not worth it today.' It was said by way of advice to me, as for some time I was considered too rash, and he feared I should get into trouble.

"During President Cleveland's first administration I was on a committee to organize a public demonstration at Cooper Institute, to protest against the enactment of the Russian-American extradition treaty, and called upon the Colonel with a view of having him address the audience. We went into the matter and in the course of the conversation he said with his usual frankness to me: 'If I can drive a dagger into the heart of that old whore, the church, I shall have contributed my share to the liberty of men.'

"This was his exact language as near as I can recall.

"Fraternally yours, T. P. QUINN.

"Chicago, Ill., Feb. 23, '03."

If our readers will compare what I said, not a partial extract from same, in No. 956, with the language of Col. Ingersoll himself, as reported by one of the committee appointed to wait upon him to solicit his powerful influence in behalf of the condemned champions of the Chicago workingmen, they will see that I was much within bounds. While in that statement I professed only to give the substance of what the great orator was reported to have said, I really made the report much milder and far less harsh and offensive than the original utterance appears to have been.

It is easy, as we all know, to state a half-truth in such a way as to make it equivalent to a whole falsehood. Is not this a case of this kind? If the "Truth Seeker"—the man or the woman behind the pen—had reproduced as much of my editorial as I have done of his, his readers would have seen that I said much more in the great Agnostic's favor than I did in his reprobation. In this regard the "Truth Seeker" seems to follow the lines of policy adopted by the great partisan dailies. All the good concerning its own heroes and policies must be told and all the unfavorable facts denied or concealed.

For myself, I have no heroes to worship and no policies, as such, to defend. I try to speak the truth in regard to men and things, living or dead, without fear or favor, whenever I think it necessary to speak at all.

I have little use for the old Latin maxim, De mortuis nil nisi bonum—"say nothing of the dead except good." To me this is too near akin to Asiatic ancestor worship to be useful to the living or honorable, even, to the dead. The best use we can make of the departed is to study their lives in the light of truth and reason, avoiding their failures, their voices, their crimes, and emulating as far as possible their successes, their virtues, their goodness and greatness. To do this their frailties must be known, their mistakes, their vices and crimes, as well as their merits, their virtues, their excellencies.

Wonderful man as he was, Robert G. Ingersoll was no saint; did not profess to be such. He was philosopher enough to know that he was just as good and as bad, as high and as low, as wise and as foolish, as small and as great, as his heredity and his environment permitted him to be, and hence both praise and blame should be eliminated from the equation.

When we remember that he was a lawyer by occupation and a politician by training and inclination—a politician with abilities and prospects of the very highest—the wonder is not that he was inconstant, illogical, inconsistent and fallible, but rather that he made as few mistakes as he did; the wonder is that the man was not completely sunk in the lawyer and the politician—as is so generally the case under like temptations.

* * *

To sum up this question of veracity in few words: I have not sought controversy with the people, the "we," who now conduct the "Truth Seeker"—have never sought controversy with them or with any other of my contemporaries. As a journalist it is my business to tell the truth, as before said, in regard to man and his work—using man in the generic sense,—"extenuating nothing and setting nothing down in malice."

Robert Greene Ingersoll was eminently a public character. As a lecturer and writer for the public he had few equals. As a man, as an orator and as a writer he belongs to the public and is therefore a legitimate subject of criticism. His private life was not called in question by myself or Mr. Quinn, but rather his attitude towards one of the most vital of the public questions of the day and age. I had heard the story often, and knowing the history of Col. Ingersoll's connection with the Republican party I did not doubt its substantial truth, and therefore considered myself quite justified in using this episode in the way I did—to illustrate what I had reason to believe the evolution of this great man's mind and character.

Once more only: I look upon the memory of Robert G. Ingersoll as that of a brother, a brother beloved, a brother engaged in similar work to my own, and having a common aim. His specialty was the overthrow of ecclesiasticism; he doubtless believed it best to concentrate his forces upon that alone. Only in his last appearance before the public did he declare himself unequivocally in favor of free motherhood and self-ownership of woman, the most important of all reforms. While still in the vigor of manhood his attacks of apoplexy had probably warned him that it was time for him to come out plainly and tell what he believed to be the "solution of the whole matter." This declaration makes his memory doubly dear to me.

Yes, Robert G. Ingersoll was—is—my brother, my younger brother. In life he was two years my junior. At one of his later public appearances in Chicago I had the pleasure of taking him by the hand, having been introduced to him and his wife—my daughter and myself—by Captain Robert C. Adams. Now he is gone, while I still linger on the shores of mortality, and if when I shall have followed him those who remain behind shall treat my memory as kindly and tenderly and yet as justly and truthfully as I have tried to treat that of Robert Green Ingersoll I shall have no cause for complaint on that score. Emerson says, "A simple, manly character need never make an apology." I certainly have none to make in this instance.

M. HARMAN.

Mary Wollstonecraft.

I hope you will devote a number of Lucifer, in April, to Mary Wollstonecraft. The "Truth Seeker" has for years had a Paine number; the "Freethought Magazine" an Elizabeth Cady Stanton number. Flora Fox is right in requesting consideration of the claims of the author of the "Rights of Woman."

It was at my request that the address on Mary Wollstonecraft was delivered by Voltairine de Cleyre in Chicago, 1893, and it was a success; likewise the lecture by T. B. Wakeman on the same subject in 1896.

Since then nothing has been done to throw light upon the work of this marvelous woman.

I find the best work in any cause is done by volunteers; so I hope the liberal women will sharpen their pencils and get their thinkers to work, and send their contributions in as soon as possible.

I am fortunate in having almost a complete collection of the writings of this famous woman, and am surprised that so little is known about her writings even among the liberals.

In every orthodox home you will find portraits of saints upon the walls of their rooms and I think in this artistic age the spirit of refinement should exist in the homes of the radicals, by having the best portraits of their reformers framed and hung in their studies.

Like Thomas Paine Mary Wollstonecraft has been maligned and misrepresented. Wampole called her a hyena in petticoats, and even worse names have been applied to her.

She and Thomas Paine lived in Paris during the Reign of Terror and I have very fine portraits of both painted at the time, of which I can have duplicates (with autographs) taken for those who want them. Mary Wollstonecraft's portrait is by Opie; Thomas Paine's by Daboz. Mounted. 15 cents each.

I intend to make a pilgrimage to the places made historic by Paine—White Plains where he wrote his "Crisis"; Bordentown where he lived and made the models of his bridge; Rocky Hill where he was entertained by General Washington; New Rochelle where he was buried in 1809.

I hope the writers will take up the different works of Mary Wollstonecraft, or the several phases of her life, so that we can have a general idea of her work.

Special numbers are a success when devoted to a special object. If Washington why not Wollstonecraft?

Enclosed is the almighty dollar, so that I may have the light of Lucifer another year. JAMES B. ELLIOTT.

3515 Wallace St., Philadelphia, Pa.

VARIOUS VOICES.

A Subscriber, So. Dak.:—J. L. Hicks in No. 957 calls for more light upon the subject of child raising. Here are a few suggestions: Let child raising be recognized as a business by itself, conducted by experts, as Charlotte Perkins Stetson puts it in her book, "Woman and Economics." Here is the plan: As soon as the period of lactation is past, place the child in a kindergarten boarding school where it is kept and cared for day and night, giving it the advantages of child society and expert care and training away ahead of what parents are able to do, from lack of knowledge and experience in baby raising. From the time the child is able to work the earth, to plant a seed and cultivate the growing plant to maturity, it is kept busy at work, study and play; given the results of its labor and educated to buy its own clothes and other necessaries, as well as to save and invest, and lay plans for after maturity.

Now comes the critic and says: "All very well, but this costs money. None but the rich could adopt this plan."

The fact is, this is far cheaper than the present plan of child rearing, provided woman's labor is recognized as of value. Figure this out for yourselves. Lucifer's space is precious, and this is enough.

Hortense M. Phelps, Lily Dale, N. Y.:—Brother Hicks thinks an exchange of ideas concerning the training of children would be good. I think children should be merely held in check. Have quite loose reins, but keep an eye on them constantly, so they will not get hurt or hurt others. I raised two boys and two girls. I trained them to be self-dependent while young, and all have done well for themselves. I never suggested to them the idea that I thought it possible they would tell me an untruth. They had my confidence and love.

A. J. Merakergaard, Sioux Falls, S. D.:—It is very sad that such a bright and noble woman as Ida Craddock was forced to die by her own hand, but the cause of her tragic death will open the eyes of thousands of ignorant people. She wrote to me from enver a pathetic letter, in which she said it was her mission to spread light on the sex life of men and women who groped in darkness. A young and loving woman confides in her sweetheart, a man in the prime of life, of whom she knows only that he loves her. Imagine her grief and horror when she finds, alas! too late, that she has married a man lower than a beast. No wonder that a noble woman like Ida Craddock gave her life to save her sisters from such a horrible fate. Her memory will glow like a star on a dark night for the coming generations in all parts of the world.

Mrs. Lucina Pool, Swanton, O.:—Enclosed find $3—one for Lucifer, one for Abner Pope, and one for "Love's Coming of Age." Years ago I received a letter from Brother Pope stating that he would pass through Swanton on a certain day, but I did not see him and I have never heard from him since till I read in Lucifer that he is at Home, Washington. I will be 86 years of age next July.

Walter Breen, Omaha, Neb.:—I sent a small donation to Brother Hope when I saw your article in Lucifer on January 29. The future workings of this interesting colony at Home will be watched by all radicals. If we had one hundred colonies, even if they were theocracies like the Oneida Community, we would have more independent thinking than we have at present.

Miss M. M., Mich.—I am interested along this line, and from what I have read of your marriage theory it strikes me as the only sensible solution. I have taught in the public schools of Michigan for about ten years and have had abundant chances to judge of the present system of slavery in marriage. I am thankful I haven't experimented with it.

Miss M. S. J., Skowhegan, Me.:—I am very much interested in my first copy of Lucifer, received to-day. Find herewith an order for books and $2 pay for the same. The thought is comparatively new to me, and I want to get all the light on it that I can. If you have any back numbers of Lucifer you send free, I would be pleased to receive them.

J. L. Hicks, Abilene, Tex.—Clarence Darrow's "Resist Not Evil," which I ordered of you some time back, came all right. I have read it, and can hardly express my admiration of the sense and spirit evinced by the author. He puts the non invasive, non-resistant doctrine of Jesus on a common-sense, rational basis.

Elisha Crawford, Orchard, Iowa:—I am growing old and am almost unable to see to read, but wish the good work to go on. Inclosed find $1 to renew my subscription to Lucifer.

The Chicago Society of Anthropology

Meets every Sunday at 3:30 P. M., Hall 913, Masonic Temple. Seats and discussions free. On March 8 Tolstoy will be the subject and Dr. E. A. Fischkin the opening speaker.

The Chicago Philosophical Society

Meets at 72 Adams St., Sundays at 8 P. M. Seats and discussion free. On March 8 William Francis Barnard will deliver the opening address.

As many customs deemed right by our ancestors seem detestable to us, so many customs which we think proper our more civilized descendants may regard with aversion.—Spencer.

A Private Maternity Home

Or Lying-in Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired.

For particulars and terms give description of case, and address.

Suite 63-179 LaSalle St., Chicago Ill. C. S. WOOD, M. D.

Agents Wanted To sell the Toltoo Dandruff Cure and the Toltoo Hair Dressing (restores natural color). Are clean as Lucifer. Liberal commission. Write for circulars. Address:
The Toltoo Remedies Co., BOX 1207 Denver Colo.

REMOVAL NOTICE.

Facilities for properly conducting my ever increasing Mail-Order Department being inadequate in Denver I have permanently located in this suburb of Chicago, and trust my many friends and patrons will continue to favor me with their many kind orders.

Send for prices of Watches, Diamonds, Opals, Silver, Plated and Optical goods, Music boxes, Jewelery, Chains, Clocks, Freethought and other badges, Ingersoll spoons, and my tract—"Theism in the Crucible"—free. OTTO WETTSTEIN.
La Grange, Illinois.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer the Light Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Slavery of Our Times.

With Portrait of the Gifted Author, and Introduction by the Translator, Aylmer Maude.

CHAPTER TITLES,

I., Goods Porters Who Work Thirty-Seven Hours; II., Society's Indifference While Men Perish; III., Justification of the Existing Position of Sciences; IV., The Assertion of Economic Science that Rural Laborers Must Enter the Factory System; V. Why Learned Economists Assert what is False; VI., Bankruptcy of th Socialist Ideal; VII., Culture or Freedom? VIII., Slavery Exists Among Us: IX., What is Slavery? X., Laws Concerning Taxes, Land and Property; XI., Laws the Cause of Slavery; XII., The Essence of Legislation Is Organized Violence; XIII., What Are Governments? Is It Possible to Exist Without Governments? XIV., How Can Governments Be Abolished? XV., What Should Each Man Do? An Afterword.

Well printed on heavy paper. Substantially bound, 186 pages. Price, 65 cents.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only." Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spolling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem, Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization. The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 10c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

VACCINATION A CRIME.

With Comments on Other Sanitary Superstitions.

BY FELIX L. OSWALD, M. D.

"Vaccination spreads diseases; vaccination impairs the organic functions; vaccination encourages reliance on worthless remedies; vaccination spreads small-pox; compulsory vaccination furnishes dangerous legal precedents."

With illustrations of diseases frequently resulting from vaccination. 100 pages. Price 10 cents. For sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

MENTAL SCIENCE AS A GUIDE TO HEALTH, HAPPINESS, AND BUSINESS SUCCESS.

BY ALBERT CHAVANNES.

Chapter Contents: What is Mental Science? What will it do for us? Happiness; Character; Intellectual Character; Physical Character; Heredity and Health; Mind Cures; Business Success; The Law of Circumstances; Individuals; Marriage; Parents and Children Political Organization; Politics; Economy. Communism and Co-operation, Colonization and Organization.

Address Albert Chavannes, 308 Fourth Ave. Knoxville, Tenn. Price 50 cents. Stamps taken in payment.

959.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

Trial Trip Subscriptions.

For one dollar we will send Lucifer ten weeks to eight different addresses, and to the one sending us the list, any one of the following books:

The Origin of the Family, Private Property and the State. By Frederick Engels, 217 pages, handsomely bound in cloth. Postage, 6 cents.

The Slavery of Our Times. By Leo Tolstoi. With portrait of author, 186 pages. Blue cloth; silver lettering. Postage 8 cents.

Nora: A Doll's House, and Ghosts. The two dramas bound together. Olive cloth; red lettering. 108 pages. Postage 8 cents. This offer will, we hope, induce our friends to extend Lucifer's circulation materially.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author.

The Sex Passion.
Man, the Ungrown.
Woman, the Serf.
Woman in Freedom
Marriage: a Retrospect.
Marriage: a Forecast.
The Free Society.
Some remarks on the early star and sex worships.
Notes—On the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population.

The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. Price, $1.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with its articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 75c; paper 15c.

ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and surest methods do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express prepaid to any address, for $2.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strasburg Geese (C. W. Coolidge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A Degnovitary dissertation on the right to new Invasive self-hood. 5c.

BALEAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth, $1.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commanded, Defended and Exhibited by the Bible, and giving close references to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. H. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, THE; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Symes. 176 pages. 25c.

DARWIN, THE. (A Novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 31 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 426 pages. 50c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 60c.

DIGGING FOR RED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Healthy Offspring; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Scientific Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 4-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $5.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 50c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian religion has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 350 pages. Postage, 5c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and George Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 25c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 319 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 60c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James A.Skinner. 250 pages. Paper, 40c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Scotoland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 27 Freethinkers, including Byron, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Volney, and Voltaire. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry B. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

KORADINE. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III. (1890). Cloth, $1.50. Postage, 15c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 418 pages. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 30c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Variations; The New Woman: What to she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Repression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Fruitful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust; Vicious Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Trinitarian Ideas, by E. Walker; Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory), R. B. Kerr, and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelievers or disorganized religionists. The necessity of separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 60c; paper, 30c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 15c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Spunnie, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. R. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $1. Five volumes, plainer binding, $1.50 all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of seruleau tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and text. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and text. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are hand painted in water colors. Cursory sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Cursory sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Very handsome gift book. 50c. brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 50c. brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 50c.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Mariatan), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 327 pages. 25c.

THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Witches and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 351 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and asceticism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 32 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 10c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present shameful and vitiating management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1723, quoted by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuit craft and is a plain index to the underhand working of that order against the welfare of individuals and society. 15c.

THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 25c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Telegt Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Winne). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 25c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $1.25.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 35c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Darling. 15c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 8, 1890. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and to no small extent is now a class of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo. 172 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VII., No. 9. CHICAGO ILLINOIS. MARCH 12, E. M. 303. [C. E. 1903.] WHOLE No. 960

Child Labor.

Amid the ruins of empire o'er the seas
Still stand the ancient Caryatides
With stern brows fixed: unflinchingly they gaze
On modern man and his degenerate ways;
On shipping ports where ships pass to and fro,
On railroads' blackened lines—the whirlwind show
Our boasted, bloated progress makes; our loss
Of sculptured art and beauty, as the course
Of empire westward takes its lurid way
And clouds the landscape with its smoky day.

The centuries pass. In later days than these
What mean these ghastly Caryatides?
What people wrote their crimes in savage art,
That fashioned mills and factories for the part
Their baser instincts played? New races gaze
On all the ruined horrors of our days;
They see our toppling roofs of commerce rest
On little children's shoulders that are pressed
Most cruelly down, until all out of shape
They crouch and cower—miserably to ape
The marble Caryatides of old!

What men were they who wrought their foul designs—
Their tower of "business profits"—on the lines
Of tender children's bodies? God! How old
The babies look! Dehumanized and cold
They seem, as with a hardness worse than stone
They stare into our eyes! Without a moan
They hide their grief from our strange adult eyes;
They lift their tearless faces to the skies—
Their baby forms to adamant are turned!

Ye coming race of men! When ye have learned
What all our boasted "progress" means, then tell
Our shame forever! Our commercial hell
Paint ye in devils' hues—our gilded ease
On starving children built—crushed to their knees!
Let sculptors tell our shame in bronze and stone,
To warn men of the crimes the race must own!
Build high our monument between the seas!
A pile of golden wealth—the child below;
Its puny arms outstretched—its eyes of woe—
This toiling child—our Caryatides!

—Caroline Pemberton, in The Conservator.

Personal.

To my friends of the Lucifer family I wish to say I have changed my residence to 378 E. 60 St., (Plaisance Bldg.,) Chicago. I shall be glad to see my friends at any time. I am also open for lecture engagements on any of the reforms of the day or to officiate at funerals. Address as above.

JULIET H. SEVERANCE, M. D.

Parry and Thrust.

Truth is unashamed.

Right will yet be might.

Liberty is the breath of life.

Custom crowns bad and good.

The general strike is a hard blow.

Truth choked speaks louder than ever.

Take: To the weak naught will be given.

Law-ordered love is a pruned and subdued tree.

Condemnation of sex is not purity, but impurity.

The worship of institutions is the abdication of self.

Divorce is permitted by law as a refuge from law's injustice.

Government by injunction is the real thing, revealing the State.

Disorder, if it lasts long enough, gets the reputation of being order.

The free love ideal is an opening wedge of Anarchism. Free love; then free life.

Love is a flower that does not thrive vigorously in the baneful soil of hate.

The tragedy of foolishness is that the fools have not wisdom enough to know themselves.

Under the warm sun of freedom the tree of life will bear blossom and ripe fruit of love.

Sex slavery is one of the corner stones of "morality." Man must even question man's morality.

Arbitration is a farce if one of the arbitrators is chained down while a scourge is held above him.

Justice according to law, is merely injustice disguised. Its real name is action according to precedent.

Anti-Anarchy is a principle which, being interpreted, means anti-pathy to all attempts toward anti-monopoly.

Considering all sides of the Negro problem, there seems to be a black outlook for the south. Theodore is acting.

That unctuous and oily Christian, John D. Rockefeller, has got control of the petroleum market in France. Now for another bequest.

They are trying to beat the Dutch in Holland, but the Dutch are holding under the nose of the State the threat of a general strike.

A love which cannot endure the test of freedom is not worthy of its name. And the imitations of love are not worth the trouble of legalizing them.

Coercion is the only argument which the State has ever been known to advance in justification of coercion. Will this argument always be irresistible?

The Filipinos are to have a coinage of their own; but though the coins are made in the islands, and will bear unmistakably native emblems on their faces, they will speedily be owned by the mortgagees of humanity living in civilized countries. Such is the irony of exploited nationality.

When men see the proof before them that we manage to live despite government, how can they doubt that we shall be able to live when government is abolished?

The injunction against the strike now rears its head; what will the people do? Such an injunction is nothing less than an injunction against free speech, the safeguard of all freedom.

The right to vote cannot be of the rights of women, for the right to vote, however we disguise it with words, is the right to enslave. Ballots are fired to kill the freedom of the minority.

The British want the Kaffirs to work, and it is proposed to force them by taxation into occupations where capital can utilize them. The South African exploiters have stolen the land, now they would enslave the people.

The anti-Anarchy bill provides that no Anarchist shall be naturalized. The joke becomes good when it is realized that it is at the expense of the anti-Anarchists. Anarchists will seek naturalization when cats go swimming.

The critics of Tolstoy are now attacking him on the score of inconsistency. His human weaknesses the Russian sage has admitted again and again; what do the spoilers want? Perhaps they themselves are not perfectly consistent.

Now that Professor Delitzsch has declared that the Bible had a Babylonian origin, and is not the "Word of God," kings and rulers will cast about for other support than the "will of God" according to the Bible. The kaiser has begun.

An eastern critic says that Anarchists lack the "social consciousness" and are therefore insane. Anarchists do lack that kind of social consciousness which is expressed in the cherishing of social disease because it is social. If this be insanity what is sanity?

Hugh Price Hughes, the Methodist supporter of the exterminators of the Boers, is dead in England. This man reveled in the shedding of blood by the "soldiers of the queen," and even justified the torture of non-combatants. He has gone to his god; that is to death, and as common earth he may at last merit respect.

INOSINUS.

Our Children.

In reply to Comrade J. L. Hicks, if not taking too much of Lucifer's valuable space I will say that in past years I have had considerable experience with children, having from one to five in my home nearly always—orphans or half orphans, whom no one else seemed willing to take to their home or heart,

I took them from pure love, not for money, as I never wished for or received any. They remained with me from six months to two years. I never scolded or whipped them. I loved and taught them.

The first lesson was to always try to say or do something to make each other and everyone, including animals, happy instead of unhappy. In fact that was about all I did teach them.

One day little Scotty who had been with us but a few days, whipped the cat from the chair. I merely mildly observed:

"Scotty, you hurt that kitty where you struck her, and made her feel bad in her mind, just as you would if I should knock you from the chair."

I had occasion to leave the room soon after. Passing the door a little later I saw Scotty lift the cat to the chair, caressing and talking to her soothingly. I caught the words "sorry" and "poor kitty."

Now does Comrade Hicks believe that if I had whipped him it would have had the same, or a better, effect on the child? I do not pretend to be infallible, or to "know it all," but my candid opinion is it would not.

After his first whipping a little boy belonging to one of my neighbors went into the back yard and mauled the dog with a club, drove away the cat, trying to whip it with a stick, and lamed a chicken in the same manner. Previous to this he had ever treated them all with kindness and affection.

Another child, a baby of two years, when in the presence o other little ones would try to kiss or embrace them, until one day while dressing him for an outing, his mamma slapped his hands for some offense. On her return she told me that "Bertie acted awfully in the car and in the street, striking every little child in his reach. I actually had to hold his hands."

I never made a promise to my children without being sure I could fulfil it. I generally felt it safer to say: "If nothing happens more than I know of now." I never told them to do, or not to do anything and then allow them to persuade me to decide differently.

